GOUGH RELATES PERSONAL LOSS IN MURRAY-KAY

He and Friends Dropped $150,000, But Bank Made $75,000 Profit.

IN STOCK DEAL.

Director Swears Loans Were Not Passed by the Bank Board.

TORONTO, Dec. 20. — Richard Gough, Home Bank director, now on trial before Judge Coatsworth, referred Friday afternoon to the reorganization of the Murray - Kay Company. He said M. J. Haney considered it a very good proposition, "which it later turned out to be," and Haney insisted on the bank getting more than its actual share out of the transaction.

"The bank made $75,000 on the transaction, and I and my good friends associated with me lost about $150,000," he said. "The bank made $75,000 out of me on that," he said.

Mr. Tilley touched on loans to the Manufacturers' Holding Corporation.

"Did that come before the board?" "No, it did not."

He examined the minutes and then said with deliberation:

"That loan was never authorized or passed."

Another loan of $650,782 in 1921 was the next item. Mr. Tilley read the items that made up the total. "What do you say as to that?" "It never came before the board."

Then Gough said: "I would like to make a statement to His Honor."

"All right, go ahead, this is your time," said Mr. Tilley.

"All the time I was on the board I do not remember any such large among as this being passed. Then look at the collateral there. A note from P. A. Mitchell, of England, a man I did not know, for about $178,000. Why a man would not forget anything like that. It was ridiculous."

Not Read at Meeting.

Gough did remember that in June, 1922, an application for a temporary credit to the Manufacturers' Holding Co. in the Vancouver Branch for $60,000 was passed. This was in connection with the purchasing of bonds when some foreclosure proceedings had taken place.

It was absolutely untrue, he said, that this minute was read at the next meeting of the board when the minutes came up for confirmation.

"Who read the minutes?" asked Mr. Tilley.

"Col. Mason always read the minutes or whoever was secretary."

Witness said he had not known of the transfer in October, 1920, of some assets of the Canadian Debenture Corporation to the Home Bank. He had since found out many things.

Name Carried Weight.

Gough knew nothing of a Manufacturers' Holding loan of $7,500 for Daly, or of $34,000 additional for Daly.

"What did you know about the Arnprior Cabinet Company?" Gough read from the minutes how an advance of $30,000 was made, pending the sale of the firm's debentures, Daly giving his guarantee. "I justify my approval of that on what I had been told," said Gough.

A subsequent loan of $04,000 was discussed by the board, and on the guarantee of the directors and the town of Arnprior. He had been impressed by the name of Mr. Patterson, later president of the National Cash Register Company, on the list of directors. "Patterson, I should say, must be a multi-millionaire, and I was surprised when his name did not appear on the guarantee."

"How was that?" "I don't know. We were told he was a director and

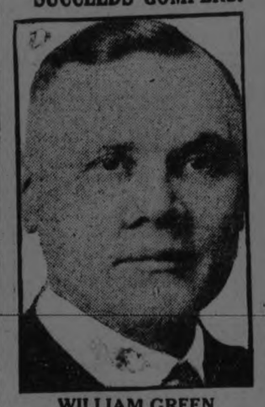
SUCCEEDS GOMPERS.



WILLIAM GREEN

Secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America, was the unanimous choice Friday of the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor as succesor to the late President Samuel Gompers.

Green had the support of the United Mine Workers, which is the largest single unit in the federation, and his availability was increased because of his age. He is 51.

In his home town, Coshocton, Ohio, Green is known as a capable worker, who has kept out of print because of his quiet and retiring nature.

There is a powerful radical element in the Mine Workers.

foreign policy, the foreign office declared Friday in response to press speculations concerning the attitudes of the Baron and his successor as under-secretary in the foreign ministry, Herr Von Schubert.

The newspapers expressed the opinion that Baron Von Maltzen, as under-secretary was inclined to be favorable to Russia in foreign matters while Herr Von Schubert is looked upon as inclining more in the direction of England.

The foreign office statement declared that both the new envoy to Washington and his successor were in complete accord regarding the necessity of friendly relations with the east and west and the foreign ministry would continue its purely pro-German policy.

TIE VOTE DEPRIVES SOLICITOR OF LEGAL HELP HE REQUESTD IN CITY'S JUDICIAL INQUIRY

Aldermen Phelan, Turner, Stocker, McIntyre and Crowe Refuse to Throw Their Weight Behind Council's Majority Decision to Solve Campbell Mills Power Problem.

R. R. HALL, K.C., WAS SUGGESTED

Crowe Supported Proposal to Conduct Inquiry, But Would Not Give City Solicitor Any Help—Fife Urges Interests of Citizens.

After having decided ten days ago to prosecute with all the resources at its command the judicial inquiry into the alleged mystery surrounding the electric power accounts of the Campbell Milling Co., the City Council last night by a split vote refused to acede to the City Solicitor's request for the expert help of R. R. Hall, K.C. The vote was on a motion by Aldermen Fife and Maher that the City Solicitor be authorized to engage counsel to assist him in the formulation and presentation of his case, and the Aldermen who opposed it were Phelan, Turner, Stocker, McIntyre and Crowe. Those who voted in favor of the motion were Aldermen Fife, Meyers, Morrison, Maher and Mayor Turner. The vote being tied, five to five, the motion failed

Mr. Hall appeared by request at a private conference of the members of the council held before the special meeting last night, and assured them that at the very outside figure his fees would only be $500 and the whole cost of the prosecution of the case, in his opinion, would not exceed $2,500. He would assist City Solicitor Joseph Wearing, he said, to bring out the facts in the case with a view to elucidating the mystery, which he conceived is the object of the inquiry rather than pecuniary gain.

Some Reasons.

Alderman Phelan explained that in voting against the motion to permit Mr. Wearing to employ assisting counsel he was merely continuing his policy of opposition to the inquiry. Personally, if he had been in favor of prosecuting the investigation he would have supported the proposal to have Mr Hall assist the city solicitor, he thought, but being opposed to the inquiry he was opposed to everything connected with it.

Alderman McIntyre ranged himself alongside Alderman Phelan in objecting to both inquiry and the employment of Mr. Hall, but the latter said if there was a majority of the council in favor of pursuing the investigation then he would support the proposal to obtain Mr. Hall's assistance.

Alderman Crowe could see no reason, he said, why the city solicitor should require or receive help. The issue is clear; there is no municipal law involved, and the City Council only requires to show that the mill could not operate under 75 horse power to establish its claim. Mr. Wearing is quite competept to do so simple a thing as this, the Alderman declared.

Not Best Service.

Alderman Fife, who was at first opposed to the inquiry as needless, said that having thrown in his lot with the majority of the council he is in favor of carrying on the investigation as thoroughly and successfully as possible, in fairness to the public whom he represents. On the first approach of the subject some weeks ago Alderman Fife favored giving all facts in possession of the council to the public through the press, allowing the citizens to form their own conclusions on the data presented. This, he believed, would gain the principle sought by the Council without the expenditure of a comparatively large sum. Later, however, when it was evident that the majority of his colleagues desired to clean the matter up judicially, Alderman Fife refused to stand in the way. Last night he urged the dissenting Aldermen to study the interests of the citizens and lend every effort to successfully conclude the investigation to which the Council is now committed.

Mayor Turner, speaking after the decision had been reached, branded it a mistake. "You are tying the solicitor's hands", he said, "and asking him to do something impossible. It is not fair to ask him to go on."

Alderman Jones was the only absent member of the council.

ALBANIA FEARS ARMED RAIDERS

Protest to League of Nations Against Jugo-Slav Bands.

MENACE TO PEACE.

GENEVA, Dec. 20.—The league of nations announced last night that it had received a protest from Bishop Fan S. Noli, premier of Albania, against the alleged formation of armed bands in the territory of Jugo-Slavia, which are making raids into Albania and causing unrest and insurrectionary difficulties.

Bishop Noli, says, the league's communique, requested the league to make representations to the Belgrade government, but that he did not appeal to the league for any specific initiative under any article of the covenant of the league, and hence the council of the league, as such, is not called upon to act on the protest.

However, in fulfillment of Bishop Noli's request, the communique added, Sir Eric Drummond, secretary-general of the league, has communicated the Albanian minister's request to the government of Jugo-Slavia through the Jugo Slav minister in Berne. Also as a matter of information Sir Eric sent a copy of the complaint to all members of the league council.

Bishop Noli's specific request was that Sir Eric intervene at Belgrade so as to bring to an end a state of affairs "which gravely menaces peace in the Balkans."

AMUNDSEN'S MEN HOMESICK AS THEIR THIRD CHRISTMAS DRIFTING IN THE ARCTIC ICE NEARS

Recent Message From the Schooner "Maud" Shows That Crew of Hardy Adventurers, Afloat Since 1922, Are Beginning to Weaken—Started With Supplies for Seven Years—Monotony of Frozen Wastes Palls on Men.

THE SCHOONER MAUD, INSET SHOWS ROAL D AMUNDSEN

SEATTLE, Wash., Dec. 20.—After two and a half years of drifting in arctic ice, the handful of hardy adventurers that put to sea in Roald Amundsens' schooner Maud is beginning to weaken..

All hands are ready to call it a day and come back.

But, caught in the ice, they can't. All they can do is drift on and on, waiting for tide or Fate to pull them out.

That is the gist of the latest reports on the expedition received by U.S. Weather Bureau officials.

The expedition was launched on the quite well established theory that the movement of arctic ice, caused by ocean currents, is over the north pole. Amundsen's plan was to force the Maud under her own power as far north as possible, then let her drift with the floes. His idea was to collect almost every conceivable type of geological, oceanological and meteorological information.

Most important of all, by plumbing the depths of the sea and gathering data on wind, tidal and other conditions, he hoped to enable science to predict weather conditions in the temperate regions six months ahead.

First Trip Unsuccessful

With this in mind, Amundsen set out with the Maud in 1919, but the venture was short lived. The next year the schooner was pulled out of the ice and rescued off northern Siberia by the U.S. coast guard cutter Bear.

Undiscouraged by this Amundsen resolved to try again, and in 1922 the Maud sailed through Bering Straits with a dozen men on board.

The ship was provisioned for seven years. It also had on board seven boxes, containing Christmas presents for the crew—one box for each Christmas they might be marooned. An a phonograph donated by the girls of Norway.

For a time the Maud kept in torch with the U.S. Weather Bureau by radio.. Then she drifted out of range.

The message that just came was relayed. It stated that the Maud was north of Wrangel Island, caught in the floes, and drifting rapidly to the north and west.

Just why the explorers were discouraged and ready—though unable—to turn back, was not specified. The nerve strain of being caged together, helpless, in the stark, frozen wastes of the far north—perhaps of listening to the same talking machine records over and over again, of knowing months in advance what each dinner menu would be—is believed to have played its part.

Nerve Strain Telling.

And the message failed to tell whether they had overcome their urge to break into the remaining Christmas boxes!

Amundsen, who did not accompany the expedition in person, is preparing meanwhile to fly over the pole by aircraft. It is reported from Christiania that he had been provided with a fund of $100,000 for the venture.

It will be his third attempt. His first polar air project—a flight from Point Barrow, Alaska, to Spitzbergen—failed when his machine went bad. His second effort was halted by lack of funds.

But the benefits to the science of weather forecasting derived from even a most successful arctic expedition are problematical, according to Charles F. Marvin, Weather Bureau chief.

"If we could receive regular polar weather reports, day by day and year after year, there is no telling what we might learn," he says.

"I cannot predict that we would be able to forecast weather for an entire season in advance, but there is at least that hope.

"But reports sent down by individual arctic expeditions are too desutory to be used as an accurate basis for calculations. So far they have done us little good."

Five Years of Study For Medical Students Proposed at Ottawa Conference.

CLINIC APPEAL.

OTTAWA, Ont, Dec. 20. — (By Canadian Press)—A five-year period of study for medical students will be the minimum requirement of Canadian universities, if the recommendation of the first conference of Medical services of Canada is carried out. In a resolution adopted at the end of the second day's work of the conference here Friday, five years is set out as the minimum of study and of these, three years should be, it is set forth, devoted chiefly to clinical work. There was some discussion as to what constituted a year's study, and finally a thirty-week period was tentatively recommended.

This resolution on licensure was the outcome of many hours debate in committee. The committee had

GERMAN QUERY ABOUT LEAGUE

Information Sought About Military Obligations—Shun Russian Dispute.

FIRST ENQUIRY.

GENEVA, Dec. 20. — Germany made a new move last night in connection with her project to join the League of Nations, when Herr Aschmann, the German consul in Geneva, called on Sir Eric Drummond, secretary-general of the League and delivered to him a note from Foreign Minister Stresemann. The note requested further information touching upon the operation of the covenant of the League.

An agreement was reached between Sir Eric and Herr Aschmann that the text of the note should not be published before the beginning of next week.

It is said here, however, that Germany seeks further light on the sanction clauses of the covenant, feeling that she should be relieved from military obligations which, in her present unarmed state, she would be unable to fulfill. Berlin is said especially to fear being dragged into complications with Russia in the event of any attack on Poland, or conversely, in consequence of any possible League action against Russia. Also it is believed Germany would like to keep entirely clear of any Polish or Russian dispute, no matter what its nature.

Presumably the note also was sent to the governments represented in the Council of the league, to which Germany sent her first note on this matter. League officials remarked last evening that this was the first time that Germany had addressed a communication to Geneva concerning her proposed adhesion to the League, and the belief was expressed that it augured well for the eventual joining up of Germany.

WOMAN PLUNGED BUTCHER KNIFE INTO OWN BODY

"Kid" McCoy's Version of the Death of Mrs. Theresa Morse.

MURDER TRIAL.

Former Prize Fighter Takes Stand in Own Defense as Case Closes.

LOS ANGELES, December 20. — Kid McCoy, the former pugilist, being tried for the murder of Mrs. Theresa W. Mors, denied from the witness stand on Friday that he killed her.

Brokenly but in dramatic manner he related his version of the affair, saying he believed Mrs. Mors killed herself.

McCoy said he loved Mrs. Mors.

"Did you kill her for her jewels?" he was asked.

"That is absurd," McCoy stammered brokenly.

McCoy, describing the scene in an apartment where he and the woman had been living as man and wife, on the night of August 12th, said:

"I mixed one or two drinks, and made some sandwiches. She said the sandwiches were too large so I got a butcher knife and she cut them. Then she fell into a reverie, toying with the knife. She said things were 'in a terrible state.'

"I suggested that I should go to New York until things blew over. I explained that it would only be for a couple of weeks, but she jumped up, screaming that she was 'going to end it all!' and pointed the knife at her breast. She drove it in and the blade buckled, cutting her on the wrist and breast. I grappled with her and the knife flew up and cut her lip."

McCoy described how the woman, still holding the knife, grabbed a pistol from the table, how he held to her knife hand, and struck her left arm to knock down the pistol.

"But just then it exploded," he continued. He said that when he realized that she was dead he kissed her on the lips, lifted her from a couch to the floor, and placed his picture over her heart.

Afterwards, he said, he lay down beside the body and intended to kill himself with his own pistol, but he did not. Then he added he became dazed and he "didn't remember."

BALFOUR SANGUINE FOR JEWISH STATE

Believes Experiment in Palestine is Overcoming First Difficulties.

LONDON, December 20. — "I believe that no important party and no important nation really desires the reversal of the policy with regard to the establishment of a Jewish national home in Palestine, and so long as it bears good fruit for the Jews and the world," declared Lord Balfour before a deputation of Leeds Zionists whom he received Thursday. "I understand that this bold and difficult task is succeeding. I hope I may shortly have the opportunity of going to Palestine myself."

"Those who come back from Palestine bring me reports that although the movement, like all other movements in their beginning, suffers from expected and unexpected difficulties, the prospects of this great and novel experience gives hope to all who like myself, are deeply concerned in the effort which is being made that the co-operative efforts of the Jews of Europe and America combined with the energy and self-sacrifice of the Jews in Palestine, will overcome the obstacles."

MANY CITIZENS IN NEED OF CLOTHING

Do Not Let the Moths Destroy Your Old Clothes, Give Them to Somebody Who Will Make Use of Them.

It is quite apparent that the coming on of the severity of winter finds many families just as poorly provided in the matter of clothing, and other necessities, as in former years. Partly on account of the prevalence of want of employment for those not of the skilled trades. Daily the evidence of want, especially in matters of clothing for children, and adults as well, has become apparent. So the organization that has functioned so well and help fully in winters that are past has got together and is doing business at the old stand, as one might say.

The organization, by the approval and connivance of Fire Chief Gimblett, has been given quarters at the Fire Hall to carry on the work. The Chief's duty is in the main, to protect us against fire, but in this instance he is assisting to protect some people against cold, which is even more desirable, for individuals. Ample storage is at hand in which to place articles of clothing, etc., that can be donated. Also a neat room in which such alterations, mending and general arranging of clothing can be done by ladies who are willing to assist. And to the infinite credit of the sex there be many ready to take hold.

Donations of clothing, indeed of anything useful, may be sent to the Fire Hall and will be cared for. Or if those having matters to bestow and no means of transportation will 'phone to Mrs. Knox, at 'phone 788-W, or to the secretary, Mrs. George Benton, 2589-W, parcels will be sent for. If friends of the work wish to contribute money, please do so by forwarding to Mrs. Benton, 272 Thomas Street.

It may be added that there is immediate need for clothing. Supplies may not be gained too soon. Children's things will be especially acceptable. Shoes which the kids at home have outgrown (with none others in the family coming on to make use of the footwear), will be most gratefully received. Attics are full of useful garments. It even may be that citizens thinking to run for position of aldermen, have discarded a well-worn overcoat and put on new, in order to present to the electorate a dignified personal appearance. The left-off coat will surely be a boon to some man now without one.

Talk about the rejuvenating influences of a decent coat. Here is the story, of a few winters ago. Man came in shivering. Without an overcoat, and the weather was the bitter experience of January, 1918. A snorter for cold. An overcoat would be found for him. So a well-off citizen was appealed to, and who took a look in a certain closet. Next day a thoroughly decent and warm coat came along, with a cloth cap, just about the right thing. Then a pair of mitts were added, and when the man was rigged out he was pleased and comfortable. Said so, and meant what he said.

He was living with a brother-in-law in East City. Walked over to the house, and the door was locked. He sat down on the edge of the verandah, to wait. Waited some minutes and glancing around, saw an eye peering through the corner of the window blind. The eye withdrew. Presently he heard a footfall round the corner of the house and started to catch up with the person and found his wife, who said that her husband looked so neat and comfortable and respectable that the women in the house took him for a book-agent or canvasser of some kind, and wouldn't let him in. Fact. So, please, go thou, with unused clothing, do likewise. Next week is Christmas week, and if time can be spared from making the home folks happy, a trifle of that time may help to empty the attic, benefit some ill-clad person, and also help, and this is quite material, the housewife to get rid of that most perplexing problem, the moth, in unused clothing.

In your present home
you can enjoy the charm of Bruce Oak Flooring

Instead of endless cleaning and sweeping, a constant task with the old-fashioned softwood floor and its dust-laden carpet, a Bruce Oak Floor requires the least possible attention.

There can be no accumulation of dirt in its continuous polished surface; no more dragging old carpets into the open; no more beating, hauling, and stretching to get them back in place again.

Right over your old floor, and one room at a time, if more convenient, lay 3/8 inch Bruce Oak Flooring a special thickness of oak made to modernize your present home, just as beautiful and enduring as the heavier oak flooring used in new construction.

You will be agreeably surprised at its nominal cost. Let us tell you more about it.

BERLIN THEATRES TO CUT SALARIES

Highly Paid Actors Walking About With Long Faces These Days.

BERLIN, Dec. 20.—Highly paid stars and superstars of the Berlin stage are walking about with long faces these days. A drastic cut in pay is in the offing for them. Already the national federation of stage producers has agreed that the fees of stars must come down, and now the managers in the various cities are getting together to put the verdict into effect.

The Berlin theatrical directors have a great diversity of interests and viewpoints, and it is usually difficult to get them together on any proposition. They are unanimous, however, in agreeing, first, that this year's theatrical season is the worst in years, and second, that the prominent stars are charging such exorbitant fee that prices of admission must be boosted to a point where the public cannot afford to patronize the theatre.

It has been tentatively agreed that Berlin stars are to be paid from 75 to 400 marks a night. It remains to be seen whether actors and actresses accustomed, many of them, to 800 marks and more a night will accept this drastic reduction.

STARTLING EVIDENCE GIVEN BY R. P. GOUGH

Huge Sums and Investments Made by Bank Never Came Before the Board of Directors.

TORONTO, Dec. 20.—(Canadian Press).—Startling evidence to the effect that Loans and investments made by the Home Bank to the extent of some millions of dollars had never come before the Board of Directors and that the first knowledge he had of the existence of "Big Matters" in which the Bank was involved was when the report made by A. E. Calvert, acting General Manager, shortly before the collapse of the institution, was given before Judge Coatsworth yesterday afternoon by Richard P. Gough, now on trial, who said: "I now know that I was being fooled; the big matters did not come before the board."

The former vice-president of the bank further declared that the minutes of the Directors meeting had been falsified, that large transactions shown in the minutes as having come before the board had been entirely unknown to directors.

D WOMAN CRIES WITH SON

Weeping Boy Tumbles Into Mother's Lap as He Finishes His Testimony Against Her.

Told of Pastor's Visits.

MOUNT VERNON, Ill., Dec. 20. (Canadian Press).—Nelson Layman, attorney for Lawrence M. Hight, who is on trial with Mrs. Elsie Sweeting, for alleged poisoning of her husband, Wilford, yesterday began attempt to show that his client is suffering from mental disorders, and therefore was not entirely responsible for all of his actions.

Dr. Walters, who said he was a cousin o Hight, declared that members of Hight's family had been afflicted with mental disorders. On cross-exanination Special Prosecutor

A child came at the call of the people here to-day to help tighten a noose about his mother's neck.

And he went away leaving behind his lagging, stumbling footsteps only vindication for the broken, weeping woman into whose lap he tumbled for solace as he left the witness stand.

It was Elsie Sweetin, the mother, who comforted her boy before the strangely quiet courtroom and the jury, in which there was a trace of tears.

She crooned to him as she might have in her home, before her life became involved with that of Rev. Lawrence M. Hight and the shadow of the gallows crept into her family circle in the shape of "ten cents' worth of arsenic" from which Wilford, her husband, died.

Watched Boy Tearfully.

Tie sight of her child, Stanton, fourteen, on the witness stand, the sound of his voice, telling slowly and falteringly of Hight's visits to his home, brought the break for Elsie which bitter denunciation and accusation had failed to do. She watched him intently as he walked to the stand. His red sweater was buttoned close, but the blue denim shirt underneath peeked out over the collar. His face alternately blanched and pinked by his effort.

He crossed his legs and looked straight at his mother. And Elsie's eyes, watching so closely, grew larger. Tears formed, hung low and dopped to the corners of her mouth.

The prosecutor asked:

"Did you ever see the preacher come to your house?"

"Yes, sir."

"When did he come, Stanton?"

"Some times in the morning; some times at night."

"And was your father home?"

"Sometimes he was and sometimes he wasn't."

"And were you sent out to play when he wasn't there?"

"Yes, sir."

Comforted Her Son.

Stanton was biting his lip to keep from crying. There was a pause and he was excused. He stumbled away from the stand, stopping to look a his mother. His face puckered as the repressed tears came, and then Stanton was a little boy again. He flung himself into his mother's lap, hid his face against her shoulder.

And Elsie Sweetin forgot the world. She forgot the jury, the courtroom. Hight, the lawyers, remembering only that this child—her child—with eyes so like hers—was in pain. And she cried with him and soothed him. She crooned.

"Hush, dear; you mustn't cry. See, mother isn't going to cry any more. Everything is all right. Hush, baby! Don't cry."

The little body heaved. His arms tightened about his mother's neck. And she rocked him back and forth.

Hight leaned over as if to touch the boy. But Elsie was unseeing and, seeming to reconsider, the pastor drew back.

GOUGH RELATES PERSONAL LOSS

when the general manager or president tells you a thing like that you don't feel like questioning it."

Further evidence of concealment of the facts from him was in his statement that when the loans came before the board for review this was not mentioned. "I did not know of any loss until this trial came on. I assumed the loan had been paid."

"We thought we had a wonder man in Daly," said Gough, earlier in his evidence, telling of the view the board had in the early stages. But he later found that Daly was "gunning for Haney" and was seeking control of the bank.

"The Pellatt loan is mentioned and the statement made that it was being reduced. Did you believe that?" "Absolutely."

"How did the foreign department come to be organized?" "It was Daly's suggestion, as was also the bond department."

The foreign department was es-

"The foreign department was established in December, 1919." "It was represented to us as a great profit-maker," said witness. "Every year it showed good profits."

He told of going to see Mason on one occasion, and asking him as to the prospect for profit for the next year in the foreign department.

"He said they would make as much as in the past year, which was ridiculous in view of what we have seen since," added Gough.

Confidence in Reynolds.

"The report says the bank is in a sound position, and under conservative minds, should make substantial growth. Did you believe that?" "I did."

"It was shortly after this that Mr. Daly succeeded Mr. Haney as president?" "Yes."

"How did you view that change?"

"At that time," Mr. Gough replied, "Mr. Daly was a very young and aggressive man. We believed that we had in him, a wonder in organizing ability. When it came to his appointment as president, I had nothing against Mr. Haney, but there seemed to be some friction, and I believed Mr. Daly's appointment was a good one."

SPRINGVILLE BARN BURNED TO GROUND

Large Barn, Stock and Implements of Bert Stevens Total Loss.

Fire early this morning completely destroyed the large barn of Bert Stevens at Springville. The fire when first noticed about 4 o'clock this morning was making good headway, fanned by a stiff breeze and was beyond control.

An attempt was made to save some of the stock and implements but nothing was saved from the flames and with the barn and the season's crop and implements went 8 milk cows, 3 horses, 4 heifers, 8 pigs, 1 sow and about 15 or 20 hens.

The cause of the fire is unknown and the loss which is estimated at $4,000 was partly covered by insurance.

Mr. Stevens told the Examiner this morning that he has no idea of how the fire started.

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

Egg Grading System May Be Established in the District —School Concert.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 20—Mr. F. H. Baker, of Brockville, who is engaged by the Department of Agriculture in the interest of poultry promoting, was in Campbellford this week, endeavoring to establish a system of egg grading for the English Line Egg Circle, for the year 1925. If his suggestions meet with the approval of the members, companies who deal in eggs will purchase them according to the Circle's grade. If this is carried out, each member will receive individual grade.

Mr. W. Smith, of Brighton, agricultural representative for this county, was here also and is recommending a hen culling campaign for this district. Mr. Smith and Mr. Baker are arranging to be present at the annual meeting of the Circle, which will take place in January, and will address the members on these two subjects.

Funeral of Henry King.

The funeral of the late Henry King was held on Wednesday afternoon, and was largely attended. Rev. C. D. Daniel, pastor of the Methodist Churches of Seymour, preached the funeral sermon. The service was held at the house. Mr. Daniel spoke on the verse in Micah, 2nd chapter and tenth verse: "Arise ye and depart, for this is not your rest." Two hymns were sung "Rock of Ages" and "There is no Death in Heaven." The pall-bearers were all relatives of the deceased: Messrs. Wm. King, Geo. King, Amos Althouse, Wesley Althouse, Albert Woodbeck and Peter Quakenbush. A beautiful wreath was given by the family and a sheaf by Mr. J. L. Squires, of Havelock.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Baker wish to thank the members of the council and men on the corporation work who donated money toward a purse for them while Mr. Baker has been in the hospital and unable to work for six weeks. Mr. Baker has lost the sight of one of his eyes and it will be some time before he will be able to work again. Mr. R. H. Cole, Chairman of the Road and Bridge Committee and Mr. Robert Fox, the foreman of the roads, were the ones who took up this subscription.

Mr. Baker worked on the corporation before he was sick. Mr. and Mrs. Baker are very grateful for the assistance given them.

The school at Meyersburg, S. S. No. 6, Seymour, had an excellent concert on Friday afternoon, closing day of thes chool. Miss Edna Connor the teacher, deserves much credit for the training the pupils received, and the splendid way that they went through the programme. The programme consisted of thef ollowing:

Recitations by George Bound, Stewart Hay, iolet Bertrand, Effice Burleigh, Edna Blakely, Percy Jones, Lyle Jones, Jean Frazer, Jessie Hay, Helen McCredie, Tommy Midgely, Ruth McCredie, Margaret Bateson, Oscar Blakely, Donald Hay, Jack Jones, Rose Bertrand and Donald Frazer.

Dialogues, "Lulu's Picture," by Jeffrey Midgely, Alice Midgely and Dorothy Frazer.

"Writing to Santa Claus," by Edna Blakely and Donald Hay.

"I Wish," by Donald Scott, Howard Blakely, Alice Midgely, Effie Burleigh, Jimmy Bertrand, Jessie Hay, and Lillian Bertrand.

Song by Effie and Lillian Burleigh.

Song—Five little girls, Jean Frazer, Ruth McCredie, Violet Bertrand, Lucille Burleigh and Margaret Bateson.

Three choruses by the School.

Prizes were given by the Teacher to the one having the highest number of Stars, to the one who had to be spoken to the least number of times and to the one who attained highest marks in some of the subjects. The following were the ones to receive the prizes:—Junior Primer—Margaret Bateson; Senior Primer, —Jean Frazer; 1st class— Violet Bertrand; 2nd Class—Tommy Midgely; 3rd Class—Rose Bertrand; Junior fourth—Jeffrey Midgely; Senior Fourth,— Donald Scott.

Each one received an Ever Sharp pencil. Many of the parents were present as well as others from the neighborhood who had no children attending school. They considered the entertainment excellent.

Home-made candy contributed by the ladies of the Section with nuts were served during the afternoon. There was also a Christmas Tree, beautifully decorated, on which were presents for those present. The boys and girls did well and enjoyed giving the programme for their parents.

The "Brownies" of the Methodist Church had a very pleasant afternoon on Thursday from four to six, when "Brown Owl" (Miss Helen Wood) entertained them at her home on Front Street. There were about twenty Brownies present. They had games and music and each Brownie was given a stocking full of Candies to take home with them. Tawny Owl (Miss Evelyn Irwin) and Captain of the Guides (Miss Grace Payne) were also present. The Brownies all report a good time.

DAYLIGHT ROBBERY.

Unmasked Bandit Gets $365 In Vancouver Bank.

VANCOUVER, Dec. 20.—(Canadian Press).—Entering the Bank of Nova Scotia branch yesterday afternoon, a lone robber got away with $365. The robber, a young man, unmasked, cooly walked to the paying teller's window and presented a slip on which was written, "Pay over $7,000."

Finding himself covered with a revolver, the teller, A. U. Campbell, gained time by fumbling with the cash, and then threw out a partial package of "fives." This the robber seized and walked leisurely out of the bank, jumped into an automobile and escaped.

BIG SNAKE ESCAPES.

Took Four Men an Hour to Release Man From Friendly Hug of Reptile.

LONDON, Dec. 20.—(United Press).—Aroused by heat, a 24-foot Python reputed to be one of the largest specimens in Europe escaped from a sack in the office of a London Zoo, importer.

The first knowledge that anything was amiss came when the snake with hiss like escaping steam lashed out at an attendant and quickly enveloped the unfortunate man in its coils.

Four men battled for an hour against the infuriated Python before they succeeded in forcing it to uncoil and re-enter its sack.

WHY NOT PETERBOROUGH?

Local faint-hearts who profess to doubt the possibility of Peterborough staging a successful old home week should gain a little courage from the experience of Belleville.

The Quinte City held a United Empire Loyalist celebration last summer and scored such a triumph that the community is coming right back next year with an old boys' reunion that the committee already heralds as a peace celebration of such an ambitious nature that it will attract thousands, instead of hundreds.

There is surely no more enterprise or vision in Belleville than there is in Peterborough, nor can the former have anything more to offer its old boys and girls—Corbyville excepted—than has Peterborough.

And yet we find Belleville going blithely ahead with plans for the second big celebration in two years, while we in Peterborough stand timidly on the brink, afraid to take the plunge because a few citizens have suggested that the water might be cold.

THE LOCAL HOCKEY TEAM.

The players of the Peterborough Hockey Club, recognizing the fact that public sentiment both here and throughout the Province favoured the step, have decided to play in the senior series of the O. H. A. this season, and the Examiner is sure that the local fans will honour their decision.

The sacrifice of a very good chance of winning the intermediate honours in order to give Peterborough the prestige of representation in major hockey is not a light one, but the players are determined to use every effort to make a creditable showing in senior ranks and they are counting on the co-operation of their fellow-citizens in their task.

The showing of the team in winning their way through the finals of the Sportsmen's Patriotic Association series has won Peterborough more sporting renown and publicity than has been achieved by any local organization in many a year, and whatever may be the result of tonight's final game with the famous Sault Ste. Marie team, the Peterborough players will emerge from the series covered with laurels.

The fine record of the club has won for Peterborough its proper place in hockey—in the senior series—and the Peterborough players can be counted upon to make a worth-while showing in the faster company to which they have been drafted.

EXAMING DRIVERS.

It is understood that the Ontario Government intends to bring down legislation requiring everybody who operates an automobile in this Province to take out drivers' licenses.

The amendment is in the right direction, for it will put the authorities in a position to suspend the license of careless drivers and to hold a tight rein over the enforcement of the Traffic Act.

It is not likely that there will be an examination as to the ability to drive of those already owning or driving cars at the time of the passing of the Act, but future applicants for drivers' licenses will be required to pass a test and demonstrate their ability to properly handle a car.

That legislation along this line is necessary and cannot be denied by any one who has paid the least attention to this problem.

In every community there are people at the wheel of cars who for various reasons are utterly unfit to be entrusted with the responsibility of driving.

Hitherto there has been little or no attempt to deal with this phase of the motor question.

There has been no control over the non-professional driver, and under such a condition it is no wonder that there have been accidents as a result of the inability of poor drivers to properly operate their cars.

The new legislation will help to eliminate much of this clumsy and thoughtless driving.

HOW ABOUT THIS SUGGESTION?

Sizing up the municipal situation, a citizen remarked to the Examiner the other day that unless there were some indications of a number of well-qualified business men offering themselves for the civic service Peterborough might just as well follow the example of a number of other Ontario municipalities this year and save the expense of an election by returning old members by acclamation.

It is, of course, every man's privilege to become a candidate for municipal office, and there may be citizens who feel capable of useful service who are considering the advisability of allowing their names to go on the ballot papers.

It is difficult to deal with such citizens, and yet the point of the suggestion with which this article begins is that there would be little gained by substituting for present members of the City Council other men not any better qualified in themselves than the sitting members.

In fact, the change would represent an initial loss inasmuch as men who have served in the Council have the advantage of "knowing the ropes," of acquaintance with civic problems and a useful knowledge of Council procedure and the technicalities of civic administration.

There are citizens of outstanding business ability, energy and public spirit who would make valuable additions to the personnel of the governing bodies.

If such men could be persuaded to stand the situation would be different, but failing their candidature, there is undoubtedly much reason in the suggestion quoted.

I is given here for the purpose of attracting some attention to the fact that the municipal elections are close at hand.

The Ottawa Journal has joined in the crusade against the revolver. "Prohibit manufacture! That is the primary thing which will have real effect—not at once, not completely for many years, but surely in the long run. Prohibit manufacture, sale, importation, possession—all of them. Any country can do it, to its own advantage. Why not Canada?"

SMUGGLING GOODS INTO CANADA.

Premier King told a deputation of Canadian manufacturers that they could count on the assistance of the Government in the suppression of smuggling manufactured goods into Canada.

Strange, what a complacent attitude people can assume toward smuggling, says the London Advertiser. The thing has got such a firm hold on the minds of the people that it is not readily rooted out. It is actually looked upon as rather a smart thing to be able to get goods across the border without being "caught." When this state of mind exists among individuals in respect to their own dealings, it is hard to arouse public feeling against those who make a business of it.

There is not a merchant in the district who does not feel the effect of smuggling. When he puts in his stock of goods he pays his taxes and duty on them. He has to include these in his selling price, and in so doing is helping the Government to collect the revenue which must be forthcoming to meet the legal obligations of the country.

The shopper who invades the United States market, or gets in touch with those who have smuggled goods into this country, compares the price in the stores—a price that is fair and has met all legal obligations—with the price made possible by illegally evading the payment of necessary taxation, and announces that the smuggled price is lower. The purchaser really sets up two standards for comparison, when there is no reason for it because one is legal and straight, while the other is illegal and crooked.

An awakened public conscience is the most powerful weapon to stop smuggling, but in lieu of that the Government should go ahead and use the tools best suited to the case.

A CANADA FORWARD POLICY.

(Article VI.)

There is imperative need of a re-examination of Canada's whole freight rate structure and a rebuilding of it to meet present condition on a basis of fair play to all communities and interests and with a view to the promotion of inter-Provincial andexport trade and the largest possible measure of national self-containment and prosperity.

* * * *

The present system of rates bristles with apparent anomalies. The rate basis is higher on the prairies than in the eastern zone and is still higher in British Columbia. Certain rates from the east to Alberta points are higher than rates through these points to Vancouver and vice versa. The same principle applies to certain commodities moving from the Pacific Coast to Ontario and Quebec points as compared with Halifax or St. John. Other rates seem to favor individual cities as distributing or manufacturing centres at the expense of competitive points, or one route of export as against another.

For some of these apparent discriminations more or less convincing explanations are advanced by the transportation companies. There is no doubt, however—and this is frankly admitted on all sides—that many of our present rates, and to a large extent the basis of our rate structure, have been determined by compromise and the exigencies of competition as well as by the actual conditions of traffic.

These three factors must continue to have a part in the fixing of freight rates. But particularly in a young and growing country like Canada there must be periodic reconsideration in the light of constantly changing conditions of all the factors that have a bearing on the freight rate structure.

There was such a reconsideration by the Board of Railway Commissioners in 1914. The board's decision in the western freight rates case of that year as amended in one respect in 1922, provides the general basis for our present freight rate structure.

Since 1914 there have been many changes and developments affecting freight transportation. Chief among these has been the opening of the Panama Canal. It is a factor that must be reckoned with in the fixing of freight rates in Canada. There is now a Pacific water-shed in transportation as well as one tributary to the Atlantic. British Columbia, Alberta and western Saskatchewan have had to pay for many years the penalty of their long distance from the Atlantic seaboard; they must not now be denied the advantages of their position of proximity to the Pacific Ocean and the new route to and from the Atlantic Coast and Europe via the Panama Canal.

Following these various changes and in view of freight rate grievances in almost every section of Canada, the time for another reconsideration of the whole freight rate structure has fully come.

The new freight rate structure should be framed as part of a Canada Forward Policy. It should place the least possible burden on agriculture because prosperity there is at the very basis of national prosperity and development. It should aim to promote inter-Provincial and export trade in manufactured goods and mine products because that is essential to an all-round development and the retention of our own people. It should be conceived in a spirit of absolute fair play as between the various sections of Canada because mutual confidence and co-operation among these is a pre-requisite of national unity and progress.

The working out of such a policy should be left to the Board of Railway Commissioners. It is no job for politicians. The board alone is in a position to consider all of the factors involved and give fair play to all sections and interests, including the railways themselves.

The contribution which scientific research may make to the Canada Forward movement will be the subject of the next article.—Edmonton Journal.

A THOUGHT.

HE WHO SERVES.

He has not served who gathers gold,
Nor has he served, whose life is told
In selfish battles he has won,
Or deeds of skill that he has done,
But he has served who now and then
Has helped among his fellow men.
The world needs many men today;
Red-blooded men along life's way,
With cheerful smiles and helping hands
And with the faith that understands
The beauty of the simple deed,
Which serves another's hour of need.
Strong men to stand beside the weak,
Kind men to hear what others speak,
True men to keep our country's laws
And guard its honors and its cause
Men who will bravely play life's game
Nor ask rewards of gold or fame.
Teach me to do the best I can
To help and cheer our fellow men;
Teach me to lose my selfish need
And glory in the larger deed
Which smoothes the road and lights the day
For all who chance to come my way.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Dec. 19.—As far as prices are concerned, the week at the Union Stock Yards was unsatisfactory to a good many shippers. The good market during the previous two weeks led some shippers to send in stock even against the advice of their commission house. The only cattle really needed were some for export and respectable butchers, and were not in sufficient supply. Deluded shippers sent in a lot of supposed butchers which the packers refused to buy, except at prices which would enable them to work them off on cut-rate stores, where price, rather than quality, makes an appeal to the consumer.

The exporters did not want a big supply this week, but the two firms and a small demand from the packers was sufficient to use up the offering and keep prices steady. The top for export steers in bulk lots was $7.75 a cwt., but a few picked cattle went at $8 and $8.25. The near choice one averaged about $7.25 a cwt., and short keeps were obtained from that price down to $6.25. Export heifers were steady at $6.25 to $6.75. Export cows $4.75 to $6 and bulls $4.50 to $5.50. The exporters will be buying again next week, but the impression is that prices will be no improvement on the present week.

For the best local beef trade wholesalers were prepared to take a fair supply of good and choice butchers, but only a limited number of these were vailable from $6.50 to $7.25 a cwt. Good medium handyweights were $5.50 to $6. Mixed butchers passably killable were $5 and common butchers ranged from this down to $3 a cwt. The latter class was off probably 50 cents a cwt. from a week ago. Good export cows were firm all week, but fat cows, but of poor quality, were lower from 50 to 75 cents a cwt. and canners were not as firm as they have been. Bulls, export and otherwise, were steady.

Several hundred common butchers and cows were still on sale Thursday afternoon, and the market could dispense with any further supply of this kind until after the holiday. Nothing but quality beef cattle will command satisfactory prices till after the New Year.

For the good to choice calves the market was strong all week, but common calves were down a dollar a cwt. Good to choice calves are 10 to 12 cents a pound; mediums 7 to 9 cents, and common calves, 5 to 6 cents. Grasser calves are back to about 3½ cents a pound.

The lamb market dropped a dollar a cwt. during the week. Some choice light lambs sold as high as 13½ to 14 cents a pound early in the week, but the packers said that the retail trade would not stand for the high figures and refused to purchase above 12½ cents for the light 80 and 90-lb lambs and 10 to 11 cents for lambs much over 100 lbs. each, and this was the range of prices at the week-end. Sheep are keeping steady and choice handyweights run from 7 to 7½ cents a pound.

A record run of hogs for a week and a lower market in Chicago has had no depressing effect on the price here, which, in fact, advanced 25 cents a cwt to $9.25 f.o.b. and $10.25 a cwt. off cars and these are the quotations at the end of the week.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

Chicago, Dec. 19.—New upward flights took wheat today well beyond $1.75 a bushel as a goal for the May delivery here and lifted all Chicago deliveries of wheat and rye to above any previous top quotations this season. The latest smashing of high price records was associated with continued reports of breadstuff shortages especially an estimate that the world crop of wheat is 440,000,000 bushels less than last year's total. Closing prices on wheat were strong, 1¼ to 3⅜ cent net higher, May $1.76¾ to 1.76½ and July 151¾ to 151½, with corn ¾ to 7/8 cent up. Oats ¾ to ⅝ cent off and provisions varying from ten cents decline to 35 cents gain.

MONTREAL GRAIN.

Spring Wheat Flour Advanced 30 Cents a Barrel.

MONTREAL, Dec. 19.—The foreign demand for Canadian Grain continues quiet and business here today was practically at a standstill, in the domestic cash grain market trading was inactive but prices were firm. An increase of one cent per bushel was announced for Ontario Oats. No. 2 white being quoted at 64 cents, No. 3 at 62 cents and No. 4 white at 60 cents per bushel, ex-store.

The outstanding feature of the flour market, was the increase of 30 cents per barrel announced for spring wheat grades. The volume of business was very small. No chance of any importance occurred in winter wheat flour.

LOCAL MOOSE LODGE.

A Real Christmas Message—Deputy Supervisor Here.

Those who grasped the opportunity to attend the open meeting of the new Peterboro Lodge of the Loyal Order of Moose held in the W.O.W. hall on Wednesday night were highly pleased by the information given them of this fast growing order

The meeting was opened by a short address of welcome to all by Dictator H. J. Long in which he introduced the speakers of the evening.

This was followed by a delightful talk by Bro. J. A. Skerritt, Past Dictator of Hamilton Lodge, who gave a very vivid description of the Happy Children's Home at Mooseheart. Those present were somewhat surprised to learn that this home now covers one thousand acres situated near Chicago and now contains over 1200 children of departed members along with their mothers to look after them. Bro. Skerritt handled this subject very aptly as his several visits to Mooseheart have caused the spirit of this wonderful institution to take full possession of his mind.

Bro. W. S. Wallens, Provincial Deputy Supervisor, then gave a statistical talk on the growth of the Order in which he showed it to now have a membership of nearly one million He also told of the growth of Mooseheart and Moosehaven, which is the home for the aged members and their wives, situated in Florida. Tense interest was shown during this talk as we believe this is the only home for the aged where man and wife are given a home of their own and not parted during the twilight of their days.

It was during this address that the hour of nine approached. The lodge chimes were sounded and those not acquainted with the Order were much impressed by hearing these words, "It is now the hour of nine when our children at Mooseheart are kneeling beside their beds in prayer. We will now bow our heads and repeat, "Suffer little children and forbid them not, for such is the Kingdom of Heaven, God Bless Mooseheart." Many eyes were dimmed with tears of happiness and all hearts were made to feel that at Mooseheart, the children were being given every care that love can provide. Could there be a more fitting message of "Love and Peace on Earth" brought to us than these words from the happy children at Mooseheart?

The evening was closed with dancing and all left with a feeling of happiness that will be retained for many days.

"Yes, it's dreadful for the poor thing. You know her husband ran away with the cook." "How shocking, my dear! And cooks are so scarce, too."

ST. ANDREW'S W. M. S. MEET

Annual Report for the Year 1924—Mission Band Programme—Election of Officers.

The annual meeting of St. Andrew's W.M.S. was held Tuesday afternoon in the ladies' parlor of the Sunday School. Mrs. John, president, in the chair. The meeting was opened by the singing of a hymn, followed by responsive Bible reading. A prayer by Mrs. John was then said. The secretary gave her yearly report as follows:

Annual Report for Year 1924.

To the president and members of St. Andrew's W.M.S., I beg leave to submit the following report:

The year 1924 has been one of progress and achievement under the able leadership of our president, and we look forward with hope into another year under her guidance.

Our membership is now 137, including both active members and home helpers. They are divided into ten groups, each group under the leadership of two convenors, had charge of one meeting during the year. These meetings have been both instructive and helpful. The attendance has been exceptionally good with an average of about 50.

Inspiring addresses were received from Mrs. McKenzie of Knox Church in January. Mrs. Mowat of the local Council of Women in February, Miss Lancaster of the Protestant Home in March, Rev. J. W. Gordon at the Easter and Thankoffering meetings, Mrs. Smith of the Salvation Army in May, and Mrs. Plant of Hastings in September.

The Jubilee Thankoffering meeting in October was most interesting. Greetings were received from past-presidents and officers, and a presentation address was read and presented to some of the older members of the society. There were present also one charter member, Miss Elizabeth Rae, and one returned missionary, Miss Lena Shearer. The attendance was 82 and the thankoffering $235.60.

The study book used for the year was "The Island Beautiful," from which several interesting papers were prepared and read. One group also made a study of the "Religion of China." At each meeting Miss Craw gave a review of the Messenger, which proved very helpful. Reports were also given by the delegates to the annual convention of the Provincial W.M.S. in Hamilton, and the Presbyterial Convention in Norwood. Four life memberships were presented during the year and a cot donated to the Hearst Hospital through this auxiliary by Mr. Thos. Richardson in memory of his wife—the cot to be known as "The Richardson Cot of St. Andrew's Church, Peterboro'."

In January a tea was held at the home of Mrs. Kerr, in June a lawn social at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Grier, and in July a garden party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. White. There was also an excursion to Gore's Landing.

The total amount contributed during the year was $564.83. A bale of useful clothing and bedding was also sent to the Northwest with the bales received from the other societies of this Presbyterial, all of which were repacked and shipped by this society. Magazines were sent to the lumber camps in Algoma.

The Broadcast and other literature has been distributed each month to the members and the Messenger is being read by 109 of our members.

The Home Helpers' secretary reported 18 members who subscribed $24.35 to the general fund. The Strangers' secretary reported making 66 visits.

E. SHIRLEY, Secretary.

Election of Officers.

The following officers were then elected for 1925. Each office was filled by acclamation.

Hon. President, Mrs. Wm. Fowler; President, Mrs. J. John; 1st Vice-President, Mrs. Kerr; 2nd Vice-President, Mrs. Elliott; 3rd Vice-President, Mrs. Geo. Gillespie; Secretary, Mrs. Shirley; Asst. Secretary, Mrs. Mackintosh; Treasurer, Mrs. H. Niven; Strangers' Secretary, Mrs. Stevens; Supply Secretary, Mesdames Henry, Rae and Jamieson; Home Helpers' Secretary, Mesdames Atkinson and McWilliams and Miss Allen; Library Secretary, Mrs. White Messenger Secretary, Mrs. Donaldson; Literature Secretary, Mrs. McKee; Lookout Secretary, Mrs. Kerr; Correspondence Secretary, Miss Craw; Press Secretary, Mrs. Herb. Tremain; Willing Workers' Mission Band, Mrs. Carmen; Pianist, Mrs. Wilger. Executive—Mesdames Lees, Waddell, Harstone and Breckenridge.

Mission Band Programme.

Mrs. Weddell and Mrs. Allison, who are in charge of the Mission Band, then took charge of the meeting, when the following programme was put on by the little ladies of the band, and was one of the most pleasing entertainments of the year and went far toward showing the wonderful work these two ladies have carried on through the year.

The following was the programme: Secretary's report, Jean McKone. Treasurer's report, Margaret Allison. Bible reading, Clara Paterson. Duet, Jean McKone, Isabel Weddell. Reading, Allison Gordon. Duet, piano, Isabel Weddell and Margaret Allison. Closing hymn, "We've a Message to Send to the Nation," and the Lord's Prayer in unison.

Hamilton Man Gives Car Gas and Leaves Robbers Behind.

HAMILTON, Dec. 20.—(Canadian Press).—Two armed men attempted to rob George Clarke, treasurer of the Appleford Counter Check Book Company, yesterday afternoon, while he was returning to the office with a week's pay money. When he stopped his car at the street corner, two young men jumped on the running board and, holding revolvers against him, ordered him to "hand out the jack." Clarke applied the gas, and when the auto speeded across an intersection, his assailants fell off. The police were called and the neighborhood thoroughly searched but without result.

WALKED THE FLOOR FOR HOURS NERVES WERE SO BAD

Wherever there are people who are troubled with deranged nerves they will find in Milburns' Heart and Nerve Pills a remedy that will restore the equilibrium of the deranged centres and bring back the shattered nervous system to a perfect condition.

Mrs. W. W. Aulthouse, Woodrous, Ont., writes:—"After having a severe atack of bronchitis I was left in a very weak, run-down condition; my nerves were all broken up; could not sleep at night, and would have to get out of bed and walk the floor for hours.

"After using a box of MILBURN'S HEART AN DNERVE PILLS I began to feel much better, and after taking a few more boxes I could enjoy my rest as well as I ever did. I always recommend them to all my friends."

Bald Heads Predominate In New British Ministry

Mr. Baldwin Himself Exhibits a Distinct Cleavage Between the Desert and the Oasis.

LONDON, Dec. 20.—The newly-formed Baldwin cabinet, already hailed as a "ministry of silk hats," and a "cabinet of Londoners," has achieved another distinction that is likely to prove the nickname "baldwins," already given by the press most appropriate.

For most of them are bald. Only Lord Birkenhead, the Secretary for India, and Austen Chamberlain, foreign minister, can boast of anything like an abundance of hair on their heads, and Mr. Baldwin himself exhibits a distinct cleavage between the desert and the oasis. The rest are beyond all aid of parrafin, cocoa nut oil or the thousand and one other preparations guaranteed to cover even a billiard ball with a growth of luxuriant foliage. Unkind critics say that never before has the old phrase "leather-headed tory" been so strikingly illustrated.

The war minister, Sir Laming Worthington-Evans, is accounted the baldest of the "baldwins." Then there is Winston Churchill, chancellor of the exchequer, whose lack of hirstute adornment covers a lesser acreage, but whose shining top is particularly distinctive. Lord Chancellor Cave and the lord privy seal, Lord Salisbury, are "just bald," while Sir William Joynson-Hicks, the home secretary, has plenty of hair in back but is the possessor of what is courteously known as a high forehead with a receding line of hair in front.

Mike—"Did ye ever speak before a large audience, Pat?" Pat—"Faith, large, I did." "An' what did you say?" "Not guilty."

"CORRIGAN"

by EDMUND SNELL

IV--THE FASCINATING MISS PATERSON.

"Fellowes!" shouted Corrigan suddenly from the veranda rail, "bring me those binoculars, will you?"

The first assistant, lean, spare and hatchet-faced, left the map he had been studying intently, and went over to where a deal table stood in a corner by the wall.

"Right hand drawer, isn't it?" he demanded.

"That's the ticket. Quick, old son. There's something here I don't quite understand."

The proprietor of the Orang-Puteh estate was gazing intently through a convenient lane purposely left between the rubber trees to where, at the foot of the slope, two white-clad forms were checking a heap of trunks. The morning train had just arrived. A tall Sikh watchman, resplendent in the inevitable turban and the new livery of khaki with bright red piping, was shouting something to a mandor whose coolies were laboriously wedding. A couple of nude children and a bent old native who had nothing better to do, were regarding the newcomers with intense interest.

Fellowes handed over the binoculars. Corrigan focused them swiftly and carefully.

"It's a woman," declared the assistant, who was possessed of long sight.

Corrigan discarded the glasses with evident disgust.

"Damn!" he said loudly.

"She's deuced good looking," pursued Fellowes, ignoring the proprietor's remark. "Nicely turned out, too. Seems to know her way about. Don't much care for the look of the chap who's with her. Watchman Number Two looks mighty impressed. By Gad! She must speak the lingo like a native!"

"You don't happen to notice the name she's got sewn on her petticoats, at that distance?" growled Corrigan sarcastically.

Fellowes grinned amiably.

"What's wrong?" he inquired, coming round to face the other.

The great Corrigan folded his arms.

"Wrong! Why, the place'll be swarming with women before we know where we are! I didn't bargain for this, I can give you my word. When they sent me his pedigree from Singapore, I thought we were on a good thing. The agents assured me we couldn't have a better man to replace young White while he's away; and hinted that, with the riff-raff that's pouring out east just now, we'd be wise to look round and see if we couldn't squeeze him in as a permanency!"

Fellowes whistled.

"And you hadn't a notion he was married?"

"Good Lord, no! It's upset all my calculations. The shack I set apart for this new chap can ardly be looked upon as married quarters. You know what women are. Mrs. White won't thank me, on her return, if she finds I've allowed a strange mam to occupy their p'ace."

Fellowes gazed over his shoulder toward the unwelcome intruder, who, by this time, was already half-way up the slope, the man following a couple of yards behind.

"She can have my place," he jerked out suddenly.

Corrigan started as if he had been stung.

"My poor old idiot!" he cried compassionately, "you can't be well!"

"It'll solve the problem, at any rate."

Corrigan thought. Presently he stuck his hands deep in his pockets and frowned.

"All right. If you're fool enough to turn out for them—so be it! But, you can take it from me, that young man's in for a pretty warm quarter of an hour when I get him alone, and I'll favor those damned agents with a piece of my mind, at the same time."

"I suppose it is a bit thick," agreed Fellowes. "After all, our jolly little island's no place for women-folk. Wonder if she plays tennis?"

He surveyed himself in a cracked mirror which hung on the wall. A wealth of blue bristle reminded him rather forcibly that he had omitted to shave that morning. He wore no tunic and a somewhat weather-stained cricket shirt, the sleeves rolled up to the elbows, exposed a gauze singlet of which the top button was missing. His khaki slacks had shrunk so that their lower extremities exposed, above his brown canvas boots, quite a noticeable amount of dark blue sock that was guiltless of suspenders.

Corrigan watched him with an amused smile.

"I won't offer to oblige you with a change, old bean," he said. "Your somewhat unprepossessing appearance may have the desired effect. She'll think she's fallen in with a crowd of brigands—and decide to take the next boat home!"

"Good morning!" A voice like the tinkling of a bell came from the foot of the short flight of wooden steps.

"Good morning," echoed Corrigan. "Come in out of the sun. Morning, Paterson. I suppose you are Paterson?"

"That's my name," replied a tall, slim youth, with a fresh, pink-and-white complexion. He followed the girl on to the veranda. "Me—er—sister was staying with some old friends in Singapore—and insisted on coming with me. I hope that's all right?"

A swift glance, full of deep meaning, passed between Corrigan and his first assistant.

"I'm afraid you won't find this much of a health resort, Miss Paterson," he told her pushing forward a cane chair. She extended an incredibly small hand and Corrigan held it for a moment in his huge paw. He greeted her brother with grim cordiality and proceeded to introduce Fellowes.

"How do you do?" There was something more than friendliness in the light that flashed from those bewitching violet eyes. The first assistant, knocked completely off his balance by the unexpected news that this amazingly attractive woman was actually unattached, forgot for the moment a two-days' growth of beard and abbreviated nether garments. He responded effusively, holding her fingers for quite a second longer than was absolutely necessary. A look from Corrigan brought him to his senses.

"I've heard quite a lot about you in Singapore, Mr. Corrigan," said Miss Paterson, nestling comfortably in the cushions. "You used to be in Perak, didn't you? My friends—the Davises—were up there, too, for quite a while."

"Davis," repeated Corrigan thoughtfully, "Davis? Pretty usual name out here, Miss Paterson. What was he? Accountant of some sort or other?"

"Yes," said the girl very positively. "A chartered accountant. They're frightfully nice people, you know. He's doing awfully well. Of course they sent you their salaams."

"Thanks. Been out east very long, Miss Paterson?"

"Oh, no!" She turned to her brother who was leaning against the rail, talking to Fellowes. "How long have I been out here, Teddy?"

"A couple of months, more or less."

"Yes, that's all. D'you know, I simply adore the tropics. I feel as if I've been out here all my life!"

"Ah!" commented Corrigan, getting to his feet. Mr. Fellowes has very kindly put his bungalow at your disposal and has decided to migrate to the one I had intended for your brother."

"I say," protested Paterson. "That's awfully good of you, and all that; but we really can't hear of your turning out, can we, Enid?"

"I should say not, indeed. Can't we manage to fit in somehow?"

Before Fellowes could reply, Corrigan broke in rather abruptly.

"Sort it out among yourselves. Mr. Fellowes'll take you across there now. I'll get the men to follow with your barang. Paterson, as soon as you get settled down, run across and see me. I want to have a few words with you. Say between four and five. Good morning, Miss Paterson. shall be seeing something of you, of course. You're only a couple of miles from me. Cheery-oh everybody!"

He watched them start along the winding path which led over the hills to the house of his first assistant. He stayed at the opening between the blue sun blinds until they were lost to sight round a bend in the road, then turned suddenly and dropped into the chair Enid Paterson had vacated. As he reached for the cigaret tin, Fellowes plunged back up the steps.

"Left my damn map," he explained breathlessly. He folded the thing carefully and stuck it in a trouser pocket. He paused for a second in front of Corrigan.

"Well, what'd' you think of her? Not bad, what?"

Corrigan snorted.

"I'll give you my opinion of that lady—later on!"

"I hope you'll be better soon," retorted Fellowes maliciously, and ran down the steps, ducking to avoid the book Corrigan slung after him.

"The strange thing is," mused the planter to himself from the depths of his long chair, "that I never remember meeting a chartered accountant whose name was Davis, and I've not yet discovered the pretty woman who could completely master the Malay language in two months!"

On a certain evening, as a fiery sun descended below the topmost tips of the waving rubber trees, the first assistant sat, as was his wont, on the steps of his verandah. Sundown!—the blissful moment of the weary, sweltering day when, by the laws of the dwellers of the orient, square bottles are permitted to put in an appearance! Paterson had not yet returned from his side of the vast Kabun, Enid was presumably indulging in a secluded siesta, and Fellowes was engaged in a grim struggle with what he imagined to be his inmost soul.

IBANEZ GETS CHALLENGE.

Defender of King Alfonso Will Slap Author's Face.

MENTONE, France, Dec. 20.—(United Press).—Vincent E. Blasco Ibanez is to have his face slapped if a defender of King Alfonso can find the author, who has taken refuge here and "taken measures to protect himself from physical violence."

Ibanez announced to-day he had engaged a bodyguard because of threats of violence. Benigno Varela, director of the Royalist newspaper Monarquia has challenged the author of the "Four Horsemen" to a duel. He has written the challenge and published it in four languages so that Ibanez cannot mistake his meaning.

PRINCE DRIVES WHILE HIS CHAFFEUR SLEEPS

LONDON, Dec. 20.—The numerous rounds of engagements which the Prince of Wales is called upon to fulfill often demand long hours of duty on the part of his servants and attendants, but the prince is uniformly considerate of them

On one occasion the prince arrived home in the early hours of the morning after a busy day and told his chauffeur he would require his car at 7 o'clock as he wanted to go hunting. Detecting a shadow on the chauffeur's face the prince inquired the reason for it. The chauffeur replied that he would not have time to clean the car whereupon the prince replied with an encouraging smile:

"Well bring the car round at 7:30 Dont' trouble to clean it, I'll drive and you can hope inside and have a sleep."

Jerry—"What makes that red spot on your nose?" Harry—"Glasses." Jerry—"Glasses of what?"

GOOD-WILL ENDS COUNCIL SCRAP WHEN ALDERMAN STOCKER LEADS THANKS TO ALDERMAN MORRISON

Christmas Spirit Emerges Triumphant From Wordy Warfare on Old Sore.

SUBURBAN ROADS

Attempt to Hoist Ex-Alderman Holloway Into Vacancy Lacks Support.

Things had been going along too smoothly in the City Council meetings, some Aldermen evidently believed, so last night a little pep was introduced in a debate on a by-law to appoint representatives on the Suburban Areas Commission.

The meetings of the Council of late have been peculiarly peaceable, but members and onlookers were aware, vaguely, of undercurrents beating up strongly below all this fair surface of tranquility. And last night, with Alderman Stocker at his favorite indoor sport of standing up the bogey of Suburban Roads and knocking it down, the storm broke.

Fortunately the wordy scrap between Aldermen Stocker and Morrison did not end in the recriminations of a personal character that marked its progress, but the spirit of the season, good will and friendship, prompted Alderman Stocker to sign his name as seconder of a motion of thanks to Alderman Morrison for his excellent work on the Suburban Areas Commission, from which he retires at the end of this year. The motion was framed and proposed by Alderman Turner.

Holloway Suggested.

The discussion opened with an attempt to place ex-Alderman W. T. Holloway into the position on the Commission made vacant by the retirement of Alderman Morrison. No other name was before the council for consideration, if not having been published that the position is open for competition to those qualified to hold it. On motion of Alderman Morrison and Alderman Maher, the appointment was left open until January.

It was pointed out that under amendments to the act under which the Suburban Area Commission operates no member of the City Council may represent the city in the Commission. An Alderman drew attention to the fact that five members of the Aldermanic Board retire this year, and some who may not seek re-election may wish to be considered in connection with the Commission appointment.

Alderman Stocker declared that ex-Alderman Holloway is "a fit and proper person to hold the office."

Alderman Maher, in seconding Alderman Morrison's motion, remarked that while he understood Dr. Holloway would accept the post if it were offered him, in his opinion the appointment should be left to the new council.

Alderman Morrison, answering questions, said there is no fixed rate of remuneration for members of the Commission. Expenses are allowed and the member are paid for the time they spend in the business of inspecting the suburban roads under their control. The rate, he said, is $5 a day at present, this being fixed by the Commissioners themselves.

Alderman Morrison's declaration at this point that Alderman Stocker had sought a position on the Commission was the last puff of wind needed to raise the storm. Alderman Stocker loudly declaimed all such desires, offering $1,000 to any charitable organization if it could be sworn that he had at any time endeavoured to get on the Suburban Commission. "I wouldn't be seen dead with such people," he declared.

Gale Blows Over.

Alderman Morrison gained the floor a second time, and despite attempts by Alderman Stocker to break in he gave an account of his stewardship as the city's representative on the Commission. Everything, he said, had been done under the supervision of the engineer, and there was no crookedness in the affairs of the Commission. "I know of nothing underhand, and I don't know that Alderman Stocker would have done any better. I have done my duty."

In his reply Alderman Stocker heatedly referred inquirers or sceptics to the Auditor's report for information on the financial dealings of the Commission, citing several examples.

Alderman McIntyre thought the appointment might be made immediately, but acquiesced in the general opinion when informed that no names were before the Council except Dr. Holloway's.

The vote to let the appointment remain for the new council was made unanimous.

And a few minutes later Alderman Stocker was a party to one of the generous acts that all too seldom brighten the drabness of similar meetings, when he went on record as a party to a motion of thanks to his foeman of a short time ago.

Allow Bill Board.

Hodgson and Williston were given permission to erect a double deck billboard opposite the Y.M.C.A. on George street.

Belated Recognition.

The question of some suitable recognition of the work of D. W. Dumble, former police magistrate in the city was broached by Mayor Turner.

After sympathetic consideration, the council decided to leave the matter until next year.

CHURCH WOMEN TAKE A STAND

Majority of Executive Council Will Enter the Union.

TORONTO, Dec. 20.—(Special).—In view of questions being asked as to the General Council Executive of the Women's Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church in relation to the Union, the following statement was issued last evening by the president, Mrs. John MacGillivray:

"Of the present membership of the board, 48, with two vacancies, the following are those going forward into the Union, 33 in number:

"Mrs. H. Baldwin, assistant strangers' secretary (immigration) Miss Brodie; Mrs. J. H. Bundy, secretary of finance; Mrs. C. Clark, secretary of Indian work, Canada; Miss C. Gray, secretary of home mission fields; Mrs. A. Hamilton, secretary of Chinese work, Canada; Mrs. D. B. Hanna, secretary supplies; Miss Harris; Mrs. Inkstater; Mrs. G. L. M. Johnston, convener, Canadian work, Section B; Mrs. Earle Jones, treasurer; Mrs. H. M. Kipp, hospital secretary; Miss Laing, historian, acting cor. secretary; Mrs. J. A. MacDonald, international secretary; Mrs. J. MacGillivray, president; Mrs. Hugh Mackenzie, secretary for Korea; Mrs. L. D. Patton, secretary for India; Mrs. J. G. Potter; Miss J. H. Purdy, secretary Young Women's Work; Mrs. A. I. Sinclair, secretary for Formosa; Mrs. John Somerville, hon. president and acting member; Mrs. Frank Somerville, 5th vice-president; Miss Helen Sutherland, secretary of French work; Mrs. J. M. West, strangers secretary (immigration), Mrs. Jas Wilson, recording secetary; Miss Anna Wilson, assistant Mission Band secretary; Mrs. Colin Young, convener, Canadian work, Sec. A; Vice-President Mrs. J. A. Walker; Mrs. C. W. Gordon; Mrs. J. G. McKechnie, Regina; Mrs. J. L. Rowe, Alberta; Mrs. J. S. Gordon, British Columbia.

Since the election of the board, May, 1924, two members have resigned through illness: Mrs. Robert Wilson, secretary social service, concurring, and Mrs. Malleys, secretary for South China, non-concurring.

The figures are not available as to the position of Provincial boards, though it is well-known that they are predominantly union. In quoting the figures with regard to Presbyterian executives, their full strength must be taken into consideration, the president of every branch being a member of the executive. For instance, in Toronto there are, in addition to 63 chief officers and members of committees, the presidents of all the branches number 200 in all.

LAKEFIELD NEWS.

Funeral of Mrs. S. E. White Was Held on Tuesday.

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 19.—The funeral took place on Tuesday morning at 9.15 of Mrs. S. E White. After a brief service at the house the body was taken to St. John's Church (of which the deceased was a devout worshipper) where the funeral service was held by Rev. Walter Cox, Rector of the Parish, assisted by Rev. A. W. Mackenzie.

Rev. W. Cox in a very brief address put before his hearers the fulness of the life to come of which death is only the portal. The body is laid in the ground, restored to Mother Nature and the Spirit goes upward to await the fulness of life beyond, another added to the vast army of the Church Expectant who join with us in the Communion of Saints, which is part of our belief. "There is no death, what seems so is transitior."

These words were of comfort to the living, expressing the glorious hope given us by Christ himself of the life to come where the Souls of the righteous are in God's own keeping.

Among the floral tributes were included wreaths from Mr. White, Mr. H. Perdue (father of the deceased), Rev. & Mrs. Cox, Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Marling, the Misses Ray, the W. A. (of which the deceased was president) and the A.Y.P.A.

The pall-bearers were Messrs. T. Watson, H. J. Sutton, C. C. Stenner, A. Macdonald, Percy Stenner and Bert Summers.

Immediately after the service the funeral cortege left by motor for Tenelon Falls where the interment took place.

Confirmation Services.

The Lord Bishop of Toronto administration the Holy Rite of Confirmation in St. John's Church on Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Rev. W. Cox presented six girls and six boys, and Rev. A. W. MacKenzie presented eight boys to the Bishop for the Apostolic rite. The Bishop addressed the candidates on the seven-fold rule of life stressing the studying and memorizing of parts of the Scripture, the importance and helpfulness of prayer and the Spiritual benefit received from regular attendance at the Holy Communion. He exhorted them to steadfastness in the Faith which they were professing and that they might remain until their life's end Christ's faithful [illegible].

Rev. T. J. O'Connor, Fenton, Rural Dean of Peterboro Deanery assisted in the service.

In the evening, Rev. W. Cox presented four adult candidates to the Bishop in St. George's Church, Peterboro.

WEATHER HURTS WESTERN TRADE

Extreme Cold of This Week Seriously Affected Holiday Business.

BRISK IN TORONTO.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 20.—The weekly trade report of the Canadian Credit Men's Trust Association, Limited, reads:

Halifax—Retail business owing to weather not as brisk as expected. Other conditions remain about the same.

St. John—Wholesale trade conditions satisfactory, retail trade good. Weather is cold and seasonable. Collections fair.

Montreal—Dry goods sales fairly steady, slight increase in some lines, owing to cold snap during the past week. Collections fair. Hardware very slow, sales reported about the same as last report. Collections not very brisk. Increase in various groceries lines reported. Owing to the coming holiday season conditions a little better than those of last week. Collections fairly good. Boots and shoes sales keeping up fairly well. Conditions better than last report. Collections good.

Toronto—Wholesale trade, gifts and fancy goods are doing a nice business while wholesale grocery and dry goods are making last year's figures and in some cases better. Retail trade, Christmas shopping is now well under way and sales are quite brisk. Industry, conditions to show signs of improvement, although so far there is very little expansion but the outlook is decidedly optimistic.

Winnipeg — Wholesalers report steady volume of business. Retail demand in city good under holiday trade. Collections from country points slowed up owing to weather conditions.

Regina—Wholesale trade conditions fair to steady. Retail trade reported fair only for this time of the year. Collections have dropped off.

Saskatoon—Wholesale trade conditions showing improvement, but retail trade quiet for this season, owing to extreme cold. Collections fair.

Calgary— Owing to the extreme cold, collections fair. Calgary business is being most adversely affected. This condition has also been reflected in a falling off in collections.

Edmonton— Extreme cold snap has affected all lines of business. Holiday buying in city brisk. Collections fair.

Vancouver— Business generally responding to Christmas demand.

EBERT WON SUIT.

LONDON, Dec. 19.—A verdict in favor of President Ebert of Germany in his suit for libel against Editor Rothart of the Mitteldeutsche Zeitung, was rendered by the court at Magdeburg yesterday according to an agency despatch from Amsterdam. The editor was sentenced to serve six months in prison.

MILLBROOK CADETS WIN AT SHOOTING

Won Second Prize in Laura Secord Competition—Scored 461 Points.

MILLBROOK, Dec. 19. — The Millbrook Public School Cadets have won second prize in the Laura Secord shooting competition, moving up one from last year, when they held third place. The Belleville team took the cup for the second consecutive year, the second team from that city tieing with Brockville for third place.

The local team scored 461 points out of a possible 500. The individual records were: Nelles Rowland, 100; Keith Barnard, 98; Walter Sayles, 97; Lawrence Rowland, 91; Lawrence Winslow, 75.

The two-pound box of Laura Secord chocolates which each boy received as a prize, was presented by B. J. Dawson, who has succeeded Lieutenant E. E. Doxsee as officer commanding.

Military District No. 3 is the area covered in the competition and extends from Ottawa on the east to the outskirts of Toronto on the west, with the cadet teams in practically all the Public schools in that territory entered as contestants. The team wining first place scored 474 points out of 500, and the two coming third, 437 points.

In the High school competition, the Belleville boys came second with 952 points out of a possible 1,000.

Officers Elected.

The Millbrook Royal Black Preceptory, No. 945, at its annual meeting held recently, elected the following officers for 1925:

W. P.—Wor. Sir Knight A. V. Thorne.

Held Entertainment.

The "Sunshine" Mission Band, Mrs. Offa Williamson, superintendent, held a very successful Christmas tree and entertainment in the basement of the Methodist Church on Wednesday evening, a large number of parents and friends being present for the occasion.

A "White Gifts" Christmas was what the leader had in mind in planning the tree, the contents of which were to be expressed to the Deaconess Home in Toronto to aid in providing good cheer for needy families, and particularly for the children, who, unless outside aid was enlisted, might not be visited by "Santa Claus" at all.

The admission was "something to put on the tree," and old and young came laden with boxes and bundles, large, medium-sized and small, everyone apparently glad of the opportunity to help in making Christmas a joyous time for others less fortunately situated than themselves. Clothing, groceries, picture books, dolls of all sizes, toys, fruit, etc., were among the articles contributed, which later filled the big box standing in readiness, packed that night after the entertainment, and shipped next day to Toronto.

Mr. W. Fred Fallis, superintendent of the Sunday School, was chairman, and Misses Ella Elson, Ethel Richardson and Estelle Hetherington the accompanists of the evening. The various items of the programme were:

Luther's cradle hymn—"Away in a Manger."
Prayer by Rev. F. W. Howard.
Scripture lesson, "The Christmas Story," Matthew ii., 1-15.
Marching song—"Our Gifts for Jesus," by the Mission Band.
Recitation—"Who Made the First Christmas?" by Walter Sayles, Gerald Raper and Arthur Howard.
Recitation — "If," by Lenore Lambert.
Recitation—"I'm Thankful," by Bernice Smith.
"China Song" (in costume), by Gerald Raper, Lawrence Rowland, Jack Stinson and Walter Sayler.
Recitation—"Betty's Story," by Mary Burnham.
Recitation—"A Little Living, Christmas Tree," by Bryar Edmunds.
Piano duet by Hazel McMahon and Elsie Spence.
Recitation—"Jesus' Great Love," by Bessie Dawson, Madeline McDowell and Helen Mitchell.
Recitation—"A Lesson in Arithmetic," by Bessie Dawson.
Chorus — "Rig a Jig Jig," by members of the Band.
Reading—"Our Minister's Sermon," by Mr. T. H. Aiken.
Intermission, with candles lighted on the tree, and other lights turned off.
"Milkmaid Song" (in costume), by Jean Stinson and Lawrence Rowland. Encore, "I'm so Shy."
Reading—"Santa's S'prise Tree," by Jean Burnham.
Hymn—"It came upon the midnight clear."
Benediction.

The basement was appropriately decorated with Christmas bells, evergreens and red and green streamers, the fireplace in the centre at the rear of the platform, with stockings, well-filled, hanging in a row along the mantel shelf, being an especially attractive feature. The Christmas tree, at the right of the platform, gay with silver tinsel, tiny bells, silver stars, and other shining ornaments, besides being laden with all the gifts it would hold, evidently was a source of joy to the heart of every child present.

Mr. O. Williamson, wearing the regulation costume, made an excellent "Santa Claus," taking the gifts from the children when they marched, singing, round the room, pausing at the platform to hand in their parcels that the tree might be duly supplied.

A treat of home-made candy was provided for everyone present, the boys and girls first coming forward and receiving from "Santa" a generous helping, the members of the Mission Band then passing the boxes of maple cream, fudge, stuffed dates, etc., to the rest of the audience.

A hearty vote of thanks to Mrs. Williamson, and those who had assisted her in preparing the evening's entertainment, was moved by Mr. P. Stinson, seconded by Mr. M. McDowell, both expressing, on behalf of the parents, their appreciation of the interest taken in training the children, and providing so pleasant a gathering for the older folk as well.

The offering amounted to about five dollars, and would be used to help in paying the express on the box, though, through the generosity of one of the parents interested, a substantial donation was promised for this purpose.

When a Scream Startles You —and your heart jumps up in your throat—and you know one of the children is hurt—run to the medicine cabinet for the bottle of Absorbine Jr.

THE ANTISEPTIC LINIMENT

Whether it is a cut hand or a gashed knee—a torn arm, burnt finger, sprained ankle, bruise or open wound—apply "ABSORBINE JR." full strength.

It may smart for an instant—but it will cleanse the wound, destroy germs, prevent infection, ease the pain and promote rapid and healthy healing.

For toothache, saturate cotton with "ABSORBINE JR." and place in the cavity in the tooth. Then rub the face with this reliable liniment—it stops the pain.

If the children get sore throat or tonsilitis, make a gargle with "ABSORBINE JR." You see how useful, how handy, how necessary it is to keep a bottle of "ABSORBINE JR." always in the house—it saves so much pain and suffering.

been specially appointed to consider recomendations which had been made on the subject of a Dominion standard of licensing as the sole Canadian standard. There was some difference of opinion in the open conference Thursday on the subject of licensing, and the tentative proposal that provincial licensing bodies give way to a federal one was apparently not found feasible by the committee.

Hope for Agreement

Its final recommendation, which was adopted yeterday, only refers to this phase of the question to express the hope that there will be increasing results towards equalization of requirements for medical licenses in the different parts of the Dominion.

The only other resolution adopted Friday urges upon federal and provincial governments the need of continuous and increasing financial support for clinics which are combatting venereal disease. It was agreed that the conference hereafter will be an open one, to be held in Ottawa in the autumn. Many subjects of interest to doctors came up Friday, from the "high pressure salesmanship" of vendors of vitamins to the best means of preventing smallpox.

Dr. Helen MacMurchy, director of Child Welfare in the federal department of health, read a paper on Maternal Mortality. She said that every week in Canada 24 women die in childbirth.

Professor Henderson of Toronto, submitted a paper on the procuring of pure drugs.

ARE YOU TORTURED WITH ECZEMA?

Eczema, or Salt Rheum, as it is commonly called, is one of the most agonizing of all skin diseases.

The intense burning, itching and smarting, especially at night or when the parts are exposed to heat, are almost unbearable and relief is greatly welcomed.

The most reliable and effective remedy for this trouble is

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.

Mrs. J. R. Johnson, R.R. No. 1, Oshawa, Ont., writes: "For years I was troubled with eczema, and had that terrible itching and burning sensation, and could find no relief for it. Finally, I was advised to use B.B.B., and after my second bottle I began to see a great difference, and I can, now, advise anyone troubled as I was to use this wonderful remedy."

Sweden To Use Airplanes To Stop Traffic In Rum

STOCKHOLM, Dec. 20.—To such vast proportions has the liquor smuggling trade developed in the Swedish Archipelago that the authorities have decided to use airplanes in hunting rum runners.

Government officials are much heartened over the apparent change in the attitude of the majority of the Swedish people toward prohibition, many who at first openly sympathized with the smugglers having declared that because of the evil effects of the trade on the country, they would assist in eliminating the rum runners.

ALNWICK COUNCIL HELD A MEETING

Several in the Field for the Reeveship—List of Accounts Passed.

ROSENEATH, Dec. 19.—The Alnwick Township Council held their final meeting in the town hall, Roseneath, with the reeve in the chair and all the councillors present.

The clerk had received payment from the council at the last meeting for revising part three of the voters' list for the plebiscite election. Since that time he had received a cheque for the amount from the government, which seems to be a new procedure. The clerk refunded the amount back to the township treasurer.

Reeve Henry reported on committee work on the boundary where he had given certain wood to Mr. Wm. Jewel for clearing and burning the brush.

Councillor Blodgett reported that he had sold the timber on the road at Merrill's Church to Mr. Clarence Sherwin for the sum of $13.00.

Reeve Honey gave the council a good report of the doings of the county council during the last session and he informed the clerk that the assessment roll of each township for the year 1924 must be forwarded to the county clerk on or before the 20th day of January, 1925.

A by-law to provide for nomination and election for reeve and council for the year 1925 was introduced by Reeve Honey, and after receiving its third reading, was passed. The following are the polling places:

No. 1—At or near Town Hall, Roseneath.
No. 2—At or near Thackeray School.
No. 3—At or near North School.

The officers appointed were: No. 1—Albert Halstead, D.R.O.; J. T. Drope, poll clerk. No. 2—Amos Shearer, D.R.O.; Newman Lean, poll clerk. No. 3—Jas. Webb, D.R.O.; D. J. Varcoe, poll clerk.

Nominations to take place in the town hall, Roseneath, on Monday, Dec. 29, at 1 o'clock p.m., and election, if necessary, the following Monday.

The council then adjourned for dinner. This was given by the retiring reeve, Thos. H. Honey, at Mrs. Turner's. Other guests who were present besides the members of the council were: Clerk John McMillan, Treasurer Geo. A. Dawe, Assessor Austin Lean, Caretaker S. A. Tucker.

The council resumed business again at two o'clock.

Mr. Thos. Ingham interviewed the council in regard to taxes he had paid on Indian land during the past three years. He claimed that he did not know of this until a short time ago. Previous to three years ago he had this land rented and there must have been an error by somebody. The council thought they had no authority to deal with anything previous to this year, but Mr. Ingham refused to accept anything but the whole amount, finally agreeing to take two years' rebate, but this was not granted, and he left without any settlement being made.

Mr. S. A. Tucker was re-appointed school attendance officer.

Mr. M. Davey, tax collector, was present, and showed that less than $200 of the taxes remained unpaid. On motion of Reeve Honey and Councillor Arnold he was given an extension of time until Jan. 12, 1925.

The following resolution, moved by Councillor Shearer and seconded by Councillor Blodgett, was passed: That the clerk be instructed to part up tenders for bushing Rice Lake. Tenders are to be in the clerk's office before 8 o'clock p.m., Saturday, Dec. 27, and that the reeve and Councillors Parker and Arnold award contracts. The different places to be bushed are Robin's Landing to Keene River, Kelly's Shore to Keene's River, and from Doidge's Landing to the boundary between Alnwick and Hamilton.

On motion of Councillors Parker and Shearer the following accounts were ordered paid:

Wilfred Walton, refund statute labor, $1.60; Bruce Parker, work on road, and damage to crop, $22.60; H. M. Powlds & Son, balance on cement, $41.70; Henry Cornego, 32 yards gravel, $3.20; Silas Sherwin, refund statute labor, $8; Fred George, per bill, $4; Jno. Burrisen, work on road, $6.50; Geo. Ingham, per bill, $5.65; W. H. Henry, township printing, $40.30; Geo. A. Dawe, salary as treasurer, and postage, $48; Fred George, salary as constable, $15; S. A. Tucker, salary, caretaker and S.A.O., $26; T. Honey, salary, reeve, $37.50; W. Arnold, salary, councillor, $36; H. Blodgett, salary, councillor, $36; E. Shearer, salary, councillor, $36; G. Parker, salary, councillor, and com., $37; John McMillan, salary, clerk, $150.00; Jno. McMillan, reg., births, marriages an deaths, $6.25; John McMillan, postage and stationery, $9.68; M. Davey, part salary as collector, $40; D. Sherwin, rebate statute labor, $11.20; H. Cornego, 20 yards gravel, $2.

Reeve Honey, in his concluding remarks, thanked the council for their co-operation during the past two years. He was sorry he could not be with them any longer, but would like to see them come to an agreement whereas all would stand a chance to sit at the Board another year. He had great respect for the Township of Alnwick and hoped if his life was spared to return again to end his days here.

Councillor Arnold said that his four years in the council had seemed short. He had tried to do his best during that term. He had been asked to stand for reeve and would be a candidate for that office.

Councillor Blodgett considered his four years a pleasure and was glad that all were leaving on good terms with each other. He also would be a candidate for reeve.

Councillor Shearer had enjoyed his three years' experience, and had learned a lot. He would also be in the field for reeve.

Councillor Parker had enjoyed his two years at the Bard, also the scraps they had engaged in. He said he had thought he was right then and had not chaged his mind since. If he had said anything to hurt anybody's feelings he was sorry. He would not like the other members be a candidate for reeve but if he received a nomination he would again stand for councillor.

Clerk McMillan said that speech-making was a hard task for him. He was always sorry to see a reeve and council broken up after several terms together. He complimented the reeve and council on their work during the past year and hoped that Reeve Honey would make many more good friends in his new home.

EGGS AND POULTRY.

ANN ARBOR COMPLETES ELYSIUM FOR LAWYERS

Lawyers Club to be Outstanding Place for Legal Research.

ANN ARBOR, Dec. 20.—The Lawyers Club, designed by the University of Michigan to be the outstanding place in the western hemisphere for legal research, has completed its buildings. They are the gift of William W. Cook, a lawyer of New York and a Michigan graduate. Dean Henry M. Bates, of the Michigan law department, has said of this club:

"When the whole project is completed and operative we shall have an equipment and an organization for the development of lawyers of high class, lawyers fitted to become leaders, never before attained in legal education anywhere. When we shall have completed our library, outstanding among law labraries of the western hemisphere for its comprehensive scope, with the living rooms available for visitors, the opportunity for judges and practicing lawyers to come here and study their cases and prepare briefs will be so unusual that a substantial stream of guests may be expected. They will have access to the great library, will have quarters in which they may dictate or consult with assistants and also opportunity to consult with specialists in various legal fields who make up our law faculty."

The plans for the library, now only partly realized, include, complete data on the legal beginnings of the United States ;also on the beginning of all constitutional governments; activities of all constitutional conventions; complete records of all cases involving international law, and methods of procedure in courts of all countries on the globe.

FAMOUS CHURCH GET HUGE BELL.

COLOGNE, Dec. 20.—Cologne Cathedral is soon to have the largest ell in the world. It will weigh over 25 tons.

The bell has been ready for shipment from a factory at Apolda for over a year, but on account of the foreign occupation of the Cologne zone it was deemed impracticable before this to install it.

CANADIAN NATIONAL FAST SERVICE TORONTO TO WINNIPEG

A Lime Spreader For $20 | Have You a Little Turkey at Home? | The First Agricultural F

AGRICULTURAL PROFESSOR HAS DEVISED A SIMPLE APPARATUS THAT CAN BE BUILT IN A DAY

Need for Inexpensive Lime Spreader Made Apparent by Numerous Inquiries—This Machine Has Been Tested in Use With Good Results.

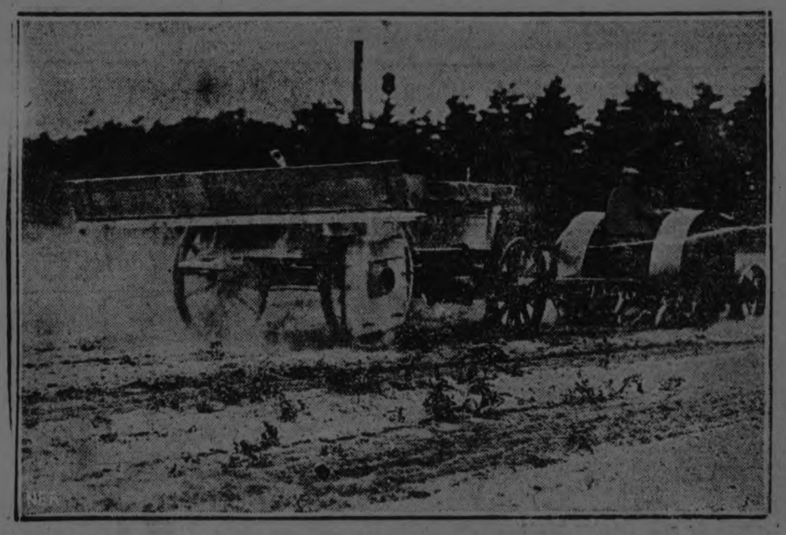
EVEN FLOW IS EASILY REGULATED

Designed to be Attached to Rear of Wagon Box And is Operated by Wheels of Wagon—Many Farmers Will Try Lime on Their Land.

As the result of numerous inquiries, Prof. H. H. Musselman ha devised a simple lime spreader which can be built by any farmer at an expenditure of not more than $20.

The need for an inexpensive machine of this kind is apparent when it is noted that the use of lime is not general and that many farmers, who wish to use it in an experimental way on comparatively small acreages, do not feel that the expenditure for a commercial spreader would be justified.

The spreader devised by Prof. Musselman, and built under his supervision, has been tried out with excellent results. The machine has been tested with pulverized limestone, both dry and damp.



THE $20 LIME SPREADER IN OPERATION BEHIND A TRACTOR.

If lumpy material is to be used it should be shoveled through a screen of poultry netting or close mesh fencing placed over the top of the hopper.

The mesh of this screen should have not larger than 1½ inch openings. Lumps remaining on the screen can be brushed through the screen and broken up with a shovel.

Worked From Rear.

The spreader is designed to be attached to the rear end of the wagon box and operated by a rocker arm dropping from peg to peg on a disc attached to and turning with the rear wheels of the wagon.

The rocker arm moves a board under the hopper which serves as an agitator. The jarring action of the rocker arm on the agitator and box serve to feed down the lime.

Both wheel disc and hopper are easily detachable from the wagon by loosening four nuts, and can be transferred from one wagon to another if necessary. If this is done it is well to have the reach adjustment the same on each.

The wagon box should extend about 18 inches back of the rear axle, and when the hopper is hung on top of the box the height of the top of the box should be from 24 to 30 inches above the axle.

This rocker arm may be adjusted for different heights of box, but where the spreader is to be used on two wagons it is preferable to have the boxes the same height above, and distance back of, the rear axle.

Adjustable.

Where the soil is firm enough so that a load of lime may be drawn over it, the box may be put on the loaded wagon and the lime spread by shoveling directly into the spreader. In case the spreading is to be done over plowed ground, it will be found impracticable to draw the full load.

In this case and where the lime is in storage or piles, only enough is shoveled into the empty wagon carrying the spreader to go once around the field or some other convenient distance.

It will not be found practicable to spread pulverized lime in a high wind. A moderate wind will not greatly effect the evenness of spread.

For Hard Lime.

If extremely hard and lumpy material is to be handled, it is suggested that the lower or cutting edges of the hopper sides be faced with a strap of iron or heavy galvanized sheet metal to take the wear. This facing should be wide enough to attach securely to the box and extend below it one quarter to one-half inch to making a cutting edge.

The construction of the spreader is comparatively easy and should not require more than a day's time. The material needed includes proper sizes of lumber, the agitator hanger and six bolts.

The bolts, which are all alike, may be made by a blacksmith. Or the hanger bolts may be made by cutting the heads from long bolts of the right size and bending them cold at right angles, which is all that is required.

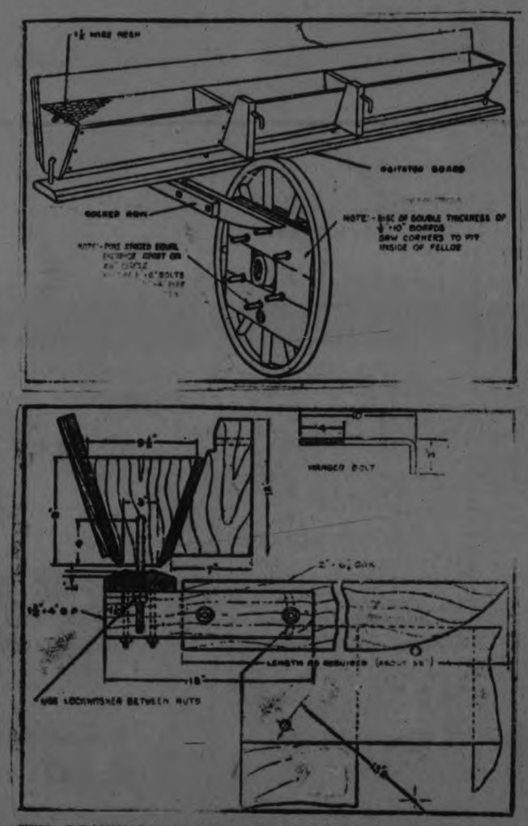
Extreme accuracy is not required in the dimensions, but the side pieces, and especially the agitator board, should be reasonably straight and true.

For Even Flow.

Two other points should be noted:

1. The lower edges of the hopper boards are dressed to a chisel-like edge, the point being about one-quarter inch thick.

2. The top of the agitator board is beveled to make an even flow of material over its edge.



TWO DRAWINGS SHOWING CONSTRUCTIONAL DETAILS OF THE HOME-MADE LIME SPREADER.

To determine amount sown per acre, tests were made with pulverized limestone over different types of ground with finely ground lime. The amount spread is determined by the adjustment of the nuts on the hanger bolts which carry the agitator.

The diameter of the wheel on the wagon used was 44 inches. Where the disc is attached to a wheel of different size the amounts would be less with a larger wheel and more with the smaller wheel.

Requirements Vary.

Probably a more satisfactory way to determine the amount spread per acre is to start with the hopper level full and run out a seven-inch depth of lime, with feed set at, say, 1¼ inch.

A depth of seven-inch spread in a distance of 40 rods would represent closely one ton per acre. At the same rate 10 rods would represent one-quarter ton or 500 pounds per acre.

If the same amount were spread in 20 rods double the amount or two tons per acre would be the amount sown.

Two or three trials will serve to determine the desired setting.

CHRISTMAS DONT'S.

Don't half-fill the kiddies' stockings.
Don't give presents which will be useless.
Don't forget the mistletoe. Romance still lives.
Don't forget that it ought to be a merry Christmas.
Don't worry about unpaid bills—at any rate until to-morrow.
Don't scoff at the lingering superstitions of the good old days.
Don't, for the show of things, buy presents which you can't afford.
Don't expect too many presents. Take what you get and be thankful.
Don't forget to think at least once during the day what Christmas really means.
during the day what Christmas really
Don't give a present unless you want to. Better not give at all than give insincerely.
Don't forget that the giving of Christmas boxes, like charity, should begin at home.
Don't, if you are a girl, stand under the mistletoe until you see the right chap approaching.
Don't kiss somebody else's best girl, even though she is under the itsiWMe. There might be a row.
Don't, if you get up on your wrong side, make everybody else miserable.

Christmas Card

Don't work on Christmas day if you can avoid it. If you have to, however, don't make a song about it.

Don't give Johnny a trumpet and Peter a whistle and expect to have a quiet time. It's unreasonable.

REMOVE INK STAINS.

Ripe tomato juice will remove ink stains and will not injure the fabric.

JOURNALIST DEAD.

Capt. Irwin Donaldson Johnston, of Montreal, Gassed Overseas.

MONTREAL, Dec. 20.—Stricken in the prime of life, Capt. Irwin Donaldson Johnson, Journalist and soldier, died here yesterday, following a struggle of some years against tuberculosis, to which he fell a victim largely owing to strenuous service overseas in the course of which he was badly gassed. He was 45 years of age. Over three years ago he had been compelled for health reasons to relinquish his duties as financial editor of the Montreal Gazette, which he carried out for some years.

SUPERSTITIONS OF EUROPE PEASANTS

If Dog Howls Night Before Christmas, Mad in Year Is One Belief.

The peasantry of Europe have had certain Christmas superstitions handed down to them from past ages. Just how far these simple folk can be fooled is to be wondered.

If you steal hay the night before Christmas and give the cattle some, they will thrive and you will not be caught in any future thefts.

It is unlucky to give a neighbor a live coal to kindle a fire with on Christmas morning.

If a dog howls the night before Christmas, it will go mad within the year.

If you steal anything at Christmas without being caught, you can steal safely for a year.

On Christmas eve thrash the garden with a flail, with only your shirt on, and the grass will grow well next year.

Tie wet strawbands around the orchard trees on Christmas eve and it will make them fruitful.

On Christmas eve put a stone on every tree, and they will bear the more.

Beat the trees on Christmas night, and they will bear the more.

If after a Christmas dinner you take out the tablecloth over the bare ground under the open sky, crumbwort will grow on the spot.

If on Christmas day or eve, you hang a washcloth out on the hedge, and then groom the horses with it, they will grow fat.

As often as the cock crows on Christmas eve, the quarter of corn will be as dear.

USE VARNISH.

Linoleum wears better if varnished when new and waxed lightly once a week after washing.

Santa Claus and the Pioneers

By MARJORIE H. DIXON.

It was necessary for Santa Claus to watch his step in those days—something less than one hundred years ago—when he was making his first visits to the children of the pioneers shut up in the wilderness cabins of our northern states. Only reluctantly did suspicion give way to welcome. Those grave men and women of the pathfinder race were slow to admit that Santa's garments did not smell too strongly of incense and that his jolly red face was not a mask hiding more sinister features. But the children welcomed him. No doubt the fears and warnings of the grown-ups added one more pleasant thrill to those whispered tales of that strange night traveler who drove reindeers instead of oxen, and carried a pack from which he distributed enchanting gifts to those boys and girls whose high standard of conduct made them worthy objects of his benevolence. Standards were high in those days and it is recorded that sometimes there was little besides a stout switch to greet young eager eyes on Christmas morning.

Thought flies away from such a painful scene and prefers to picture a cabin, before Christmas, dimly lighted by the flames on the hearth, children sound asleep in trundle beds and mother and father working quickly and quietly at their home-made toys and gifts. Doubtless in most cases the picture would not be complete without the disapproving presence of grandfather, grandmother, or maiden aunt, busy at some pioneer handcraft, but not too busy to reprove the evilness of such ways with curiously applied texts and the dimly remembered warnings of still earlier days.

Very little money was spent on Christmas gifts. Careful calculation was required in order to stretch the family income so it would include paying for a few pieces of the crude candy of the day and also perhaps pay the nearest blacksmith for shaping iron runners to fit wooden sleds and skates made by father at home. Mothers did not require such aid. When the poke berries and the walnuts and all the other forest materials for making dyes were ready, she had thought ahead to Christmas time and prepared the gay yarns which later she knit into scarfs, wristlets and mittens. These same dyes put roses into the cheeks of the rag dolls and furnished gay coats and trousers for the clumsy jumping-jacks. The last seemed to have been favorite toys. Besides these there were dolls' tea-sets made of acorn cups, fearsome witches and fairies whose heads were carved hickory nuts and whose bodies were shapen of wood and wire. Indian crafts were adapted to meet the pioneers' needs. Dyed hedgehog quills made gay strings of beads, wild turkey feathers formed juvenile war bonnets, and the hands that made clumsy jumping-jacks and skates showed marvelous skill in shaping small bows and arrows for the use of, maybe, some future hunter of fame. Had the year been unusually prosperous, those before Christmas preparations included the purchase of crockery mugs out of which the children drank on high days and holidays, but which at other times stood on shelves well out of reach of youthful hands.

A few of these things have come down to us out of that time. Here and there in an old Canadian home, now and then behind the glass cases of museums we can see them. Especially do we find specimens of the drinking cup. The pottery is coarse, the shapes are not elegant, and the coloring is crude indeed. For example, one shows a blue man driving a blue yoke of oxen hitched to a blue plow, and the owner is admonished by a blue motto from the Book of Proverbs to "Go to the ant," etc. Another little cup has a mulberry woman, straight as a stick, carrying a mulberry pail and walking down a mulberry path, all to adorn a mulberry motto from "Poor Richard" having to do with the sad fate of those who fail to take the ant for their guide in industry. Perhaps these pious verses helped to make possible some of the compromises with conscience that those men and women found necessary. Such gifts served the needs of those children who would have fled in horror at even a dim vision of the toy automobiles and airplanes of today. Such as these would have confirmed the worst that had been said as to Christmas toys being the invention of that evil one supposed to lurk behind Santa Claus' white whiskers.

As may be guessed, other compromises with conscience were also made. We are told that now and then grandfather, who had quoted texts and scolded every step in the preparations, took possession when it came to the actual time of giving, and in the fullest possible dress of an Indian chief, distributed the gifts with Indian form. Perhaps he thought that thereby the malign influence of Santa Claus would be neutralized by the native spirit of the woods.

There were families in which gift giving was approved, but to whom even such gifts as have been mentioned were impossible. All the pioneers were poor but poorest of all were those messengers of civilization, the pioneer preachers. In one such family the mother found it possible to give her only son nothing but an apple. This apple was procured only with much effort, but it always came, was polished till it shone, and came soon to stand to the son for all the mother would have liked to give. When times became easier and other gifts were made, the son continued to prize most highly the red apple the mother never forgot. Then came the year when the mother had passed beyond such gift giving. The first Christmas eve after this event the young man, a country preacher in his turn, spent the night in a pioneer home just robbed of its first baby. At dawn the young preacher left for his own home, depressed with his own grief and that of his friends. He felt a special sense of loss because for the first time within his memory he would have no red apple. The cold wind blew, the snow made the trail heavy and the bare branches creaked their lonesome message. Suddenly at a turn in the path, lying beside a huge log that crossed his road this young man saw a big red apple, just such an apple as his mother always gave. And there is no explanation. The presence of that apple in that spot was never explained. When that young preacher became an old man, he spoke of the event with awe. As the years went on, he found that something else had been given him besides his mother's apple. He found he had been given the certainty of love's enduring quality that strengthened him all his days.

Show in 1850 Was Held in Niagara District—Debts Were Then Paid Off and Supporters Started to Drop Off.

COBOURG, Dec. 20.—There are records existing to show there were county agricultural shows as early as 1828, but it was not until 1845 or 1846 that a union of these was effected and the Upper Canada Agricultural Association organized.

The first exhibition was held in Toronto in 1846, and an exhibition was held at Hamilton the following year. The third was held at Cobourg in 1848, and the next at Kingston in 1849. Copies of the Canadian Agriculturist for 1848 and '49 are still in existence in Cobourg and give interesting descriptions of how these early shows were carried on. An Executive meeting of the Upper Canada Agricultural Association was held at Cobourg in 1848, when Henry Ruttan of Cobourg, was elected president. That year the Provincial Government made a grant of 250 pounds to the Association. This was paid into the hands of the treasurer in 1849, and also the sum of 450 pounds to meet current indebtedness. The first two shows were not financially successful. As the exhibition was moved from one city or town to another each year, it was necessary each season to let a contract for a suitable building and also for pens for the live stock. The duties and expense attendant upon this probably led to the decision to make Toronto the permanent home of the show. There is has remained and thrived, until it has become a notable event attended by crowds from all parts of the Province and also from beyond its confines.

A study of the show as it existed in 1848 and 1849 will give some idea of how far we have progressed in eighty-odd years. Ten acres of land was secured for the show at Kingston in 1849. This was fenced in, and the records state that suitable buildings were erected upon this on an ample scale. The exhibition was held for three days, from Sept. 18th to Sept. 21st. The following paragraph, preserved in the report in the old magazine from which this data is taken, shows that the fair that year made as great demands upon the hospitality of the people of Kingston as the great National Exhibition does now upon the City of Toronto.

"The people of Kingston extended their hospitality with hearty goodwill to the thousands of visitors who flocked from all parts of the compass to their renowned city. Every bed was called into requisition, and even sofas were found necessary to rest many a weary pedestrian who had made too many circuits of the showgrounds."

"Wednesday morning (the first day of the show) large numbers congregated about the gate early, but no person, excepting officers, exhibitors and members, were admitted until two o'clock. We should judge that from five to six thousand people passed through the gate that day.,,

"In the evening," the writer continues, "the visitors to the fair were favored soon after dark, with a fantastic display by a society of "Phisiogs," as they call themselves, who paraded through the streets of Kingston bearing torches, some in waggons and others on foot. They were dressed and painted in the most outlandish style, and from what we have heard, they have been in the habit of playing-off similar antics for some time back."

This, it would appear, was one evidence of Kingston's appreciation of the show being held in that town.

On Thursday (the second day) the attendance is reported to have been considerably larger. A review of the troops, of which there were about a thousand stationed in Kingston, took place on Barriefield Common. The president, Mr. Sheriff Rattan, of Cobourg, delivered the annual address from a stand erected upon the exhibition grounds that afternoon. It dealt with the early history of Ontario from the time of its first settlement, some sixty years before, and of the history of agriculture in Upper Canada up to that time, and has been carefully preserved to the present day. At the conclusion of the president's address, the secretary, Mr. Geo. Buckland, Toronto, read out the names of the prize-winners in the various classes. This custom was observed also at all fall fairs for some fifty years afterwards. A description of the exhibits which included horses, cattle, sheep, pigs, agricultural implements, portable grist mills, would be interesting no doubt, but this would make another story. It is recorded, however, in the list of domestic manufactures, that Mr. Drummond, of Toronto, showed some beautiful furniture, and Mr. Spencer, of Toronto, forks, axes, and other tools. It is further recorded that in "Floral Hall" the ladies' work and the paintings and drawings "were deserving of all praise." From the hothouses of W. B. Jarvis, Esq., Rosedale, Toronto, were some fine specimens of Black Hamburg and Black St. Peter grapes; some very fine long blood beets from Messrs. Leslie & Gordon, Toronto; some large white egg plums from Edwin Baldwin, Toronto, and a few specimens of choice apples from James Fleming, Toronto. Capt. H. Shaw, Oakhill, Toronto, exhibited the biggest pumpkin, the weight of which is given as 292 pounds. The flowers, it is stated, were not worth looking at, the season being too late and unfavorable for such production.

It was decided to hold the show in 1850 in the Niagara District, "probably in the neighbourhood of the Falls," and these plans were subsequently carried out. The executive of the Association met upon the showgrounds at Kingston and elected following officers to carry on for the following year:—

President, John Wetenhall, M.P., Nelson, Ont.; 1st vice-president, J. B. Marks, Kingston; 2nd vice-president, T. Clarkstreet, Niagara Falls; treasurer, F. G. Yidout, Toronto, cashier, B.U.C.; secretary, George Bucknell, Toronto.

Among those present at this meeting of the executive were E. W. Thompson, Toronto; Hon. Adam Ferguson; Asa A. Burnham, Cobourg; D. Matthews, Wm. McMicking, Robert Watson, John Weir, R. L. Dennison, Mr. Clapp, Mr. Taylor, Mr. Briggs, J. W. Rose.

The executive also passed a resolution electing His Royal Highness Prince Albert Edward an honorary member of the Association.

The Provincial Association was at that time financially supported by grants made from township and county agricultural associations and by grants from Parliament. In the year 1850 the announcement was made that the heavy debts incurred during the first two or three years of its existence were paid off. That year, also, the Guelph Agricultural Association declined to make a grant upon the ground that is was unlikely that the show would ever be held at Guelph, and that township was, therefore, unlikely to benefit very much by it. It was probably friction of this kind among the towns that led to a new organization eventually succeeding the old provincial organization, and Toronto being chosen as the premanent home of the Exhibition.

As far back as 1850, and perhaps earlier, there was held, also in Toronto, the Toronto Industrial Exhibition. The Canadian Horticulturist for November of that year, states this was held "in connection with the Mechanics Institute immediately after the closing of the Provincial Fair at Niagara," and comments upon it as follows: "The exhibits were not so numerous as might have been expected from the amount of prizes offered, but the quality and workmanship of the leading articles exhibited have been admired for their superiority and high finish. The Governor-General distributed the prizes in the City Hall.

Each year a ploughing match was held in connection with the Provincial Exhibition. From the list of awards made, it is apparent that great interest centred in these. At Niagara, a field belonging to John McFarland on the Queenston road, was secured, and this not being large enough for all who wished to compete, some ploughs were started also on the farm of R. Hiscott.

Another feature of the Provincial Exhibition in those days was the annual dinner, the banquet being followed by a long toast list. At the Kingston Fair, cavers were laid for seven or eight hundred. At Niagara, in 1850, a large marquee, erected a little distance from the showground, was utilized for this important function, and tables were arranged within it in circular style. In the centre there was the President's table, the judges' table, and a table for other officers, officials and the press. A charge was made for this banquet, as the "annual dinner," open to all who desired to attend, was counted upon to help out the finances of the association.

A very strong effort was also made to make these early exhibits educative. At Kingston, in 1849, Professor Johnston, a celebrated agricultural chemist from England, gave the address. He spoke upon the causes of a sterile condition of soil, the means to be used to prevent it, and the means to be used to restore it. At the Niagara Exhibition, Prof. Croft, of Toronto University, gave the address, speaking upon the constituents of soils and plants. It is worthy of note in passing, that the officers of the association asked Prof. Croft "not to dive too deep into the ocean of science but to give a plain, popular description of the elementary substances which enter into the composition of the soil which the farmer tills and the plants which he raises."

An ambitious project was entered into in connection with the plans for the 1851 exhibition, and that was to have the buildings constructed as far as possible of glass. It is not recorded that this was carried out.

A feature of much interest to the breeding industry of the Province was the competition that took place at Provincial Exhibitions between the County Agricultural Associations and also between township societies which entered breeding stock which they had begun to import in the name of their societies.

NEW CALENDAR IS DISCUSSED

Thirteen Months Would Make Up New Year—Christmas on December 23.

FIXED DATES.

MONTREAL, Dec. 20—(Canadian Press).—Thirteen months in the year, each 28 days long, a new month, "Sol," to be interspersed between June and July, Christmas Day to be perpetually on December 23, and always to fall on Monday, Easter Sunday to be fixed for April 8, the 365th day at the end of every year to be December 29, and an international holiday, and the extra day in Leap Year to be made June 29th to have no week day name, but simply to be known as "Leap-Day," and to be a universal "summer holiday." These are some of the reforms of the calendar proposed by M. B. Cotsworth, J.C.A., of Vancouver, director of the International Fixed Calendar League, who has worked 30 years to "scrap" the modern calendar and substitute his reformed calendar. Mr. Cotsworth was in Montreal this week and placed his scheme before railway heads here before proceeding to Ottawa, where he hopes to interest the Canadian Government in his project. He will then travel south to lay his views before the coming gathering of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

MORE ELECTIONS U.F.O.

Officers Named to Put on a New Play.

TORONTO, Dec. 20.—(Canadian Press).—Further elections held in various branches of the United Farmers' organizations have resulted in naming executives of the U.F.O. and U.F.W.O. Executive officers of each of these branches consist of the president, vice-president and secretary, who have previously been announced, and four others. The four named for the U.F.O. are: John Beatty of Mallorytown; Bruce McNevin, Reaboro; Alva Rintoul, Carleton Place; and Carl Jones, Port Stanley. The additions to the U.F.W.O. are: Mrs. George Suter, North Bay; Mrs. H. Goltz, Bardsville; Mrs. R. Wyman, Thessalon, and Mrs. Miles Oper, Leamington. I. J. Morrison is secretary of the U.F.O., and Mrs. H. L. Laws, of Cayuga, is secretary of the U.F.W.O.

NEW PICTURES HUNG IN COUNCIL CHAMBER

The photographs of themselves presented to the City Council by their Excellencies Lord and Lady Byng have been framed and hung in the Council Chamber. The photographs are kindly souvenirs of the recent visit of the Governor General to the city.

NO PROPOSAL ON RADIALS.

City Council Has No Definite Offer —Chamber of Commerce is Making Preliminary Enquiry.

At last night's meeting of the City Council, Mayor Turner stated in answer to a question by Aldedrman Phelan that no definite offer has been made to the city regarding the assumption of the street railway system.The announcement was premature, he said, although tentative proposals have been made by Hydro to have the subject opened, and a statement may be expected shortly.

In this connection the Chamber of Commerce should not have been linked with the statement that the question is now before the council, in the article that appeared in The Examiner of Thursday. The Chamber of Commerce is making a preliminary survey so that the opinion of the business men may be intelligently formulated when definite proposals come through, the Secretary informed The Examiner.

PETERBORO' MAN JAILED IN U. S.

Earl J. Rutherford Charged With Attempting to Kill Captor.

AND GRAND LARCENY.

BUFFALO, Dec. 20. — (Special —Earl J Rutherford, 18 years of age, of Peterborough, Ontario, Canada, was arrested here last night. He is being held for the police of Rochester, on a charge of grand larceny and assault with attempt to kill. After his arrest here the police learned of an alleged mail fraud case. This Federal charge will be waived in face of the more serious charge in Rochester.

Rutherford, the Rochester police claim, was caught there on Wednesday night while stripping parked autos. He was working with a gang.

Several motorists caught two robbers and were holding them for the police when Rutherford, the police say, whipped out a pistol and shot Angelo Durano, a Rochester youth. The wound was not serious.

The wounded lad released his hold when shot. Rutherford ran toward the New York Central yards and escaped among the freight cars. He was arrested in Buffalo on a description furnished by the Rochester Police. Vincent H. Lord of Detroit, and Miami was arrested in Rochester.. He is said to be a pal of Rutherford.

The police found a letter on Rutherford addressed to the Older Brown. The lad admitted, the police say, that Brown is a friend and that he got the letter at the Post Office here. He took ten dollars from the letter, the police say.

MARKET CROWDS BRIGHTEN CITY

Standing Room Only in Market Hall—Fowl Aplenty.

TURKEYS 32 CENTS.

The "S.R.O." sign might have been hung out at the entrance to the basket section of the farmers' market this morning. The big upper hall was literally jammed with people. It was almost impossible to get through the crowd. Women on their way upstairs stopped to patronize the merchant who sold bright red waxed flowers affixed to sprays of mountain laurel, and they bore these aloft as they made their way through the throng. Decapitated fowl, dragged along in their purchaser's grip, blocked the passages still more. There were no traffic signals, and the crowd came and went at its own sweet will. Friendly enquirers as to the health of their respective families met and paused in the middle of the busiest sections. A little boy in his mother's arms aided her progress by kicking out vigorously with both feet.

A lady who was unable to make her way to the entrance suggested that the market clerk be asked to provide hooks whereon to suspend the gentlemen who wear big fur coats when they come to market and don't seem to have much to do there except to gaze at the exhibits and help in the obstruction of the narrow passages.

Fowl was everywhere this morning —on the tables, on the floor, in auxiliary baskets that tripped the feet of the hurrying throngs. And most of it seemed to be big stuff. Turkeys were priced all the way from 32 to 38c a pound. Geese, fat and lardy-looking, were a drug on the market, and might be bought for anywhere from 18c to 25c a pound.

Dressed geese at one counter were 27c a pound, bearing their internal organs on their breasts. Chickens were quoted at 20 to 22c a pound.

Butter was 37 to 40c a pound this morning and eggs were 60 and 65c a dozen. Cream was 25c a pint, and little jars of horse radish were 30c.

In the open section the main occupation of the vendors seemed to be an unavailing effort to keep themselves and their goods warm. Apples turned ruddy cheeks to the cold, but cabbages and turnips shivered under fur rugs, and a group of chilly Barred Rocks that had a price of $3 apiece on their feathered heads,gathered disconsolately in a coop to gaze out at a bleak world.

Christmas trees were priced from 25c to 75c each, and there were plenty of them on the open market. Pork in front and hind sections, was 16c and 18c a pound; beef was 8 and 10, and 10 and 12c. Baxter apples were 50c a peck; Snows and the Yellow Bellflowers were 60c. Frozen geese on the open market were 23c a pound; chickens, 25c and turkeys 35c a lb.

GIVE FINES TO FARMERS.

Proceeds of Liquor Bill Will Go To Rural Municipalities—Maybe.

REGINA, Dec. 20.—(Canadian Press).—A windfall is coming to the rural and urban municipalities of Saskatchewan under the provisions of a new liquor Bill.

At the suggestion of the Hon. J. A. Cross, Attorney General, all fines imposed under the Liquor Act will be handed over to the municipalities in all cases where information leading to conviction is given by the municipal authorities, it was decided by the legislature on the liquor Bill last night.

BUSINESS GENIUS IS IRELAND'S NEED TO AID INDUSTRIES

William Cosgrave, Chief of Irish Free State, Says Constructive Vision Essential in Present Stage.

WANTS FACTORIES.

(By Milton Bronner.)

DUBLIN, Ireland, December 20.—"What does the new Ireland need from America Chiefly contributions of American ideas and genius. It is not mere money we need, although we can use that. We need constructive vision to help us build up our industries."

This was the message given me by William Cosgrave, president, Irish Free State.

William Cosgrave, the president of the Irish Free State during two of the most crucial years of Ireland's history. These 24 months have carved great changes in Cosgrave. Care and long hours of work and worry, have lined his face and left deep circles beneath his eyes. He has spent himself, and continues to spend himself without counting the cost.

A man of medium height is this leader of Ireland's present destinies, with a shock of light reddish hair, streaked with gray. He walks with a quick stride and radiates nervous energy.

"We do not see ourselves as commercial rivals of France, England, America, or any of the great nations, but we can become the equal of Denmark, which has made herself rich through the sale of dairy products. We have the climate and the soil and an English market but three hours away. We have the beginnings of industry, but we need more factories to give employment to our people and keep them at home."

A period of comparative peace has come over the trouble-torn land and Cosgrave would harness all energies in the interest of reconstruction.

How does the future of the Irish Free State loom?

"I am an optimist," he replied, "but I am an optimist without illusions. I wear neither black glasses nor rosy ones. I am trying to see things in the clear light of fact.

"When nations and races have suffered they cry for quick remedies. The people of Ireland are no exception.

"The world must remember that we have had battles both within and without and the Free State has enemies within and without who seek to bring the house crashing about our ears.

"But the time of reconstruction has come and we will turn the corner all right if our people will back us up. We can't build a new Ireland in a week. We have inherited trouble, created by centuries of neglect and strife. To this has been added five years of fighting and destruction. That gives you a bit of a picture of the situation faced.

"The healing power is within ourselves. It is particularly in the passionate love of our people for the land. In intensive agriculture will lie our ultimate salvation."

A NEEDY CASE.

Unemployment Hits Family from the Old Land—One Child Drowned.

Last spring a man and his wife and four children came from England to work on a farm near Hastings. This man was discharged this fall and was looking for work until the family were reduced to hunger. The man walked from that village to Peterboro and a woman that cannot afford to do so took the man in and provided for him although he got odd jobs and did the best he could.

The family were assisted to Peterboro to meet him here and they have rented a house and are needing a start. If some one has a cooking stove it would be appreciated or anything that might make them comfortable as their stove is not worth moving.

One child was drowned last summer and this was extra expense and no doubt the wages on the farm was not large enough to make a saving.

FIRST JUNIOR WORKOUT FAST

Twenty Candidates Reported at Initial Practice Last Night.

SOME NEW FACES.

Material for a fast junior hockey team was in abundance at the Arena last evening when the first junior practice of the season was held.

Twenty boys were present and although some of them looked rather shaky there was a lot of promising looking puck chasers among them. Along with four of last years' players who were out and showed up well there was two new faces in Jack Ridpath, who played last year for the Lakefield Intermediates and Salmon, who has showed up well with the Seniors in their S.P.A. games. He is a likely looking boy and if the Intermediates do not cop him he will strengthen the junior line up considerably.

Of last year's players the following are eligible and were at the Arena last night: Harold McDougal, Mel McDougal, Lambert Collins and Jack LeBarr. Harry Cheu is eligible this year but is out of town at present and was unable to be on hand last night.

Of the new players who made their first stab for a place on the local line up, Pete Milloy who performed last year with the St. Peter's School team showed up well on the defence.

All the players showed lack of practice and were far from being in shape and it will take several more practices before Walter Jackson who will again coach the boys this season, will be able to pick his team. The next practice will be held on Monday evening.

HAMILTON HAS MANY PLAYERS

Main Job of Rowing Club Management is to Weed Out.

ARMY CORPS OUT.

(Hamilton Spectator)

The path of the hockey executive of the Rowing Club is strewn with difficulties

It seems as though they are to have obstacles to surmount at every turn in the road this season. First it was the difficulty of securing a franchise in the senior O. H. A. When this was attended to there arose the difficulty of securing players

And now they are beset with too many athletes. Strange, but true.

At the practice last night a regular army of men turned out to seek places on the regular line-up Fast men, slow men, good, bad and indifferent, all kinds and classes are out to catch places, and the biggest task before the management now is to weed down the men to a number they can work with.

There seems to be little doubt of them putting a strong team on the ice. There is a wealth of good material to choose from and the choice will probably narrow down to about a dozen when the players have had a chance to show their true wares, and it is a certainty that the team chosen will be well able to hold its own in the group.

There is not likely to be any great weakness in any position. There are plenty of defense and wing men available, and the only trouble, if any, will be in goal, where the present candidates are Drs. Charlie Stewart, Carl Quinn and Weaver The former has not heard definitely from the Senators yet, and consequently is not sure whether he will play amateur hockey or not. If he does, he's the man for the net job; if not, then Carl Quinn will have first call on the position.

The uniforms for the team have been ordered and even if the squad doesn't win any titles, it will certainly be as well dressed as any crew in the O.H.A

There is still a possibility of Peterboro remaining in the local group The Petes may switch once more and decide to play senior. Public sentiment is decidedly in favor of them joining the senior ranks again, especially after their showing in the senior S.P.A. series against Parkdale and other sextets.

The Peterboro team will practically be forced back into senior hockey should they defeat the Soo Greyhounds in the final of the senio S.P.A. series on Saturday night.

PFEFFER VETERAN OF BOTH LEAGUES

Pitcher Just Released by Pirates Received Trial With Browns in 1911.

Jeff Pfeffer, veteran pitcher, who recently received his unconditional release from the Pirates, has been connected with four major league clubs during his career. In addition to the Pirates they are the Robins, Browns and Cardinals. He spent by far the greater part of his major league career with the Brooklyn club, being connected with that team during at least a part of each of nine seasons.

Pfeffer began his professionl baseball career with the La Crosse club of the Minnesota-Wisconsin League, according to the record books. He began auspiciously, winning eighteen games that season and losing only twelve. He played during the season of 1910 with the Fort Wayne club of the Central League and while with that team he scored thirteen victories and was charged with sixteen defeats.

In 1911 Pfeffer broke into the major leagues for the first time, when he received a trial with the Browns. He failed to last, however, and he completed that season with the Fort Wayne club. He started the season of 1912 with the Denver club of the Western League, but finished that campaign with the Grand Rapids that year he won nine games and was beaten in the same number of contests.

Bought By Brooklyn.

While with the Grand Rapids team during the season of 1913 Pfeffer made a sensational record and this brought about his purchase by the Brooklyn club. He won twenty-five games and lost only eight with Grand Rapids in 1913 and before the close of that campaign he was bought by the Robins. He pitched only one complete game for the Robins that year and lost it.

In 1914, his first full season with the Robins, Pfeffer won a total of twenty-three games and lost twelve, not a bad showing for a pitcher during his first year in fast company. In the following year he won nineteen games and lost fourteen. In 1916, the year in which the Robins won their first pennant, Pfeffer, pitched splendid ball, winning twenty-five games and losing only eleven. In 1917 he fell below the .500 mark for the first time since joining the Brooklyn club During that season he won only eleven games and lost fifteen.. During 1918 he pitched only one game and won it.

Recent Years.

Pfeffer came back strongly in 1919 and won seventeen games for the Robins against thirteen defeats. In 1920, his last full season with the Brooklyn club, he won sixteen games and lost nine. During the season of 1921 he was traded by the Robins to the Cardinals and in that year he won ten games and lost eight. He was with the St. Louis club for two full seasons. During 1922 he made a good record, winning nineteen games and losing twelve. In the following season he was credited with eight victories and charged with nine defeats. During the last season the Pirates obtained him from the Cardinals He won a total of nine games and lost eight this year.

Pfeffer participated in two world's series, both with the Brooklyn club. In the series against the Red Sox in 1916, although he pitched in four of the games, he was charged with one defeat and no victories. In the series with the Indians in 1920 he pitched only three innings and was neither charged with a defeat nor credited with a victory.

SNOWSHOE CLUB NOTES.

now in the hands of the executive and may be had from them, or at White's Cycle and Sports Store, Charlotte Street.

The membership fees this season for ladies will be $2.00 and for men $3.00.

As the membership will be reatricted, those desirous of joining are advised to send in their applications as early as possible.

Judging by the line-up of the various committees appointed last night, it looks as though the club is in for another very successful season.

A committee was appointed to give instructions to those who are not adept in the art of Skiing and in addition to this the President has threatened to issue a phamplet of Dont's.

In addition to the official P.S.S.C. Monogram a small yearly badge will this season be issued to members.

As the usual mailing list will be abandoned members are urged to watch this column for future announcements.

ENGLAND HAS 41 PORTIAS

LONDON, Dec. 20.—When seven women candidates were called to the bar a few days ago they brought the total number of female barristers practicing in England to 41.

Among the 99 candidates called on this occasion were one American citizen and a citizen of Russia. No rule exists preventing foreign subjects from being called to the English bar.

BELL TELEPHONE TAKE TWO FROM THE C.G.E.

The Bell Telephone took two out of three from the C.G.E. last night at the Water Street Alleys. There was some great rolling and the C.G.E. threw a scare into the Telephone gang on several occasions. In the second game the Bell boys went right to pieces, and lost, but they recovered in the third game and rolled over 1000.

Steve Elliott was high man for three games with a real score of 715. He came within about six pins of the high three. He had two great high single games with 279 and 253.

Dick Lush was second high man with another good score of 661 for three games. He had two nice high single games also with 270 and 201. Lush now has undisputed possesion of the high average of the Mercantile League.

Craig had a high three game score of 564, which is also nice rolling. His high single was 204.

Following are the scores:

K. OF C. LEAGUE

Last night Cecil Wolff's team hit C McDonald's outfit an awful wallop when they took two out of three from them at the Water Street Alleys. It was a kind of surprise for McDonald's team.

J. McDonald had the high three games of the night with 535. Wolff had the high single of 199.

Following are the scores:

HOCKEY TOURISTS GET A HARD JOLT

Transfer Privileges Limited by the O.H.A. Executive.

TORONTO, Dec. 20.—(Canadian Press).—Ontario hockey association took very important steps towards wiping out hockey tourist when a meeting of executive held last night, it was decided that probationary certificates only be granted to certain players who have applied for change of residence, and that these certificates be granted conditionally on understanding that they will not be granted any further change of residence next year in Ontario hockey association, nor will O. H. A. grant transfer to any player on this probationary list to any other branch of Canadian amateur hockey association.

Executive also refused certificate to Jierre Bellefeuille of London, and last season with Iroquois Falls, player having been on northern Ontario Hockey associations probationary list and reported as a tourist by that body to the O. H. A.

Certificates of Walter Molson, of Niagara Falls, Walter Kelterborn of Niagara Falls, and Michael Brophy of Owen Sound were withheld pending further information and Ross McKay of London must get transfer from Alberta branch before he will be allowed to play in O. H. A.

O. H. A. rules will not allow Frank Carroll, University of Toronto athletic trainer to coach or sit on on bench when U. of T. Hockey teams are playing.

Peterboro Hockey club decided to remain in Senior series.

University of Toronto cannot use St. Michaels College players, the latter being an individual member of the O. H. A.

W. A. Hewitt and Treasurer Sheriff J. F. Paxton will be the sub-committee for the year.

The players passed on were:—Belleville—Dr. Hough Granted Certificate. Graduated from college last spring and took residence in Belleville.

Bowmanville—Harold M. Shugue, granted transfer from London, Albert Henry Bounsall will be given certificate, George S. Lockington, issued transfer from Port Hope. Peterboro—Change of residence granted to Bert McLeod, Irvine Bailey from Toronto to Peterboro, and Salmon from Bracebridge to Peterboro.

KRASSIN TO LEAVE.

Situation Has Stirred Up a Flurry of Rumours.

(By John De Gandit, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

PARIS, Dec. 20.— Leonid Krassin's proposed trip to Moscow next month has stirred up a flurry of rumors and denials in which friends and enmies of Russia are joining with a will.

After an anti-Soviet newspaper declared the Russian ambassador was to leave next week and be gone indefinitely because negotiation schedules for January had been postponed, the Embassy issued an official communique:

"The statement is faulty from beginning to end. The ambassador intends to make a personal report to the government at Moscow about the middle of January.

The Matin says that Krassin's trip is due to be a breal down of preliminary negotiations btween the ambasador and M. Demonzie.

The negotiations were to pave the way for formal discussion of Russia's pre-war debts to France.

FORT WILLIAM LOSE.

Greyhounds Skate Homesters Off Their Feet in Last Two Periods.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Dec. 20.—(Canadian Press.)—The Greyhounds defeated Fort William two to one in the last game of the series here last night. Showing the speed which brought them through many a crucial test last year, they played Fort William off their feet in the last two periods of the game and it was only the work of Langtry which saved his team from a disastrous route.

FRANCE CHOOSES HER VISITORS.

PARIS, Dec. 20.— More than 482,000 foreigners entered France from Jan. 1. 1913, to June 30, 1924. Of this total 116,122 came to Paris.

During these 18 months 8,810 foreigners were expelled from France and 1.33 were refused admittance.

STAMP COLLECTORS SPEND FREELY.

PARIS, Dec. 20.—A total of 18,686,329 francs has been realized from the II auction sales already held of the Remitiere collection of rare postage stamps, and there still remain enough stamps for a twelfth sale.

The eleventh sale brought 1,934,640 francs. A blue 81 para Rumanian-Moldavian stamp of 1858 was sold for 51,000 francs.

A Gift that Increases in Value

Presentation Covers are provided for Chrismas Gift Books.

WHAT DID YOU GIVE LAST CHRISTMAS? Toys for the kiddies—most of them broken by now. "Something useful" for the grown-ups—now worn out or forgotten. Cash to your employees—appreciated but soon spent. Other presents—hurriedly bought and perhaps ill-chosen. Are they remembered now?

Suppose this year you give them each a Bank Book containing an initial deposit, and urge them to add to it regularly. Could anything be more suitable?

Add "Royal Bank Pass Books" to your list of Christmas Gifts.

LOCAL COUNCIL HELD MEETING

Speaker Suggests That Members Take Interest in Municipal Affairs.

The Local Council of Women held a very brief business session yesterday. The meeting, which was attended by between twenty-five and thirty representatives of affiliated societies, and was presided over by Mrs. A. Stevenson, opened with silent prayer and the roll call, and then adjourned to pay a visit to the plant of the Peterboro Milk Products Company.

The ladies were keenly interested in the various operations of the big plant, which were explained in detail, and commented on the absolute cleanliness and sanitary conditions surrounding the pasteurizing processes. On their return to the green room of the Y.W.C.A. to resume their meeting, Mr. G. A. Gillespie very kindly sent over a generous supply of ice cream for the ladies and the staff of the "Y," which was much appreciated.

Mrs. W. R. Morris, speaking to the meeting, suggested that the members take an interest in the platforms of the various candidates for election to municipal office. If the Tenants' and Owners' Association hold a public meeting for the purpose of hearing the candidates, it was decided that the Local Council should join with them, as they did last year. If such a meeting is not called, the ladies will probably have a gathering of their own for this purpose.

Mrs. A. Mowat also brought forward a suggestion for future consideration. Each society affiliated with the Local Council of Women at the present time may send as many as four representatives to the Council, if it so desires. Several only send one or two. In order that matters may be evened up, Mrs. Mowat suggested that only two representatives from each affiliated organization be empowered to vote for their own special society.

LANSDOWNE LODGE JUBILEE BANQUET

Sons of England Celebrate 50th Anniversary—Mayor Turner in the Chair.

On Thursday evening the members of Lansdowne Lodge of the Sons of England, with their wives and friends sat down to a banquet prepared and served by Messrs. T. Hooper & Sons.

The occasion was the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Sons of England Benevolent Society, which was organized in Toronto on Dec. 12th, 1874. The society started with a charter membership of eight; its members now number over 30,000, and its lodges are found in every city and most of the towns of the Dominion; it has also affiliated with it the Sons of England in South Africa.

The chair was taken by our worthy Mayor, Bro. J. J. Turner, who filled the position in his usual capable manner. After doing justice to the roast beef and plum pudding that had been prepared, the toast to the King was duly honored by the singing of the National Anthem. A selection from the orchestra, under the direction of Bro. H. Follis, was as usual well executed and appreciated by all present. The toast "Our Society," was proposed by Bro. G. F. Collis, the president of Lansdowne Lodge, and replied to by Bro. Rev. Canon Baynes Reed of St. John's church, Norway, Toronto, the Supreme Vice-President of the S.O.E.

The Rev. speaker in the course of a very able speech, referred to the progress of the society during the 50 years of its existence, pointing out the fact that upwards of four and one half million dollars has been paid out in sick, funeral and insurance benefits during that time; also to the fact that in spite of adverse conditions the society was steadily growing. The establishing of lodges throughout the dominion had promoted a wealth of comradeship, and brotherhood, that could not be measured in dollars and cents. He brought to the members of Lansdowne lodge the best wishes of the Supreme Lodge for a Merry Christmas and a prosperous New Year.

Community singing, led by Bro. P. Manning and the orchestra brought out the latent talent of the members for chorus singing and a number of old tune melodies were sung with enthusiasm.

A reading by Miss Worrall and two solos by Mrs. J. Woolgar, were also given during this part of the programme.

The toast "Our City" was proposed by Bro. P. G. Webb, who in a speech replete with humor, lauded the city and our worthy Mayor, proclaiming both as worthy of our pride and loyalty.

Bro. J. J. Turner, in reply, voiced his appreciation of the co-operation of the citizens of all classes during his year of office. It had been his aim to give especially to strangers, the heartiest kind of a welcome to our city, believing that in this way he was expressing the sentiments of all. The Mayor reminded his hearers that Peterboro was known all over the world by the products of its factories, referring especially to the Peterboro canoes, which have carried the name of Peterboro to far distant lands. The reputation of Peterboro throughout the Dominion and the world is made or marred by the quality of the products of its factories and the character of the young men and young women who leave Peterboro to go to other cities and other countries. We shou'd strive to send out from our schools and homes boys and girls who wil' be a credit to the name of Peterboro.

Another selection by the orchestra and a vote of thanks by Bro. W. G. Shiner to all those who had assisted in making the evening a success, brought a pleasant evening to a close with the singing of Auld Lang Syne and God Save the King.

Racing Season Shortened.

Special Vote of $150,000 For Unemployment Relief Was Put Through.

VICTORIA, B. C., December 20:—The official prorogation of the first session of the sixteenth legislature of British Columbia took place at noon yesterday. Among the more important matters dealt with were the curtailment of the horse racing season to 44 days, and the provision for the sale of beer by the glass in licensed premises. The church union bill was also passed. A special vote of $150,000 for unemployment relief was put through, work to be carried on during the winter.

CANADIAN MEDICAL SCHOOLS CLASSED LOW BY AMERICANS

Doctors Resent Classification and "Impertinence" Towards Queens—Protest Suggested.

WFRF UNINVITED.

OTTAWA, Dec. 20. — Protest against the classification awarded Canadian medical schools by the American council of medical education was voiced in the conference of medical services of Canada here Friday.

Dr. J. C. Connell, of Queen's University, said that up to 1919, the United States council of medical education had come uninvited to inspect Canadian schools and had classified them, usually unfairly. In 1922 and 1923, the United States council had dropped Canadian schools from their list, then it had suddenly replaced them, although a later inspection had not been taken.

"In some ways it does not matter," said Dr. Connell, "though we note the antipathy in a United States school to a Canadian certificate. But this uninvited act of a foreign body puts a serious disability on Canadian practising outside of their own country. Every Canadian graduate in the United States is under a serious disability on account of this public under-classification. There never was a school in Canada on the same level as the Class "B" school in the United States, though both were put in the same class by the United States inspectors. We have no medical course under four years."

Impertinent Action.

Dr. Connell added that the United States investigators arrived unannounced and uninvited were received courteously and shown everything and socially entertainedfl But inevitably they placed Canadian schools in Class "B" and on one occasion these foreign investigators had had the impertinence to "report" that there was no justification for a medical school at Kingston, half-way between Toronto and Montreal, reached only by an "inconvenient" railway.

The resolutions committee was asked to frame a protest on which the conference could vote. Professor McLeod of Toronto urged caution. Nothing shoud be done to disturb the harmony between the two medical associations. Representatives of several other universities, however, were of the opinion that the principle should not be sacrificed to harmony. One was "fed up with lying down," when it was common knowledge that Canadian schools were sound and progressive.

ROBBERS GET $190,000.

Country Wide Search is Being Made for Bank Bandits.

GAINSVILLE, Texas, Dec. 20.—(Canadian Press.) — Country-wide search is under way for a band of robbers who early yesterday looted the vaults of the First National Bank and of the First Guaranty State Bank at Valleyview and set fire to buildings housing the banks, causing property damage in excess of $120,000. Between $180,000 and $190,000 in cash, notes and securities are missing.

Abe Goldstein Met Defeat at Hands of Young Italian Fighter.

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—(Canadian Press).—The world awoke today to find a new champion in the shoes of "Terrible Terry" McGovern, of Brooklyn, which were filled once again Eddie (Cannon Ball) Martin intensely nervous yet plunging into battle with attack that knew no quarter, stood forth as the world's greatest bantam weight boxer by his victory over Abe Goldstein of New York at Madison Square Garden last night. Newspapermen agreed that Martin earned his honors.

Martin, whose real name is Martino, is one of a family of fourteen children and was born 21 years ago in Brooklyn of Italian parents.

VIOLET MESEREAU WEARS PARIS GOWNS IN LATEST PICTURE

Many beautiful gowns are worn by both Helene Chadwick, the star, and Violet Mersereau who plays the second important feminine role in "Her Own Free Will," the screen dramatization of Ethel Dell's story, shown at the Royal theatre, Monday.

Miss Mersereau, was especially glad to be able to "wear some clothes" because she had been playing "raggedy roles" and costume parts in all her recent pictures and hadn't been able to dress up for a long time.

She celebrated by getting a Paris wardrobe. It included a peach crepe evening gown gorgeously beaded, and draped, a lavender velvet dinner dress, and a pea-green afternoon dress of crepe and lace, all of them imports and very unique.

GIRLS! THE LATEST INDOOR SPORT "CHANGING HUSBANDS."

"Changing Husbands" is not a form of 'sport' peculiar to Reno, Nev., alone, but its being done every day in New York and every other big city in this wide world, and, another thing, its a new Paramount picture, featuring Leatice Joy and coming to the Royal Theatre next Thurs., Fri., Sat.

Girls ,how would you like to trade husbands with Mrs. Nextdoor for about three months? Well, that's just what Leatrice Jay does in this picture, adapted to the screen by Sada Cowan and Howard Higgin from the Saturday Evening Post story, "Roles," by Elizabeth Alexander. Miss Joy has the first dual role of her screen career in this production. She plays the role of a wealthy young society matron and a young actress who change places in their search to find happiness, with most amusing, frequently alarming and at all times entertaining results.

"HER OWN FREE WILL," STARRING HELENE CHADWICK, HAS MANY INTERESTING SITUATIONS.

When a girl marries for money she has to be prepared to stick to her bargain, because if she's not, trouble is bound to ensue. Thereby hangs the tale of Helen Chadwick's starring vehicle, "Her Own Free Will," the picturization of Ethel Dell's popular story of the same name, which comes to the Royal theatre for a three-day run next Monday.

The plot is an unusual one for it deals with some of those peculiar tricks of fate from which life gets its zest. To save her father from bankruptcy Nan Everard marries a millionaire much older than herself. Kindly events separate them immediately after the ceremony, send him to South America and leave her in her father's house. Just when she has about forgotten her marriage, her husband returns to take her with him. Nan refuses to stick to her bargain, and there follows a conflict of wills thta is furious in its intensity.

AT THE CAPITOL.

LATEST DEMILLE PICTURE TIMELY NOVELTY DRAMA

La Rocque, Vera Reynolds, Varconi and Others in "Feet of Clay."

Cecil B. DeMille's newest production for Paramount, "Feet of Clay," adapted from the popular magazine serial by Margaretta Tuttle, featuring Rod La Rocque, Vera Reynolds, Victor Varconi, Ricardo Cortez, Julia Faye, Theodore Kosloff and Robert Edeson, and which opens Mondays at the Capitol Theatre, is an absorbing, timely story, opening with a yachting party and beach carnival at Catalina, punctuated by a daring race by twenty beautiful girls on surfboards behind fast speedboats, and brought to a period by the maiming of Rod La Rocque, fighting with a shark to protect Vera Reynolds.

Despite the rage of the wealthy Bertha Lansell, played by Julia Faye, who is very interested in Kerry Harlan (La Rocque), the latter is married on shipboard to Amy Loring (Vera Reynolds), Bertha's half sister. Robert Edeson is Doctor Lansell (Bertha's husband).

Back in New York, six months in a Harlem flat finds Amy, though happy, quite ready for a dance given by her half-sister. At the dance, Harlan has to be a wallflower. Ricardo Cortez, playing Tony Channing, a wealthy rival, dances with Kerry's wife. At the encore, Harlan, unable to endure it longer, takes the floor, dances and collapses. It develops that his foot has now been so injured that death may come if he uses it within a year. It is now up to Amy Loring to support her husband. Theodore Kosloff, playing Bendick, a modiste, employs her as model in his establishment.

Then, back and forth, we see the play of two dramatic forces. Harlan, helpless, knowing his wife needs recreation, has a dagger driven into his heart as Channing appears with his invitations. Amy, on her part, comes home at lunch time to find Bertha Lansell deluging the invalid with the things that money can buy. And in the background is the husband.

The young couple come to an absolute impasse. Disaster impends. And then in a manner novel, dramatic, De Mille cuts the knot and brings the story to a striking end through the introduction of a one-act play by Beulah Marie Dix called "Across the Border."

"Feet of Clay" is Cecil B. DeMille's best production to date.

Something different in the usual run of motion picture features is "Winner Takes All," with Buck Jones in the stellar role. It is a red-blooded affair of swift action and real thrills in its presentation of a two-fisted fighter who fights straight and does his best when he gets mad. Buck Jones is one of those actors who seem to be immersed heart and soul in his part. He is strongly reminiscent of Tom Mix in the latter's palmy days and makes a splendid central figure for a very entertaining feature.

Buck Jones plays the part of Perry Blair, the cow-puncher who enrages his associates by his daily baths. When he gets mad enough, he licks the foreman of the Dee and Zee ranch and attracts the notice of a travelling fight manager. He comes to New York, engages in a pugilistic encounter with a noted prize-fighter, meets the girl, and departs once more in a blaze of wrath at the men who try to get him to "fix" a fight.

In this picture, the fights are shown in some detail, and one of the most entertaining elements is the realistic manner in which Blair winds himself into a royal rage and sails into his opponents.

Lilyan Tashman, who is becoming a familiar figure to Peterboro audiences, is Felicity Dare, of the Midnight Roof, a lady of the bright lights, and companion to the innocent Mary Adams, played by the [illegible].

The supporting cast is good, but the main interest centers on the career of Battling Blair, in his western sombrero that accompanies him to New York and back again.

There is a really funny comedy in the presentation of a theatrical performance by amateurs in a hick town. There are plenty of ridiculous situations in the show that depicts the trials of an old-time heroine, with startling hoops and a villain whose strong arm upsets the stage props.

AT THE REGENT.

"GOING UP" PROVES CLEVER SCREEN COMEDY

With Douglas MacLean at his Best, Picture Provides Laughs Galore.

How eager Peterboro audiences are to enjoy clever screen comedy founded on a famous stage success that makes the house vibrate with roars of laughter, was proved yesterday at the Regent Theatre, where Douglas MacLean's screen version of "Going Up" was presented.

"Going up" was frankly built solely for laughing purposes and it hits the bull's-eye squarely. It is funny from beginning to end without a single lagging scene. The screen story might well serve as a model for comedy producers. It is unusually coherent, filled with suspense and excitement while the laugh provoking situations convert a pretty drama into a riotous comedy once more to demonstrate hom much more can be done on the screen than on the stage.

"Going Up" is a personal triumph for Douglas MacLean. He never permits a guilty laugh to escape. He makes his funny scenes funny and that is not a little thing to do. The role of Robert Street fits him like a new kid glove and he could not possibly get more laughs out of it unless he came down from the screen and tickled the audience in the ribs.

There are some remarkable flying scenes in the picture—the sort that drag an audience to the edges of the seats and permit it to sink back with a loud laugh when a close-up of Mr. MacLean reveals that he has escaped that danger and is still battling heroically to subdue his pirouetting plane.

OBITUARY.

MRS. GEORGE RAWLINGS

The funeral of Mrs. George Rawlings will be held on Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock from her late residence 362 George street and will proceed to the Little Lake Cemetery Rev. Mr. Richardson will officiate.

JOSEPH BALL.

The death occurred this morning of Joseph Ball, aged 77 years, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. C. Mills, 563 Sherbrooke Street. Deceased had been ill for some time. He was born in Crockerton, Wiltshire, England, and for the past forty years has resided in Peterboro where he was well known and highly respected. For nineteen years he occupied the position of sexton of St. Luke's Church, East City.

His wife predeceased him ten years ago. Two daughters and one son survive, namely: Mrs. C. Adams and Mrs. C. Mills, both of Peterboro, and Walter Ball, Rocky Mountain House, Alberta. The funeral will take place on Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock to Little Lake Cemetery.

MRS. M. J. RAWLINGS.

Death came with startling suddenness to Mrs. May J. Rawlings on Friday morning, Dec. 19th. She had complained of not feeling well on Thursday evening before retiring, but nothing serious was anticipated. She passed away early Friday morning.

The late Mrs. Rawlings was born in North Monaghan sixty eight years ago, and had lived in Peterboro for over forty years. Her husband predeceased her about 15 years ago.

She leaves to mourn her loss two sisters—Mrs. E. Crowe, Vancouver, and Mrs. James T. Palmer, Peterboro, and two brothers, Wm. Taylor, Saskatchewan, and John Taylor, Peterboro.

The late Mrs. Rawlings was a valued member of St. James Methodist Church and an ernest Christian worker in the Ladies Aid of St. James Church.

The funeral will be held on Monday at 2 p.m. from her late residence, 362 George St. South, and will be in charge of Rev. J. D. Richardson, Pastor of St. James Church.

FOUND DEAD IN ROOM.

IN MEMORIAM.

LOUCKS.—In loving memory of John Loucks, who passed away on December 21st, 1922.

"I know not the way I am going,
But well do I know my Guide,
With a child-like trust I give my hand
To the Mighty Friend at my side.
And the only thing that I say to Him
As He takes it is, 'Hold it fast,
Suffer me not to lose my way,
And lead me home at last'."

A Merry Christmas

We wish all our friends and patients a Merry Christmas. If you are happy and healthy this Christmas, owing to the fact that you have taken Chiropractic Spinal Adjustments, pass the good word along to your friends and acquaintances.

Everyone enjoys the opportunity to impersonate Santa Claus and bring good cheer to others. You like to see your friends happy, not only at Christmas time, but ALL THE TIME. If they are sick they cannot be happy, so what better Christmas gift could they receive than to be told of a science which will help them to regain and keep their health. It is a fine thing for each of us to be happy and healthy, but it is much finer if we can each do our little bit towards helping others to be HAPPY AND HEALTHY.

OBSERVATION COACH BROKE FROM TRAIN ON TRESTLE BRIDGE AND PLUNGED SIXTY FEET INTO RIVER

Eight Passengers Killed and Seven Injured at Chippewa Falls, Wis.

SATURDAY MISHAP

Some Occupants Crawled Through Two Rear Windows Above the Water Line.

CHIPPEWA Falls, Wis., December 22. — In the list of eight persons who were killed Saturday when a Soo line observation car plunged into the Chippewa River, appear the names of Kenneth J. Henderson of Moose Jaw, Sask., and Richard W. Sharp of Toronto.

With the identification Sunday of the body of Miss May Morrisey, of Steven's Point, Wis., all the passengers in the ill fated coach have apparently been accounted for. Seven were injured.

Besides Miss Morrisey and Henderson and Sharp, the dead are:

Barbara Spencer, baby; Mrs. Harris Jones, Sioux City, Ia.; Charles M. Pardoe, Minneapolis; Miss Florence Higus, Minneapolis; and John Dunn, New York City.

The list of injured showed no change yesterday. Of th[e] the most seriously hurt were M. L. Spencer, dean of the school of journalism of the University of Washington, and Harry Jones of Sioux City; Spencer whose wifes' fingers were frozen and whose baby died in the frigid waters of the Chippawa was injured internally, and his hands were frozen.

Two Enquiries.

The work of removing the death car from the river was completed late on Sunday. A search of the wreckage failed to reveal any additional bodies and those in charge of the work expressed the belief that all the victims had been accounted for. An official inquiry into the probable causes of the crash was started yesterday with Harold E. Stafford, district attorney, and officials of the Soo line pursuing separate investigations.

A broken switch bolt apparently was the cause of the accident which occurred as the train was pulling into Csippewa Falls over a 700 feet trestle that spans the Chippewa River, about ½ mile from the railroad station.

The railroad tracks parallel the river along the north shore for some distance and the approach to the bridge is a wide curve, terminating just as the trestle is reached.

About 200 feet from the bridge is a sidetrack with a switch off of the Minnesota line. This track continues along the river shore, while the main line turns on to the river trestle.

Switch Point Broken.

The bolt in this switch apparently had been snapped by the intense cold and the forward coaches of the train had pounded against the left rail on the outside of the curve, right at the switch, until its point had been battered down.

All the coaches passed safely over this point except the rear trucks of the rear coach, which was a combination observation and cafe car.

Tracks along the ties show the rear trucks, without the stabilizing influence of a coach behind them, jumped over the battered rail, and travelled down the side track about three feet before being pulled toward the bridge turn.

For the 200 feet until the trestle was reached, the rear trucks travelled along the ties and out on to the trestle. The marks on the trestle show the wheels on one side kept from an inch to a foot from the edge of the trestle for nearly [illegible] feet.

Then, apparently the connection with the rest of the train was bro[ke]n as the rear trucks clung ten[a]ciously to the edge of the trestle. T[he] severance from the rest of the tr[ain] caused the forward end of the [car] to swing sharply to the side.

Sixty Foot Plunge.

For a moment it poised there, as though measuring its plunge, then hurtled downward for some 60 feet, turning over as it went, and buried its nose bottom up in the murky waters of the river.

The force of the plunge carried the forward end of the car into the muddy bottom of the river, and so firmly did the car rest that its rear remained well above the surface of the water.

All the truck remained in sight and the slant of the car brought two rear windows above the line of the water, affording life saving egress for many occupants of the car.

Within a half hour the gates of the Wisota dam, three miles upstream, had been closed, and the water thus was lowered nearly two feet at the scene of the wreck, greatly expediting rescue work.

Meanwhile the passengers were doing all that they could to help one another to safety while firemen rushed to the scene and lowered ladders from the bridge and brought rowboats into play.

Out of one of the exposed windows crawled Sam Curtis, a negro steward from St. Paul. Drenched and freezing he remained atop the bottom of the car, aiding as he could in the rescue work, and refusing to leave for the hospital until everyone in right had been removed.

Two Men Sank.

Two men sought to gain the safety of the non-distant shore by swimming, according to eye witnesses, but the 120 feet of icy water intervening sapped their strength, and they went down. Henderson was one of them, and his body was recovered at 5 p.m.

To facilitate the rescue work a line was run from shore to the partly submerged car and to this line a raft was anchored, the base of operations for the rescuers. The coach is nearly in the centre of the river, about a city block wide at this point.

When the firemen and other helpers had reached the car, most of the passengers still alive had been aided to the safety of the upturned bottom of the rear end of the coach and their drenched clothing had become an ice casing before tey reached the hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Necker of Moose Jaw, Sask., who were travelling with Henderson, counted themselves fortunate. They had sought seats in the observation car and were unable to obtain them, being forced to go to the forward coaches.

C. N. R. HOTEL LEASED.

French Company Get 45 Year Term for Paris Hotel.

MONTREAL, Dec 21.—It is stated in an official announcement from the headquarters of the Canadian National Railways here that the property purchased by the system last year at the corner of the Rue Scribe and Boulevard Des Capucines in Paris has been leased to a well known hotel company of which the manager is M. Ruhl of Paris. The lease is for 45 years at an annual rental which will return to the railway five per cent on the cost of the property, the hotel company paying all taxes on the property also insurance. In addition to this the lessee grants to the Canadian National Railways free quarters for office purposes on the street floor level, this arrangement to continue during the life of the lease. The space to be occupied by the C.N.R. is estimated to have a rental value of $600,000 for the period of the lease, an offer of that amount having been refused. The hotel company intends immediately, at its own expense, to put the premises in suitable condition for first class hotel purposes. At the expiration of the lease the property and all improvements revert to the Canadian National Railways.

FIRST SEA LORD.

LONDON, Dec. 22.— (Canadian Press Cable)—In a Reuter's despatch from Malta it is stated to be understood there that Vice-Admiral Sir Osmond de Beauvoir Brock, who has been Commander-in-Chief of the Mediterranean station since 1922. will be appointed to succeed Earl Beatty as First Sea Lord.

Vice-Admiral Brock was created a Rear-Admiral in 1915 and served in the North Sea battles with the German fleet 1914-1915. He took a prominent part in the Battle of Jutland in 1916 and was mentioned in despatches.

Earl Beatty was appointed Admiral of the Fleet in 1919. He commanded the first battle cruiser squadron from 1912 to 1916 and performed great work in the British victory over the high German fleet at Jutland.

bones protruding through the flesh. She was rushed to the Tillsonburg Emergency Hospital where she is reported as progressing favorably toward recovery.

In spite of claims which have been made that conditions in Canada did not warrant an enlarged program of immigration, Mr. Robb is stisfied, from hs own knowledge of conditons in Canada did not warrant enlarged program of immigration, Mr. Robb is satisfied, from his own knowledge of conditions, that there is an improved condition in Western and Eastern Canada ample justification for a more vigorous colonization program. The program under which 3,000 British agricultural families is to be brought with the assistance of the Imperial Government, to Canada will be completed in two years instead of three years as originally planned, and at least 1,200 families of this number will probably be settled in Canada next year.

Prefer "Nordics."

The immigration of Northern Europeans is the chief objective of the new policy. With lessened restrictions on nationals of Scandinavian countries an increased influx from Sweden, Norway and Denmark is expected. Switzerland has a distinct leaning. Mr. Robb says, towards placing some of its surplus population in Canada. A revival of interest in Canada is noted in the Irish Free State where for years political conditions prevented Canada from carrying on an active immigration campaign.

Inquiries made in official circles in the Irish Free State, however, have brought about arrangements for more active canvassing for immigrants there and increased colonization in Canada by south of Ireland agriculturists is looked for. From Holland and Germany there probably will be a certain immigration through special conditions existing in each country which must be reckoned with. While no propaganda of a special nature may be carried on in France and Belgium, Mr. Egan found a considerable interest in Canada in both countries and better results from the immigration standpoint are looked for in future.

TWO KILLED IN CAR.

Automobile Hit By Michigan Central Express at Rodney, Ont.

LONDON, Ont., December 22. — George Wills of Rodney, employee of the basket works there died in St. Joseph's hospital last night as a result of injuries received when the M.C.R. flyer struck an automobile in which he was riding with Henry Gray, the manager of the basket works yesterday afternoon. Gray was instantly killed.

THE MAGIC TOUCH

RAJAH WILING TO BUY SILENCE

"Absolutely Essential to Avoid Scandal," Lawyer Says He Declared.

SECOND CHEQUE.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—"It is absolutely essential that we pay in order to avoid scandal."

This was the decision of Sir Hari Singh, rajah of Jammu and Kashmir, made to his lawyer when the latter protested against the payment of $1,500,000 hush money as a consequence of his being trapped in a bedroom in a hotel in Paris with pretty Mrs. Maude Robinson.

The rajah's lawyer here, Mark Waters, testified that Sir Hari made this statement when, with his aide de camp, Captain Arthur, he called at the lawyer's office and told of the checks which had been given.

Hobbs Arraigned.

The testimony was given in the Bow Street Police Court Friday at the arraignment of Charles Cooper Hobbs, the law clerk, who looked after the "legal end" of the conspiracy to blackmail the rich Indian.

Sir Hari told his lawyer that he had given two checks signed in blank to his aide de camp to settle with the blackmailers, and that the checks had been filled out for $750,000 each. One of them had to be held until funds could be provided to meet it, the Rajah not having a loose million and a half dollars on deposit at the time.

Indian Politics.

Waters testified:

"When I protested I was made to understand that in the interests of political arrangements in the Rajah's own state it was absolutely essential that there should be no publicity or trouble over anything of that kind.

"I said it was a disgraceful blackmail conspiracy and decided to stop payment on the second check. The first having been already paid."

Dummy Check Destroyed.

Waters testified that his agent, accompanied by the aide de camp, visited Hobbs. The latter produced the second check and Captain Arthur pretended to identify it. Hobbs then tore a paper in pieces and threw it in the fire.

The witness then testified that the burned paper was merely a dummy check, and caused a sensation in court by producing and identifying the original.

Hobbs was remanded until Wednesday. Indications now are that the Director of Public Prosecutions will proceed only against him.

CANDY FOR CHRISTMAS CONCERT WAS STOLEN

Mean Thief Carried Off Fifty Bags from S. A. Citadel.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Dec. 22. — One of the meanest thefts ever reported in Woodstock took place here on Friday night when some person or persons entered the Salvation Army Citadel and stole about fifty bags of candy which had been packed ready for the Christmas entertainment of the children of the Army Sunday school. About 110 bags had been packed on Friday evening and when the workers returned to the building Saturday only 60 of them were left. The Army officials are confident that they have a reliable clue to the culprit.

GERMAN RIFTS REACH CLIMAX

Marx Tells President Impossible to Form a New Cabinet.

ELECTIONS FUTILE.

BERLIN, Dec. 22. — Germany will end the old year and start the new without a government, drifting and plunging in the surging political seas of party feuds.

"Wanted: A New Chancellor and a New Government," is the sign that promises to hang on the German white house in Wilhelmstrasse until after the New Year.

Chancellor Marx reported to President Ebert that it was utterly impossible to get ten men together out of the warring parties sufficiently in accord to make up a cabinet.

Waits for January.

The president, it is announced, has given up all hopes of getting a new government together before the end of the year, and will drop his present efforts. He will try again in January.

In the meantime, the Marx-Stresemann Cabinet will continue to conduct the affairs of the nation.

The decision of the British not to evacuate the Cologne zone on January 10th, as agreed, together with rumours that the Allies will make new and drastic demands with reference to the military control of Germany, serves to complicate the situation for President Ebert, as every political leader shuns the responsibility for such possible developments.

Internally considered, the dissolution of the old Reichstag and the new elections have proved a loss of time and a waste of money. Owing to the peculiarity of their superdemocratic electoral system the Germans are unable to rid themselves of party bosses at the polls.

The elections of December 7th were held at a cost of $1,750,000 and have proved futile so far as concerns the election of a Reichstag, which would give any government a majority.

There are eleven parties in the Reichstag but not enough can be got together to become the necessary parliamentary background for any government. The consequence of this paralysis through party feuds is a growing revulsion against the parliamentary system.

GIVE GLASSES.

The giving of glasses at Christmas, is becoming more popular every year, they are useful and always appreciated. JUGO-SLAVS SAY THEY DESIRE TO ASSIST ALBANIA

Deny Instigating Aggressions on Border and Assert They Have Not Intervened.

ALBANIAN ANSWER.

Jugo-Slavia Proclaimed as Invader and Also Transporting War Material.

PARIS, Dec. 22.—The Jugo-Slav legation in Paris on behalf of its government, yesterday issued a categorial denial of charges brought against it in connection with the disorders in Albania. The note issued by the legation says that Jugo-Slavia has distinctly observed the principle of non-intervention in the internal affairs of Albania, the independence of which country Jugo-Slavia always has considered one of the essential guarantees for peace in the Balkans.

The note ascribes the present troubles in Albania to Bolshevist agitation and political struggles among the various parties, which it says exist throughout the country, and are not limited to the frontier.

ALBANIA'S CHARGES.

GENEVA, Dec. 22. — Actively supporting Albania's appeal to the league of nations against Jugo-Slavia, is Dr. B. Blinishti, Albania's permanent representative in Genva, who spent a strenuous Sunday circulating information in an endeavour to justify the appeal of Bishop Fan S. Noli, Albania's bishop premier, for intervention.

Dr. Blinishti issued a series of communiques fresh from Bishop Noli at Tirana, insisting that the people of Albania, far from revolting against the existing regime, have become more and more united in "combatting the foreign invader."

Jugo-Slavia is proclaimed as the invader. Further, the communiques alleged the seizure of guns near the frontier, bearing marks which prove that they were furnished by the Jugo-Slavian army.

Prisoners captured by Bishop Noli's legions are claimed in the Communique's to have admitted that they participated in incursions into Albania by orders of the commander at Prizrend. One of the statements says that "soldiers of Bulgarian origin who had taken refuge in Jugo-Slavia are also among the invaders and are in cargo of the heavy and light artillery." It declares that "the entire transport of munitions and general war material is being done by Jugo-Slavan automobiles."

THE WEATHER

The winter this year has made an early beginning. This time last year golfers were at their favorite sport, and baseball devotees were playing on the Central Park Already we have had four days below zero, and while there is not much snow, there is sufficient for light sleighs. The extreme cold weather which has hung persistently over the Northwest for about a week, rapidly started eastward on Friday, and reached here Saturday evening. Sunday morning showed 15 below zero at an early hour, and the highest it reached all day on Sunday was 4 above. Much of the day it was 5 to 10 below. This morning gave 4 below as the lowest last night, while at daybreak it was 8 above. Last winter we had the first zero on Jan. 2nd. January had 9 days below zero, while February had 13 days below. The coldest day last winter was January 27th, with 28 below.—W. P.

CHRISTMAS PARTY.

Junior Gymnasium Members Hold Christmas Tree Party.

A jolly big Christmas party was held at the Y.W.C.A. on Saturday morning, when all the junior gymnasium members and the Saturday afternoon clubs met to enjoy the Christmas festivities At ten o'clock the gymnasium door was thrown open and amid shrieks of delight two hundred little tots flocked in and stood in amazement before a huge and beautifully decorated tree.

Santa Claus arrived with his big pack about 10.30 and soon he was busy distributing gifts to everyone present and answering all the questions.

The Juniors then decided to entertain Santa Claus with some of their gymnasium drills. The babies' class put on two interpretive dances, the intermediate gave a little number called "Soldier and his Sweetheart" and the Juniors the Irish Jig. The Junior special dancing class gave two numbers "The Dance of the Peacock Fan" and a Scarf Dance. This was followed by an impromptu program of recitations and songs and Santa Claus in turn thoroughly delighted the children by contributing to the program. A special number on the program was a little play called "The reunion of Santa Claus and Mother Goose." This was much enjoyed by all and brought forth rounds of applause. Those taking part were,

Verna Huffman, Mary, Mary, quite Contrary.

Jean McConnomy, Simple Simon.

Marion Downing, Mother Christmas.

Margaret Edwards, Mother Goose.

Doris Tremain, Jack Horner.

Julia Veneranda, Peter Pumpkin.

Hazel Bradley, Little Miss Muffet.

Mary Kirkwood, Boy Blue.

Hazel Laing, Father Christmas.

Ruby Jackson, Santa Claus.

Refreshments of lemonade, sandwiches, cake and candy were then served to all the children.

Mrs R. M. Waddell, Miss May Jory, Mrs. H. G. Walker, Miss Stenson and the senior school girls kindly assisted with the party.

On Saturday night two attractive Christmas baskets filled with toys were taken to the children of the Shelter and Orphanage. The presents were donated by the Senior members who wished to make Christmas jolly for everyone.

The massed senior gymnasium classes and clubs will meet to-night and after a good time in the gymnasium will gather around the big fire in the hall and enjoy doughnuts and coffee.

ODDFELLOWS' PARTY.

Children Entertained by Santa Claus on Saturday Afternoon.

The Oddfellows and the ladies of the Rebekah Golden Link Lodge, were hosts and hostesses on Saturday afternoon to a very jolly Christmas party, given in the Oddfellows' hall, to the children of members, numbering about two hundred and fifty. The children were royally entertained by a real Santa Claus, who dispensed gifts to each child of a stocking filled with candy and fruit, Mr. J. Price assisting in this portion of the programme.

They also had a bountiful luncheon ,and a programme of moving pictures and minstrel show, the latter put on by members of the Y. M.C.A., with F. McNeely in charge. The tables were prettily decorated with numbers of bright electric lamps, loaned for the occasion. Members of the joint committee in charge of the children's party, included Mesdames B. Watt (convenor), W. Hartley, R. Murduff, and Messrs. Hillyer, Barttett, McWilliams, Lancashire, Murduff, Craig and Lush.

A SOCIAL EVENT.

Farewell Party to Miss Florence Bush.

An enjoyable evening was spent on Friday, when Miss Aileen Clarke entertained a number of her friends at a farewell party in honour of her friend, Miss Florence Bush. Miss Clarke received her guests, and Doris Skinner made a charming little door attendant. Miss Bush was presented with a small token of remembrance from the "Joyful Club" The presentation speech was made by Miss Evelyn Miller and Miss Grace Burns presented the gift. Doris Skinner danced the Highland Fling and Miss Helen Kingdon favored the guests with two piano selections. Games and dancing were the principal features of the evening. The party was held at the home of Mrs. T. H. Skinner, 535 Park Street, which was kindly loaned for the evening. The guests left in the wee, small hours of the morning, after giving a vote of thanks for Mrs. Clarke and Mrs. Skinner and thanking Miss Clarke for their enjoyable evening.

Miss Bush left for Toronto on Saturday afternoon.

VISIT OF SANTA A BIG OCCASION

Officially Welcomed By Mayor Turner, Who Seemed Almost as Jolly as the Visitor.

BAND HELPED.

It was particularly fitting that one of the last official acts of Mayor J. J. Turner as Chief Magistrate of the city in his first year in office should be the welcoming of Santa Claus, personifying the spirit of goodwill and peace. And it was a picture that well repaid the citizens who braved the cold Saturday evening to see the jolly old Santa march down Gorge street behind the Salvation Army band with the scarcely less jolly-looking Mayor and followed by scores of shrieking, happy children and not a few adults who were living their childhood day over again.

His Worship met Santa at the Y. M. C. A. and extended to him the freedom of the city. Then the band formed up and played a stirring tune as Santa marched to the Caledonian Club where he was to distribute presents. He was so busy saying "hello" to the crowds along the way that he had not much time to see the beautifully decorated store windows. However, he hopes to have time to look them over when he comes back to one of the Sunday School trees or on Wednesday night to fill the stockings.

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

Many Social Events in Town —Accident With a Car —A Sacred Concert.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 22.—The ladies of the English Line Church were well pleased with the success of their cooking sale and afternoon tea, which they held on Saturday afternoon in the Sample Rooms on Bridge street, Campbellford. There was abundance of home cooking and farm produce on the tables and all found ready sale. The tea tables in the other room were kept filled during the later part of the afternoon and till after six o'clock. There were also a few fancy articles and plain sewing for sale. The net proceeds amounted to ninety-five dollars, and will swell the funds of the Ladies' Aid.

Those who helped in the sale-room and tea-room were: — Mrs. Ernest Mitchell, Mrs. Campbell, Mrs. R. Maybee, Mrs. H. E. Stephens, Mrs. F. Peak, Jr., Mrs. R. Stephens, Mrs. Albert Grills, Mrs. Willis Thain, Mrs. Herbert Tinney, Mrs. Fred Grills, Mrs. Thomas Locke, Mrs. F. Smith, Mrs. S. Diamond, Mrs. Peter Stephens, Misses K. Gould, M. Peake and Luella Grills, P. Haig. There are somewhere around thirty members in the "Line Aid".

Car Accident

Mr. Harry Ayrhart Sebastapool street, had the misfortune to break a small bone in his right leg, last Tuesday. He, with some others, were in a car driving on the streets of Peterboro and did not hear the freight train coming. They got so close that they had to run into the train or a telegraph pole. They struck the pole and he was thrown out, thus causing the accident. He was brought to Campbellford and the doctor attended to his broken limb. He is getting along well and not suffering as much as at first.

Miss Nelly M. Turner of Parry Sound ,writing a letter to her mother Mrs. C. W. Tupner, Queen street, told of a strange happening at the home of Mr. Steadman, where she boards. The family were home and a great explosion occurred in the furnace It shook all the houses around their home and friends who live some distance away heard it. All the pipes were down as a result and the lids lifted off the kitchen stove. The only conclusion the family could come to was there must have been a dynamite cap in the coal. Fortunately Mr. Steadman, who is night operator at the C.P.R. was home. The affair caused some excitement for a time.

Church Services.

The special evening service in the Methodist church, when the choir gave the sacred cantata, "The Christmas Adoration," was well attended, the church being full. The cantata has some splendid choruses as well as solos, duets, trios and quartettes. The parts were well taken by every one and the congregation listened with wrapt attention. The pastor spoke a few words on Christ as a Christmas gift. He mentioned especially the splendid music given and thanked Mr. Cowell, the organist and choir leader and the choir for the treat they had had llstening to the music given during the evening.

Much credit is due Mr. Cowell for the great pains he has taken in getting up this cantata with the choir.

The Regent theatre was filled on Sunday night by the citizens of Campbellford to hear the sacred concert given by the Northumberland Regiment Band after the church services.

Mayor Meyer was the chairman for the evening, and after a few well chosen remarks he announced the different numbers. The opening and closing selections by the band were fine old hymns, such as "O Come All Ye Faithful" (Antioch), "Joy to the World," "Let the Lower Lights Be Burning," "What a Friend We Have in Jesus," "Ring the Bells of Heaven," "Abide With Me," and others. A special feature was the violin solo by Mr. Cecil Searles, who was welcomed with applause as the audience has heard him before. He kindly responded to two encores. Mr. Lucy's solo, Mr. Collinson and Mr. Bell's duet, and the anthem by the Methodist church choir were all enjoyed by the audience. There was a special collection to help make Christmas cheer for those who are sick and needy. The proceeds amounted to about thirty dollars. There were twenty-five bandsmen present.

The Methodist Sunday School had a special Christmas session on Sunday afternoon. There was a large attendance. The young men and young women's class and the primary class met with the others for the cast of the programme. Mr. R. T. Cowell kindly helped at the piano, and besides the hymns and other music played 'Antiocle' with lovely chimes. Misses Ruth and Jennie Taylor favored the school with a vocal duet.

Christmas greetings were exchanged by the teachers and scholars, and S. J. Abernethy, who is the acting superintendent for the present, wished all the school a happy time at Christmas.

The Mission Band concert was announced for Monday night in the Methodist Church, and also a sale of home-made candy.

Miss Cherrie Turner, Queen Street, left on Saturday for Toronto, wher, she will visit Miss Marion Haugh, and also meet her sister, Miss Nelly M. Turner, of Parry Sound Public School staff, who is returning home for the Christmas holidays. They will both return by Havelock, where they will spend Christmas Day with their sister, Mrs. Harry Watson.

DEATH CLOSES UNIQUE RECORD

Death of Miss Jennie Wray Regretted by Many—Millbrook News.

MILLBROOK, Dec. 22—The late Jennie M. Wray, who passed away suddenly last Thursday at her home, 46 Avenue Road, Toronto, was a sister-in-law of Mrs. (Rev.) Joseph Wilks, Millbrook. A daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Wray, deceased had the unique record of forty years continuous service as a most efficient, and highly respected teacher in the old Francis street, and later in the new Alexandra, public schools of Lindsay Her passing will be mourned by hundreds of friends, not only in the town of her birth, but also by an almost untold number of former pupils scattered, practically, over the entire world.

Possessed of a loveable and attractive personality, deceased, who her herself been educated in the public and High Schools, of Lindsay, was the recipient of a fine tribute of her many sterling qualities during the celebration of Old Home Week last summer when she conducted a class of ex-pupils, and received from them a personal demonstration of their appreciation of her faithful work.

A victory bond for $500 was presented to Miss Wray at the time of her resignation from the teaching staff, ex-pupils from lands near and far, sending contributions, and it is certain that many hearts will be sad dened when the news of her death is communicated to them.

A life-long and faithful member of St Paul's Anglican church, which was well filled with representatives citizens belonging to that, and other denominations, for the funeral service last Saturday, a worthy tribute was paid to the unswerving loyalty of the deceased to all that was highest and best in private life, and in public service, by the Rector, Rev. Canon Marsh, and by Rev. A. H. McConnachie, who was also present. Unselfishness was particularly an outstanding characteristic of Miss Wray's and with her teaching was a n art, as well as a profession. The truths imparted not alone in training the minds, but by precept and example giving instruction in moral qualities as well, is bearing fruit in the lives of her former pupils, and those whom they influence to-day.

One sister, Mrs. J. G. Wray of Toronto, is the immediate survivor. Interment took place beside her parents in the Riverside cemetery.

Miss Margaret Luxon of the public school teaching staff at Fournier, Ont., is at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. Luxon, for Chirstmas holidays.

Dr. T. Alvin Gray of Toronto, and Miss Gladys Gray, of the Janetville public school staff, are spending the Christmas holidays with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wentworth Gray.

Miss Gertrude Spence of Mauton, is spending the Christmas holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Spence.

BEFORE O.H.A. TO-NIGHT

London to Urge that Suspension be Lifted on Star Hockey Player.

LONDON, Ont. Dec. 21.—London A.A.A. Officials will meet the O.H.A. Executive in Toronto tonight in an effort to have the suspension of Pete Belylefeuille lifted.

Bellefeuille's position should be strengthened by the fact that on Saturday, Powers and Bert Corbeau of the St. Patrick's were in the city again and sought to lure the London ring wing player to monied ranks. Bellefeuille reiterated his intention of sticking to his business here and to the amateur ranks Bellefeuille bought shares in the Canada Vulcanizing and Equipment Company when he came here and it is said he would rather remain here and get a start in business than play professional hockey that has caused him to turn down repeated offers from the professional clubs. The latest offer of the pro's coming as it did on Saturday immediately following the decision of the O.H.A. against him Friday night shows Bellefeuille, local opinion thinks, in a light that the O.H.A. cannot very well overlook.. They have sought to curb not only the tourist but the player who dickers wherever there is the most money. Bellefeuille does not seem to come under this undesirable type of hockey player. Had he been, he would have accepted the O.H.A. suspension and the professional terms and hopped a train, local officials will point out.

IN MILLBROOK AND DISTRICT

Hotel Property Changes Hands—Social Events in the District.

MILLBROOK, Dec. 22. — The The Christmas spirit invaded the school on Friday afternoon when in every room a Christmas tree, gay with silver tinsel and other bright ornaments, and weighted down with gifts, was the central attraction, while Christmas bells predominated among the appropriate decorations with which each room was brightened.

In the primary room the excitement, which has run high among the little folk all week, found a legitimate chanel for expression when the programme began, the teacher, Miss B. Montgomery, announcing the numbers as follows:

Chorus, "Silver Sleigh Bells," by the school.

Recitation, "The Fruit for me," by Madeline McDowell.

"Christmas Song," by Mary Nattrass, Mary Burnham, Bryar Edmunds, Madeline McDowell, Ethel Rowland, and Gertie Richards, each swaying a Christmas bell.

Recitation—"An Old Fellow," by Bonna Clarke.

Dialogue—"I want my Ma," by Mary Nattrass, Henrietta Grassett, Myrtle Nattrass, Margaret Smith, Majorie Vance, Grace Sloan, Ida Lunn, Walter Todd, Reg Edmunds, and A. T. Armstrong.

Chorus—"Going to Grandma's," by seven boys.

Recitation—"What I'd to do." by Marjorie Vance.

"The Three Bears," read from the school primer, and dramatized by Mary Nattrass, "Goldilocks," Dalton Brown, "Father Bear," Mary Burnham, 'Mother Bear," and Myrtle Nattrass "Baby Bear."

Chorus—"Come Winter," by the school.

Recitation—'Sing a song of Santa Claus," by Joe Thorndyke, Charlie Guthrie, and Harold Howson.

"Lullaby," with baby dolls, by Mary Burnham, Bryar Edmunds, and Mary Nattrass.

Recitation, "Mending the Stocking," by Henrietta Grassett.

Motion song—"If I were a Baby," by ten little ones.

Chorus, "Santa is a jolly, old fellow," by the school.

Recitation—"Toyland," by Ruth Ortt.

At the conclusion of the programme Miss Montgromery distributed the prizes to the pupils holding the highest standing in their respective classes—in the "Butterflies" class Bryar Edmunds, with Mary Burham so nearly equal that a prize was given her also; in the Senior Primer, Walter Todd; in the Junior Primer, Ida Lunn.

Attractive red baskets, brimming over with candies and nuts, were given by the teacher to each pupil with some extra ones for the little visiting brothers and sisters, the absent scholars being remembered as well. Boxes of various sizes lying upon the teacher's desk showed that the pupils had the giving spirit and were anxious to express personal affection for the one who had so generously remembered them.

A loud knocking at the door announced the arrival of "Santa Claus" (Rev. F. W. Howard), in his suit of bright red with trimmings of white fur, white hair and long white beard, who was eagely welcomed by the excited boys and girls. "Santa" distributed the gifts from the tree, no children being missed, and all finally going home, parcel-laden, and thoroughly satisfied with the afternoon's enjoyment.

Among the parents who were present were:—Mrs. W. G. Rowland, Mrs. L. W. Smith, Mrs. G. E. Burnham, Mrs. J. M. McGill, Mrs. R. H. Edmunds, Mrs. Ross Edmunds, Mrs. C. Thorndyke, Mrs. Ortt, Mrs. H. J. Grassett, Mrs. Wittan, Mrs. I. M. Nattrass, Mrs. T. J. Lang, Mrs. G. Howson, Mrs. Harold Nattrass.

In the junior room, Mr. Bruce Dawson teacher, a programme was provided by the pupils under the auspices of the literary society, the president, Katharine Donelly, being in charge. The items were:

Opening Chorus — "The Maple Leaf."

Recitation by Winnifred Lord.

Minutes of last meeting by the secretary, Raymond Rowland.

Reading by Helen McCorry.

Recitation by Margaret Russell.

Chorus, "Old Santa Claus lives far away," by the school.

Song—"Rig a Jig Jig," by Jean Stinson, Dorothy McDowell, Annie McMahon.

Recitation by Marguerite Hawkins.

Recitation by Henry Raper.

Song—"Who creeps down the chimney?" by the school.

Recitation by Henry Raper.

Recitation by Marguerite Hawkins.

Arrival of "Santa Claus," and distribution of presents from the Tree. The pupils remembered their teacher by placing a handsome "gentlemans travelling companion," with complete fitting, on the Tree for him, and Mr. Dawson provided generous treat of well-filled, daintily dcorated, candy baskets for each of his scholars.

FOR FROSTING CAKE.

Let your cake cook thoroughly before you put on the frosting.

CAR OVERTURNED

Tillsonbury Couple Injured Result of Slippery Road.

TILLSONBURG, Ont. Dec. 22 (Canadian Press.)—When their motor car skidded and overturned on Saturday evening near here, Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Broughner, of Courtland, were injured. Mrs. Broughner was removed to an emergency hospital. One leg was broken at the ankle bone, protruding through the skin, and her collar bone was also fractured, besides sustaining severe bruises. It is not expected the injuries will prove fatal.

Germans Unwanted.

There is very little prospect of real German farmers settling in Canada in large numbers in the immediate future. Refugees of German origin, coming to Germany from various parts of the Continent formerly German colonies, are available, but the Government discourages the emigration of Germans indigent to the Fatherland. In certain sections of Germany there is prospect of getting good farmers to Canada who are discouraged with conditions at home.

Readjustment of large estates in Hungary has brought about a condition which will not permit of a big emigration of Hungarian farmers but there is fair prospect of a good movement of this class to Canada, and Hungarian authorities are sympathetic to the movement. Investigation in Galicia shows that a good number of the best type of pioneer farmers will be available. There is of course an unlimited quantity available in this country but they are not all of the class and type required in Canada. In JugoSlavia and CzechoSlovakia there are good prospects of securing a fair number of desirable immigrants, in spite of adverse conditnons in those countries

ATTRACTING TOURISTS.

In connection with the proposed tourist association in Ontario it is pointed out—and there is a good deal of truth in the assertion—that one of the first essentials to the success of such a campaign is that there shall be sufficient hotel accommodation for the army of visitors that may be attracted.

It is true, of course, that there are some splendid hotels in various parts of the Province, but there are also many so-called hotels in some of the lake districts that are merely makeshifts, certainly not of the type likely to cause tourists to pay a return visit.

And if the tourist trade is to be developed properly it must be built up permanently, bringing back visitors year after year instead of merely paying one visit and then going home to tell their friends of the poor accommodation they found "up in Canada."

The Financial Post is not far off the mark when it declares that if we are to make the most of our tourist opportunities the business must be built upon a sound basis—of natural attraction plus adequate accommodation, good service and satisfying entertainment—the desired results will not be obtained merely by spending public money.

CLEAN HOUSE FIRST.

It is rather amusing just now when the police probe is at its height and so many astounding revelations have been made of shameful conditions in Canada's metropolis to read of a banquet being held for the purpose of devising ways and means of advertising Montreal as a residential city and a mecca for tourists.

In many respects Montreal is a wonderful city, and Canadians are proud of its growth and importance.

But the police probe has only confirmed the prevailing impression that vice is organized in the metropolis to an extent not approached in some of the larger cities across the line.

THOSE WAR DEBTS.

Today England pays another $90,000,000 to the United States in further settlement o fwar debts. It is not the first ninety millions that England has so paid, and it won't be the last, says the Ottawa Journal.

Yet the other day when England suggested apropos of a reported debt arrangement between France and the United States that if France could pay the United States she should also pay England, some Anglo-phobes in the United States like Senator James Reed broke out into their old game of "tail-twisting."

What on earth do such people want England to do? These inter-Allied debts are all war debts—really a common pool. There are three accounts:

France owes Britain	$3,000,000,000
France owes America	3,500,000,000
England owes America	4,500,000,000

Thus far England is the only country that has been paying up. She has been unable to collect a cent from her debtors, yet she has paid over hundreds of millions to her creditors. Yet when she suggests that it would be rather unfair for France to pay the United States and not pay her, especially in view of the fact that most of her own debt to America was undertaken on behalf of the Allies, she is viciously assailed.

There is another side to the question. It is that England, which is paying, and not getting paid, has the highest taxation. The taxation per head of the three countries is as follows: :

Great Britain	$78
France	33
United States	27

A people taxed $78 per head has surely as much claim on a war debtor as a people taxed $27 per head in connection with what they did in the same war.

OUR SHARE IN RULE BRITANNIA.

In Montreal on Friday Major-General Lessard quoted the per capita expenditure of naval upkeep for the various portions of the Empire. The figures follow:

Great Britain	$6.72
Australia	2.64
New Zealand	1.14
Canada	.39

Another sort of comparison is furnished by the figures in the navy appropriation bill put before the Congress of the United States on Saturday by the American Government, says the Ottawa Journal. The bill asked for $286,385,578 for the maintenance of the United States navy for the coming year. This is equivalent to $2.80 per head for the people of the

A THOUGHT.

A PRAYER.

Lord, make me strong enough to bear
My little round of anxious care.
The day returns. For this I pray:
Sufficient wisdom for the day.
Although I may not walk with kings
Let me be big in little things.

Grace me with modesty and teach
Me kindness of thought and speech;
Let me not hasty be to chide
The children walking at my side
And spoil with imperfections slight
The record which the day shall write.

Lord, make me big enough I pray
To triumph in a lesser way.
When petty disappointments rise,
Let me be patient, gentle, wise.
Missing the joy which greatness brings
Let me not fail in little things.

Lord, I would work and neighbor here
Too big to hate, too wise to sneer.
I would be helpful, cheerful, kind,
Gentle of speech and broad of mind.
And though not far my circle swings,
Let me be great in little things.

MUSSOLINI CALLS EARLY ELECTIONS

Various Opinions on Italian Premier's Decision to Modify Electoral Law.

ROME, December 22. — Premier Mussolini, with his customary dramatic effect, accepted on Saturday the challenge of the Opposition by introducing a bill in the Chamber of Deputies modifying the electoral law, providing for a return to the old methods of election, and calling the Chamber to assemble on Jan. 8 to pass the bill. The measure contemplates the holding of general elections in March.

Discussion immediately developed over Mussolini's motives for appealing to the voters at so early a date. His friends seemed to think that he was getting tired of being nagged by the Opposition, who accuse him of having a dummy Parliament, elected under a questionable electoral law. It is thought in these circles that Mussolini believes he stands a good chance to being returned with a large majority, even with reversion to the old electoral system.

Discussion among Opposition circles, however, ascribed different motives to the Premier. They declared that the Fascisti see the handwriting on the wall and regard defeat in general elections as the least humiliating method of making their exit from power.

All sorts of conjectures and prognostications are afloat, including the possibility of the King's granting general amnesty on the eve of the elections, whereby both the Fascisti and Socialists would benefit. Such an act, it is considered, would be in the interest of general pacification of the country.

The consensus in the Chamber is that Mussolini's object in presenting a bill for a new electoral law on January 3, at which time the Chamber is always in vacation, is that he wishes to have general elections in March or April. It is reported that the new bill will be on the basis of the English electoral law, and will provide for increasing the number of deputies from the present total of 535 to 560, or one deputy for every 75,000 inhabitants.

His father-in-law, George Wills, also of Rodney, was rushed to St. Joseph's Hospital, London, where he died last evening. Gray was manager of the Rodney Basket Manufacturing Company.

HAVELOCK SCHOOL HOLIDAY CONCERT

Dr. Thompson Lectures Scholars on Laws of Nature and Life.

HAVELOCK, Dec. 20.—The closing of the Havelock School for the Christmas vacation was a festive occasion. All the rooms were decorated in true holiday style from the Kindergarten primary to the more dignified Third Form. The Continuation School combined the closing exercises with the final meeting of the term of the Literary Society. Dr. Thompson represented the school board and was the guest of honour for the occasion.

He gave a most entertaining and instructive address on "Universal Law" and its application to Human Conduct. The Doctor showed clearly and logically that in the various sciences such as Botany, Zoology and Chemistry results are not a matter of chance but follow a definite law. In the same way a human being to be happy and successful must conform to the laws of life in cultivating habits of industry, thrift and honesty.

The reading of the school Gazette followed containing many interesting references to various school events. This was followed by reading recitations and solos and at the close dainty refreshments were served.

Miscellannaeous Shower.

A Miscellaneous shower was presented to Miss Hazel Freeman at the home of Mrs. F. Hooper on Thursday the 18th, inst., when she was the recipient of a large number of lovely presents. Miss Freeman responded in a few well chosen words and the rest of the evening was spent in having music and playing games.

The many friends of Miss Ruby Chase of Belmont will be pleased to learn that she is on the speedy road to recovery after her recent operation.

STERLING RATES.

MONTREAL, December 20.—Sterling exchange rates were quoted here to-day as follows:

Sterling demand, $4.72 3-8.

Sterling cables, $4.72 3-4.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, December 20. — Notwithstanding that almost at the outset to day wheat jumped to new high price records for the season, the subsequent trend was downward.

Profit-taking sales of liberal volume acted as a weight on the market, and so too did apparent absence of any considerable export business. The closing quotations on wheat were unsettled at the same as yesterday's finish to 1 3-4c lower. May 1.75 3-4 to 175 7-8 and July 1.49 3-4 to 1.49 7-8, with corn 1 5-8 to 2c down, oats 15c to 7-8c off, and provisions varying from unchanged figures to 5c decline.

MONTREAL GRAIN.

MONTREAL, December 21. — The foreign demand for Canadian grain here on Saturday was again very light.

Ontario No. 2 white oats were quoted at 65c, No. 3 at 62c and No. 4 grade at 60c per bushel, ex-store.

Little business was transacted in butter although the prices ruled firm. The cheese market continues inactive Trading in eggs was on a light scale but the trend was firm.

Crop beans were quoted at $2.70 and $2.80 per bushel.

FABLES ON HEALT

Minor throat troubles generally come to many with the approach of cold rains and first snows.

Two of the Mann children were bothered.

If there are signs of tonsilitis, or the throat trouble becomes either persistent or chronic, it is best to see the doctor about it.

Otherwise a number of good home preparations can be on hand for the winter months.

Many recommend a simple solution of salt and water—the water being quite hot. After gargling with this use a gargle of plain hot water to follow up with.

A tablespoon of salt and a similar amount of borax in a pint of water has also been recommended. For a more elaborate preparation "old-fashoined" folk have used half a cup of vinegar and water with a slight sprinkling of pepper.

But for healing purposes some bicarbonate of soda is to be preferred, if mixed with a little salt. Outer applications of camphorated oil also have proved effective.

19000 Telephone orders their daily average

Shopping by telephone is rapidly becoming a national habit.

One Canadian Department Store averages 19,000 telephone orders a day. The average sale takes less than 3 minutes. The average cost per sale is less than 3 cents. This is but a small fraction of the cost of selling over the counter.

The list of articles ordered includes food of all kinds, groceries, hardware, kitchen utensils, notions, novelties, dry-goods (sheets, blankets, pillow-cases, comforters), drugs, toilet supplies—even slippers and wash dresses.

Many articles can be satisfactorily purchased without seeing them, if they are adequately described in the store's advertising, with the price.

Our representative will gladly co-operate with any store desirous of developing the telephone-buying habit—both local and Long Distance.

PAYMENT TO DEPENDENTS OF WORLD WAR VICTIMS

WASHINGTON, (United Press)—The United States is paying out $25 a month, cash, to the dependents of every American soldier killed in the World War. Active death compensation awards up to the end of the fiscal year 1924 numbered 57,051 which included most of the casualties of the American armies, according to a report by Director Hines of the Veterans' Bureau.

The total monthly payment of compensation to dependents, parents in most cases, is $1,482,765, the average award being $25.58. Eighty-five per cent of the veterans were insured so the amount received by the dependents is actually much greater.

"CORRIGAN"

by EDMUND SNELL

© 1924 by NEA SERVICE INC.

Darkness followed quickly on the heels of a brief twilight, and still Fellowes remained glued to the veranda floor, his feet on the topmost step of the narrow flight. It was an uncommonly bad sign that the arrival of the whisky had not succeeded in rousing him from his lethargy. The first assistant believed he knew his own mind, but wished he could sift to the bottom of Corrigan's veiled antipathy to the girl whose violet eyes were troubling his mind. He had never known Corrigan to make a mistake, and that was precisely what was worrying him at that moment. Corrigan's assistants formed themselves upon their lord and master, and Fellowes was no exception to that rule. And yet he felt so sure about Enid. In an affair of heart, ten days is, in normal circumstances, an unreasonably short period on which to base the extent of one's affections; but on board ship and in lonely portions of the earth's surface conditions are admittedly abnormal.

The arrival of the object of his dreams, attired in a wonderfully embroidered kimono, put an abrupt conclusion to his reverie.

"Please don't get up," she implored. "You look so delightfully comfortable. Why, you must be ill! You haven't had your evening drink!"

She uncorked the bottle and poured out an over-generous helping of spirit.

Before he could gather his wits together, she had thrust the glass into his hand and had snuggled down on the floor beside him.

"It's really too good of you," he murmured, watching the bubbles rising. "Ted's rather late tonight. Wonder what on earth he can have found to occupy him?"

Enid's eyes opened wide.

"Hasn't he come home yet? Isn't it disgraceful? I've been asleep for ages!"

The space between the two door posts was absurdly small. They were so tightly wedged in that he began to wonder how on earth they were going to get out! Her proximity was positively embarrassing. Stray strands of her black hair kept touching his neck. He rather liked the scent she used. It was strangely intoxicating.

"I hope you're comfortable, Miss Paterson?" he asked, after a pause. "There's not much room to spare, is there?"

"Don't you like me being here?" she murmured. She spoke softly, but Fellowes thought he could detect a slight suspicion of pain.

"Of course I do," he blurted out hastily. "I was feeling pretty down-in-the-mouth until you came out. It's perfectly splendid of you to stay here. Are you sure that post isn't hurting you?"

He took a deep draught and put the glass down on the floor behind him. "I think your hand must have slipped with that whisky," he added with a grin.

"Wasn't it strong enough?" she inquired innocently.

Fellowes laughed aloud.

"Only about twice the strength I usually take it!"

The girl laughed, too, a sweet, rippling laugh that thrilled her companion.

"You certainly looked as if you wanted a pick-me-up," she declared.

The feeling of awkwardness was wearing off. He felt tempted to play with one of those truant strands that kept tickling him.

They sat there, looking out into the darkness, the breeze rustling the sage thatch above them. The climax came with surprising suddenness. A fat spider, its body the size of a pigeon's egg, dropped into Enid Paterson's lap. The girl uttered a scream and flung both arms round Fellowes' neck. He knocked the thing off with the back of his hand, but still the girl clung to him desperately.

He was never quite clear how it happened. Something seemed to snap in his brain and he woke to find himself kissing the unresisting lips of a woman who sobbed hysterically in his arms.

A tall, thin figure swayed suddenly up the path, the lamp light falling on a face that was white as death, on the blue lips of a man who staggered toward them, a native opium pipe in one hand. Enid struggled to her feet with a little scream—and Fellowes were slowly down the steps to meet Paterson.

He caught him by the shoulder and shook him violently. Once more he was the first assistant with the interests of the estate at hart. Obvious of everything except the only too palpable condition of the doped creature, he

"Where have you been? What have you been up to? Where did you get that pipe?"

Paterson blinked up at him with unseeing eyes.

"Chandu, old bean!" he murmured ecstatically. "Good old chandu!" He collapsed suddenly on Fellowes' shoulder. The first assistant picked him up like a sack and carried him past a woman whose face was buried in her hands, into his room. He slung him unceremoniously on to the bed, lit the lamp and emptied the contents of a water jug over his head. His hands on his hips, he regarded the inert Paterson with a look full of the deepest loathing. Presently, he threw open the window to its farthest extent and went out at the door, locking it after him and slipping the key into his pocket.

The meal passed in silence. Fellowes tried not to see the red eyes of the girl who sat opposite him. A queer, hard feeling had suddenly come over him. The seriousness of Paterson's lapse hung like an ugly cloud. Whatever might be the case elsewhere, Corrigan's assistants were regarded by their men as little gods. This drug fiend whose sister Fellowes had kissed—had possibly shattered the wall of solid respect years of patient toil had built up. For Enid's sake he had refrained from telling Corrigan of the countless mistakes Paterson had made in his daily work, mistakes that he himself had invariably cleared up.

At the conclusion of the final course, the girl rose slowly to her feet, dabbing her cheeks with her handkerchief.

"May I see him, please," she asked in a low voice.

Fellowes handed her the key without a word. He sat down again and began dissecting a green orange. He heard her close the door after her, caught the tapping of her slippers down the passage, the sound of the key in the lock of the bedroom door.

A sudden revulsion of feeling urged him to follow her. He remembered that she was a newcomer to the east, that perhaps she had no knowledge of her brother's failings. He felt that it was up to him to comfort her. His heedless shoes made no noise on the boarded floor as he hurried after her.

The sound of voices coming from the room where Paterson lay brought him suddenly erect in the passage. He had no intention of listening, but the words the girl spoke in a strange, hissing voice that he scarcely knew, held him rooted to the spot, struck motionless with amazement.

"You fool! Why couldn't you have kept away from it for another week? I'd done my part. I had that poor idiot between my finger and thumb. Oh, you fool!"

The weak, mumbling tones of Paterson followed.

"Why can't you leave me alone? I couldn't keep off it—and that's all there is to it. I had to have something, hadn't I?"

Fellowes crept back to the living room, his brain reeling. He tried to force himself to think coherently. He clenched his fists. So he was the poor idiot? God! What a blind fool he'd been! And still he couldn't see clearly. Was it possible that Enid, knowing full well her brother's failings, had come with him, desperately resolved to keep him straight? The agents had said he was a good man, at any rate. But "that poor idiot" rankled! And why should he keep straight only for another week?

The atmosphere of the house stifled him. He felt he must have air, buckets of it! He grabbed a Terai hat from a nail which served as a hook, and plunged for the veranda. He reeled back in utter astonishment, hardly believing his eyes.

Corrigan, cool and collected, sat calmly in a chair by the bamboo table. His topee was on the floor by his side and a half-empty glass stood at his elbow. He was grinning from ear to ear.

"Slippers, pyjamas and felt hat complete!" he murmured as if to himself. "Ye Gods! it's wonderful what a clever woman can do to a man!"

Fellowes gaped.

"Weren't going out like that, by any chance?" pursued his employer relentlessly.

The first assistant collapsed on to a seat by Corrigan's side.

"How much do you know, Corrigan?" he inquired lamely.

"I know that you want a good stiff tot, old son!"

"You won't need any addition," he assured him. "I know more about cases of this sort than you think. If Mrs. Corrigan weren't in England, she'd tell you how I felt a certain day in Labuan—but that's neither here nor there." He shook his head sadly. "I tried to tell you several times, but you wouldn't listen to me."

"How long have you been here?" asked the assistant without looking up.

"Roughly an hour and a quarter. After I set that young blackguard on his feet at the foot of the slope—"

Fellowes' head came up with a jerk.

"You?" he gasped incredulously.

(To Be Continued.)

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE.

CHRISTMAS WAS A DULL AFFAIR FOR SAM PEPYS

Famous Diarist Kept Track in Cipher of All His Activities.

ENGLAND IN 1660.

Stranger Made a Dull Sermon Says the Quaint Writer.

Of course you know that Samuel Pepys wrote his diary in cipher, and that it was some two hundred years before it was deciphered. Due to the fact that it was written in shorthand, he could write intimately of the happenings of his day, in a way he would not otherwise have dared. Hence the lively interest we feel in his Diary, today.

Let us see how he celebrated Christmas. There was turkey in those days in Merrie England, but we find it was served on the 23rd of December perhaps because it fell on a Sunday in the year 1660.

"23rd. (Lord's Day) In the morning to church, where our pew was all covered with rosemary and baize. A stranger made a dull sermon. Home and found my wife and maid with much ado had made shift to roast a great turkey sent me this week from Charles Carter, my old colleague, now minister in Huntinghouse but not at all roasted and so I was fain to stay till two o'clock and after that to church with my wife and a good sermon there was, and so home."

"25th. (Christmas Day) In the morning to church, where Mr. Mills made a very good sermon. Home to dinner, where my brother Tom (who this morning came to see my wife's new mantle put on, which do please me very well) to a good shoulder of mutton and chicken. After dinner again, my wife and I, where we had a dull sermon of a stranger, which made me sleep."

A year later we find that Pepys went to church as usual on Christmas day, but that the following day he and his wife and a group of friends found a merry bowl with singing at an ale house,—the good old wassail mentioned in Dickens and again in Irving's tale of Bracebridge Hall.

In the year 1662, there was Christmas given, just as there is now, and the tipping of servants. On December 24th Pepys writes, "This evening Mr. Gauden sent me against Christmas, a great chine of beef (whatever that may be) and three dozen tongues. I did give 5 s. to the man that brought it and half a crown to the porters."

On Christmas Day Pepys heard a sermon on the text, "Glory to God on high, on earth peace, and good will towards men." Later he says, "I walked home again with great pleasure, and there dined by my wife's bed side with great content having a mess of brave plum-porridge and a roasted pullet for dinner, and I sent for a mince pie abroad, my wife not being well, to make any herself yet." Evidently his wife soon recovered for she was able to join him at a theatre party on the 28th of that month.

Many times Pepys held celebration before Christmas. Thus on the 24th of the month (1665) we find he made this entry:

"24th. (Sunday) To dinner, my landlady and her daughter with me and had mince-pies, and very merry at a michance her young son had, in tearing of his new coat quite down the outside of his sleeve in the whol cloth. Then to church and placed myself in the parson's pew under the pulpit, to hear Mrs. Chamberlain is the next pew sing, who is daughter to Sir James Bunce, of whom I have heard much, and indeed she sings very finely."

Mince-pies were certainly Pepys' favorites. His wife seemed to have gone to great measures to provide her husband with his mince pie. In December, 1666, he wrote:

"25th. (Christmas Day) Lay pretty long in bed and then rose, leaving my wife desirous of sleep, having sat up till four this morning, seeing her maids make mince-pies. I to church, where our parson, Mills, made a good sermon. Then home, and dines well on some ribs of beef roasted, and mince-pies; only my wife, brother, and Barker, and plenty of good wine of my own, and my heart full of true joy; and thanks to God Almighty for the goodness of my condition at this day."

In 1667 Pepys spent Christmas Eve at the Queen's Chapel and there witnessed a religious presentation of the advent of our Lord. He mentions his amazement at the mixture of the crowd, there being many footman and beggar, with here and there a fine lady, the clergy and noble with the Queen and her ladies. Pepys was most concerned about his pockets being picked. The "shew" as he called it lasted until early morning when he finally took a coach after drinking some burnt wine at the Rose Tavern door. He begins his diary for the 26th with his ride home in the moonlight and he stopped and "dropped money at five or six places which he (I) was the willinger to do, it being Christmas day." His wife was asleep when he arrived but Jane his house maid was making pies and in all probability mince-pies. He retired and rose again about nine, and "to church, and there heard a dull sermon of Mr. Mills, but a great many fine people at church, and so home."

Christmas seemed to be celebrated very quietly in England if we are to take Pepys' activities as an example. It is to be remembered that England was at that time going through a period of reconstruction politically with the restoration of the monarchy under Charles the not as highly developed as they were later, when we find the joyous First. Christmas celebrations were and hearty and even lively affairs which are recorded by Dickens and Irving.

CANADA SPEEDS UP IMMIGRATION

In Hungary, the Stovak countries and in Galicia there are many prospective immigrants, but regulations to exclude all except the farming class will be carefully enforced.

Aid for Immigrants.

"The above," added Mr. Robb, will show that a real endeavor is being made to increase our emigration from Northern Europe. Just as our faith in the future permitted us some time ago to remove restriction on some parts of Europe, so does the faith that we had early last session, which is in evidence today by the buoyancy of the west and necessity. The natural improvement of the East, encourage us to remove restrictions which were applicable in other countries of Northern Europe. It must always be borne in mind that immigrations conditions today are not what they were in the years gone by, and keeping this fact in mind the department has arranged a service of direction to the newcomer which will, so far as possible, protect him not only in the purchase of land but will assist in placing him at farm work."

Problem of Selection.

The aim of the department to bring out assisted immigrants from the agricultural classes in Britain has met with success since Mr. Robb began the policy last year during his visit to the Old Country, and with greater endeavor in the same direction the department hopes to complete its three-year program, in cooperation with the Imperial Government, in two years instead of three. The selection of the right type of settler is the chief problem at present and it was to this phase that Mr. Egan gave his greatest attention during his visit to Europe. Reports that a large number of experienced farmers in Northern Europe, possessed of a certain amount of capital, were eager to migrate to Canada, led the Government to invite immigration from this part of the world, up to 650 families, specifying only that they should have a capital of $400. This invitation elicited very little response from the farming class, Mr. Robb pointed out, many of those who had clamored for permission to enter Canada excusing themselves on the ground of non-preparedness. In spite of this disappointment, the Government is preparing to canvass the desirable class of emigrants in northern Europe and has every hope of success.

In Holland the Government has co-operated, Mr. Robb says, and there is every prospect of a good response to Canadian Propaganda there. "There is, however, some difficulty to be overcome as regards certain institutions which are concerned, perhaps, in their own good financing than in the essential welfare of prospective Canadian citizens," Mr. Robb adds.

Germans Unwanted.

There is very little prospect of real German farmers settling in Canada in large numbers in the immediate future. Refugees of German origin, coming to Germany from various parts of the Continent formerly German colonies, are available, but the Government discourages the emigration of Germans indigent to the Fatherland. In certain sections of Germany there is prospect of getting good farmers to Canada who are discouraged with conditions at home.

Readjustment of large estates in Hungary has brought about a condition which will not permit of a big emigration of Hungarian farmers but there is fair prospect of a good movement of this class to Canada, and Hungarian authorities are sympathetic to the movement. Investigation in Galicia shows that a good number of the best type of pioneer farmers will be available. There is of course an unlimited quantity available in this country but they are not all of the class and type required in Canada. In JugoSlavia and CzechoSlovakia there are good prospects of securing a fair number of desirable immigrants, in spite of adverse conditnons in those countries

NEW EVIDENCE IN HOME BANK CASE

True Financial Standing of the Bank Was Not Known by Directors, Says Gough.

TORONTO, December 22.—Cross-examined by D. L. McCarthy, K. C., special Crown prosecutor, R. P. Gough, director of the Home Bank of Canada, who is on trial before the Senior County Judge, Emerson Coatsworth, charged with making and concurring in false statements of the bank's affairs, testified this morning that the true condition of the institutions finances, was not known to the directors before August 7, 1923, shortly before the suspension of the bank was announced.

During the course of the cross-examination, much of the inside history of the bank was disclosed by Mr. Gough. He stated that at a meeting of the board in August, 1923, A. E. Calvert, at that time acting general manager, made a statement at the same time declaring that the bank was hopelessly insolvent.

The disclosure came as a shock to the directors, declared Mr. Gough.

The witness testified that the late H. J. Daly, president of the bank, had tried to prevent Calvert from making the statement, but it was insisted upon, afterwards Mr. Daly stated that he had known the true condition of the bank for a year and a half, and had kept it from the directors. Daly said at the meeting that he accepted full responsibility.

McCarthy took Mr. Gough through the minutes of the bank, querying various items. The witness admitted he had never asked for an inspector's report on the affairs of the bank.

VISITED ST. MARK'S.

Local Talent Put on a Good Programme in Warsaw Church.

In response to an invitation from Mrs. A. F. Choate, of St. Mark's Church, Warsaw, a party of young singers from St. Luke's, St. George's and All Saints' congregations motored to Warsaw last Friday and gave a programme. Those taking part were: Miss Doyle, Mrs. Bates, Mrs. Tucker, Mr. Stanley Willis, George Houghton, Clarence Hopkins, and Mr. R. J. Devey. The Rev. Walter Cox complimented the visitors on the excellence of their musical numbers, and heartily thanked them for coming out at this season of the year to help the mission at St. Mark's.

IMPORTANT ISSUES BEFORE ELECTORS

Business Man Suggests It Is Duty of Clubs to See That Proper Men Appear.

NOMINATIONS TUESDAY

With nominations for Council only a few hours off this evening, there is very little talk of new candidates, but an undercurrent of expectation that several will appear at the last minute. Throughout the city there is a demand evident for a business administration.

A member of the Rotary Club and one of the most prominent business men in Peterborough, told The Examiner to-day that he considers it incumbent upon Kiwanis and Rotary if they are to live up to their principles, to see that there are suitable representatives of their organizations in the field. Representative as these clubs claim to be of the business life of the community, and with their mottos "We Build" and "He profits most who serves best", their part in the administration of the city should be emphatic and of a high standard, this man said.

And on the street corner, evidently not realizing the difficulties the Council has encountered this year, a party of out-of-work men listened to a spokesman who loudly demanded a "bunch of men who know we need work and will get the sewage plant started".

The School Question

In the Board of Education there is one paramount issue—the proposition to build a technical school either separate from or in conjunction with extensions to the Collegiate Institute. Some members have spoken in favor of temporary measures which they say will meet the needs of children now seeking a technical trade training, while others would have nothing short of the fully equipped school.

Four members retire from the Board this year, and this gives the people an opportunity to declare their desires, if a definite stand on the school proposition is taken by the aspirants to the vacated offices.

One member of the Utilites Commission ends his term of office this year, and on the election may be given an expression of opinion on the inquiry now ordered by the City Council.

In every branch of civic administration there is a problem on which the electors may express an opinion this year, if given the opportunity.

Nominations for Mayor and Utilities Commission open at 10 o'clock to-morrow morning, and for Aldermen at 7.30 in the evening. The nominees are given until 9 o'clock on Wednesday night to file their qualifications and acceptances.

LONDON SUFFERS TWO LARGE FIRES

Dozen Lives Imperilled in $50,000 Fire—$8,000 Residence Burned to the Ground.

LONDON, Dec. 22.— (Canadian Press.)—A dozen lives were imperilled Saturday afternoon when fire swept through the second and third floors of the Orth building at the southeast corner of Dundas and Clarence streets, causing a loss of $50,000. The fire was discovered in the office of Dr. F. F. Baker on the second floor. The doctor found flames rushing up through a disused heat pipe that had been boarded over. He rushed out to warn other occupants of the building. His hair was burned and he was scorched about the face and hands, but not seriously injured. Mrs. W. G. Short, who was alone with a year old infant, was unable to reach the street. The doctor rescued the baby and escorted the mother through the smoke-filled halls to the street.

F. Blaney, of the Star Signs Co., whose study and own apartment were on opposite side of corridor, were on the third floor, attempted to save some valuables and was cut off when the fire enveloped the stairs. He made his exit through the fire escape and shouted to his wife and two children to leave through a window to the roof of the adjoining building. From there they were taken safely down on ladders. The occupants of other parts of the building escaped unaided.

S. Orth, who leased the building from the McDonagh estate, estimates his loss, including the store, at $40,000. Several hundred dollars' loss from smoke and water was also caused in Wilmot's jewelry store.

The two storey brick residence of A. L. Hammond, on Brick street, was completely destroyed, with all contents, by fire on Saturday night. The loss is estimated at $8,000.

Harbor Master Arrested.

Charged With Two Companions of Attempting to Bring in Liquor.

QUEBEC, Que., Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press.)— David J. Perrault, asisstant harbor master at Montreal, Ludger Brien, garage proprietor of Montreal, and Come Dufresne, river pilot, have been arrested by provincial police on a charge of conspiring to defraud the public by evading federal customs laws and liquor laws of the province of Quebec. The men are held in connection with an attempt to bring a barge loaded with liquor into the province. Following the seizure of the barge and $500,000 worth of liquor, a detailed investigation was made by the liquor commission.

INVESTIGATING CASE.

Police Find Death of Mrs. Elsie Maguire Was Caused By Diabetes.

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 22. — (Canadian Press).—Police officials investigating the circumstances surrounding the death early this morning, in a local hospital, of Mrs. Elsie Maguire, aged 40, found that Mrs. Maguire was suffering from an advanced diabetes condition, and when Dr. Thomas Kerr was called in yesterday he found her in a critical state and ordered her removal to the hospital immediately.

According to her husband, Mrs. Maguire had been under the care of a Christian Science practicioner during the past two weeks. Yesterday he secured medical attention when his wife lapsed into a semi-consciousness.

The physicians decided that Mrs. Maguire was in too weak a condition to be operated upon.

Warehouse, Stable, Plant and Office of Liberty Oil Company Destroyed.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press). — Three warehouses, stable, plant and offices of Liberty Oil Company were destroyed by fire yesterday. Hundreds of barrels of oil consumed and 30 horses and mules perished. The loss is about half a million.

SIKI ARRESTED.

Caused Disturbance in Fashionable Restaurant in New Orleans.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press).—"Battling" Siki, Senegalese pugilist, his wife and her brother were arrested on Saturday night after a disturbance in a fashionable suburban restaurant here. Upon being informed the restaurant was exclusively for white persons, Siki and the party protested vigorously. Siki spent the night in the City Hall.

FIRE TRUCKS COLLIDE.

One Fireman Was Killed—Were Responding to an Alarm.

MONTREAL, Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press)— Two fire department trucks collided this morning in responding to an alarm and one fireman, Wm. J. Woodbine received injuries from which he died a few minutes later.

MESSAGES SYMPATHY.

Mr. Graham Weir Receives Tribute From Colonel Sanderson Lodge.

Mr. John G. Weir of 181 Romaine street, who was recently bereaved in the loss by death of his wife, has received the following expression of condolence, beautifully penned, from the Colonel Sanderson Loyal Orange Lodge, No. 321.

"Dear Sir and Brother,—We, the officers and members of Col. Sanderson, L.O.L. No. 321, do hereby wish to express to you our heartfelt sympathy at this time of your bereavement in the loss of your dear and loving life, whom God in His infinite wisdom has seen fit to call to Himself. We would ask you to kindly accept this as a memento of our long and untiring friendship, which she won by her kind and affectionate disposition, which was very highly appreciated by the members of this lodge. We will miss her at our annual, social gatherings at our celebrations and many other places. The poor will also miss her and will long remember her charitable ministration, the sick her kindness and sympathy, but not as you will miss her in the home. We know that your loss is great, but your loss is her far greater gain; therefore we would command you to that Great Giver of all Good Gifts, who can guide and direct you, that when the call comes for you, the pearly gates may be open, that you may enter in with those who have gone before, where no grief is felt and parting is no more."

Signed on behalf of the Lodge:—Robert Ritchie, John C. Waldie, William Watt. Committee. Downer's Corners. Otonabee, Dec. 2nd, 1924.

CHRISTMAS CONCERT HELD CAMPBELLFORD

David Little of Blairton is Very Ill—Personal Mention.

CAMPBELLFORD Dec. 22.—The annual Christmas concert and Christmas tree of the Salvation Army, given in the hall on Thursday night, was a decided success. The hall was packed, many standing at the back unable to get seats. Mr. L. O. Pearse was asked to be chairman, and in his genial manner announced the different numbers. The hall was beautifully decorated with evergreens and colored paper streamers with mottoes made of evergreen on the walls—"God is Love," "Bright Crowns There Are," "Merry Christmas" and "Happy New Year." After the programme Santa, with his bells jingling, came and presented the gifts that were on the large Christmas tree. This tree was loaded with presents, and nearly every one present received some presents. As each one went up to Santa, as his name was called out, they received a bag of candies or nuts and an orange from Captain Fisher. The choruses by the Army Sunday School were exceptionally well sung. In a motion song by the school, one of the best features of this song was the singing of a little tot (Bernice Pickering), barely two years old, standing in the centre of the platform, dressed in white, singing with the rest and going through the motions so well for one of her age.

As one watched the children waiting for Santa to come, and then when the presents were given out, to see their eyes sparkle and a happy smile of content as each one received a gift from the tree, one felt that it was worth while to take some trouble and have these occasions for the boys and girls of the Salvation Army. Captain Fisher is very grateful to all the business men of the town who so kindly donated gifts for the tree. The following is the splendid programme given:

Songs by the School: "Wide,Wide as the Ocean," "Christmas Bells," "My Sins Rose High as a Mountain," "In the Church They Play the Organ," "All Our Seats are Made of Fence Board," "Climb, Climb Up," "Sunshin eMountain."

Recitations: "Little Miss Tidy," by Lily Pickering; "Do You Know Him (Santa)," by Douglas Pickering; "I am a Little Girl," by Reta Hunt; "The First Christmas," Gordon Frederick; "The Little Heathen," Hazel McCoy; "God's Love," Gertie Douglas; "Beattie's Bonnet," Phylis Pickering.

Dialogue: "The Christmas Stocking," by Neta Lindsay, Marjorie Haig, Hazel Lindsay, May White, Cecil and Clifford Hunt, Wilbert Rodgers and Gerald Haig.

Scarf Drill, ten girls: Beatrice Collard, Gladys Hunt, May White, Phylis Pickering, Neta Lindsay, Hazel Lindsay, Marjorie Haig, Llewella Robertson and Dora Parcells.

Pantomime, "Wanted, a Wife," by Mr. Dick, Mrs. Dick, Gladys Hunt, Neta and Nettie Lindsay, Dora Parcells, Llewella Robertson, Beatrice Collard, Mrs. Hern and Gordon Frederick.

Selections by the Kazoo Band: Captain Fisher, guitar; Mr. Dick, mandolin; Gladys Hunt, drum; Mrs. Dick (director) and Beatrice Collard, kazoos.

Mandolin solo—Mr. Dick.

Tableaux — "While Shepherds Watched their Flocks," by Gladys Hunt, Hazel Lindsay, Phylis Pickering and Beatrice Collard. Solo part by Mrs. Dick. "Where is My Wandering Boy To-Night?" by Mrs. Dick, Mr. Dick, Clifford Hunt and Douglas Pickering. Solo part by Captain Fisher.

The last tableaux—"Social Operations of the Army," was in four parts:

1st—Salvation Army, John Duck—Army Soldier.

2nd—Social Operations — Mrs. Dick, Gladys Hunt, Llewella Robertson, Phylis Pickering and Musa Lindsay.

3rd—Rescue Staff—Beatrice Collard and Dora Parcells.

4th—Slum Work — Mrs. Dick, Phylis Pickering, Bernice Pickering, Musa Lindsay, Beatrice Collard, Mr. Dick, Gladys Hunt, Llewella Robertson.

5th—Result — Open-air meeting, taken by all in the first four.

Great credit is due to Mrs. Dick and Miss Beatrice Collard, who, with Catpain Fisher, spent a great deal of time preparing this good programme, and looking after the gifts and nuts,candies and oranges, for the members of the Army and others.

"Closing day" exercises (with treats, concerts, etc., were the order of the day in the different rooms of the public schools on Friday afternoon. Miss Evelyn Irwin and Miss A. Smith joined together and had a concert and Christmas tree with a present for each boy and girl. Miss Hilda Bonnycastle was present and sang two beautiful solos for the pupils in those two classes.

Miss Evelyn Weston, teacher of the primer class, invited the mothers of her scholars, and about twenty-five ladies were present to see their boys and girls as they sang motion songs, marched, played games of different kinds. The boys and girls enjoyed doing these as much as their mothers enjoyed seeing them. A large tree, which was artistically decorated, stood in the corner of the room. On this tree there was a book-mark for each of the mothers, made by their boy or girl. As the teacher called the child's name, he or she took it and, going to its mother, presented the little gift to her. Miss Weston presented to each pupil a candy cane with a Christmas tag tied to it with ribbon, on which was the name of the pupil. After all were given out each one received some of the decorations from the tree.

The blackboard was decorated with Christmas greetings and designs in holly berries and other Christmas flowers.

The pupils and some of the mothers of the pupils of Mrs. Vermilyea gave her a surprise party on Friday afternoon, at the close of this term's work. Mrs. Vermilyea was taken to another room, while the mothers and children set the table with the goodies they had brought. Then when all was ready she was brought to the table and a beautiful bouquet of roses laid on her lap.

Mrs. Vermilyea was very much surprised and for a time could say nothing, but later she gave a beautiful talk to them. She also received other gifts from the children. They all had a merry hour enjoying the refreshments.

Mrs. Vermilyea is a lover of roses, as she was given a rose by her father the day she was born, and she has never missed wearing roses on her birthday ever since.

Mrs. I. Boyd received word on Friday that her father, Mr. David Little, of Blairton, is very poorly.

Miss Emma Meiklejohn, who has been away for several months as soloist for special evangelistic meetings in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, returned to her home last Friday. Her beautiful singing has been the means of bringing bany to know the love of Jesus.

Mrs. Scott, of Lindsay, who has been visiting her brother, Captain Fisher, of the Salvation Army, this week, returned to her home on Friday morning.

Mrs. Amos Green returned to her home on Thursday, after attending the funeral of her brother, Mr. Harry Loxsee, of Oshawa.

Mrs. A. S. Free, who spent a week with friends in Toronto, has returned to her home on Hastings Road.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Forde, of Swift Current, are visiting Mr. Forde's brother, Mr. Jas. Forde, and Mrs. Forde, Garry Street, and other relatives in Campbellford and vicinity.

The last two nights of the play, "Brown's in Town," given by the Dramatic Club of Christ Church, have also been a great success. Even larger crowds have been present than were on Wednesday night, and every one speaks very highly of the play and the manner in which the parts have been taken. All enjoyed the humor all the way through.

Reeve C. Davidson motored to Toronto on Friday, and his two daughters (Nelly, on the teaching staff, and Irene, student at Normal) returned with him to spend their holidays at their home on Mill Street.

Fur lined capes in short lengths, reminiscent of these worn by our grandmothers, are being worn in Paris.

A Present with a Future

You might search the whole town over and yet not find another gift so handsome, or so useful and desirable for a woman.

All through the years to come this splendid gift will be a lasting reminder of the giver.

NEWS FROM BAILIEBORO

Shower Given to Miss Hilda Dawson, Who is to be Married Shortly.

BAILIEBORO, Dec. 22.— On Monday evening a number of the cousins and girl friends of Miss Hilda Dawson, met at the home of Miss Dawson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Dawson, and presented her with a miscellaneous shower.

Miss Margaret Greer, a girl friend, read the following address:

Dear Hilda—As the eve of your marriage is fast drawing near, when you will take upon you the great responsibility of a partner for life, we, your old friends, thought we would take this opportunity of showering upon you our love and good wishes, and we ask you to accept these gifts, to carry to your new home, with a thought of love for each one of us.

We will always remember your sweet and gentle ways and trust these traits may grace whatever sphere in life the future holds for you.

The wish we would leave with you is that God may abide in your new home, giving you health, happiness and prosperity.

(Signed) Maragret Greer.
Marion Dawson.
Harold Dawson.

At the conclusion of the reading of the address, Miss Dawson made a very appropriate reply, thanking the friends for their thoughtfulness, and heartily inviting any of them who ever travelled near her home to come in and visit her.

The remainder of the evening was pleasantly spent in card playing and music.

The gifts were numerous and beautiful, as well as useful.

Miss Dawson has always been held in very high esteem by her many friends and will be very much missed from both her home and the community.

It is freely admitted that some of the best stories need not necessarily be true!

For example, here is one cited recently by Mr. St. Loe Strachey, the eminent publicist, concerning a certain foreign statesman in a country which shall be nameless.

The Minister in question was offering a large bribe. He indignantly refused it, but almost at once resigned his position.

PETHERICK'S CORNERS.

Annual Meeting of Rylstone Cheese Factory Directors.

PETHERICK'S CORNERS, Dec. 22.—The patrons of Rylstone cheese factory held their annual meeting in the factory on Saturday and reported one of the most successful years in its history, the total amount of cheese manufactured was 216,000 lbs., the largest output since the factory was erected.

The following officers were elected for the year 1925:

President and salesman — Fred Barnum.

Secretary and treasurer— A. C. Connor.

Board of Directors — Herbert Spencer, Wm. Mackeown, Thos. Fry, Willas Irwin,

Mr. Orrie Barton was re-engaged as cheesemaker for the coming year.

Mr. Ernie Petherick has returned home after spending the summer with the township road gang under the direction of Mr. John Wallace.

Mr. Petherick was one of the first men to put his team on the road and was one of the last men to help pack away the machinery for the winter.

Mr. Thos. Fry is plastering his house this week, Mr. H. Spencer & Sohs having taken the contract, and intend having it finished this week.

Mr. Elmer Petherick held a shooting match for geese on Friday last and despite the severe weather, quite a large crowd were in attendance to share in the afternoon's sport.

Mr. Harold Skillicorn sold his farm and entire equipment to Mr. John Hay of Campbellford one day last week. Mr. Skillicorn moved to Petherick's Corners about one year ago and in the meantime has made many friends. The people of the community wish him every success in whatever course he intends to follow.

Mr. Adam Humphries and daughter Lilian, of Norwood, visited friends in this vicinity on Tuesday.

Mr. Jack Connelly of Seymour West, spent a few days of last week with friends at Petherick's Corners.

Mr. Roy Fry is confined to the house with a very severe cold.

L.O.L. No. 2322 held their annual meeting on Tuesday evening with a very good attendance.

After the regular meeting Wor. Bro. A. Barnum declared all offices vacant and called upon Bro. R. Meiklejohn to conduct the election and installation of officers. Several of the different offices were keenly contested, the results being a tie in two of the elections. The following officers were elected:

W. M.—Bro. W. Spencer.
D. M.—Bro. E. Fairman.
Chap.—Bro. Geo. Donald.
Rec.-Sec.—Bro. Geo. Dunk.
Fin.-Sec.—Bro. Alf. Barnum.
Treas.—Bro. Robt. Linn.
1st Lect.—Bro. Harry Barnum.
2nd Lect.—Bro. Alex. Linn.
Dir. of Cer.—Bro. P. B. Mackenzie.
1st Com.—Bro. Herbert Spencer.
2nd Com.—Bro. J. A. M. Thomson.
3rd Com.—Bro. Robt. Irwin.
4th Com.—Bro. Les. Shillinglaw.
5th Com.—Bro. Thos. J. Petherick.
Auditors—Bro. J. A .M. Thomson, Bro. E. S. Fairman.
Inside Tyler—Bro. John Simpson.
Outside Tyler—Bro. Harry Petherick.

The meeting was then taken over by the new officers, who went through the different orders of business in a very efficient manner.

One of the items of business was the hiring of Bros. John Simpson and Robt. Irwin as caretakers for the year 1925.

GRATITUDE TO WIFE EXPRESSED IN WILL

Estates of Lord Long and Sir Percy Scott Are Probated.

LONDON, Dec. 22. — (Canadian Press Cable)—The estates of two noted Britons who died recently, Lord Long of Wraxall, and Admiral Sir Percy Scott, famous gunnery expert have been probated here, that of Lord Lang, who was a prominent Conservative leader, was valued at £103,000, and that of Sir Percy Scott, who had charge of the gunnery defences of London against aircraft attacks in 1915 and 1916, was valued at £120,000.

In making his bequests Lord Long thanked Lady Long for her untiring goodness and kindness to him during his illness, and expressed gratitude to his children for all they had been to him. He requested that his keepsakes be given to his old friends including the servants. The disposition of his state and parliamentary papers was left to the discretion of the trustees, and the confidence was expressed that if access were allowed to them for publication the trustees would ensure that no use would be made of them calculated to prove offensive or injurious to any living person.

The will of Admiral Scott expressed the hope that the executors of the estate would continue the guardianship of his children until they attained the age of twenty-three or twenty-four years and that they would "endeavour to keep their heads straight."

MORENO GOING HOME TO SPAIN

Movie Star Will be Acclaimed in Streets Where He Once Peddled Bread.

CELEBRITY NOW

By JACK JUNGMEYER.

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 22.—Antonio Moreno is filled with strange restlessness, the happy melancholy with which a grown man contemplates a trip back to his childhood home. Tony is about to visit the scenes of his boyhood in Spain, from which, by curious circumstance, he came to America to become a prominent movie actor.

Tony has gotten on in the world. he has wealth. Big audiences. A show castle on the hills of Hollywood. A sort of magic, this, by which he was transformed from a shy sloe-eyed baker's delivery boy of old Campamenta to a film prince in the eyes of his one-time neighbors.

Antonia Garrido Monteagudo Moreno, one day, swinging his bread basket, stopped before a tourist hotel of his home town to listen to a band concert. He attracted the attention of two Americans. They offered him candy, and wondered why he didn't eat it. He informed them that he would take it to his mother. That touch of devotion led Tony to the paths of film fame.

One of the men was Benjamin Curtis, nephew of Seth Low, one-time mayor of New York City. When they returned to America, Tony came with them.

There is another picturesque circumstance by which Tony narrowly missed becoming perhaps a famous bullfighter. Born in Madrid, of a Spanish dragoon and a noblewoman, he was taken to live in Seville shortly after his father's death. There he chummed with a youngster named Gallito.

Together they regularly visited the slaughter-house to learn something about bull fighting. They were becoming quite adept when Moreno's mother migrated to Campamento. Gallito, who became a great toreador, was gored to death by a bull in the Madrid arena last year.

These things come fresh into his mind again as Tony prepares for the sentimental pilgrimage to his mother, preceding his engagement with Rex Ingram to do Ibanez's "Mare Nostrum" on its native soil.

There are other memories, serving to recreate the Moreno background in Spain: The church choir in which the poor, silver-tongued Tony sang on Sunday, and the good padre who helped stimulate his romantic dreams; his first idyll with sprightly Conchita Perras, with whom he used to stroll at evening along the river Guadelquivar, always chaperoned by a duenna. . . . Tony sighs in retrospect.

Campamento is making elaborate preparations to welcome Signor Moreno. The governor is to declare a holiday upon his arrival. He will be driven through the streets, where once he delivered loaves, in state with his mother. And the crowning event will be an old-fashioned Spanish barbecue for the celebrity among the folks he grew up with.

Tony, now completing his role in M. C. Levee's production, "One Year to Live," is in a state of happy melancholy as he packs his trunks and prepares to become again, for a time at least, the boy he once was.

A KIDDIES CHRISTMAS PARTY

(By Marian Hale.)

A White Christmas is a favor to be dispensed at the whim of the weatherman, but a White Christmas party is within the power of any clever hostess.

Because of the association of Jack Frost in the youthful imagination, this is a particularly appropriate setting for a children's party.

The invitations may be sent on white cards, lightly touched with glue to hold diamond dust and give them the effect of frost.

Winter snow and ice should be the basis of the decorations, quite charming in a well-heated room. The imposing feature should be the Christmas tree which has been smeared with a plaster paris that has hardened on the branches to give the effect of snow.

Use no color at all on the tree, merely hang it with glass icicles such as you can get at the ten-cent store, and silver fringe, from the same source, should drip from the branches. Festoons of silver and popcorn balls may be stretched from the chandeliers to the corners of the room.

For the centerpiece at the table, mass evergreen branches to form a large basket and fill it with snowballs made of cotton lightly brushed with glue to accomodate silver dust.

At each child's place have a tiny box covered with silver paper containing candies and nuts to be taken home. Use silver or glass candle holders and white candles to light the table.

For lunch serve sandwiches of white bread and jelly cut into animal shapes with a cookie cutter and cocoa with whipped cream over the top, following with vanilla ice cream in bell or star shapes and white cake and white animal crackers dipped in boiled frosting. Finish with white peppermints or a few pieces of white pulled taffy.

For entertainment, a snow fight with cotton snowballs is good fun, the balls being aimed at various wall pockets in the room, each pocket having a different number. Score is kept and the child whose number of hits totals the highest score according to the numbers on the pockets gets the prize.

Pinning a star on the Christmas tree is another good sport. A good sized Christmas tree is sketched on a square of muslin and mounted low enough so that each child can reach the top. Then the little guests are blindfolded one by one and given a silver star to pin on the top of the tree. The child who comes nearest to reaching the right spot is also due for some slight prize.

Another good game is a star hunt. Silver stars are hidden about the room and each child is given a little stocking made out of tarleton in which he collects the various stars he finds in a given time, say 15 minutes.. These stars may be at the ends of little silver threads that are interwoven about the rooms to give zest to the hunt.

In giving a children's party it is not necessary to plan every minute beforehand. If the surroundings are attractive enough to intrigue the imagination youngsters will look after themselves very successfully. Their play should, however, be slightly supervised by an older person who uses her social tact to see that all children enter into the spirit of things and the more restrained and timid children are urged to take part in everything.

NEWS NORWOOD AND DISTRICT

Funeral of Mrs. S. Rorabeck Was Largely Attended—Several Accidents.

NORWOOD, Dec. 22.—The funeral of the late Mr. Sylvaneus Rorabeck, who passed away on Friday, Dec. 19, at the home of his daughter-in-law, Mrs. John Rorabeck, Peterboro Street, Norwood, was held from the above address on Sunday afternoon. The deceased, who was eighty-nine years of age, had lived for the greater part of his life in this district. Rev. J. P. McLennan, pastor of the Baptist congregation, of which church the deceased was a member, conducted the services at the church and at the grave in the Norwood Cemetery, where interment was made.

On Saturday the second son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Waters, of Asphodel, while cranking their car, had the misfortune of breaking his arm in two places. Dr. N. F. Sutton reduced the fracture.

The friends of Mr. J. R. Baskin, purchasing agent for the Thompson and Hyland Lumber Company, of Toronto, will be pleased to know that he is progressing nicely after the serious accident which he met with on Monday afternoon last. While over seeing the loading of a car of poles at the Birdsall siding, Otonabee, he was hit on the arm and side by one of the poles. Eighteen stitches were necessary to close the wound made in his arm.

Wedding Bells.

The marriage took place in Warsaw on Wednesday last of Miss Lila Killingbeck, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Killingbeck of Los Angeles, California, formerly of Norwood, and Mr. Mark Lonsborough, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Lonsborough, of Norwood.

At Peterboro, on Wednesday, December 17, Miss Ada Small, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Small, Norwood, to Mr. Malcolm Sloan, of Asphodel.

Norwood's open-air rink, which is under the management of Mr. Harry Rogers, is in full swing, and the young folks of the village are enjoying the skating immensely.

HOW TO GET FIRE WITHOUT MATCHES

Ways of Primitive People in Different Countries—Use Dry Wood.

In "Red Deer Stalking in New Zealand" (Constable), T. E. Donne, C.M.G., has much that is of interest for the general reader. Captain Donne was resident for over fifty years in the country.

Here are interesting extracts from his book:—

If one were to ask the average man how fire is obtained by natives or bushmen, he would very likely answer, "By rubbing two pieces of wood together.' This would be literally true, but not very illuminating.

Should you, by mischance, be without matches, a fire can be made in the Maori manner; get a piece of dry hard stick about a foot in length; point it as you would a pencil; then get a piece of soft dry wood, as flat as possible, or, failing this, go to a fallen and dead pine tree, clear off a small section of barks straddle across the trunk, or sit on the flat piece of wood—if obtained—and work your short piece of stick forward, and backwards, by pushing and pulling until a groove is formed in the main piece of timber. As this groove deepens accelerate the movement of the stick to high rapidity; this will increase the friction until particles of wood fibre becomes alight on both sides of the groove. Keep going until smoke appears, then place some light pieces of dry grass, bark or scrapings of wood on the smouldering timber, a puff or two of breath, and you should have the wherewithal to recreate a good fire.

In ordinary domestic practice amongst the Australian blacks fire is made by the woman and not by the man, the procedure being as follows:—A piece of dry, rotten wood is botained and split down the middle, then placed on the ground, the flat side uppermost. The woman holds it in position with her feet; she then takes a short length of hard stick sharply pointed; this she revolves quickly between the palms of her hands until the point drills a hole in the soft wood. The rotary friction causes fragments of wood fibre to become hot and black; this indication of fire is blown into a flame, to which dry grass and sticks are added, when a good fire results.

In Central America the Gauchos make fire by using a tough, but pliable stick, pointed at one end, pressed against a piece of dry wood with one hand rotated with the other hand, much in the manner that a carpenter uses a brace and a bit. Throughout the Southern Pacific Islands the natives use a hard-pointed stick and a dry soft piece of wood, and by friction, obtained by one method or another, fire result-

(WASHINGTON, D. C.—469 METERS.)

By WILLIAM J. FAGAN

Sharing the 469 meter wave length with WCAP in Washington, is Station WRC, a property of the Radio Corporation.

A station in the nation's capital cannot help being a very important institution. Washington is indeed forunate in having two such conscientious broadcasters as WRC and WCAP, for WRC is not far behind WCAP in quality, even though WCAP is one of the best broadcasters of the east.

WRC is on the air Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday nights with good features and good music. The Army and Navy Bands have been heard through its microphone, although its contemporary has been the sole broadcasters of the famous Marine Band.. Dance music is being provided by several of Washington's most noted orchestras, and, being a sister station to WJZ and WJY, New York, WRC has the advantage of the cream of these stations' excellent programs.

Three nights on the air gives WRC an opportunity for careful selection of the vocalists and instumentalists who appear before its microphone and the soloists at this station, have, therefore, been of very high standing. Popular music is not neglected, but is it secondary to music of the more lasting type.

Leading lights in the political constellation at Washington have aired their views in WRC's studio and via remote control from the scenes of various official functions. The political observations of journalistic experts have also found a place on WRC's schedule and recently, WJZ has been hooking up with WRC in carrying the talks by Frederick W. Wile, a noted political observer.

WRC's remote control work is very good and its transmission is on a par with the other Radio Corporation stations. It is an efficient broadcasting outfit and a very popular one. Good programs, good transmission, and, above all, good judgment, mark its efforts to provide entertainment to the vast lis- WRC can take its place up with the leaders among broadcasters.

SWEET.

About 10 pounds of sugar a year is now eaten by the average American in the form of candy. He consumes nearly seven additional pounds in ice cream and soft drinks.

The nation is eating around 100 pounds of sugar a yetr for every man, pounds of sugar a year for every man 84 pounds before the war. Prohibition is the main reason, people trying to get from sugar the stimulant formerly bottled in bond. Doctors are a bit worried about the effect on health.

CLEAN FIGS.

Dates and figs are apt to be dirty and need rinsing with boiling water before they are eaten.

NEW CANADIAN PACIFIC TORONTO TO WINNIPEG 36 1-4 HOUR FEATURE SERVICE

The new daily 36 1-4 hour Toronto to Winnipeg service just inaugurated by the Canadian Pacific Railway not only establishes a record in fast, convenient transportation but provides the traveller with a feature service to Fort William from both Toronto and Winnipeg inasmuch as the Winnipeg Special leaving Toronto at 9.45 p.m. every night and arriving in Sudbury at 5.30 a.m. arrives in Fort William at 11.00 p.m., leaving there 15 minutes later and arriving in Winnipeg at 9.00 a.m.

Returning, the "Toronto-Montreal Special" leaves Winnipeg at 7.00 p.m. ,arriving in Fort William at 6.40 a.m., leaving 15 minutes later, arriving in Sudbury at 1.05 a.m. and in Toronto at the convenient hour of 8.35 a.m.

Direct connections are made by travellers from Winnipeg for all main points in Ontario, Quebec and East, which will receive the serious consideration of those who desire efficient service. Dominion Express shipments are delivered hours earlier which is also a feature.

The most modern equipment, including standard and compartment sleepers, dining and compartment-observation cars, are carried which, with the reduction in the running time and the courteous, efficient service by all employees, makes this new service pre-eminent as the last word in transportation.

WHERE WILL YOU SPEND CHRISTMAS?

In all the cycle of the year there is no time that brings families together as does the Yuletide. Though you were at the ends of the earth, you would long to be home for Christmas, and if it were at all possible, you would be there. In the long ago, when travelling facilities were very limited, people journeyed many weary miles and endured great hardships that they might be with friends and loved ones on Christmas day. To-day it is so different. The modern railway enables you to cross the continent in a few days in comfort. This year there promises to be the usual heavy Christmas, and New Year travel, north, south, east and west and in order that you may reach your destination as comfortably and speedily as possible, Canadian National Railways are making preparations far in advance. Anyone wishing to pay for the travelling expenses of relatives or friends from any point need only to place the money in the hands of the nearest ticket agent of the line, ur representative will deliver the transportation free of charge to your friends at the other end in a few hours. When travelling this Christmas go Canadian National Railways.

123 UNEMPLOYED IN PETERBOROUGH

Weekly Report Shows Steady Increase in Number Out of Work.

Employment in the city and district is growing scarcer, and the number of unemployed are increasing, according to a report from the Employment Bureau this morning. During the past week there have been 35 new applications for work, and there were 22 of these placed. Last Monday the total unemployed in the city numbered 113, while during the past week this number has increased to 123.

A few weeks ago small jobs were plentiful, and a number of men were placed each day, but at present work of any kind for the men who are now out of work is very scarce.

About 12 men were placed this morning at the post office, but work for these men will only last until after the Christmas rush.

Business is picking up in one or two sections of the automobile industry at the General Motors Company, Oshawa, but not to any great extent. A number of men out of the toolroom of the local Canadian General Electric Company are reported to have gone to Oshawa to work in the toolroom of the General Motors.

A number of the local factories are working steady but are not taking on any new hands while some men are working week about, and others one week in every three. At present there is nothing much doing in the iron industry and no city or government work is going on in the city.

MAIL FLYER LOST SINCE LAST NIGHT

Missing Man May Have Been Forced Down in Snow Covered Fields.

CHICAGO, Ill., Dec. 22.—(United Press)—An airplane was ordered out to help in the hunt for Charles Gilbert air mail flyer, lost since last night while on the way from Chicago to Omaha, Nebraska. Search is on around Kanesville, Ills., sixty miles west of here, over which Gilbert's plane was seen at 8 o'clock by another mail flyer.

Local postal officials believe Gilbert was forced down by engine trouble and fear he may be suffering from injuries in some snow covered field.

Gilbert left here at 7.10 five minutes before R. L. Wagner, another pilot took off.

Wagner said he saw Gilbert's plane several hundred feet below him while passing near Kanesville but thought Gilbert was simply reducing his altitude.

When Wagner landed at Iowa city, they found that Gilbert had disappeared.

Several hundred men with lanterns aided by automobile lamps hunted through the territory around Kanesville, McGirr and De-Kalb, Ills., during the night. Farmers were asked to search their fields.

An airplane was ordered from Chicago to assist in the search.

FIND GOLD DEEP IN HEART OF EARTH.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Colo., Dec. 22, (United Press).—Modern machinery and the genius of the geologist are making a modern bonanza of Cripple Creek.

This mining camp—probably the greatest gold producer in the world—has struck a prosperity wave of its own and threatens to equal if not eclipse its former records.

Cripple Creek, from an area two and a half miles square and 1,000 feet deep, has produced 420 million dollars in precious metals. The mining man asks whether another 420 million dollars will be found in the next 1,000 feet.

The United States government thought enough of the question to check up on it. Gerald Laughlin, in charge of the metalliferous deposits division of the United States geological survey, has been in the field seeking the answer.

Two mines which have gone below the 1,000-foot level are among the best paying mines in Colorado today. One of them—the Portland—opened up new bodies of golden wealth at a depth of 2,750 feet—in its third thousand feet. The other—the Cresson, is also in its third thousand feet, and still producing at its accustomed rate.

The old time miner and prospector could not delve into these deeper ore bodies for the volcanic cone which holds Cripple Creek's wealth, held also millions of gallons of water in every vertical foot. Drainage tunnels and huge pumps were necessary and these the pioneer miner did not have.

The Roosevelt deep drainage tunnel—five miles long, and cross-cutting the district near the two thousand foot level—was completed in 1916, after nine years of work, hindered by the world war and shortage of labor.

The Portland and Cresson mines—the only two to avail themselves of deeper drainage—have achieved 100 per cent. results by it. The Cresson, 200 feet below the two thousand level, is pumping water at the rate of 1,400 gallons a minute.

The world war threw its gloom over Cripple Creek. The high production costs of the period drove stout-hearted miners into bankruptcy and faint-hearted ones home to protect their cash. The Portland accumulated $125,000 in debts but today it has some of the best prospects in the state.

Economic conditions in the last decade made it hard sledding for Cripple Creek miners—the ones who stuck—but now they say their faith is justified. Crippel Creek is coming back!

CALEDONIAN CLUB.

Santa Claus Made Special Visit to Wee Scotties.

The annual Christmas tree, under the auspices of the Caledonian Club, took place on Saturday afternoon and evening, Dec. 20th, in the Victoria Hall. At five o'clock the children arrived and sat down to tea prepared by the ladies of the club, who had been busy all afternoon decorating two large trees, and giving the hall a festive appearance for their little guests—the Scotch children of Peterboro. When they had feasted to their content, the tables were cleared away, and games were played until the arrival of Santa Claus, who, to the delight of the children, arrived in due time, accompanied by Mayor Turner. They were loudly cheered on entering the hall, and got a right royal welcome. The Mayor addressed the children, then left Santa to do his part—that of giving to each child in the hall a lovely present and a bag of candies. The following programme was then rendered by the children, Mr. Andrew Jackson, the president, occupying the chair:

Recitation—Joe Leith.
Song—"Santa Clause is Far Away," Geo. Nimmons.
Recitation—Margaret Wyllie.
Song—"Away in a Manger," John McLeod.
Dance—'Sailor's Hornpipe,' Emily Hemphill.
Recitation—Isabel Duthie.
Song—Emily Hemphill.
Song—Isabel Middleton.
Song and Drill—Eight little cherubs in costume: Mary Kingsbury, Isabel Middleton, Irene Lawson, Marion Ralston, Margaret Wyllie, Isabel Reid, Emily Hemphill and Isabel Thompson.
Violin solo—Robert Wyllie, accompanied on piano by Jack Wyllie.
Dance—"Highland Fling," Isabel Thompson, accompanied by Piper Milne.
Song—Isabel Gilmour.
Piano solo—Isabel Reid.
Song (Santa Claus in real costume)—Isabel Thompson.
Piano solo—Billie Petrie.
Song—Betty McLeod.
Piano solo—Jack Wyllie.

The company broke up about 8 o'clock by the singing, in the old Scotch fashion, of "Auld Lang Syne."

MEN WERE ROUGE USERS IN DAYS OF ANCIENT AMERICA

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22 (United Press).—Neil M. Judd, leader of the National Geographic Society's expedition to Pueblo Bonito, the pre-Columbian "apartment house" of Chaco Canyon, New Mexico, has brought back to Washington an amazing array of exquisite art objects and domestic utensils which shed new light on an early metropolis of Indian America.

Perhaps the most beautiful piece of the collection is a turquoise necklace of 2,500 pieces and four pendants—the only complete specimen of such a necklace known. The method by which the Indians ground down the tiny pieces, and bored them out to be strung on sinews, has won the admiration of modern jewelers. The four pendants are remarkable specimens of turquoise, deep blue, and with them, Mr. Judd said, he could have purchased every Indian horse in San Juan county.

Other unique objects d'art are jet rings, perfectly rounded, on which are mounted tiny carved turquoise birds. The mounting was done with pine gum, the adhesive of the American ancients, which lasted through the ages the rings lay buried in the pueblo ruins.

To get these, and other tiny pieces, the Geographic explorers sifted tons of debris. Recovered by this process are some of the finest specimens of Indian basketry yet discovered.

Historically one of the important finds is a double basket, the use of which has not yet been determined. Although they left no written words, nor even any pictograph records that can be deciphered, they attained a civilization as interesting as the early cultures along the Nile and in Mesopotamia, yet distinctive.

"That object looks like a 'vanity box,'" remarked one geographer who viewed the collections.

"Not only that, but there is a bit of the rouge the Bonitans used," replied Judd, and he displayed a lump of reddish clay, which still will color the flesh. Those "makeup" devices were used by the Bonitan men, however, rather than their women.

WISE MAN PROFITS BY WIFE'S BUSINESS

Every Man Should Discuss His Business in the Home.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 20.—"Forget the old superstition that a man should not discuss his business in his home. Then, there will be more happiness and fewer divorces.

"Also, there will be far less suffering in case of the husband's death or disability."

Words of advice from Judge Thomas F. Graham, nationally known as the "Great Reconciler," a divorce judge who reconciles more couples than he separates.

"The old adage may have held true in hoop-skirt days, when women's activities were confined to the home, and the sewing circle was a medium for harmful gossip. In those days, men placed their wives on a pedestal, and considered it sacrilegious to confide to them mere matters of trade.

"But woman has stepped down from the pedestal. She is a companion to her husband, and is usually well acquainted with business methods, through earning her own living before her marriage."

And in proof, Judge Graham cites two instances coming to light in his courtroom within a week.

When Walter J. Gerdeau became unable to attend to his ship chandlery business four months ago, it was netting $3,000 a month. Four months after his wife was named guardian and assumed active charge the volume increased to $4,500 a month.

"I was secretary in a ship supply firm before marriage," explains Mrs. Gerdeau. "Besides, Walter discussed his affairs with me, and we sought to work together on the problems."

Had Joseph Koven failed to tell his wife of business affairs, his lamp shade factory, worth $8,000, would have been sold by an administrator, and the money given to his widow.

But Mrs. Henriette Koven was more or less familiar with the business, and she took charge when her husband died a year ago. She used his business methods, and knowing that lampshades are purchased mostly by women, added some feminine touches.

To-day, the $8,000 business is worth $18,000. Mrs. Koven, as sole heiress, is independent.

"In the days when daily papers were confined to the larger cities, and word-of-mouth spread news, there was bound to be much garbling of facts," says Judge Graham. "Many a bank run was started through some incautious word from some woman. Many a thriving firm was wrecked through some woman, with no knowledge of business, trying to tell something she knew nothing about.

"But that phase of American life is gone with the hoopskirt. It is the wise man who frankly discusses his business with his helpmate, and profits by her observations.

"Then, there will be fewer divorce actions, for the couple, instead of moving in entirely different circles of activity, will be working as a team, with the same determination to get somewhere in the world."

JOBLESS MEN IN A NEW YORK CHURCH

After Sleeping in Church, Men Went Out and Had Breakfast For Five Cents Early.

NEW YORK, December 22. (United Press.) — Led by Mr. Seero, the erstwhile auctioneer of jobless men, an army of unemployed, 250 strong, put one over on the cold wave last night, by taking possession of the Camp Memorial Congregational church, where they slept on the pews and floors.

After most of the men had fallen asleep it occurred to Mr. Seero whose real name is Urbain J. Ledoux, that it would be a nice thing to ask the pastor's permission for transferring the edifice into a hotel.

Not only did the Rev. David B. Minor gave his consent, but he ordered the Janitor to build up the fires.

This morning Mr. Seero marched his army to "The Tub," a basement at 33 Saint Mark's Place, where a hungry man gets his fill for a nickel.

Every member was given coffee, rolls and a mulligan. And now Mr. Seero is going to see if he can't get jobs for them.

CONDITIONS IN WEST ARE NOT SO BRIGHT

J. A. Mitchell Says Cost of Production Should Be Reduced.

Mr. J. A. Mitchell, a brother of Sydney Mitchell, of this city, is at present in Peterborough on a visit from the west. Mr. Mitchell was formerly of Omemee, but for the past twenty-six years he has resided in the west. Mr. Mitchell's estimation of the conditions in the west is that they are not as bright as they are printed.

"Of recent years I have devoted my time to find a way to reduce the cost of production," he said. "It is quite interesting to note that during the past twenty years great strides have been made in labor-saving devices. In the field of farm implement improvement there has only been a few small steps taken. Seeing a need for an improvement in our seeding implements, I have devoted my attention along the line of a double purpose implement which would cultivate and seed at one operation and also broadcast the seed below the ground at any desired depth. The implement is known in Western Canada as a subseeder."

Mr. Mitchell is at present at the factory of the Tudhope-Anderson Company, of Orillia, making final arrangements for the manufacture of the machine and placing it on the market. This implement will mean a great saving to the farmers of Western Canada as it will do the work of a seed drill and a duck-foot cultivator in one operation.

This machine, when finished, will fit on any make of standard drill.

TROOPS ON WAY.

Two British Destroyers on Way to Tangier.

LONDON, Dec. 22.—Two British destroyers with 300 infantrymen aboard, have gone to Langier, according to the Central News' Gibraltar correspondent, who says it is feared the Andjera rebels who recently revolted against the Spaniards, will seize Tangier. An Italian troopship, bound for Tangier, is due at Gibraltar to-day.

CHRISTMAS AIRS ARE FEATURED BY ROTARIANS

Professor Gliddon Tells the Members About Composition of Symphony Orchestra.

A FINE PROGRAMME.

Congratulations Extended to Members of the Peterborough Hockey Club.

There was a Christmas color to the programme at the weekly luncheon of the Peterboro Rotary Club at the Empress to-day, and it was one of the most enjoyable in some time. Old favorite Christmas numbers, such as Adeste Fidelis, "It came upon the Midnight Clear," and "Holy Night," were sung as choruses, while Rotarian Douglas Carlisle gave a splendid rendition of "Nazareth," and had to respond to an enthusiastic encore.

Rotary-anne Mrs. Hazel Davidson McClelland recited "Just Before Christmas" in her inimitable fashion, and was recalled to give a humorous little encore, "A Pound of Jumps," both selections being greatly appreciated.

The speaker of the day was Professor Rupert Gliddon, of the Conservatory of Music, who was introduced neatly by Rotarian John Crane.

Professor Gliddon gave a most interesting address on "Symphony Orchestras," explaining the instrumentation of such organizations and dilating upon the important place symphony orchestras occupy in the world of music. He explained that a symphony orchestra consisted of four groups or choirs, the string section, the woodwind section, the brass section and the battery or instruments of percussion. Each of the first three, he pointed out, was subdivided into four parts, analagous to the parts of a vocal quartette, in other words, there were soprano, contralto, tenor and bass sections in the string, woodwind and brass choirs. Professor Gliddon explained in detail the different instruments and the part each played in the orchestra, and they passed on to discuss some of the world's greatest orchestras, mentioning in particular the Boston, Philadelphia and New York Symphony Orchestras.

He emphasized the fact that these organizations were not commercialized. They were carried on with the help of subscribers, who gave their money, knowing full well that there would never be any dividends paid, but anxious for the sake of music to do their part.

Rotarian W. R. Morris proposed a vote of appreciation and congratulation to the Peterboro Hockey Club for its feat in capturing the S.P.A. Cup, and for its splendid showing throughout the series. It was carried amid great applause.

It was announced that the directors had made a contribution to the Salvation Army to take care of a number of children who were in need of boots and underclothing.

New York has been celebrating the 100th birthday of Fifth Avenue, most famous street in the world. About 90 years ago John Hunt, millionaire, was brought before sanity experts because he paid $2400 for which today has a corner worth 14 million dollars.

So much for the opinions of others. If you have a good thing and are sure of it, don't let ridicule make you waver.

SIX MONTHS ON THEFT CHARGES

Four Local Youths Convicted of Housebreaking and Theft in Smith.

SENTENCED TO-DAY.

Charged with housebreaking and theft, Leonard Minnicola, Anthony Minnicolo, Stanley Sculley and Edward Woodcock were this morning sentenced to terms of six months in the Ontario Reformatory, with an indeterminate sentence of not more than two years less one day.

On a charge under the inland revenue act, Woodcock was given a similar sentence, to run concurrently.

The young men were charged with breaking into a cottage in Smith township, owned by Stuart Cullen, and stealing household goods. The first three pleaded guilty.

The cases were heard before Magistrate O. A. Langley, and Crown Attorney G. W. Hatton, K.C., prosecuted the housebreaking charges.

Petes Wrest S.P.A. Cup From Soo by Score of 3-2 In Overtime Game--Tigers & Canadiens Win

PETES WIND UP BIG SERIES IN BLAZE OF GLORY BY GRAND WIN FROM FAMOUS SOO GREYHOUNDS, THE AMATEUR HOCKEY CHAMPIONS OF CANADA

Blue and White Capture S. P. A. Cup in Sensational 3-2 Victory in Toronto.

OVERTIME NEEDED

Erstwhile Intermediates Astonish Hockey World by Upsetting Allan Cup Holders.

ANYBODY'S GAME

McLeod Scored Winning Goal in Second Period of Overtime.

(By F. D. C.)

As a sensational climax of their wonderful showing in the earlier rounds of the S.P.A. series, the Peterboro Hockey Club, erstwhile Intermediate runners up and now members of the Senior O.H.A. ranks, captured the Sportsmen's Trophy in Toronto on Saturday night by beating the famous Soo Greyhounds, Allen Cup holders and Amateur Champions of Canada, 3 goals to 2, after a wonderful contest in which the teams had to play twenty minutes overtime to settle the issue.

No wonder the Star calls the Petes the "surprise package" of the S.P.A. series and Mike Rodden in the Globe dubs them "one of the wonder of the world."

Two weeks ago the blue and white team had not been on a rink this season.

In that time they have met and conquered Niagara Falls, Preston, Parkdale Canoe Club of Toronto and have wound up a miraculous performance by beating the Canadian Soo, the flying wonders of the north, who were credited with being in a class by themselves.

The spirit of the Petes has carried them through. In their last three games they have had to come from behind to win and in all four they knew they were facing team's called by most of the experts to beat them handsomely but the dogged determination of the blue and white has overcome all obstacles.

A Hockey Epic.

Saturday's game was a hockey epic.

From the first drop of the puck until the final gong, 80 minutes after, the pace was a killer.

"Allen Cup hockey", Toronto experts announced it and it was nothing else.

Flashes of brilliant combination, dazzling individual rushes, goal keeping extraordinary, by both Dwyer and Walsh, first one goal threatened, then the other, markers missed by inches, and not a lagging moment anywhere combined to make the battle a memorable display.

The crowd, with Peterboro having the bulk of the vocal encouragement but with the Soo well supported was in a fever of excitement and good plays by both teams were wildly cheered as the scene of battle shifted from one end of the arena to the other.

There was no score in the first period, each team tallied once in the second, Soo finding the net first and the Petes evening up ten minutes afterward, and each came back with another in the third leaving it 2-2 at the end of the hour.

The first ten minutes overtime found the deadlock unbroken and it was not until six minutes of the second had sped that a smart Bailey to McLeod play enabled victory to perch upon the Peterboro banners, ending a remarkable struggle.

Beat A Great Team

When the Petes beat the Soo they beat a team considered the best amateur outfit in Canada. Making allowance for the fact that the Greyhounds had had a long train journey it was considered that a team composed of Flat Walsh, Stan Brown and Babe Donnelly on the defence, and Dessard, Phillips and Woodruff up in front, reinforced by Campbell and Burke would carry too much speed, class and craft for the graduates from the Intermediate series.

But the Petes matched speed for speed and if the experience of the Soo machine imparted a smoother system to their play, the blue and white met it with a determination that wiped out the advantage.

It was anybody's game—make no mistake about that.

The Soo might just as well have won it on the play as the blue and white.

But the miraculous thing about it all is that the Petes should hold this much-heralded hockey machine so closely that after it was all over no man could say that the victory was not deserved.

It was a wonderful game to win—and a mighty tough game to lose and too much credit cannot be given the Peterboro squad for their remarkable performance.

If the Soo were train-weary, they showed little signs of it. They had speed to burn and they cut out a torrid pace from the start and they were still steaming along when the long struggle ended.

About the Soo.

Walsh lived up to his reputation by stopping everything that was stoppable and not a few that looked to be in the impossible class. But he had nothing on Dwyer who performed prodigies of goal keeping with a coolness that must have been disconcerting to the Soo attackers. All five goals were scored on passes that enabled the successful marksman to shoot from the mouth of the net and shooting at Dwyer and Walsh from outside was just a wasted effort. It was a wonderful exhibition by both goalies and Peterboro rotund net guardian added to his already heavy crop of laurels.

Babe Donnelly was the outstanding Soo star. The well-built defence man with the baseball cap pulled down over his eyes not only played a defensive game of rare skill but he was dangerous every time he came down the ice. An he came down a-plenty and was a constant thorn in the side of the Petes. He flits along without effort and is as elusive as a puff of air. Stan Brown his defence mate was not nearly so effective. Phillips was perhaps the best of the forwards, exhibiting his usual trickery around the nets while "Gloomy" Lessard was always useful and a menace when he broke away.

The Petes' Players.

The Peterboro line up divided the laurels among them for every player was responsible for the victory. Dwyer's work has already been referred to. McLeod and Parker played a steady, effective defence against a shifty set of attackers and held them out with remarkable success, it being worthy to note that the Soo failed to score while the two were back there together. McLeod contributed some of the most spectacular rushes of the night and only tough luck robbed him of a couple of goals in addition to the one he hung up on end while Parker also was dangerous time after time. Halpin filled in on the defence to good advantage.

The line worked like heroes. Bailey with a lame leg was not expected to last very long but the right winger was of great service and wound up a fine performance by co-operating with McLeod for the winning counter. Burgess who alternated at right wing again distinguished himself by some great skating and stickhandling and when he came off after the first five minutes overtime was given an ovation by the crowd.

Collins showed plenty of speed at centre and mussed up many a Soo attack by his checking while Ranger whose work has been a feature of the series was at his best on Saturday night, his stickhandling and checking causing him to be prominent whenever he was on the ice. Ray Rose playing centre or left wing as occasion demanded was a big help in either position and always a factor in the game. Foley and Salmon were not used the subbing being done by Rose, Burgess and Halpin.

Connie Smythe, the well known Varsity coach handled the Petes throughout the game and the players are very grateful to him for his valuable services.

No Score In First.

The first period was marked by twenty minutes of brilliant but scoreless hockey. The Petes following the tactics they have used so successfully throughout the series kept a three man defence always on guard and although the Soo, showing no signs of weariness and with Donnelly leading the way, tore in at a torrid clip in raid after raid, the Petes defensive system was working very effectively and when the Greyhounds did succeed in working in close, Dwyer was invincible. Meanwhile the blue and white were not leaving all the attacking to the Northeners. Up in front Bailey, Collins and Ranger staged attacks that gave Walsh a chance to show why he has been featured so often in the headlines and McLeod and Parker set the crowd going with spectacular individual rushes. McLeod fooled Donnelly and Brown several times in succession by clever stickhandling but Walsh saved beautifully.

Brown drew the first penalty of the game for tripping but the Petes did not enjoy the one man advantage very long for Bailey dumped Lessard and also drew the gate. It was lightning hockey and both teams missed golden opportunities to score. Phillips, the crafty Soo centre took a rebound once and with the whole net open lifted over the top and down at the other end the Petes lost chances with Walsh at their mercy.

These narrow escapes from counters kept the crowd in an uproar and every time Donnelly or McLeod started down the ice there was a wild cheer. The attacks, however, failed to beat either Dwyer or Walsh and both had a clean sheet when the first period ended.

Soo Score First.

There was not let-up in the second session. In fact both teams let out a link or two and the pace was terrific. Early in the period Phillips was benched for chopping Ranger over the head in a mix-up at centre. The Petes left wing had to retire for repairs but was soon back. McLeod followed Phillips to the penitent bench for mixing it too freely and with the teams each a man short the Greyhound broke into the scoring column on a beautifully executed play. Donnelly tore down on one of his characteristic rushes, beat the Peterboro rear guard with a perfect pass to Lessard and the redoubtable "Gloomy" who might have scored himself made it sure by flipping the rubber to Donnelly at the goal mouth, Dwyer having no chance to save when the Soo defence man tobied the disc into the net. Petes 0, Soo 1.

The blue and white team only dug in the harder after this reverse and they carried the play so determinedly to the Greyhounds in the next few minutes that Walsh was kept busy and Donnelly and Brown were working overtime to stave off the persistent attacks. The Petes got their chance finally after ten minutes of wildy exciting hockey when Lessard was penalized for piling into "Shorty" Burgess in the corner. They grasped their opportunity and a quick three man attack saw the game sewed up. Bailey started the raid, passed sharply to Ranger and the latter beat the Soo defence with another quick pass to Collins who slammed a low one into the corner of the net. Petes 1, Soo 1.

The blue and white came right back from the face-off and came near taking the lead, Walsh making a couple of spectacular stops. In one of these raids Bailey knocked the rubber forward with his hand and dashing past the Soo defence, tipped the puck past Walsh as he came out to save. Both players went down and Bailey slid into the net and struck his head on the post. The goal, of course, was not allowed. Bailey was able to resume after a short delay. The period ended with the score unchanged.

A Terrific Period.

Fast and exciting as had been the first two periods the third was destined to prove the most hectic of all. Both teams opened at top speed, figuring the outfit that got the first goal would grab off the series. It was the Petes who scored first, Ranger doing the trick two minutes after the period began, when Parker, after some nice stickhandling, transferred the rubber to the left wing, inside the defence Ranger gave Walsh no opportunity to block that one and the Petes were in front for the first time Petes 2, Soo 1.

The Greyhounds were not beaten yet, not by a long shot. Those fast and tricky warriors of the north have pulled many a game out of the fire and they started out to pull this one. For the next few minutes it was one sensation after another. The Soo breaking fast and often three in line were tearing in at top speed but the blue and white showed little signs of flurry. Bailey saved a possible goal once when he nailed Lessard by fast back checking just as "Gloomy" was all set to shoot. The play was too much for the Soo winger and he started a combat with Bailey which ended in both battlers being banished.

Finally after seven minutes of terrific hockey the Allen Cup holders tied the score. It was an unusual play that put the teams on even footing. Parker had rushed to loose the puck at centre and Phillips got away down the side. The Petes had a three man defence at the time but the foxy Phillips fooled them with a pass almost the full width of the arena, Woodruff taking it beautifully and closing in fast to slide the rubber well out of Dwyers' reach. Petes 2, Soo 2.

With eleven minutes left to go the teams set a terrific pace as they burned up the ice trying to annex the goal that meant victory. McLeod came near turning the trick when he worked through on a beautiful rush only to fall when inside the defence, hurting his knee and having to drop off for temporary repairs. Donnelly got through on a rink length rush but Dwyer went to his knees and made a wonderful stop, saving the game. Burgess bodied a Soo forward as the latter was set to shoot, "Shorty" hurting his knee in the play. Then Ranger hurtled into Lessard and was benched for charging, the Petes holding the Soo off until his penalty was up. Just before the period ended the Petes lost a beautiful chance to win the honors when a long shot from Ranger hit the screen, rebounded in front of the net and Parker and Collins both took a swipe at the rolling puck and both missed. Walsh was out of the net at the time and a score seemed certain.

There was an unusual incident during this period when Phillips cross-checked Ranger and both went down for the count. Referee Marsh started to penalize Phillips but figuring the Soo centre had the worst of the deal imposed no penalty.

The Overtime.

After the usual rest the teams came on for the overtime amid wild excitiment. The first ten minutes saw some wonderful hockey but no scoring. Collins had the first shot but Walsh saved easily and then Donnelly broke away flanked by Lessard and Phillips. The tricky Soo defence man fooled the Petes by failing to pass and sailed in alone but Dwyer saved cleverly and Donnelly slid into the post and there was a delay until he recovered. Burgess played great hockey for the Petes during this period.

The first five minutes of the second overtime period was scoreless, the play being of the end-to-end variety with the crowd in an uproar of excitement.

Soon after the teams changed ends the Petes put over the winning tally. It was fitting that Bert McLeod who had come so close to scoring after sensational work throughout the game should be the one to settle the argument. He broke away with Bailey and the right wing player after working in close with some clever stickhandling slipped the rubber over to McLeod who scored at close range.

In the four minutes left to go the Soo tried everything they knew to save the day but their best was not good enough to beat the Petes for the equalizer and the blue and white were S.P.A. cup-winners.

JUST A FEW REBOUNDS.

Three seems to be the Petes favorite number. It won four games for them in the big series.

Several hundred fans from Peterboro saw Saturday night's game and there were twice that number of Peterboro old boys out to cheer for the blue and white.

Peterboro's S.P.A. record has been consistent. Consider these scores

Petes	3	Niagara Falls	1
Petes	3	Preston	2
Petes	3	Parkdale	1
Petes	3	Soo	2

A strange thing about the series is that Woodruff of the Soo was the only opposing forward to score against the Petes The other 5 goals hung up by the opposition were made by defence players, Murray for Niagara Falls; Ashley and Skelly for Preston; Harris for Parkdale, and Donnelly for the Soo.

Last year the Canadian Olympic team won the S.P.A. series, beating the Soo in the final game by one goal. It is a queer shifting of the stage settings that finds the intermediate runners-up of last season wresting the trophy from the Allen Cup holders.

The Soo had their six regulars of last season in line against the Petes on Saturday night and there were many fans who could not see how they could possibly lose.

The Petes should get a great reception tomorrow night when they skate out to battle the Aura Lee seniors at Brock Street Rink. It is the first opportunity to see the blue and white perform at home and every fan in town will be on the side lines.

Experienced sharpshooters such as Phillips and Lessard of the Soo; Jeffrey, Romeril and Lount of Parkdale; Arnott and Clark of Preston, and Rice and Kelterborn of Niagara Falls did not get a single notch in their sticks against the Petes, not one of this bunch registering a goal.

The record of the Petes in the series was Ranger 3 goals, 2 assists; Bailey, 3 goals, 2 assists; Parker, 4 assists; Rose, 2 goals, 2 assists; McLeod, 2 goals, 1 assist; Collins, 2 goals, 1 assist.

Hon. Charles McCrea, Minister of Mines was among the celebrities present. He, of course, cheered for the boys from the North.

GREAT FINISH BY CANADIENS

Overcame Ottawa's One Goal Lead and Won at Home by 3-2.

STILL LEADERS

MONTREAL, Dec. 22— With a final rush which all the cunning of the Ottawa defensive could not check, Canadiens dashed through the Senators in the final period of their National Hockey League struggle here Saturday night scoring two goals which enabled them to come from behind to win an exciting battle 3 to 2. Thus, the Dominion Champions held their margin at the head of the League race and are still one-half game in front of the Hamilton Tigers. Ottawa sniped their way to a 2 to 1 lead in the first two carefully played periods. With the Senators playing a marvelous defensive game up to this time it looked like a win for Tommy Gorman's re-organized sextette from the capital.

One goal down starting the period, Canadiens opened with all the dash and scintillating play for which they are famed and within five minutes had tied the score and worked out a lead. Billy Boucher, dead-locked the game and turned pandemonium loose in the rink when he dashed through the entire Ottawa team on one of his brilliant stick-handling efforts, drove the puck at Connell and bored in to send the rebound into the twine. Stirred to action by the goal Ottawa rushed from the face-off with Denneny Nighbor and Hooley Smith going down three abreast against a two-man defence. It was a tense moment for the Canadien supporters but a cheer shook the building as Sprague Cleghorn intercepted the final pass to Smith and essayed a rush down the ice. He was flanked by Joliat, Billy Boucher and Morenz while Ottawa was short a player, Hitchman being on the bench for roughing Billy Boucher, the Canadien Captain drew the outer guard before letting go the puck, then came Canadiens' masterful goal-getter, Aurel Joliat, who swooped down on the rebound and went right on Connell to beat in the winning goal, with the youthful Ottawa goalie having no chance to save.

JOHNSON'S LAST WORD.

Sorry That American League Club Owners Did Not See Duty to Public.

CHICAGO, Dec. 21.—Ban Johnson, president of the American League, who for two days has refused to comment on the action of league club owners meeting here this week in removing him from the base ball advisory council and advising Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis, that, Johnson would be removed from office if he interfered with the conduct of the Commissioners' office, has issued his only statement on the affair.

"I am sorry," he said, "that the American League Club owners could not conceive their faithful and exact duty to the public I have no criticisms to offer."

"This statement," he added, "constitutes everything I will have to say about the major league meeting."

Six Thousand Fans Witness Fast Game in Hamilton.

HAMILTON, December 22. — The Hamilton team had little difficulty in maintaining their pace in the N.H.L. race here on Saturday night, defeating Cecil Hart's Montreal aggregation by a score of 3 to 1 in a game that gave some six thousand fans a little of everything in the hockey book.

The Montrealers showed considerable stubborness and although behind from the start they refused to concede victory at any stage. They were right up in the battle at the finish, trying hard to drop in the necessary counters.

AURA LEE HOPE TO STOP PETES HERE TOMORROW

Bill Marsden's Fast Senior Outfit to Play at Brock St. Rink.

RECORD CROWD

City is Turning Out to Honor the Winners of the S.P.A. Series.

Tomorrow night at Brock Street Ring it will be a case of "Fans" meet the Peterboro hockey club, latest entry in the O.H.A. senior holders of the S.P.A. trophy and conquerors of the Soo Greyhounds, amateur champions of Canada."

And this is no idle rumour that the said fans will be there in droves to see the Petes in action against Bill Marsden's Aura Lee squad. The shrewd Aura Lee manager into has in his time developed a raft of players has been sizing the Petes up in the S. P. A. series and he declares that his 1924-25 team will make the blue and white step all the way.

It should be a fine game.

Aura Lee will have Moore in goal. Trace, Shaw, Walker and Cap Fear, for defence, and a forward line that will include the slippery Jerry Deriord, Bord and McPherson.

The game is billed for 8.30 o'clock and with good ice promised, and in view of the spectacular tumult of the Petes in winning the S.P.A. honours incidentally the outstanding feat by the Peterboro hockey team in a couple of decades. There will be a record crowd in line.

And the Petes deserve just that kind of a crowd because of what they have accomplished.

TIGERS DEFEAT MONTREAL TEAM

Easterners Were Rather Easy for Hamilton, Who Won by 3-1.

GOALERS GOOD

HAMILTON, Dec. 22.—The Hamilton Tigers had little difficulty in maintaining their pace in the N.H.L. race here on Saturday night, defeating Cecil Hart's Montreal aggregation by a score of 3 to 1 in a game that gave some six thousand fans a little of everything in the hockey book. The Montrealers showed considerable stubbornness and although behind from the start, refused to concede victory at any stage. They were right up in the battle at the finish, trying hard to drop in the necessary counters by using their entire team in Hamilton territory in the final minutes of play.

Hamilton led at the end of the first frame 2 to 1 and added the final tally of the game after three minutes of play in the second. They were within inches of a dozen goals at various stages of the game, but the beautiful work of Clint Benedict in goal for the Hart crew held them at bay. The elongated net guardian made some miraculous stops and though Vernon Forbes of the locals was especially brilliant, on the night's play, Benedict was even better with the number of very dangerous shots he was called upon to stop.

CANADIENS WIN.

Defeated Senators by 3 Goals to 2 in Thrilling Battle.

MONTREAL, December 22. — With the Final rush, which all the cunning of the Ottawa defensive could not check, Canadiens dashed through the Senators in the final period of their National Hockey League struggle here on Saturday night scoring two goals, which enabled them to come from behind to win an exciting battle 3 to 2. Thus the Dominion champions held their margin at the head of the league race.

LIBERAL CANDIDATE.

E. G. Odette, Reeve of Tilbury, Nominated for East Essex.

Chatham, Ont., Dec. 22.—K. C. Odette, Reeve of Tilbury, was nominated as the Liberal standard bearer for the riding of East Essex at a convention held at Belle River Saturday. Two others contested the convention on the first ballot, but Mr. Odette received an overwhelming majority on the first ballot, with the result that the nomination was made unanimous without a second ballot. The convention was largely attended and addresses were given by the candidates, Senator McCoig, and R. L. Brackin, M.L.A.

JUNIOR PRACTICE.

The Peterboro Juniors will hold a practice at Brock Street Rink tonight at six o'clock. All players having a try out be on hand as the weeding out will commence tonight.

NOTTS COUNTY ARE NOW THIRD

Defeated by Newcastle United, Leaving Bromwich at Top of Division.

REVIEW OF GAMES

LONDON, Dec. 22. — (Canadian Press Cable).— Another Crown fell on Saturday when Notts County succumbed to Newcastle United by the narrowest margin and lost leadership of the first division of the English League West Bromwich, who scored an emphatic victory over Bury on the latter's ground, now stand alone at the top of the table with a gap of one point over the closely pursuing Huddersfield Town. Notts County's defeat cost them a couple of places in the standings, for they now stand third.

Saturday was a day for the home teams, eight of them garnering full points, while West Bromwich were the only aggregation to win on strange territory. Only a couple of games were drawn. Scoring was heavy; even goals were counted in the Arsenal-Leeds United encounter, five in the tilt between West Ham and Sunderland, and four in the two games Blackburn Rovers-Cardiff and Manchester City-Birmingham.

The score against Notts County would have been much larger, for Newcastle was the better team of the two and played splendid football. It was only the brilliant work of Iremonger, the county's goal tender, that prevented the count from mounting. A particularly fine save of a penalty-kick helped materially in averting a heavier defeat.

Booed the Referee

Deplorable scenes marred the West Ham-Sunderland game, in which Sunderland were soundly licked by four goals to one. The Hammer's supporters were all to blame for their lack of sportsmanship. They booed and yelled at the referee on account of several decisions with which they disagreed. The police had to be called in to cope with the situation. It is noteworthy that Sunderland drew first blood, registering their counter ahead of the home team.

Despite more polished play, Tottenham Hotspurs were not good enough for Notts Forest, who sent in the deciding tally one minute before the interval. This was a free-kick of terrific force which caromed off one of the spurs players and smashed into the net.

Frequent injuries featured the game between Aston Villa and Burnley, a contest in which the villa won by a handsome margin. Burnley were unlucky to finish three goals down for they had by far the better of the opening play. Notwithstanding that their ranks were depleted by influenza and that they had to call on a number of scratch men, Bolton Wanderers proved sufficiently good for Liverpool to play them to a goal-less draw. They should have won on the merits of play, but the defence of Liverpool was absolutely faultless.

Huddersfield Up

Huddersfield returned to within a point of the league leadership by virtue of their one goal victory over Preston north end. They might have increased the score, but lack of finish was responsible for their emerging with only the one goal win. The game served to emphasize the hopelessness of Preston's position now. They have won only three games out of twenty and have drawn two; fifteen have gone against them.

Throughout the League there was only one change in League leadership (West Bromwich was tied previously with Notts County) and that was Bristol City was reached the top of the Third Division (Southern section) owing to Plymouth's defeat.

In the Second Division, Portsmouth sustained their first home defeat at the hands of Clapton Orient, whose goal-keeper was outstanding, saving a penalty in the last minute of the game.

Starred for Arsenal

With regard to individual performances, the best of the day was that of Brain, the latest Arsenal recruit, who secured four of Arsenal's six goals against Leeds. Players who accomplished the hat-trick were Prouse of Fulham, Mills of Hull City and Richardson of Swindon Town.

Despite the improved weather the attendances were little bettered over a week ago. Only five hundred thousand persons saw the League games, but this was due in greater part to the usual Christmas season slump.

SPALLA'S CHALLENGE WAS REJECTED

PARIS, Dec 21.—The International Boxing Union has refused to consider transmitting the challenge of Erminic Spalla, the Italian heavyweight to Jack Dempsey for a bout for the world's heavyweight title. The union made known its ruling in diplomatic language which, in effect tells Spalla to "first get a reputation".

Erminio Spalla, who holds the European championship recently deposited 2,000 lire with the president of International Boxing Union as a guarantee of authenticity of his challenge to fight Jack Dempsey.

SKI COMPETITION SET FOR TUESDAY

International College Affair Will Be Staged in Quebec.

QUEBEC, Que., Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press.)—The International College ski competition, scheduled to take place here on Tuesday, December 30th, under the auspices of the Frontenac Winter Sports Club, will open the winter season's programme of this recently formed organization. Out of six invitations sent to Eastern Canadian colleges, McGill, of Montreal, is the first to accept the challenge, and will send a team [illegible] of their ski runners and ski jumpers.

Following McGill, word was received from Dartmouth, New Hampshire, announcing the intention of that college to send a strong team to compete with the best of our Canadian college ski-iers. The coming of the Dartmouth team will give the competition an International character, interest being increased in this development on account of the fact that the Dartmouth College has made a name for itself in every line of winter sports. They have won the President Harding trophy four times and two of their ski jumpers were selected to represent the United States in the last Olympic games at Chamonix, France.

Other universities which are expected to be represented in the competition are Ottawa, Laval of Montreal, and Loyola, also of the Metropolis. Laval University, of Quebec, will have a strong team among the contestants.

OSHAWA CHURCH LEAGUE FORMED

Twenty-three Teams Have Been Entered in Senior, Junior, Juvenile and Midget Series.

AVERY NOT ELEGIBLE.

OSHAWA, Dec. 22.—(Special).—The local church hockey association is to play an important part in the great winter past-time in the City of Oshawa this winter, for when the time expired for receiving entries for the four divisions on Saturday evening, Secretary E. Anderson announced that twenty-three teams would carry on during the winter as follows:—Senior, King Street and Simcoe Street Methodists, Cedar Dale, South Oshawa, Christians, Presyterians and St. George's Anglican; Junior, King Street, Christian, St. George's, South Oshawa and Simcoe Street; Juvenile, Christian, Cedar Dale, Presyterian, Simcoe Street, St. George's and King Street; Midget, South Oshawa, King Street, St. George's, Christian and Simcoe Street. The league with this large numer of entries have made arrangements to operate games in each of the covered rinks, Bradley's Arena on Duke Street and the old curling rink, in the hollow on King street West, which has been taken over by Bob Deverall of Whitby to be used as a skating arena, and has already been put in shape for hockey, with gates at each end which can be removed on skating nights. The opening games of the church league schedule are to be on Friday evening, January 2nd, the draw for which will be made on Monday evening when the executive meets in the Y.M.C.A.

Besides operating the four series in the local series, the Association has takn the Junior O. H. A. entry under its wing and have been grouped up with Cobourg, Port Hope, Bowmanville and Whitby, with the opening game in Oshawa scheduled for next Tuesday evening, December 23rd when Cobourg comes to try and take the first game as part of a Xmas cheer to place in the horse show town's stocking on Xmas eve.

Charlie Blanchard who learned the hockey game in Whitby when Sheriff Paxton's County town crew always headed the local intermediate group, but who later moved across to Oshawa and wore a local uniform, has been given charge of the local team, and figuring the horse shoe town as the one to beat for group honors, he had two teams working out on Saturday afternoon and with another on Monday evening, he expects to have most of the rough spots worked off his squad and give the visitors a great battle as the open er for group honors.

Last Thursday evening the first workout of the intermediates was called for Bradley's Arena and it developed into a walkout on the part of players. The players who are this year's executive have been dickering for better terms from the rink management. Thursday at noon the offer of the owners was accepted, but come easy, go easy, and the players decided to ask for a further rebate before going out on the ice, but were refused. Arbitration was then decided on with Messrs. C. M. Mundy and Geo. Hezzelwood as a board to hear same, each party to the same agreeing to accept their award and after a two hours session same was handed out, but refused by player representatives and at time of writing its looks like no intermediate hockey for Oshawa this winter.

Avery the good forward who played wih Bowmanville last Winter but on account of earning his family meal ticket in Oshawa, signed an Oshawa intermediate certificate, has been told by the Ontario Hockey Association Executive he must still play with the Eastern town.

Dick Hall who last year played with Oshawa has been granted permission to play again in Whitby. The county town is Richard's home town.

Bowmanville has a certificate for one Sandy Lockington, a nephew of the late Sandy Lockington of Port Hope who was always a mainstay of hockey in the town of hills.

Chief of Police of Whitby, Charlie Lavery, who has seen 22 winters in hockey, has charge of the County Town junior team. Charlie with his Packard, brought ten players over to Oshawa on Friday evening, unloaded them at the four corners, said home James to the driver of the car and he led the parade in a jaunt back to the county town. The big chief says they will drop over the boards in A1 condition when Ginger Edger's Bowmanville crew visit Whitby on the evening of December 23rd.

BIG SISTERHOOD.

Rooms Secured at Fire Hall For Carrying on of the Work.

The Big Sisterhood Association, which has done such a necessary and useful work during the past few years, is again preparing to carry on work among the needy and indigent of the city. The ladies have been very fortunate in securing rooms in the Fire Hall, and will be pleased to receive donations there of all kinds of clothing and provisions, as well as articles that might help to make homes more comfortable. There are many little children in Peterborough this Christmas who will only konw Santa Claus through the kindness of those more happily situated. Let our donations be generous. Cash contributions for this work may be sent to the secretary, Mrs. Geo. Benton, 272 Thomas street.

Bowling

LADIES' BOWLING LEAGUE — Y.M.C.A.

The first half of the schedule of the Ladies' League at the Y.M.C.A., finished on Friday night, with the Buttercups, captained by Miss Clara Adams, two games in advance of the Orioles captained by Miss Hazel Crowe. The Larks, who are captained by Miss Nora Shevlin, and who finished one game behind the Orioles, were tied with both the Buttercups and the Orioles for first place in the League two weeks ago. However both the Orioles and the Larks dropped two games apiece in the eighth week of the schedule while the Buttercups won all three. The Buttercups again dimmed the hopes of these two teams by taking three straights from the Dandelions this week, while the Larks dropped one to the Swallows. The Orioles managed to pull themselves up to second position in the League by taking all three from the Owls.

The League this year has shown a decided improvement over last year, and all ten teams are much more evenly matched and doing better bowling than the teams were last year. The three tail-enders in the League have each a member on their teams for whom it is their first season of bowling, and a big improvement in their position in the League standing will certainly be noticed in the second half of the League. The Marigolds have already started on their upward path by winning a number of their games in the last thee weeks of the schedule. If predictions are in order, some of the lower teams in the League standing will make some of the teams on the top rungs of the ladder battle for first and second place in the second half of the schedule.

The Orioles took all three games from the Owls in the Ladies' League at the "Y" last night, and rolled some nice games to do it. This gives the Orioles second place in the first half of the league.

PETES WIN FAME FOR HOME CITY

Congratulations Pour in to Successful S.P.A. Cup Contenders.

The exploit of the Peterboro Hockey Club in winning the S.P.A. Series, and beating the Soo Allen Cup holders, has brought Peterboro into the limelight, and won great publicity for the home city of the winners.

The following wire, received by the Examiner, from Mr. Peter Campbell, Sr., former manager of the Bank of Toronto here, and father of "Pete" Campbell, manager of the Canadian Olympic team, indicates the significance of the Petes' triumph:

"Congratulations. Great game. Team is biggest advertisement Peterboro has had for years."

A DASH FOR LIFE.

Dog Sled Carries Stricken Woman Twenty Miles Over Perilous Ice.

FORT WILLIAM, December 22.—Twenty miles by a dog sled over the perilously thin ice of the Nipigon Straits, in a hurried race to the hospital to obtain treatment for a sudden attack of appendicitis, was the experience of Mrs. M. S. Tanholm, the cook in a pulp wood camp, during the week-end.

She was stricken while at work, and the men in the camp immediately made plans to take her to the head of the lakes.

The ice on the straits was too thin for horses and a dog sled was pressed into service. At one place a long detour had to be made around an open gap in the coating of ice, and more than one cariole upset.

Mrs. Stanholm is doing well at the hospital.

BUILD AMPHITHEATRE.

LONDON, December 22. (United Press.) — The Daily Express Sydney correspondent cables that 2,000 members of the "Order of the Star in the East" have an amphitheatre on Balmoral Beach, near Sydney, in anticipation of the Second Coming of Christ.

Preparations for the reappearance of the Saviour have already cost $60,000, raised by enrolling members in eighteen different lands.

Members subscribe from $50 to $500 for a seat in the amphitheatre on the beach.

Some women members are working in Sydney as domestics and waitresses in order to obtain enough money to buy a seat.

THEATRES

AT THE ROYAL.

FELLOWS, HERES A MIGHTY GOOD TIP.

Helene Chadwick Tells how a Woman likes to be mastered—Right Man Must do it—Star of her own Free Will says Woman Wants to be Worried about.

She had just come off the set of the final scene of "Her Own Free Will," the screen version of Ethel Dell's story now playing at the Royal theatre. It was the scene where Nan Everard, the heroine, after refusing to live with the man she had married for money, and after doing everything to get away from him—even running away with another man—admits that she is in love with her masterful husband and is proud to be his wife "of her own free will." This is a love scene that is going to evoke a long sigh of satisfaction from the feminine contingent of any audience and make the male part secretly resolve to try out the tactics which Holmes Herbert employs as the husband.

"The woman of this generation is different from her predecessor," continued Miss Chadwick. "She is independent and is ready to say to a man, "Well, if you don't like it you know what you can do," but on the other hand, she's feminine and likes to be mastered BY THE RIGHT MAN. She'll do anything for the right man but no amount of mastering is going to make her love the wrong man."

"But Nan did not think Peter was the right man," we protested. "She married him for money."

"Not for money for herself, but for her father. I suppose it amounts to the same thing, though. Marrying for money and hoping that love will come afterwards is a dangerous business. It's too big a chance to take. I don't see how any girl could do it—I can't conceive of any marriage without love Nan didn't think of love at all—it was just sacrifice for her. She was a modern girl who had her own way all her life and so resented Peter's trying to make her do anything she didn't want to; but that was because she didn't realize that he loved her and that he had her own interest at heart all the time. After she ran away with Jerry and found out that the boy whom she had known all her life and trusted, had only one thing in mind, she realized the worth of her husband who had shown her every consideration and done everything for her own good.

"I think a woman likes a man to forbid her to do things because they aren't good for her. She likes to know that he is worrying about her."

"It depends upon how the mastering is done then? Is it a matter of technique?"

Miss Chadwick laughed, and then grew serious. She has an extremely expressive face that registers her every thought. "Well, yes, I suppose you would call it technique," she admitted. "It's the right way—but don't forget it's the right man who's doing it."

AT THE REGENT.

"RACING LUCK" HAS FUNNY STAR IN MONTY BANKS.

Laughs and Thrills Galore in Star's New Feature.

More power to Monty Banks! In his first five-reel feature, "Racing Luck," he proves that he is a real actor with powers to evoke sympathy as well as laughter. It is a wholesome comedy melodrama with thrills and laughs well mingled and a dash of romance thrown in.

As the Italian immigrant boy, who comes to America to seek fame, fortune and all the side-dishes that go with the quest, Monty Banks is ideal. He falls in love with a winsome and charming girls, Rosina, played splendidly by Helen Ferguson and his efforts to make her happy and prepare for their future wedded life cause no end of amusement and entertainment as Monty incurs the undying hatred of a ward leader and bully, Tony Mora who leaves no stone unturned to harm Monty physically, financially and romantically.

Just when Monty is thrown, and thrown is perfectly proper considering that Tony and his gang manhandled Monty as though he were a football, although Monty laced the daylights out of Tony in the free-for-all fight that took place in a big public eating place, out of a good job and his bank-roll pinched in the throwing, he gets an offer to take part in a big auto race. Monty, knowing he can't even drive a car, takes a chance? After a few lessons in driving he goes into the race. And what a race! The laughter is so long that one's face becomes wrinkled, doubled and creased long before the race is over.

In providing this cyclonic fun, Banks is ably assisted by Miss Ferguson, Francis McDonald as the villain and Lionel Belmore, Martha Franklin, D. Metzoras and William Blaisdell. The picture was capitally directed by Herman C. Raymaker. It is an Associated Exhibitors' release, being an Encore Picture.

AT THE CAPITOL.

PARAMOUNT'S "FEET OF CLAY" HERE TO-DAY.

From the gaiety of a yachting party at Catalina Island, Amy Loring, young, spoiled by the generous allowance of a half-sister, finds herself faced with the necessity of work to support a husband, maimed in a fight with a shark which had menaced her.

Such is the central situation of Cecil B. DeMille's "Feet of Clay," the director-general's first contribution to Paramount's Famous Forty. Adapted by Beulah Marie Dix and Bertram Millhauser, this screen play has retained all the modernity, zest and flavor which made Margaretta Tuttle's novel one of the reigning "best sellers."

It is at the Capitol to-day and to-morrow.

The principal characters are Rod La Rocque (Kerry Harlan), Vera Reynolds, the new DeMille "find," (Amy Loring), Julia Faye (Bertha Lansell), Ricardo Cortez (Tony Channing), Robert Edeson (Fergus Lansell), Theodore Kosloff (Bendick) and Victor Varconi.

The initial beach scenes at Catalina, punctuated by a thrilling race by twenty beautiful girls on surfboards behind fast speedboats, end in a wedding between Amy and Kerry on the huge Lansell yacht, en route back to New York. Bertha Lansell, half-sister to Amy, also interested in Kerry, cuts off Amy's allowance.

In New York, the poor efficency engineer is a wall-flower at a gorgeous dance given by Bertha. A dance by Tony with his wife drives Kerry to the floor, a dance, collapse and the doctor's verdict that death menaces him if he touches his foot to the ground within a year. Amy becomes a model in the establishment of Bendick.

Then starts the play of two powerful dramatic forces. Harlan, helpless, knowing his tired wife needs recreation, is frantic, as Tony Channing appears with his invitations. On the other hand, Amy comes home at luuch to find Bertha Lansell with her husband.

This situation brings the young couple to a misunderstanding. Disaster impends. And then in a novel and dramatic manner DeMille brings "Feet of Clay" to a fitting climax.

You have seen so-called screen novelties galore, but you've never seen the real thing until you take in this picture. It's done in true De Mille style and more than measures up to the best thing he has ever done.

OBITUARY.

MRS. JOSEPH GAIN.

Peterboro citizens were greatly shocked to hear, Saturday evening, of the death of Winifred MacFarlane, wife of Mr. Joseph H. Gain, who died at the family residence in Toronto at 1.30 Saturday afternoon.

The deceased was the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew MacFarlane, of this city, where she had resided until the time of her marriage to Mr. Gain, about fifteen years ago.

The late Mrs. Gain had returned just a week before from a three months' visit with her sister, Mrs. George McCuish, at Vancouver, B.C., and on arrival home was immediately put under the doctor's care, although for several days her sickness was not thought to be so serious as it developed to be.

Mr. and Mrs. MacFarlane were called to Toronto on Thursday, when it was found her life could only be spared but a very short while.

During her home life and girlhood in Peterboro she made very many friends, all of whom deeply regret her early demise. Since her marriage she has been a resident of Toronto, where she has made many new friends, and was extremely well liked and deservedly popular.

She leaves, besides her husband, Mr. Joseph H. Gain, a family of three girls, the oldest, Louise, 11 years of age, Winifred and Barbara, and a little baby boy, Andrew, slightly over a year old.

The funeral will take place from the residence of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew MacFarlane, Homewood Avenue, on Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock. The Kiwanians of Toronto, of which Mr. Gain is a member, have charge of the funeral, and will accompany the remains to Peterboro.

The quite unexpected death of Mrs. Gain is most deeply regretted by all her old friends and acquaintances, and their deepest sympathy goes out to the family, her parents, and brothers and sisters at this time.

A little town boy was offered a chance to spend a week in the country, but refused. Coaxing, pleading, arguing brought from him nothing but the stubborn answer — "No country for me." "But why not?" he was asked. "I am told they have thrashing machines in the country; and it's bad enough here, where it's done by hand."

ROADS COMMISSION.

Ald. W. Stocker Writes Letter Dealing With Suburban Roads Commission.

Ald. Walter Stocker in a letter to The Examiner today discusses the Suburban Roads Commission and advises the ratepayers to consider the matter carefully when they go to the polls. Ald Stocker complains of members of the Comission selling gravel to the Commission which he claims is illegal. He also claims that price of gravel has increased from fifteen cents a load to forty cents. Ald. Stocker produces figures to show the amount of gravel sold by the Commissioners to the Commission and suggests that the business of the suburban Road Commission is not conducted as it should be. Extravagance is one of the charges laid at the door of the Commisston by Ald. Stocker in a lengthy communication which The Examiner is unable to publish in full.

Tomorrow a letter on the same subject and written by Mr. Samuel Armstrong will appear in The Examiner.

ROYAL THEATRE SPECIAL MATINEES

Present For Boys and Girls Every Day This Week.

At the Royal Theatre matinees this week every boy and girl will be presented with a candy walking stick.

Excellent programmes have been obtained for the holiday week, and big crowds are expected.

The new six piece orchestra is proving quite an attraction. The music is exceptionally good for a theatre the size of the Royal, and the entertainment is clean -and whole some at all times.

On Christmas afternoo. .nd evening the orchestra will be augmented, giving a specially good musical programme.

BROCK STREET RINK OPENED SATURDAY

Big Crowd of Skaters—Band To-night.

Brock street rink opened on Saturday night with an exceptionally good sheet of ice, but there were more skaters on hand than had been expected, and in several places the ice cut through.

However the cold weather since Saturday has given the necessary thickness to the ice, and from now on there will be excellent skating at the rink.

The booth is being fixed up, and will be opened for business to-night, with hot and cold drinks, sandwiches, candy, gum, straps, laces, etc.

Brock street rink promises to be a most popular place of amusement this year.

SUNDAY SCHOOL AT 11

Murray Street School to Meet in the Morning.

Murray Street Baptist Sunday School, beginning January the 25th, will meet at 11 o'clock, the time of the regular morning church service. During last week the families connected with the Sunday School were visited and the new plan for the S.S. thoroughly explained to them. Their readiness to heartily support the morning session led the church on Wednesday evening to vote in favor of the change, and to instruct the Commission to select a Board of Religious Education to take full direction of the Sunday School. This Board was chosen Sunday evening. Its members are A. J. Madill L. J. Pettit, A. S. Zavits, W. W. Richman and W. G. Shiner.

DIED.

CROWLEY.—At her late residence, 6 Inverlea street, on Sunday, December 21st, at 2 p.m., Miss Pee Crowley. Funeral on Wednesday at nine o'clock from St. Peter's Cathedral to St. Peter's Cemetery. 2d-148-8077.

DEEP

Oil men have been experimentally drilling deep wells, hoping to find large pools of oil under worked-out petroleum fields in the east. At Latrobe, Pa. the world's deepest well strikes gas at a depth of 3428 feet. Where there's gas, there's usually oil.

This deepest well, to date, has cost $200,000—an almost prohibitive price unless oil were found in phenomenal quantities. The important feature is that nature may have prepared, for us, oil deposits at deeper levels for use when present known pools are exhausted.

GERMANY STAYS OUT OF LEAGUE BECAUSE OF MILITARY WEAKNESS IF DRAWN INTO LEAGUE CONFLICT

Action by League Against Aggressor Nation Involves All Members, Stresemann Writes.

GERMANY DISARMED.

Would be Dependent on the League for Protection; But No Guarantee is Provided.

GENEVA, Dec. 23.—Opening up the whole problem of German armaments, Germany has sent a note to the league of nations touching the question of Germany joining the league. In the note the Berlin government declares its view that if international conflicts arise Germany should remain absolutely free under the league covenant to determine how far she would take an active part in such conflicts.

The text of the note, which was published by the league secretariat last night, shows that Germany desires an exceptional position as a member of the league, because of her lack of armed strength, though she denies any intention of asking for special privileges. Germany maintains that if she is obliged to participate in all of the league military sanctions she would be compelled to waive her right to neutrality—"the last defense of a disarmed people".

The reaction in league circles to the German note, which the Berlin government also transmitted to all the governments represented in the council, is that it will be certain to necessitate lengthy negotiations with the powers and presumably delay the date when Germany will formally apply for admission to the league, if she ever does. It inevitably links the league question with the general problem of inter-allied control and future investigations of German armaments which may be carried on by the league, the nature of which the council now is endeavoring to define.

Written by Stresemann

Dr. Gustave Stresemann the foreign minister, himself penned the note, which forms the second chapter of the negotiations inaugurated when Germany despatched her first communication on the same subject direct to all the powers having seats in the council.

Dr. Stresemann began by saying that the German government is of the opinion that political developments during the past year have rendered it possible for Germany to join the league. He then gave an outline of the first note to the powers and explained that its object was to ascertain the attitude of the powers with regard to Germany becoming a member of the league council and also with reference to Germany's participation in the sanctions provided for by Article 16 of the covenant.

The foreign minister remarked that the replies received justified the conclusion that Germanys' wish to have a seat in the council was being favorably considered, but that the replies concerning the operation of Article 16 of the covenant had not yet led to a satisfactory conclusion. Germany was desirous of finding a way out of the difficulties in which, on account of her peculiar territorial situation she might become involved by the application of this article.

Dr. Stresemann declared in the note that Germany's apprehensions seemed to be not sufficiently appreciated by the powers; hence Germany had no other alternative than to submit the problem to the league itself in the hope that the league would arrange immediately for a discussion of the subject.

Become Belligerents

The German position is outlined in the note, which says that Article 16 regulating the procedure to be adopted against a covenant-breaking state in the event of violation of peace, binds the league members to conomic and military measures such as in general have heretofore implied a state of war. States participating in such measures must expect to be treated as belligerents by the

NEW WINTER RECORD.

St. Lawrence River Frozen From Montreal to Three Rivers.

MONTREAL, Dec. 23. — Constituting what is believed to be an unprecedented record, the St. Lawrence River was reported yesterday to be solidly frozen from Montreal to Three Rivers. This has never occurred in the month of December before, it was pointed out by local Harbor officials.

Below Three Rivers and on to Quebec, However, the river is still navigable.

AGENTS PROMOTING CANADIAN TRADE

Men of Special Type and Linguistic Ability Are Needed.

OTTAWA, Dec 23.—"We do not spend one dollar where the United States spends $1,000 in promoting export trade," declared F. C. T. O'Hara, Deputy Minister of Trade and Commerce, in an address before the Rotary Club Monday.

Mr. O'Hara described how the Commercial Intelligence Service of the department had been developed and now encircles the world. He outlined the training necessary for successful trade commissioners and scouted the idea which, some people promulgated, that successful business men were the type that should be engaged by the department for such service.

The speaker gave some figures showing large contracts secured to Canada for the supply of Canadian products through the medium of the trade commissioners. He demonstrated also the necessity of linguistic abilities on the part of these commissioners, and other qualifications that a business man, after years of success in his line, could hardly be expected to acquire.

A CHRISTMAS TREE.

St. Anthony's Sewing Circle Provided a Good Programme.

The annual Christmas entertainment given by St. Anthony's Sewing Circle of the Sacred Heart Church for the children of St. Vincent's Orphanage was held last evening in the basement of the church, when the little boys of the Orphanage were entertained in jolly fashion with a big Christmas tree and an attendant Santa Claus, who dispensed candy and toys to every child. The Orphanage children and children from the Sacred Heart School took part in the programme, which included recitations by Olive Chouinard, Madeline Curtin, Irene Hourigan, Marjorie Hallahan and Dick McCarthy; songs by Margaret McCarthy, Helen O'Toole, Joseph O'Keefe, Francis Blair, Vincent Collett, James Allen, Albert Allen, Alphonse Hanrahan, Leo Hanrahan and Reginald Knott. Five little boys from the Orphanage sang an "Adeste Fidelis" very prettily, and two choruses of school also rendered vocal numbers. Madeline Curtin gave a dance, and Miss Minnie Allen a vocal solo. Accompanists for the choruses and vocal selections were Miss Ethel Armstrong and Miss Helen Grady.

TWO HURT IN FALL.

T. C. S. Student Slipped With Little Sister in His Arms.

KINGSTON, Dec. 23.—Theodore Dumoulin of Trinity College School, Port Hope, who is spending the Christmas holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Dumoulin had the misfortune to fall Monday as he was carrying his little sister "Philly Anne" from the dining room with the result that he broke his left arm and she her right ankle.

NO ROMANCE IN LIFE ON OCEAN

Captain Sir Bertram Hayes Starting Last Journey Found Hard Work.

WAS KNIGHTED.

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—From apprentice boy on a three-masted sailing ship to knighted commodore of the White Star Line is the "success story" Sir Bertram Hays will have written when he retires after 44 years at sea, once the liner Majestic docks at Liverpool.

There has been "more hard work than romance" he asserts—which recalls the lines of Emerson to the effect that "there is romance on every ship but the one you are sailing."

A check of his record points, however, to a most romantic career:

Beginning as a poor lad, he learned his sea trade in short order and within half a year was fourth officer of a ship piying between New Zealand and San Francisco. His first command was the famous old Britannic. In this ship he carried troops to the Boer War and won the King's medal.

He directed the rescue of the crew of the wrecked Norwegian tanker Halios and won another medal. During the war he took three troop ships with 200,000 men through the Dardenelles without a single loss of life and, after the war, was knighted. On one of his trips his ship, the Olympic, sunk two German divers.

But that's all in a day's work, he says. No romance!

So he hopes to find a little romance on dry land now that he's quitting at the age of 60.

For he has never married.

"A sea-faring man has no business to marry," he asserts. "It isn't fair to the woman."

POLITICAL FAILURES ARE PENALIZED

LONDON, Dec. 23.—(Associated Press).—The British treasury will benefit to the extent of nearly $50,000 because each of 64 candidates at the recent general election failed to secure one-eighth of the votes polled in their divisions. The law decrees that where a candidate fails to obtain one-eighth of the votes recorded, he forfeits his deposit of $750..

London Papers Report Plans by Baldwin to Discriminate Against Foreign Meat.

HAS THE POWER.

Would be Discordant Note at Time of Prince of Wales' Visit.

LONDON, Dec. 23.—(Canadian Press).— An evening newspaper yesterday gave currency to a report that the Baldwin government, in its anxiety to promote the policy of imperial preference, had decided upon a plan to discriminate against foreign meat in favor of supplies from the Dominion.

According to authoritative information this report is at least premature. Doubtless the plan proposed by A. R. Hassan, resident representative of the Australia meat council, to have Australia take from South America the position of chief meat producing country of the world together with many other schemes having the aim to attain Mr. Baldwins desire to give the Dominions preference without imposing direct food taxes, have been under consideration by the cabinet and the board of trade. But as far as is known no decision has been reached.

The same ideas had been suggested to the late McDonald government and had been under consideration by Former Colonial Secretary Thomas; and it may be taken for granted that considerable pressure will be brought to bear on behalf ot the Australian government, which is anxious to stimulate its meat exports.

Large Subvention.

Premier Baldwin in his recent vague outline of the government's intentions for reversing the policy of the MacDonald government, indicated that meat and fruits would have primary attention from his government. He suggested that £1,000,000 annually would be devoted to stimulating Dominion exports to Britain ,in lieu of the preference the dominions would have received through the preference taxes Mr. Baldwin's previous administration had intended to impose on the behest of the last Imperial conference.

It was generally supposed this sum was to be utilized in assisting shippers to bring their produce to Britain, and the idea was attributed to Winston Spencer Churchill, the chancellor of the exchequer who always has professed free trade principles and therefore would oppose taxes on food.

There are many weighty matters requiring consideration before such a far-reaching plan as that of Mr. Hassan could be adopted. In the first place it could not be carried out without fresh legislation and although Mr. Baldwin, with his present big majority in Commons, certainly could carry such a measure, it nevertheless would mean great opposition in parliament.

Injury To Argentina.

Then there has to be considered the fact that Argentina sends meat to the value of about £5,000,000 annually to England. This extensive importation of meat from Argentina is largely offset by the exportation of British goods to the South American Republic, and at the moment when the coming visit of the Prince of Wales to Argentina turns the minds of both countries to further fostering reciprocal trade, it hardly seems the ideal time, in the opinion of some observers, to propose a plan which would so injuriously affect Argentine interests.

At the same time there exists here a strong feeling against alleged foreign meat trusts and a desire to make the Empire self-supporting in food supplies; and it is considered not impossible that some modified plan may be proopsed. It is probable, however, that nothing will be decided upon until parliament meets next February.

VIENNA CROWD DEMANDS DOLES

Unemployed Ridden Down By Mounted Police—Government Grants Ten Billion Kronen.

MANY OUT OF WORK.

VIENNA, Dec. 23.—(Canadian Press).—Five thousand mounted and foot police patrolled the streets from early Monday morning until late last night to prevent rioting by the unemployed. The unemployed, aggregating 20 per cent. of all branches of organized labor, passed a resolution which declared that if doles were not increased in time for them to make Christmas purchases they would spoil the fun for everyone else. Police President Shober, therefore, forbade all demonstrations. Nevertheless, bands of the unemployed repeated the march on the City Hall yesterday morning to hold meetings. Attempts to break through the police cordon proved a failure, and many of the unemployed were ridden down by the mounted police. Fifteen leaders of the demonstrators were arrested.

As further attempts at rowdyism were feared, a portion of the police force remained on duty throughout the night, and during the next three days the city will be heavily patrolled.

In order to alleviate hardships among the men who are out of work and in an endeavour to prevent any trouble, the Government has voted ten billion kronen for immediate distribution among the most needy families.

ANOTHER EGG RECORD CLAIMED

This hen was entered in the recent laying contest conducted by Washington State College. It laid 300 eggs in a year.

MAYOR WENT VISITING.

His Worship Pays a Pre-Christmas Call at Hospitals and Institutions.

His Worship Mayor Turner went visiting yesterday. He began by calling on a number of citizens who have been shut up for months because of sickness, and continued with visits to the superintendent and nursing staff of the Isolation Hospital, the Protestant Home and Nicholls Hospital.

These visits occupied the whole afternoon, and were enjoyed alike by His Worship and by the friends he met on the tour.

MAYOR TURNER IS RE-ELECTED BY ACCLAMATION

A. A. McIntyre, nominated by G. H. Savigny and J. Chambers.

Board of Education.

J. F. Strickland, nominated by W. R. Morris and J. H. Spence.

Roland Denne, nominated by E. B. Fowler and W. H. Bradburn.

J. M. Greene, nominated by R. Denne and W. G. Morrow.

Ernest F. Reid, nominated by J. H. Spence and R. Denne.

John A. McKone, nominated by G. L. Hay and R. Denne.

Wm. R. Turner, Jr., nominated by R. Denne and J. J. Hartley.

Dr. G. Raymore Scott, nominated by G. N. Gordon, K.C., M. P., and W. H. Bradburn, M. P.P.

A. A. Fowler, nominated by Walter Stocker and E. F. Mason.

The above nominations were made at 10 o'clock this morning before a sparse audience in the Council Chamber. The members whose terms expire this year and who are eligible for re-election are: W. H. Bradburn, of the Utilities Commission; J. M. Greene, chairman of the Board of Education; Roland Denne, John A. McKone and A. A. Fowler, members of the Board of Education.

All the nominees have until nine o'clock to-morrow night to file their qualifications.

Mayor Returns Thanks.

His Worship Mayor Turner, who has been returned for a second term without opposition, and will be given an opportunity in 1925 to complete the work he has so auspiciously started in 1924, told in a few well chosen words the history of the council's year. He thanked W. G. Morrow and J. J. Hartley, who had placed his name again before the electorate, and expressed his appreciation of the honor shown by his acclamation.

"The year 1924," he said, "has not been a spectacular one. We have simply carried on in a faithful, efficient manner, and we will complete the year within our estimates.

"We are all anxious that the city shall prosper and grow. This depends upon trade from the outside farm district and upon industries coming into the city, and in these things the City Council has lent all the encouragement in its power."

Remarking that because Canada has been financing itself on account of the discount on foreign money there has not been the free investment here that is necessary to booming prosperity, His Worship expressed the hope that this may soon change. Locally, the extension made by the Canadian General Electric Company is not the end of the expectations, since it is anticipated that all activities in Canada of this concern may be centred in Peterborough. "We feel that this beginning of their building campaign may lead them to make further extensions here."

While 1924 has not been as prosperous as might be wished, yet His Worship considered Peterborough in better condition as regards unemployment than other cities. At present, he pointed out, there is less than half of one per cent on the unemployed list. "We should be thankful that the city is in as prosperous a condition as it is, I believe the turn of the tide will come in the near future. Large corporations are spending money on extensions and expansion in machinery and plants, indicating a spirit of optimism and preparedness for business expansion."

In conclusion, His Worship said the City Council of 1924 had striven to give faithful and efficient service, and personally he would continue his efforts in 1925.

W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P., member of the Utilities Commission and again nominated for that position, thanked W. G. Morrow and J. J.

HOLIDAYS HIT DOWNING STREET

Premier Baldwin Leads Exodus to Country Homes—Fires of State Are Banked.

ROYALTY, TOO.

LONDON, December 23. — There was an exodus on Monday of statesmen and political leaders who have gone to their country homes for the Christmas holidays. Their Majesties the King and Queen left for Sandringham, where they will remain for seven weeks, unless urgent business requires their return earlier.

Premier Stanley Baldwin has left Downing street for his home in Worcestershire, but he will return on December 29th, for a few days, in order to clear up any emergency business. David Lloyd George has gone to Criccieth, Wales.

The great majority of the government departments will close on Wednesday until next week. A few officials in the Ministry of Agriculture will remain at work in view of the possible outbreak of disease among the livestock, and a small Foreign Office staff will remain on duty as usual.

The law courts rose on Friday last till January 12th, an unusual exception being the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council which assembled for 30 minutes yesterday in order to clear off the appeal of the Lord's day Alliance of Canada, in connection with Sunday trains in Manitoba, and a number of other judgments, which were outstanding.

Several of the law lords who devote themselves mostly to the work of the judicial committee, possess estates in Scotland, and it is the practice of this body to defer reassembling until well towards the reopening of parliament, so that their sitting on Monday will not deprive them of a longer holiday than other legislators.

SPANISH COUNT TRAILS WRITER SEEKING FIGHT

Former Minister of War Demands Satisfaction From Ibanez Now in France.

ALLEGES INSULT.

Viscount D'Eza Wants Apology For Reference to Him in Recent Pamphlet.

PARIS, Dec. 23.—Viscount D'Eza former Spanish minister of war, has arrived in Paris for the expressed purpose of obtaining an apology, or satisfaction from Vicente Vlasco Ibanez, the author, for what the statesman considers an insulting reference regarding him in the writer's manifesto against King Alfonso and the military directorate. The manifesto is entitled "Alfonso unmasked."

The Viscount's present plans, it is said, are to publish an article in Le Figaro calling upon Ibanez to make a retraction. In the event the author declines to do so, the viscount's friends say he is prepared to seek out Ibanez in his retreat at Mentone and publicly challenge him to a duel. The portion of the manifesto to which the former minister of war particularly objects states:—

"A letter is alleged to have been written by King Alfonso to General Silvestre, commanding the troops in Morrocco, saying:—'Do as I tell you. Don't mind the minister of war. He is an imbecile.' "

Avoided Alfonso.

The author then explains in his pamphlet that Viscount D'Eza, who was minister of war at the time, did not see the king for months as he did not wish to be forced to salute him.

Ibanez' attacks on King Alfonso and other public personages is said to have stirred much resentment in Spain. It is expected that the writer will find himself the recipient of many challenges to the field of honor. One of these has already been sent by Benigno Varela, editor of the Madrid Royalist newspaper La Monarquia, who announced his intention of coming to France to "pull Ibanez' ears.

As the Spanish directorate is understood to be anxious to prevent anyone creating incidents in France, it is thought that Editor Varels probably will be refused passports, as was the case when General Aguilers and General Aizpuru, both former heads of the Spanish war ministry, attempted to visit France for the same reason. Both Aguilers and Aizpuru were severely taken to task in the Ibanez pamphlet.

EXAMINER HAS A LARGE COLLECTION LOST ARTICLES WAITING FOR OWNERS

If You Have Lost Anything Within the Last Year or Two You May Find It in The Examiner's Collection of Unclaimed Articles.

The Examiner would be pleased to start the New Year with a general cleaning up of the collection of lost and strayed articles that form a portion of its impedimenta at the present moment. The list, which has a wide range, and for which there must be owners somewhere in the city, includes, such things as car cranks, numerous keys, small pieces of jewellery, purses, gloves and fur gauntlets, a small fur piece and several carrying bags.

AN INSURANCE CO. SEEKS PROTECTION

Fish Creek Murder Case Turned Out to be Very Unique.

REGINA, Sask., Dec. 23.—(Canadian Press). — A Saskatchewan legal firm acting for a firm of Toronto lawyers has been given permission by Mr. Justic Taylor to serve papers upon Mrs. Atrina Trasch at present serving life imprionment for the murder of her husband Jack Trasch, by feeding him gopher poison at Fish Creek on Oct. 9 1923. The papers are to prove that the woman is undergoing life imprisonment and concerning an insurance policy of $1,000 which the dead man willed to the wife who slew him. As there are children concerned the Insurance company wishes to make sure that in the event of Mrs. Trasch being paroled she will not have any further claim upon them if they pay the money into the estate for the benefit of the children. It is further asked that Saskatchewan court legalize payment into estate and that the woman sign a quit claim. The case is unique in Canada in that the murdered man had willed the money and the company made no demur at paying the claim, merely asking that they be protected against payment of more than the one policy.

KINGSTON TO PROVIDE WORK FOR UNEMPLOYED

One of the City's Stone Quarries Will be Opened Up.

KINGSTON, Dec. 23.—(Special).—In order to help out the unemployment situation, the City Council has decided to open one of its stone quarries and pay the men at the rate of $1.75 per cubic yard for the crack ed stone. A man can turn out a yard every day.

The City Council gave the final reading to the by-law ratified by the electors at the recent elections to expend $35,000 in the fitting up of the old Milk Trust building for a library. This building was donated to the city by the late G. Y. Chown for library purposes.

The City Council will provide electric lights free of charge to all the vessels laid up at this port this winter. A great deal of repair work will be carried out on the vessels and the work will help out the unemployment situation. The Council expressed its approval of the plan set forth by the City Council at London to have the various municipalities wait on the Federal and Provincial Governments to ask for help for the unemployed.

VOTE ON CHURCH UNION.

First Vote in Saskatchewan Resulted in 68 to 1 Against Union.

REGINA, Dec. 23. — (Canadian Press).—The first vote on the Church Union question in Southern Saskatchewan taken at the Assiniboia Presbyterian Church last night, resulted in 68 members of the congregation voting against the church entering the Union and one voting for the Union, according to a telephone message received by the Regina branch of the Presbyterian Church Association.

SPECIAL PRIZES FOR CHRISTMAS CARNIVAL.

Special prizes at the Christmas Carnival held under the auspices of the Catholic Women's League in St. Alphonsus' Lyceum last week were won as follows: Bridge lamp, Mrs. C. H. Pennefather; ivory crucifix, Miss Clothilde Boland; two five-lb. boxes of candy, Mrs. C. Brisbois and Mr. James MacPherson. The doll's name was not guessed and the doll was drawn for and fell to the lot of Rev. J. McAuley, Ennismore.

LAST ROUND IN KID McCOY MURDER CASE

Former Boxer Says Mrs. Mors Took Her Own Life.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 23.—(Canadian Press).—Kid McCoy entered the court to-day to witness the last round of his fight for freedom, the final arguments of counsel for the former boxer, who is charged with the murdering of Mrs. Theresa Mors, divorced wife of a wealthy antique dealer.

His story that Mrs. Mors committed suicide in an apartment they occupied was uncontradicted by evidence, and his attorney yesterday began trying to erase from the minds of the juniors any unpleasant picture left there by the prosecution.

CAVAN ELECTIONS.

May be a Contest for the Reeveship—Lumber Camps Open.

CAVAN, December 23. — A contest is in prospect for the municipal elections. J. McCamus and R. Robinson may be out for the reeveship and Messrs. G. Hooton, S. Fallis and H. Elson will likely contest the deputy reeveship.

Wood Cutters Out.

The woodcutters are busy in this district. Mr. W. Cody has bought some more acreage thickly wooded with pine and spruce. In his camp on the Kelly property the lumbermen are at work but the sawing will not commence until later on.

Mr. L. Graham, of Blackstock, moved his engine to Cody's camp on Thursday. It will be ready for sawing early in the New Year. Most of the men intend going to their homes to spend Christmas.

FIND MANGLED BODY.

Compare Finger Prints With Those of Missing American.

PARIS, Dec. 23.—(United Press).—Finger-prints taken in the room of the Hotel Haussman, from which an American, George K. McFillan, has been missing since December 15, were compared this afternoon with those from the fragments of hands of a dissected body found scattered in paper parcels through the Apache quarter last week.

Jack Bloom, proprietor of the hotel, who is also an American, said McFillan is claimed to be a "brother-in-law of the Mayor of Philadelphia.

"I fear the parts of the body found may be his," Bloom said today.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.

Vice-President and Treasurer of Massachusetts Street Railway Cut Veins in Arm.

BOSTON, Dec. 23. — (Canadian Press).—Caleb S. Jackson, vice-president and treasurer of the Western Massachusetts Street Railway Company, and of the Insurance Company which it formed to handle its workmen's insurance business, attempted suicide early to-day after an announcement that he had resigned because of improper disposition of $48,000 of insurance funds. A note which he left to his sister, Mrs. Mable Dresser, who shared the apartment in which he tried to kill himself, said he had ruined himself.

Jackson slashed the veins in his arm with a razor after turning on the gas from a jet. Doctors say he will recover.

TOWN COUNCIL CAMPBELLFORD HELD MEETING

Mr. E. Nancarrow Gets Contract for Scales at the Station—Question of War Memorial.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 23.—A special meeting of the Campbellford Town Council was held last evening in the Clerk's Office. There were two special matters to be brought up: one the passing of the debenture by-law and the other the opening of tenders for the town scales at the station.

Members present: Mayor A. J. Meyers, Reeve Davidson, Deputy-Reeve Dorie. Councillors Cole, Johnston, McDonald and Redden.

The Mayor informed the Council that the passing of the debenture by-law could not be brought up until after the Court of Revision.

The Clerk read the report of R. W. Scott regarding the extra light near Mrs. Lazenby's residence. He recommended that a light be put in for that purpose, but it would have to be put on private property.

Moved by Deputy Reeve Dorie and seconded by Councillor McDonald, that Mr. Scott's report be accepted. Carried.

There were two tenders for the scales, one from Geo. E. Farrill for two hundred and fifteen dollars, and the other from Ed. Nancarrow at one hundred and ninety-two dollars.

Moved and seconded by Reeve Davidson and Councillor Johnston, that Mr. Nancarrow's tender be accepted. Carried.

Reeve Davidson said they had tried new hands at the scales before and there had been dissatisfaction.

In reference to the frontage of a lot on Rear Street as brought in by the assessor to be only sixty feet, it was decided to leave the matter to the Court of Revision.

The Mayor brought up the matter of the motion concerning the repairing of the bridge which had been acted upon at the last session of the Council. He said the motion was not in order, according to the agreement between the Town of Campbellford and the Counties of Northumberland and Durham, made the 27th day of April, 1906, when it was provided that the town was to pay 25 per cent. of the maintenance of the bridge, and that according to the statute the motion would have to be revised.

It was moved by Reeve Davidson and seconded by Deputy Reeve Dorie, that the town of Campbellford pay this year 15 per cent. of the total cost of repairing during the year 1924, the highway bridge over the Trent River on Bridge Street, Campbellford, or the amount of $1,461.00, and at the same time give a guarantee to the Council of the Counties of Northumberland and Durham to the effect that whatever balance for the repairing of the said bridge in the said year is due under the terms of the agreement between the Town of Campbellford and the Counties of Northumberland and Durham, as set forth in the Act of Incorporation of the Town of Campbellford, passed the 27th day of April, 1906 (Statutes of Ontario 6, Edward VII., 1906, Chapter 66), the said balance will be paid in the year 1925; it being understood that in the event of the Counties of Northumberland and Durham receiving from the Provincial Government 40 per cent. of the total cost of repairing the bridge, no further payment over and above the 15 per cent. or $1,461 mentioned above, will be required of the Town of Campbellford. Carried.

A War Memorial.

Councillor Kingston's motion of which he gave notice last meeting, was amended, and the two following questions submitted: First—Are you in favor of a war memorial in the form of a monument. Second—Are you in favor of a war memorial in the form of a building.

Moved and seconded by Councillors Cole and Redden, that these two questions be submitted to the people at the municipal elections held on January 5, 1925. Carried.

The Mayor read a letter he had received to the effect that the sewer work on Kent and Napier Streets be stopped. The chairman of the Roads and Bridge Committee said that the Engineer had ordered the work stopped on account of the weather.

There was a heated discussion about the filling in of Mr. Bell's lot on Queen street, just opposite Napier street, where the town has a right of way for the sewer. Councillor Redden took great exception to the filling in being done.

The mayor endeavored to get him to see that the chairman whom the council had put in with power to look after such things, with the road foreman, had agreed to leave Mr. Bell's lot as it should be.

After considerable discussion Councillor McDonald moved and Councillor Johnston seconded, that no further work be done on this property this winter but that the filling in of the lot be left until spring.

Councillor Redden asked for a record of the votes: Yeas: Mayor Meyers, Reeve Davidson, Deputy Reeve Dorie; Councillors McDonald, Johnston, Cole. Nay: Councillor Redden.

The motion carried 6 to 1.

A petition was read from property owners on Kent street and Napier street requesting that the work of the sewers and water mains be left over until spring and no more be done this winter.

Moved and seconded by Reeve Davidson and Councillor McDonald that just the work begun on Napier street be completed at once to the corner of Kent and Napier street and that on Kent street be suspended this season. Carried.

On motion the council then adjourned.

Firemen Had a Late Run For a Chimney Fire.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 23.—The firemen were called out on Saturday night before the stores closed for a call in Ward Three, but it proved to be only a burning chimney at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Snelling, Garry street.

The Duchess of Clarence L.L.T. B. No. 429, held their election of officers on Tuesday. The following officers were elected for the coming year,—

Mrs. G. Phillips, W.N.; Mrs. Alfred Tripp, D.M.; Mrs. W. Ayrhart, Secretary, Mrs. W. Rutherford, Treasurer, Mrs. G. Webber, chaplain Mrs. H. Mack, Dir. Miss B. Ayrhart, Con.; Mrs. E. Wilson I.T., Mrs. F. Clarke, O. T. Committee—Mrs. J. Ibey, Mrs. B. Ibey Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. A. Mills, Mrs. J. Potts. Auditors— Miss B. Ayrhart and Miss Olive Tripp.

Miss Pauline Peake, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Peake, Garry street, was married on Thursday, December 11th., 1924, to Mr. Eldon Perrie of Havelock. They were married at Havelock at the Rectory by the rector of the Anglican church. They will reside in Havelock.

The Christmas services of St. Andrew's Church, Campbellford, under the direction of Mr. Wm. Pearson, A.L.C.M. the organist and choir leader were beautifully rendered by the choir both morning and evening.

The morning service Miss Emma Meiklejohn sang very sweetly the song "The Gift". The choir with organ obligato, sang Gounod's "Nativity Hymn" and the newly organized Junior Girl's choir, rendered very prettily, the carol. "Away in a Manger", with the choir taking up chorus.

At the evening service the Christmas Cantata, "The Nativity of Christ" was sung. The solos being taken by Mrs. De Carroll, Miss Hazel Atkinson, Miss Kathleen Connor, Messrs. Walter Henson and A. M. Rollo, who all took their parts well. The carol "We three Kings of Orient are' 'was also given, the parts being taken by Messrs. W. Henson E. Henson and A. M. Rollo.. General satisfaction was expressed and the choir deserved the highest praise for the interpretation of the cantata.

The cantata was remarkably well sung.

A carol service will be given next Sunday, December 28th, by the choir, assisted by the junior girls' choir.

Major Bygott, local station agent, has been very ill since Friday morning, and there was no change for the better on Monday afternoon. He has had hiccoughs ever since Friday, and the doctor finds it impossible to get them stopped. His many friends hope for a speedy recovery.

IN MILLBROOK AND DISTRICT

MILLBROOK, Dec. 23.—The main feature of the programme in the Continuation School, given under the auspices of the literary society, Ernest Burnham, president, in the chair was a debate, "Resolved that more pleasure is derived from summer sports than from winter spots."

Agnes Breckenridge and Jack Byam upheld the affirmative, and Marie Kenyon and Phyllis Brown advanced the arguments for the negative. The judges were Miss K. Sutton, neutral, Etta Peel for First Form; and Elizabeth for Second Form. The affirmative won by one point.

A piano solo by Mabel McCarthy was much enjoyed, and "Santa Claus", (George Elson), well disguised in the regulation costume of red and white, with many joking remarks, distributed the gifts from the tree.. The plan followed in each room was to have each scholar draw the name of some other, for whom he or she must put a present on the tree, so that none were overlooked.

A treat of candy and apples was passed around, and a very pleasant afternoon soon afterwards brought to a close.

Miss Isabel Handley, principal of the public school, had a tree and short programme for her scholars, and as in the case of the other room, McConnachie were visitors to Peteach pupil, the teacher herself, being also the recipient of some token of regard.

St. Thomas Church.

The A.Y.P.A. of St. Thomas church held its regular business and social meeting on Thursday evening, the president, Mr. R. Stone, occupying the chair.

An interesting and instructive debate, "Resolved that Canada is of more importance to the Empire than Australia", was the main item on the programme, the affirmative being ably upheld by Misses Gertrude Gray and Pearl Lamb, while Messrs. A. H. Barnes and Allen Pitt, were equally enthusiastic in contending for the negative.

The judges were Mrs. J. Arthur Vance, and Mr. A. A.. Smith. After due consideration decision was made in favor of the affirmative, a considerable margin of points being to their credit.

The district series of debates has not yet begun for this season but arrangements will be completed there for early in January when the district council holds its next session. The Millbrook branch won the cup last year, defeating the A.Y.P.A. of St. John's church, Peterboro, in the contest for final honors. The cup must be won three years in succession to become the permament property of any one branch.

The new daily 36 1-4 hour Toronto to Winnipeg service just inaugurated by the Canadian Pacific Railway not only establishes a record in fast, convenient transportation but provides the traveller with a feature service to Fort William from both Toronto and Winnipeg inasmuch as the Winnipeg Special leaving Toronto at 9.45 p.m. every night and arriving in Sudbury at 5.30 a.m. arrives in Fort William at 11.00 p.m., leaving there 15 minutes later and arriving in Winnipeg at 9.00 a.m.

Returning, the "Toronto-Montreal Special" leaves Winnipeg at 7.00 p.m. ,arriving in Fort William at 6.40 a.m., leaving 15 minutes later, arriving in Sudbury at 1.05 a.m. and in Toronto at the convenient hour of 8.35 a.m.

Direct connections are made by travellers from Winnipeg for all main points in Ontario, Quebec and East, which will receive the serious consideration of those who desire efficient service. Dominion Express shipments are delivered hours earlier which is also a feature.

The most modern equipment, including standard and compartment sleepers, dining and compartment-observation cars, are carried which, with the reduction in the running time and the courteous, efficient service by all employees, makes this new service pre-eminent as the last word in transportation.

Secure further information, tickets, reservations, etc., from J. Skinner, C.P.A., 343 George street. 23d-154.

LAKEFIELD BAZAAR WAS BIG SUCCESS

Social Events in the Town and District—Annual Meeting.

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 22. — The annual bazaar held here under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid of the Methodist church was a success financially and also as a pleasant social gathering. The Ladies' Aid are noted for their original scheme of decoration and this year was fully up to previous years which says a great deal. Every booth was in charge of a capable corps of workers and the wares were attractive and moderately priced. Miss Nellie Webster, president of the Ladies' Aid, was convenor of the central committee.

Mrs. C. S. Reddick and Mrs. Nugent were the reception committee and accorded a hearty welcome to the visitors, most of whom (as is usual at functions of this sort) were ladies. The fancy articles, so dear to the feminine heart, were displayed in a booth decorated in violet and white and those in charge were Mesdames W. H. Stabler, Theo Crawford, D. H. McMillan, Mrs. R. Simpson, Mrs. W. A. Nixon, and Miss Milburn.

The aprons which were of every description from "jazzy" little tea aprons to the homely but useful and practical "all over," were in a booth in which the color scheme was white and gold and decorated with dozens of butterflies of varying sizes. It was suggestive of August with birds singing and butterflies flying lazily about. Mrs. Walter Hamblin was convenor of this booth and was assisted by Mrs. Harry Dunsford, Mrs. P. Spence, Mrs. G. A. Welbourne, Mrs. P. Scriver.

Another violet and white booth had a display of handkerchiefs of the daintiest varieties suggestive of good times and holiday gifts. Mrs. A. D. Payne and Mrs. McConkey were in charge.

The home cooking table had a large variety of cakes, pies, tarts, cookies, fruit, pickles and a number of beautiful vegetables, the color scheme was scarlet and white, with evergreens and was suggestive of the festive Christmas season; Mrs. S. Pearson, Mrs. Purdy and Mrs. James Northey were in charge.

The woollen goods were sold from an old fashioned red brick cottage with snow covered roof and a chimney which was surely meant for Santa's entry. Dainty baby things, the fashionable "golliwogs," children's mits and caps and every variety of wool garment known to the devotee of the knitting needles and crochet hook were on view and sold rapidly. Mrs. S. S. Spence, Mrs. Frank Darling, Mrs. Harry Scriver and Mrs. Murphy were in charge.

The yellow, green and white section devoted to the sweets, comprising all the known varieties of homemade candy had a dainty setting for the attractive wares, Mesdames F. G. Erskine, J. H. Payne, Albert Darling and R. N. Little were in charge.

The Japanese tea room, which occupied a large section in the centre of the room, was exceedingly pretty with pink and mauve prettily blended, in the color scheme, Japanese lanterns were used extensively in the decoration and at the entrance was a miniature tea house in which a pretty maid of old Japan (Mrs. H. R. Wagar) received the money. Mrs. Chas. Grylls and Mrs. Nathan Payne poured tea and Mesdames Geo. Spence, W. W. Leonard, Grant, A. Carveth, James Millar and Miss Grylls served the tables

During the tea hour Mrs. Reddick and Mrs. Warren Payne provided music which was much appreciated.

Others assisting were: Mrs. T. T. Milburn and Mrs. F. H. Richardson.

During the afternoon the hall was thronged with people who were most appreciative.

Presbyterian Church.

The annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Presbyterian church was held on Tuesday afternoon in the school room of the church. Owing to the counter attractions the attendance was not as large as was desired. The following officers were elected:

President—Mrs. P. L. Jull.

Vice-Presidents—Mrs. P. Baptie, Mrs. Thos. Hendren and Mrs. J. H. Chant.

Secretary—Mrs. J. C. Smith.

Treasurer—Mrs. H. J. Sutton.

Home Helpers' Secretary— Miss Cullen.

Roll Call Secretary—Miss Bella Adams.

Supt. Mission Band—Mrs. Dever.

Convenor Programme Committee—Mrs. J. A. Porter.

Finance Committee— Mrs. Chas. Chas. Thomson (convenor), Mrs. Sutton, Mrs. Charlton and Mrs. Lake.

Messenger Secretary—Mrs. Burgess.

The secretary, Mrs. J. C. Smith, read the following report for the year 1924:

During the year 1924 the Auxiliary held ten regular meetings, the last day of meeting being the last Tuesday of each month. The Study Book for the year was "The Island Beautiful," which dealt with the work of the late George Leslie Mackay of Formosa and was interesting and helpful to all.

The number of members on the roll for the year was 47 and the average attendance 10.

In March the society held their annual quilting and five completed quilts were sent in the bale for the File Hills school. The clothing for the boy who is clothed by the society was sent in the bale which was shipped early in September.

In June about a dozen members went to Norwood to attend the meeting of the Presbyterial.

In September an afternoon tea was held at the home of Mrs. H. J. Sutton, at which a silver collection was taken for the expense fund need to supply the boy's outfit.

In November the annual Thank offering meeting was held, and this year it took the form of a Jubilee Thank offering which was fittingly celebrated. Mrs. Porter gave a brief and interesting account of the society and its work for the past fifty years and Mrs. Mackenzie, one of the viec-presidents of the Presbyterial, gave an interesting and helpful address on the Mission work from the earliest years.

During the year the society one "In Memorian" certificate and one Life Membership, the former in memory of Mrs. David Smith of Calgary, formerly of Lakefield, and the latter from Mrs. Porter, of the local branch. The Society thankfully reports no deaths or removals during the past year. They also gratefully acknowledge the help of those who have in any way assisted them in the very important work in which they are engaged.

There was a great deal of gratification among the members over the very successful year.

NEWS BETHANY AND DISTRICT

Closing of Schools Marked by Festivities—Examination Results.

BETHANY, Dec. 23.—The Senior pupils of the local school S.S. No. 15, held a short entertainment in the school room on Friday afternoon it being closing day till after Christmas. The parents and others took advantage of the treat and a most enjoyable hour was spent. Mrs. I. Carscadden teacher, deserves credit for the training and the splendid manner in which the pupils took part. Mrs. Carscadden acted as chairman and after giving an outline on school activities welcomed the parents and others to the school and asked their cooperation in anything that would assist in the advancement of the children.

A very entertaining programme was then indulged in, consisting of songs speeches, drills and a short play entitled: "Little Bo Peep's party." The Chairman then had Santa Claus, who was a guest of the party to distribute a small gift to each of her pupils and when the festivities were at an end, Miss Winnie Dawe read a short address and Miss Marion Fallis presented a gift from the school to Mrs. Carscadden. The junior room held their entertainment in the forenoon and a happy time was spent among the junior pupils. Miss Olive Nelson, teacher, presented each of her pupils with a Christmas rememberance and the Wee Ones did not forget to present their teacher with a gift.

Senior IV. Possible 750.

Winnie Dawe	619
Doris Driver	587
Willie Martin	571
Russell Card	531
Marion Fallis	513
Hilliard Davis	500
Carl Smith	391

Junior IV.

Eric Porteous	582
Clayton Card	576
Fred Sawyer	486
Margaret Jackson	455
Winifred Stuart	453
Everett Dawe	427
Carl Porteous	423
Murray Price	394
Francis Fallis	373

Junior III. Possible 550.

Victor Shepherd	465
Aleta Challice	397
Pauline Darroch	397
Leone Dawe	396
James Lemmon	393
Jean Spencley	382
Pearl Swanson	364
Helen Crerar	346
Kenneth Thorndyke	315
Bruce Smith	296
Hazel Fallis	291
Morgan Bigelow	257
Merwyn Porteous	240
Ellen Kinkade	209

Prizes were given by the teacher to the ones of each class proving to be the best in spelling—The manner in which this was arrived at was by stars, each day the one having no errors in spelling received a star. The prize winners are as follows:

Sen. IV—Russel Card.

Jun. IV—Clayton Card.

III—Leone Dawe.

Mrs. I. Carscadden, Teacher.

VINEGAR KILLS ODOR.

For washing dishes after a fish dinner, add a teaspoonful of vinegar to the water and all disagreeable odor of grease will be removed.

Your Family

A mother and children bereft of home is life's most pitiful drama.

It is enacted all too often because life insurance had not been provided.

Government statistics show that "ninety-five per cent of men at age sixty are dependent." Other men die without leaving anything for the support of their families.

Life insurance has been evolved so that a man may arrange his life's program to provide for his family. It is scientific, safe and sound.

Have your wife and children sufficient life insurance protection?

THE KIWANIS PRESIDENT.

In the selection of Mr. Chas. D. Cook as President of the Peterborough Kiwanis Club there is matter for congratulating both Mr. Cook and the club, the former upon the honour of being chosen to head such a splendid organization, and the latter upon having secured such a wide-awake, genial and generally popular leader.

The Kiwanis Club since its establishment in Peterborough has been of splendid community service; appeals to it by worthy organizations or on behalf of meritorious causes have never been received with a cold shoulder.

To Kiwanis must be given the credit for considerable of the splendid plant of the Peterborough Health Association at Jackson Park, and this is but one of the achievements of the club since the "We Build" organization was launched here.

With Mr. Cook at the helm there is every reason to look forward to a year of activity and progress, and Kiwanis can be counted upon to be in the forefront when any movement designed to aid the community is under foot.

The election of a new President for Kiwanis is, therefore, something in which the citizens generally are interested, and they will feel that they are not going to be disappointed in the activities which the club undertakes during 1925.

CONFIRMATION FROM OVER THE LINE.

It is interesting to note just now when there is considerable discussion going on locally and throughout the Province on the question of the desirability of testing all applicants for drivers' licenses that the United States National Conference on Street and Highway Safety held in Washington strongly urged the licensing of all motor car drivers after due examination.

The concensus of opinion as represented by delegates from all parts of the country and as expressed by traffic experts and others present at the conference was that the adoption of such a policy throughout all the States of the Union would soon show a substantial reduction in the number of automobile accidents.

Opposition to the principle of such legislation is not easy to understand.

Careful drivers should be in favour of the examination method as certain to eliminate many of the inexpert motorists who now make conditions hazardous, while those who are contemplating buying and driving cars would surely prefer, for their own safety, to know that they are considered fit to drive before they are allowed to operate a machine on the highways.

The opinion of the United States Safety Conference should confirm the Ontario Government in its decision to insist upon all new applicants for licenses being examined.

WASTING TIME.

The usual collection of useless notices of motion is being prepared for the coming session of Parliament, according to Ottawa dispatches, which state that already some thirty of these notices about all kinds of questions have been recorded.

It is such things as these that waste the time of Parliament, for most of the questions introduced merely wind up in a long and valueless debate that gets nowhere and accomplishes nothing.

The real business of the session is held back and interfered with by this growing tendency to take advantage of private members' days to interject all sorts of academic discussions about everything from the cutting of Christmas trees to the League of Nations.

The Canadian Parliament as a result takes more time to get down to its real work than does the larger British Parliament with its perplexing agenda of world problems to be dealt with.

So serious is the interruption of business by these discussions that we find a demand from the Ottawa Journal for a change in the rules of the House to prevent this abuse, and suggesting that the number of days given to private members be reduced and that be providing that when a private motion is called and the mover is not prepared to go on with it, it be automatically dropped from the order paper.

A start might be made with the second of these suggestions.

THOSE GERMAN RIFLES.

The Examiner called attention some weeks ago to the fact that Canada was being flooded with cheaply-made German rifles, sold here for a trifling sum and so crudely made that they are a menace to the general safety.

From widely different parts of Canada comes confirmation of this assertion as afforded by fatalities caused by the accidental discharge of these flimsy firearms.

Some papers are calling for an official test of guns imported from Germany and Belgium.

That would seem to be imperative, and at the same time there would be no harm in looking into the question of how the customs machinery is operating in regard to the importation of these cheap firearms.

H. W. Cooey, head of a Toronto machine and arms company, is quoted as stating that while the customs regulations call for goods made in Germany to be valued on entry at their worth in Great Britain, these rifles are being retailed here at $2.90 less than the duty they were supposed to have paid.

The cheapest rifle made in Great Britain, it is said, is valued at $9.50 f.o.b. and the duty is 35 per cent.

If the British valuation is not being used in the collection of the duty on these articles on their importation into Canada, there should be some information along that line.

Cheap German rifles are menacing the safety of some people and taking the jobs from others.

Ontario has a Controller of Finance. Let us hope that he will be able to determine definitely whether the Province has a deficit or a surplus, the one subject on which the politicians have never been able to agree, says the Globe.

A CANADA FORWARD POLICY.

(Article VII.)

In the final analysis the inventive and constructive genius of her people has a very great deal to do with the solution of the economic problems of a nation. Knowledge of how best to use Canada's natural resources and trading opportunities is almost as essential to our economic development as the resources and the opportunities themselves. Canada, in her forward movement, must make organized and intensive use of the best brains of her people in discovering methods of agriculture and processes of manufacture that will permit of the most efficient, the most complete, the most profitable and the most rapid utilization of all the materials and opportunities she has at hand.

* * * *

Within forty years agricultural methods have been practically revolutionized through scientific research. It is only eighty years since the introduction of chemistry into agriculture and, during that period this one factor has enlarged the productive capacity of agriculture by 100 per cent.

The discovery of Marquis wheat has added $500,000,000 to the wealth of the world and already there has been developed at the University of Alberta a new blend of seed which, under identical conditions, has added 25 per cent. to the average yield of Marquis wheat.

But in regard to many of the main problems in agriculture, we are now only at the beginning. There is a whole series of problems not yet touched.

Rust in wheat cost Canada $90,000,000 in 1916 and $150,000,000 in 1923 and is now beginning to appear in oats also. Innumerable plant and animal pests are taking their toll of agricultural wealth and tuberculosis alone among animal diseases represents an annual loss of $2,000,000. Straw and other by-products are being destroyed for lack of a present commercial use.

Means must be found for combatting plant and animal diseases and pests and for utilizing what are now waste products. Plant pathology is practically a new subject, but it presents great possibilities. In England there has been found recently a way of converting straw into the fertilizing equivalent of manure by a combination of chemical and bacteriological processes. Science holds the key to a vast development in agricultural prosperity.

* * * *

In Canadian industry also there is a great opportunity and a great need for scientific research. Chemistry and physics are at the basis of all industry and research work in other countries is revolutionizing industrial processes as it has agricultural methods.

Germany's remarkable industrial development before the war was due in no small measure to scientific research and its influence on production costs. The British Government spent $2,500,000 in research work last year. Even Japan spent $1,000,000.

But in this respect the lead to all other countries is being given by United States where no less than $50,000,000 was spent in scientific research during 1923. Federal and State expenditures amounted to $12,000,000; the balance was spent by universities and private enterprises. All the large industrial establishments in United States have their own research laboratories. The National Research Council of United States, in co-operation with industrial organizations, made definite plans last year for the solution of over 100 foundation chemical problems.

If Canada is to compete with other nations our agricultural methods and our industrial processes must reflect the latest achievements of agricultural and industrial science. Much of our agricultural products is sold in the world market where tariffs cannot avail and Canada cannot afford the luxury of tariff protection for industries that are not 100 per cent. efficient in their industrial processes.

Research work in Canada must be for some time a national undertaking. The need of this is apparent as regards agricultural research. It is necessary in industrial research also because few of our purely Canadian industries are large enough to maintain their own research laboratories and those which are branches of large industrial corporations in United States have at their disposal research laboratories across the line. This latter fact should be a further incentive to a united national research effort in Canada. Otherwise Canadian industry must come more and more under the domination of United States.

Canada has the nucleus of the required organization in the National Research Council which was established in 1917. But its present appropriation is only $120,000 and, having no laboratories of its own, it is obliged to work through such persons as have access to laboratories established for other purposes. Even under such handicaps it has produced results in each of several individual researches sufficient to compensate for the total expenditure to date.

Under a Canada Forward program the Research Council would be given a central laboratory, well equipped both physically and as to personnel, to carry on continuous experiment and research. The results of its work would be available to all interested parties in Canada and conclusions from these results would be used to stimulate adoption of improved methods and processes. There would be close contact between the laboratory officials, our industries, farm organizations and technical men generally so that the efforts of all might be directed along the most promising lines.

There is no scarcity of brains in Canada. In past years many of our native sons have gone to United States and achieved the highest distinction in competition with the keenest and best trained minds of that country. The ime thas come for he pooling of the brains of Canada in a determined and well-supported effort to make science a full co-partner of agriculture and industry in hastening a larger and more prosperous development of this country.—Edmonton Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

And now for the "last awful day"—the general attempt to buy Christmas gifts at the eleventh hour.

Peterborough's hockey team in two weeks has given the city more advertising than any other medium has accomplished in years.

There is always keen competition for the title of the meanest individual. But the person who stole fifty bags of candy from the Woodstock Salvation Army, sweet meats designed as a Christmas tree for children, is putting up a very strong claim for consideration.

There are no figures at hand yet to show whether the sale of liquor from the Government dispensaries indicate an epidemic of holiday ailments.

In the rush of the last day's shopping, always remember the popular song, "A Smile Will Go a Long, Long Way."

A THOUGHT.

There is something in the twinkle
Of an honest fellow's eye
That can never be mistaken
And can never be passed by;
Be his station high or lowly,
There's that dauntless, upright air,
That convinces all beholders
That the man they see is square.

Heaven gives such men influence
Over those they daily meet;
If they see a fallen Brother
They will help him on his feet;
Makes the sneaks a bit uneasy,
Makes the false act kind of fair,
For the greatest rogue on record
Will respect the man who's square.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press).—Sharp setbacks in the price of wheat to-day resulted from heavy selling that was done under the leadership of a house which recently has been conspicuous on the buying side of the market. It was contended that advances of late had been too rapid and that a reaction was overdue. Wheat closed unsettled, 2 1-8 to 3 7-8 cents net lower, May 1.72 to 1.72 1-8, and July 1.47¼ to 1.47 5-8, with corn half to 1 1-8 cents down; oats half to 5-8 cent to 7-8 cent off, and provisions varying from unchanged figures to 27 cents decline.

Nearly five cents in some cases was clipped from wheat values today, the most decided cut for a long while. Much of the selling which forced prices down appeared to be based on the fact that the general upward trend of the market had lasted six months, and that the advance in that time had totalled about six cents a bushel. Slowness of immediate export demand was also a bearish influence and so likewise was pre-holiday slackening of activity on the part of non-professional traders.

MONTREAL GRAIN.

MONTREAL, Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press).—There was no improvement in the export business here today in Canadian spring wheat owing to prices bid by foreign buyers being below cost, but there was some demand from English importers for Canadian Western barley. There was no change in the condition of the domestic market for coarse grains. Ontario No. 2 white oats were quoted at 64 cents, No. 3 grade at 62 cents and No. 4 grade at 60 cents per bushel, ex-store.

The feature of the flour market was the weaker feeling that developed for spring wheat grades and prices were reduced 20 cents per barrel. There was no change in prices announced for winter wheat flour.

Little business was transacted in crop beans but prices were still quoted at $2.70 and $2.80 per bushel.

STERLING RATES.

MONTREAL, Dec. 22—(Canadian Press). — Sterling exchange rates were quoted here to-day as follows:

Sterling demand, $4.72 1-8.

Sterling cables, $4.72½.

WINNIPEG LIVESTOCK

WINNIPEG, Dec. 23—(Canadian Press).—Receipts 320 cattle and calves, 2650 hogs and 190 sheep and lambs.

With light offerings on the cattle market yesterday, trading was generally quiet. Most of the killing classes moved out at unchanged prices, but stockers and feeders were slow.

Hogs were unsettled, packers bidding $9.00 for thick smooths with odd lots from $9.10 to $9.15.

Sheep and lamb market steady, bulk of best lambs going out at $11.00 to $12.25 and sheep from $5.00 to $7.50.

EGG MARKETS

OTTAWA, Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press).—The egg market continues firm. Receipts are slightly heavier at some consuming centres but generally speaking there is no noticeable increase in the country except in British Columbia. Storage stocks are getting low and a few cars are rolling from United States to Toronto costing from 42 to 43 delivered, Toronto.

Toronto eggs unchanged.

Montreal egg market practically unchanged. Jobbing fresh extras 70 to 75, firsts 60 to 65.

Winnipeg dealers quoting delivered extras 65, firsts 60, seconds 40.

SOLDIERS' CLUBS AT LAKEFIELD

Formed as Aduct to the Branch of the Veterans' Association.

CHRISTMAS TREE.

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 23.—At a meeting of the local branch of the G.W.V.A. held in the Town Hall on Tuesday evening, it was decided to form a Soldiers' Club in connection with the branch. It was also decided to have a Christmas tree for the soldiers' children. The Ladies' Auxiliary will assist the Veterans in carrying out this worthy project.

Officers elected:

President—Comrade A. H. Clarke.

Vice-President — Comrade L. J. Charlton.

Secretary-Treasurer—Comrade C. C. Stenner.

Executive Committee—Comrades M. P. Kennedy and T. B. Marling.

Jolly Dinner Party.

On Thursday evening a delightful little dinner party was held at the home of Mrs. Wm. Simpson, Reid Street, the occasion being a birthday party in honor of Mrs. Osborne, Miss Helen Simpson and Mr. J. W. Ridpath editor of the Lakefield News, all of whom arrived in this vale of tears on December 18th. The table was centred by a large birthday cake, decorated with candles, and containing, besides the usual contents of a fruit cake, various articles, such as a ring, money, button, etc. After the birthday cake had been cut, toasts were drunk and several of the guests made short speeches. Mr. J. W. Ridpath made the speech of the evening in proposing the toast to the guests.

The remainder of the evening was spent in cards and dancing, and about 11 o'clock one of the jolliest little parties of the season broke up.

Holiday at Grove.

The Grove School closed Thursday for the Christmas holidays, the boys leaving on Thursday night and Friday morning for their homes. A special train on Friday morning connecting with the 8.10 C. N. R. train at Peterboro took most of the boys to their homes.

Nominations on 29th.

The municipal nominations are being held in the Memorial Hall on Monday evening, December 29th, for Reeve, Councillors, School Trustees, Hydro-Electric and Park Commissioners.

JUDGE WARD PRESIDES OVER COBOURG COURT

Judge E. M. Cameron Recovering From Injuries Received When He Fell on Sidewalk.

COBOURG, Dec. 2.—That there should be no more bonusing of industries and not even exemption from taxation is the opinion of the retiring members of the Cobourg Town Council, which held its final session here last night. At least the Council would look for good financial backing before making concessions.

Judge Cameron Improving.

Judge Cameron is stated to be improving nicely from effects of a unfortunate fall which he had one day last week, when he struck his head on the stone steps of his residence inflicting a nasty cut.

JudgeWard Presided.

The retiring judge of the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham presided at the sessions of the Cobourg Division Court held here last Friday, which were of more than usual interest. Once case that was on the docket came from near Fenella and was a dispute between two men, who took up their abode on farm which they purchased there, with the intention of working jointly. The plaintiff Bash brought action against Posiechuck suing him for $100 for breach of contract. The parties it appears had previously worked together in Toronto and took up farming near Fenella. After a year Bash returned to the city, leaving the other man to carry on, it is stated, he to pay a small rental. This, it was alleged, he did not do.. After hearing evidence the case was adjourned to a date to be fixed.

Another case of more than local interest was brought by J. E. Cooney, who resides near Grafton, against the owner of a truck, which the owner loaned to a man named Hart to move some of his household effects from Havelock to Cobourg. It is alleged that a bedstead was sticking out on the load, and in passing damaged the top of Mr. Cooney's automobile. The plaintiff sued for $50 and was allowed $32.70.

Fractured Ankle.

It was learned here with regret that Mrs. Slade, wife of Mr. Fred Slade, Centreton, an ex-warden of the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham, had an unofrtunate fall one day recently and fractured her ankle. Her early and complete recovery is hoped for.

Memorial Dedicated.

Yesterday at St. Peters' church, a memorial window erected to the memory of the late Mrs. David McNaughton was dictated. Rev. Canon F. J. Sawers is rector of this church. The dedication of the window was a part of the morning service, and a Christmas Carol service was held a night.

No Community Tree.

It has been usual for the past four or five years to hold a community Christmas tree about December 22 or 23, at which all the children of the town were given gifts of candy, etc. However, this year, the tree will not be held for various reasons, one of them being the need of help for so many families owing to unemployment.

Cobourg Hard Hit.

Locally the employment situation is more drastic than it has been for some years. The Cobourg Felt factory, Langslow Ltd., and the Rice Lake Canoe Company are not working at present, and quite a large number of men have no work.

Death of Thomas Fair

Mr. Thomas Fair, well known resident of Cavan township, died at the home for the aged here and his funeral took place on Friday, the interment being at Centreville. Mr. Fair conducted a wigon, making business for some years. A brother lives at Listowel.

CONFER ON CROSSING.

Engineer Meets City Council at Donegal Street C.N.R. Crossing.

Donegal street crossing was the subject of a conference between the City Council and the engineer for the Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada, Mr. Belanger, yesterday evening. The council conferred with the engineer on the spot, pointing out that the street is an important artery in that district, used largely by teams and heavy traffic during the spring and summer months Council would not consider closing Donegal street, he was informed, and protection should be provided at the railway's expense as the street was laid out and was part of the city plan before the railway came through.

As an outcome of the conference the Council will undoubtedly write the Board, submitting a plan, and will confirm the request for protection of this admittedly dangerous crossing.

ANNUAL CONCERT AT OWENBROOK FRIDAY

School Christmas Tree Drew Crowds That Packed School House to Doors.

OWENBROOK, Dec. 23.—The annual school concert and Christmas tree at Owenbrook School, under the capable management of the teacher, Miss Prouty, proved a huge success on Friday evening when the school was uncomfortably packed with an interested audience. A feature of the programme was the physical training exercises performed to the music and instructions on phonograph records, which demonstrated the value and completeness of this mode of instruction. The proceeds of the evening, which, including a sale of lunch baskets, totalled $38.35, will go towards the purchase of a phonograph and more records. The Rev. C. A. G. Spence acted as chairman and accompanist, and in a brief speech emphasized the importance of physical training in the schools. The rendering of the whole programme reflected great credit on the careful training of Miss Prouty.

THREE WOMEN COMMIT SUICIDE IN NEW YORK

One Threw Herself From a Tenement—Other Jumped From Roof of Home and Third Drank Iodine.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—(Canadian Press)—Two women, unable to participate in Christmas festivities ended life yesterday, Miss Frieda Cohen who had been ill watched preparations at her sister's home for Christmas and then went to the roof and plunged to the street, dying immediately. Mrs. Mary Kremek, whose husband died just after last Christmas, after struggling for a year against poverty, threw herself from the top of a tenement in which she lived, after reading the letter from her little daughter in a charity institution who complained that Christmas would be so different because "We haven't a daddy now."

An unidentified young woman is reported to be dying in a city hospital after drinking iodine on the platform of a subway station.. She left a note saying do not blame anybody, good bye."

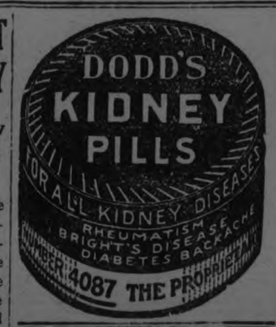
12 OVERCOME BY GAS.

Cover of Manhole Blown Through Bank Window.

OTTAWA, December 22.—Twelve persons were overcome by gas fumes and two families were driven out of their homes early on Sunday morning following a break in the gas main on Booth street.

The gas escaped into three houses from under the sidewalk.

Escaping gas also found its way into a sewer causing such pressure that the tops of the manholes were blown off. One flying cover broke the window of a bank near by.



BRIGHTON MAN FINED FOR SELLING LIQUOR

Fifty Dollars and Costs for Keeping Liquor for Sale.

COBOURG, Dec. 23.— Peter Fenton of Brighton was fined $50 and costs by Police Magistrate Floyd on a charge of keeping liquor for sale. The fine has been paid.

William Herbert Ketchum, son of the late Judge G. M. Ketchum of Cobourg, was buried at Lakeport yesterday. His death took place in Toronto on Wednesday. Mr. Ketchum was in his 62nd year. A memorial service was held in Trinity Church, Colbrorne. Mr. Ketchum was a man who was held in very high esteem.

The Late Edward Mutton.

The death of Edward Mutton in his 81st year, removed one of the best known residents of Cramake township. The funeral took place yesterday at Shiloh church and cemetery. Mr. Mutton leaves two sons, Wallace and Garnett, both residing in Cramake.

Hockey at Colborne.

Messrs. Taylor Bros. are expecting to open up and operate the rink at Colborne, formerly operated by Messrs. Clarke and Dudley. This will be used for both hockey and skating purposes and is good news to all lovers of sport in Colborne.

Agricultural Meetings.

A similar series of meetings to those held by the Department of Agriculture in Northumberland county a week or so ago is being held this week in Durham county. Meetings are being held at Bowmanville, Courtice, Orono, Newcastle, Newtonville and Port Hope in connection with the elimination of that terrible pest of the western farmer, the corn borer.

Death at Colborne.

The late Dr. Claud H. Fowler, who died so suddenly at Colborne on Wednesday, was a popular sports man as well as being prominent in his profession. He served in the Dental Corps during the Great World War. His death is deeply regretted. The funeral took place yesterday.

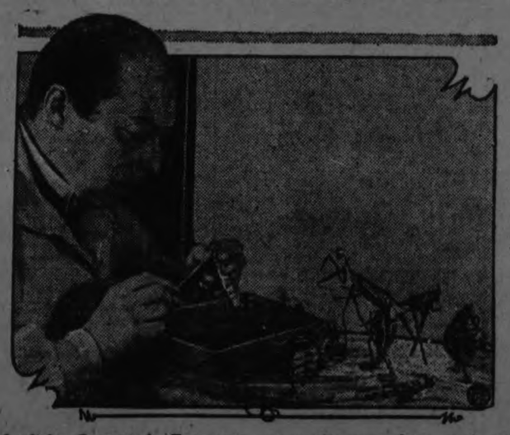
BOOKS ARE MUDDLED.

Six Months to Untangle Affairs of Defunct Music Company.

WINNIPEG, Man., Dec. 23.—An interim statement on the affairs of the defunct Hearst music publishing company, will be presented to shareholders and creditors, on December 30, by the Traders Trust Company, official custodians, it was announced Monday. It will be about six months before the true condition of the company can be ascertained, company officers declared.

They indicated that the books of the firm were in a "complicated muddle."

HE KNOWS PLENTY ABOUT PATIENCE



Ladislas Starevitch, European movie director, has patience galore. He creates artificial insects that run, jump and do things like live ones do. His film of "The Frogs in Search of a King" soon will come to America.

LABORITE WINS.

T. Johnson Defeated Liberal in Dundee By-election.

DUNDEE, Scotland, Dec. 23.—(Canadian Press).—T. Johnson, Laborite, Monday was elected to Parliament over the Liberal candidate, E. D. Simon. Johnson received 22,973 votes and Simon 10,234. The by-election was rendered necessary by the recent death of Edmund Dene Morel, the Labor member. Today's contest was a straight fight between the Laborites-Liberals.

JAPAN SEEKS ECONOMIES.

TOKIO, Dec. 23.—(Associated Press).—Thirty-eight thousand Government employees are to be discharged in the execution of the Kato Ministry's program of retrenchment, the details of which are now being worked out by the Cabinet. Officials of higher rank to be let out number 20,000, while 18,000 are of lesser standing, such as employes of Government arsenals and works.

WEDDING BELLS.

JOHNSTON—JONES.

A wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Watson, 51 Orchard View Boulevard, when Ella Nichols Jones, formerly of Cobourg, Ont., became the bride of Thomas T. Johnston. The cremony was performed by Rev. Hector W. McTavish, an uncle of the bride. The bride, who was given away by Mr. Watson, looked pretty in a beaded French gown of powder blue, and carried a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses. Little Miss Jean Nodwell of Hillsburg, Ont., was a dainty flower girl, in a dress of pale blue. After the ceremony the guests proceeded to the dining-room, where a wedding breakfast was served, the bride's table being centred by the wedding cake. Later Mr. and Mrs. Johnston left for a short honeymoon, the bride wearing a grey coat with squirrel trimmings and hat to match. On their return they will reside at 237 St. Clement's avenue, Toronto.—Toronto Mail and Empire.

LAKEFIELD HIGH SCHOOL'S SOCIAL

Annual "Conversat" Featured by Splendid Entertainment and Dancing.

LAKEFIELD, December 22. —The annual "conversat" of the Lakefield High School was held in the Memorial Hall on Friday evening. Rev. P. L. Jull occupied the chair, explaining that the chairmanship was a privilege which was passed around and that it was the turn of Rev. W. Cox this year, but unfortunately he was unable to be present, owing to a previous engagement.

The programme was as follows:

Piano duet, Misses Maude Nixon and Isabel Sutton.

Solo, Mrs. McMillan.

Recitation, Mr. Ivan Crowe.

Piano solo, Miss Etta Garbutt.

Solo, Mrs. Osborne.

Piano duet, Misses Josie McIlmoyl and Zelda Northey.

Duet, Mrs. D. H. Webster and Miss Effie Webster.

Piano solo, Mrs. C. S. Tanner.

Chairman's address, Rev. P. L. Jull.

Duet, Misses Ethel and Bessie Wilson.

Duet, Messrs. A. B. Burrows and Ralph Payne.

Solo, Mrs. William Millage.

Piano solo, Miss Nelson.

Presentation of prizes by Rev. J. M. Simpson.

Piano duet, Miss Maude and Mr. Solan Nixon.

Solo, Miss Effice Webster.

Speech, Mr. George Sherin.

Solo, Dr. J. C. Smith.

Dialogue, "Rival Railways," by Messrs. W. Marvey, H. Hill, D. Kidd and C. McIlmoyl.

The chairman's address was very brief, congratulating the young people on the success of their effort and impressing on them the privileges of higher education which they enjoy. He urged athletics as being valuable in teaching the care of the body, and also urged that the students cultivate concentration at their studies, as one can easily waste time in study.

Mr. J. M. Simpson presented four handsomely bound books of standard poets to Misses Loretta Gibson, Beulah Northey, Saidie Young and Myrtle Harrison for their work during the past school year, as a remembrance from their principal and as a reward for faithful work. They were all good students, and seldom, if ever, required correction.

Mrs. W. M. Graham spoke very briefly on behalf of the School Board

After the programme was completed the seats were cleared away and Aitken's orchestra of Peterboro arrived, and the remainder of the evening was spent in dancing.

About eleven o'clock the refreshment committee, of which Miss Evelyn Northey was convenor, served delicious refreshments, which were much enjoyed.

The re-union of ex-pupils, which was formerly a delightful feature of the conversat, is each year growing less and less, which seems rather a draw back.

The present pupils, which number more than ever this year, certainly had a delightful time. This is the one social function of the school year and is eagerly looked forward to.

MINISTER PAYS DEBT OF HONOR

Belleville Pastor Liquidates Debt of Over Forty Years' Standing to Canadian National Railways.

TORONTO, Ont., December 23.—"Conscience money" is frequently received by the railways and other public utilities, but "principle money" is something decidedly new.

To-day Mr. H. C. Bourlier, general passenger agent, of the Canadian National Railways, received a letter from a well known clergyman in Belleville, enclosing a cheque for $10.56, in payment of what the clergyman considered was a fare owed to the Grand Trunk Railway more than forty-two years ago. The total sum involved at that time was $6.41, but the clergyman compounded the interest on this debt of principal and added to the total sum full exchange on his cheque.

A peculiar feature of the incident is the fact that there is considerable doubt as to whether the money was actually owing to the Canadian National Railways, as the ride for which he paid constituted a stop-over that could have easily been arranged at the time.

Mr. Bourlier in reply to his letter, pointed this out to the writer, and in return was requested to credit the cheque to the Canadian National Railways. "I have carefully and prayerfully thought the matter over," the clergyman wrote, "and I know that being honest is not the whole of religion, but it is an essential part of it."

The original letter was as follows:

"I herewith enclose a cheque on the Standard Bank of Canada for ten dollars and fifty six cents. This includes fifteen cents for exchange. Kindly put this amount among the passenger receipts of the Canadian National Railways. I feel I owe part, or maybe all, to the company. There are three items in the account, but they are all debts of honour for when contracted by myself or mine there was not the slightest intention of doing wrong. Permit me to state one case that represents $6.41 of the total: Over forty two years ago, I returning home from conference, on acount of so many delegates, the return ticket was somewaht reduced. Eighteen miles from home I came to the place to which I was to move to in two weeks. I thought I would like to see the people, so got off the train and waited over till a later train. On that later train I offered my ticket to the conducor. He told me I should not have got off on that ticket. However, he took it, and I went home. Now, I did that in ignorance of the rules of railway traffic. I had not the slightest idea that I was doing anything wrong in stopping over. Even after the conductor said that I should not have got off the train, it did not occur to me that I should insist on paying for those eighteen miles. This is no compliment to my intelligence, but my integrity, then as now, was all right.

"How do I get the $6.41? This way: 18 miles at 3 cents per mile, 54 cents; 14 cents compound interest at 6 per cent., $6.41. To this I want to add 9 cents, as I see I made a slight mistake in my reckoning. So will draw the cheque for $10.65.

"I am sorry to trouble you with such a lengthy letter, for I know the time of men in your position is precious; but I wanted to shield the Christian religion, that for 45 years I have preached, from any unjust imputation of dishonesty on the part of its advocates."

Tragedy Stalks On Street—Averted By Spirit Of Time

A five-year-old boy living in the south end of the city wanted a horse on wheels for his Christmas treat, and his nine-year-old brother wrote Santa for a motor car that would "go by itself."

On Saturday night the horse lay in the snow at Charlotte and Alymer streets, its head broken off, and a few feet away children picked up the motor car, bent almost beyond recognition. The mother of the children stood on the sidewalk aghast, surveying the wreck of her children's hopes and the product of her own frugality. She had walked, she said, from far in the south end of the city to save the fourteen cents that went towards the purchase of the toys. And they were knocked from her arms and run over by an automobile.

CHRISTMAS SPIRIT.

The Christmas spirit manifested itself when the owner of the automobile, who was apparently not in any way to blame for the accident, took the woman's address, promising to pass it on to Santa Claus who will see that a "horse on wheels" and a "motor car that will go by itself" reach the little boys, with perhaps added treats.

The man was a prominent member of one of the city's business clubs.

Extension of Winnipeg's Heating System Planned

WINNIPEG, Man., Dec. 23.—Application for the right to carry out a million dollar extension of the central heating system, in Winnipeg was made before the public utilities committee here Monday, by J. G. Glassco, manager of the city hydro. Approval was sought for the preparation of a by-law, providing for the necessary funds.

The proposal will be fully considered by the City Council.

BEETHOVEN'S VIOLIN PRESENTED TO BONN MUSEUM

Pilgrims to Beethoven's birthplace at Bonn, in which are housed many relics of the immortal musician, will now be able to view the tenor violin which he played as a boy in the Bonn Orchestra of the Kurfuerst. When Beethoven left Bonn in 1792, he bave the instrument to his teacher and friend, Franz Ries, whose great-grandson has now presented it to the Beethoven Museum. In the same museum can be seen the set of old Italian instruments given to Beethoven by Furst Lichnowsky in 1802, on which all the Beethoven quartets were first played.

WHO WILL PAY FOR THE NORWOOD ROAD

Did the County Council Spend $6,000 Illegally ?

Indian River, Dec. 20, 1924.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

I wish to present the above questions through your paper to the ratepayers of the County of Peterboro.

In the year 1919, when the Hearst Government was in power, a system of highways was being planned to extend all over the Province.

The Peterborough County Council, having gone into the county roads system, invited the Department of Highways who have charge of all the highways in the Province (and whom we will call department) to send engineers to Peterboro and select the best road to be made into the leading highway between Peterboro and Norwood, and points further east.

After examining the different routes they advised the county council that the road running straight east from the locks bridge to Norwood, known as the Block Road, was without any question the right place for the leading highway.

The Council of 1919 at once accepted the engineers advice, and selected this road as a county provincial highway, then surveyed and bought a right of way of over a mile in length where this road was and is still unopened.

This action of the council and department has never been rescinded or changed, so it still stands, and any work done on this road is entitled to and has got a 60 per cent. grant from the department.

There was no action taken towards building this road until the fall of 1922, when notwithstanding the choice of the engineers, the Sub Area Commission, who are under the control and jurisdiction of the County Council, planned to change the location to the North Norwood road, and make it the leading highway.

As soon as the people, who have to use one or the other of those roads every time they go the city, and who know both roads, heard of this move, they sent in a petition to the 1923 Council protesting against the change and asking that any monies they had to spend would be spent on the South road.

The petition was ignored.

The Council of 1923, through their employee, the Sub Area Commission, went ahead straightening and widening a little over one mile of this hilly road at a cost of over $9000, and left a number of hills on the stretch done steeper than before they started.

In 1924 the January session of the County Council was waited on by a large deputation made up of the Township councils of Otonabee and Asphodel, Mayor Turner of the City, and about 20 ratepayers of Otonabee.

Most of the City Council were present for information.

They strongly protested against the action of the Council and asked that all work be stopped, until the best engineer available make a survey, file plans, and make an estimate of the cost of both roads.

The matter was referred to the County roads committee.

On the 8th of February the committee met along with a special meeting of the County Council.

Mr. Muir, chief engineer of the highways for the Province, was present, to ask the council to shorten up the mileage of county roads and to bring this about he positively stated that the department would give no more grants where there were two leading highways from the city running parallel to the same place. One of the must be cut out as a leading road..

The warden then moved, seconded by the reeve of Dummer, that the County Provincial Highway be changed from the Block Road to the north road, running east to the 6th line of Otonabee, thence north to the boundary, thence east on the bounadry to Hastings County, thus cutting out Norwood and the Block Road altogether.

It was moved in amendment by the reeve and deputy of Otonabee that no action be taken until we engage an engineer, have a survey made and plans filed, as requested by the deputations.

Motion carried by large majority.

To make this motion legal and give it effect, it was necessary for the council to pass a by-law and submit it to the department for their approval.

The by-law was passed next day.

After a delay of some weeks, it was submitted to the department and was by the department very promptly turned down. The Council were plainty told that the only way a change could be made was on an engineers' report and requested the Council that they would ask the department to supply an engineer.

On the 2 nd of April, a special meeting of the Council was called by the clerk to consider the department's reply.

The reeve of Otonabee moved that an engineer be negaged, Otonabee's deputy not being present, no one else would second the motion, thus practically all but Otonabee's reeve voting down the department's request.

Then toward the end of April the council, through its employee, the Sub Area Commision, began work on the north road where they left off in 1923.

In spite of the positive statement of the department that no more grants would be made to parallel roads, clearly this is a parallel road.

In spite of the fact that the department notified the council that no change of location of the leading road would be even considered without an engineers' report furnished by the Council.

In spite of the fact that the hundreds of ratepayers living east of the 6th line of Otonabee are a unit in condemning the change.

In spite of all this they went right on making the change.

They worked for about four months, spent $6000 on about ¾ of a mile of road, when they suddenly stopped, stopped we believe forever, leaving the road in an unfinished condition.

Query—Who stopped them?

The cost of this work was met by an overdraft at the bank.

Who will pay the bank?

Ordinarily when work of this kind is done with the approval of the department the cost is met as follows:

(1st) That portion of the county in the county roads system pay 30 per cent.

(2nd) The city 30 per cent.

(3rd) The department 40 per cent. all conditioned on the approval of the Department of Highways.

Not only did this job not have the approval of the department it was done against their request, without their consent, and even started without their knowledge.

The case stands thus: The ratepayers who pay 30 per cent asked them to stop. The mayor of the city that pays 30 per cent asked them to stop. The department that pays 40 per cent asked them to stop.

Who will pay the bank?

While not in the confidence of either the city or the department the writer is strongly of the opinion that neither body have the slightest intention of paying a single cent.

Who then will pay?

iWll it be the members of the County Council personally, who have certainly acted contrary to the instructions of department and maybe contrary to law, or will it be every ratepayer in the county?

Yours truly,
SAMUEL ARMSTRONG.

FENELON FALLS PICTURES

Will Exhibit Photographs at National Motor Boat Show in New York.

Fenelon Falls is making a special exhibit of photographs in the Trent Waterway exhibit at the National Motor Boat Show in New York, January 2nd to 10th.

The pictures include the 7 1-4-lb. small-mouth black bass, caught by S. Chester Faller of Wilkinsburg, Pa., which secured the Toronto Star Trophy of 1924 for the largest small-mouth black bass caught in Ontario, and another one of a 37 1-2-lb. maskinonge, caught at Fenelon Falls by a seventeen-year-old American; also a one hundred and forty-five-pound one day's catch of maskinonge and small-mouth black bass by four men from Akron, Ohio.

All arrangements to make the Trent Waterway exhibit the best ever are nearing completion. The live specimens of maskinonge, small-mouth black bass, rainbow trout, salmon trout and sturgeon, to be presented to the New York Aquarium, will be on hand at the show on December 30th.

REGULAR MEETING BRIGHTON COUNCIL

George Jennings Reported Better—S. J. Tinson to Manage School Rink.

The regular meeting of Brighton Village Council was held on Monday, Dec. 15th. Present: Reeve Chas. Ross, Councillors Carman Baker, F. R. Whitton, E. C. McKee and Jay Mills.

The following accounts were presented and orders drawn on the treasurer for the respective amounts:

Hydro-Electric Power Commission, street lamp, 65c; R. J. Taylor, tile and box for fire engine, $8.30; Geo. Huff, 90 loads gravel, $9; Presque Isle Point Commission, 50 loads gravel, $5.90; B. F. Maybee, firemen's fund, 3 fires at $25 each, $75; Craig's Livery, sleighs for fire hose, $15; J. J. Roblin & Son, box for fire hose sleighs, $25; B. C. W. Becker, Division Court fees, $48; American LaFrance Fire Engine Co., masks, lanterns and brackets, $79.50; Bell Telephane Co., commissioners telephone and toll, $3; Harvey Post, rebate fire protection, $14.40; Wm. Marsh, rebate fire protection, $2.60; Martha Craig, rebate fire protection, $4.40; O. L. Morrow, to pay labor, $100; Standard Bank, H. M. Armstrong's account, wiring Town Hall, $475.

Whitton and Baker: That the sum of $100 be paid the treasurer to pay labor. Carried.

Mills and Whitton: That the sum of $475 be paid the Standard Bank to pay H. M. Armstrong's account for wiring Town Hall as per contract, said cheque to be held by the treasurer until work of installation is accepted by the Hydro inspector, H. A. Thompson, of Belleville. Carried.

By-law No. A155, providing for the holding of a vote on by-laws Nos. A152 and A153, said election to be held at the same time and place as the municipal elections, was given its several readings, signed and sealed.

McKee and Whitton: That this Council adjourn sine die. Carried.

Personals.

Mr. George Jennings, who was recently very seriously injured when his clothes were caught in the elevator shafting at Butler's grain elevator, is resting a little easier. Mr. Jennings is a well-known citizen of Brighton, and his misfortune is regretted by many.

Mr. S. J. Tinson has been appointed manager of the local school rink, and in a few more days the same excellent skating and hockey facilities of other years will be within reach of the local out-of-doors enthusiasts.

Mr. F. O. Bates, formerly of Bate's Bros.' bakery, left town during the early part of the week.

Many of the local stores have put on a real Christmas appearance, and the windows are filled with evergreen boughs, holly, Christmas bells, and a large assortment of toys for the children. Local citizens seem to be displaying a greater desire to do their Christmas shopping early and avoid the usual rush.

Shipments of Christmas oranges have arrived recently, and there is some celery, fresh lettuce and ripe tomatoes shown.

GERMANY STAYS OUT OF LEAGUE

state affected, and the success of the sanctions might be jeopardized when they were directed against countries having at their disposal "as is still the case," an unlimited and powerful war equipment.

It is argued by Dr. Stresemann that nearly all the league members run a certain risk. He insists, however, that the risk becomes unbearable in the case of a country like Germany, "which is centrally situated and completely disarmed." He then draws a comparison between the German military situation and those of her neighbors, including France, although he does not specifically designate that country.

Army and Navy Weak

Germany, with more than sixty million inhabitants and a frontier of nearly 3,500 miles and an extensive coastline, he points out has an army of only 100,000 affectives, all told.

"The strength of the navy," continues the note, "is far below the armament limits fixed in the Washington agreement of February 6, 1922. On the other hand, apart from their navies, the armaments possibilities of other European nations are entirely unlimitd and their ouput of modern war material is subject to no restriction. Some states adjoining Germany possess, even according to their peacetime status, 5,000 tanks, 1,500 military airplanes and 350 batteries of heavy artillery.

"All these states have at their disposal large reserves of material in event of war. One such neighboring state—a state with fewer than eight million inhabitants—has a standing army of eighty thousand men; another, with fewer than fourteen million inhabitants, has a standing army of over 150,000 men. A third, with fewer than thirty million inhabitants has a standing army of 275,000, and a fourth, with fewer than forty million inhabitants, has a standing army of over 700,000."

Is Quite Impotent

The note declares that for these reasons Germany is quite impotent from a military standpoint in the midst of a heavily armed Europe and continues: — "Should the measures provided for in Article 16 lead to hostilities Germany is incapable of effectively protecting her territory against military invasion; she would be completely dependent upon the members of the league for military protection, without there existing any power to compel these members to afford that protection. In a majority of conceivable cases Germany would be, so to speak, predestined as the scene of European league wars. Even if the covenant breaking state should not be an immediate neighbor of Germany, it is to be feared that unfavorable developments in military operations might carry the war into her unprotected territory."

The minister affirms that the only solution of the difficulty is to have Germany liberty to say how far she would go in participating in sanctions when international wars break out and he asks that her peculiar situation be taken into consideration when her league obligation are being fixed.

Hot chicken or turkey sandwiches are a good way to use up chicken or turkey. They are made by placing slices of the meat between slices of buttered bread or toast and pouring gravy over them.

SCHOOL CONCERT

Annual Christmas Party at Mather's Corners Friday.

MATHER'S CORNERS, Dec. 23.—The annual school concert was held in the Public School on Friday afternoon. Miss Ivey is to be congratulated for the splendid programme in which the pupils took part.

During the afternoon the pupils presented their teacher with a French ivory clock. The following address was read by Zetta Wilson while Harry McIntyre presented the clock.

Dear Miss Ivey,—

We the pupils of S.S. No. 7, Otonabee, have gathered here this afternoon the occasion of our annual Christmas Tree.

As you have been in our midst for almost two years and we have certainly appreciated your faithfulness and kindness as our teacher and we trust that this will not be the last opportunity of showing our small token of love toward you and we ask you to accept this small gift of a clock in remembrance of your pupils of this school. We all join in wishing you a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

(Signed by the pupils of S.S. No. 7, Otonabee).

Miss Ivey thanked the pupils in a very pleasing manner. After the tree was unloaded the concert closed.

In accordance with our established custom we desire to give all our staff the opportunity to spend the festive season—Christmas and New Year—at home with their friends.

In order to accomplish this we shall not bake or deliver any bread on Thursday and Friday, Dec. 25th and 26th. nor on Thursday, Jan. 1, 1925.

We desire to take this opportunity to thank all our customers for the measure of goodwill extended to us during the year.

We wish you all the season's greetings. A Merry Christmas and your full share of happiness and Prosperity in the New Year.

"CORRIGAN"

by EDMUND SNELL

© 1924 by NEA SERVICE INC.

"I! Corrigan! I needn't add that I've had Paterson watched very carefully since the moment he arrived. I didn't like his face in the first place—and I liked his sister's still less. Also, my bonny boy, the goods weren't up to sample. You must remember that I was expecting a bronzed, hardened planter; not a dopey youth who carted an unusually pretty sister about with him into the backwoods! I didn't tell you, did I that there isn' a Davis who's a chartered acc untant and is now resident in Singapore?"

Fellowes flushed deeply. He reached out for Corrigan's hand and gripped it tight.

"I've been an abject ass!" he groaned.

Fellowes emptied his glass.

"Good evening, Miss Paterson," said Corrigan rather boisterously. "Is Mr. Paterson about?"

She came in with slow hesitant steps.

"Not tonight, I'm afraid," she ventured smoothly. "He's got a slight touch of fever—and I've sent him to bed. Did you want him?"

Corrigan rose and placed a chair for her.

"Let's have a tune on the gramophone," he suggested. He was beginning to find the strain too much for him.

As he crossed the veranda toward the pile of wax discs, he heard Paterson's voice, calling. . . .

"Isn't that your brother?" he asked her, listening intently.

She swept past him into the passageway and Fellowes felt the wave of impotent fury that consumed her. A record between his fingers he approached the bamboo table. Corrigan wrote something rapidly on a scrap of paper and handed it to him. He concealed it between his fingers and went back to the gramophone. As the plaintive screech of a popular waltz broke upon the stillness, he opened the paper and read:

"They must strike soon. If anyone leaves the house tonight—follow at all costs."

He thrust the crumpled scrap into his pocket and looked toward Corrigan, but the planter was helping himself from the square bottle, whistling in tune with the machine, as if nothing unusual were afoot.

Enid Paterson came back from the bedroom.

"He wanted some water," she announced. "He's much better. His temperature's almost normal."

"Splendid," said Corrigan, emptying his glass and reaching out for his topee. "I'll wish you good night, Miss Paterson. Fever's a deuce of a thing, you know. I wonder you haven't succumbed long ago. I always thought you were a wonderful woman, ever since the day you arrived. You must have an amazing constitution. Good night."

He was gone before Fellowes could get to the door.

"Good night, Corrigan," he shouted after him.

"Cheery-oh!" came the merry response from the darkness.

He turned slowly, prepared for most things. He did not let her see that he had noticed her drop something into his half-filled glass, but dropped casually into a convenient chair and closed his eyes.

Presently he rose and took his glass with him to the rail. At that moment the tune ceased and there ensued a hideous scraping sound of a pin on wax.

"Quick!" he cried at the top of his voice. "Take it off. It'll scratch it to pieces."

She turned to obey and he carefully emptied the whisky into the night. She noted with satisfaction, as she came back to him, that his lips rested on an empty glass.

Ten minutes later he excused himself and went to his room.

Half an hour later he extinguished the hurricane lamp, but not before he had clothed himself completely. He lay down at full length on the bed, taking the precaution of tucking the mosquito curtains securely round him. The bungalow had become as silent as the grave, a silence broken only by the shrill scream of a lizard in the ataps and the persistent mewing of a cat that roamed the rafters in search of rats. Occasionally as the minutes crept on in quick succession, strange noises floated in at the window; the deep-throated croak of a bullfrog, the sleepy chattering of a monkey colony, the coughing of a stag.

His wrist watch showed him in luminous figures that it was close on one, when he heard a sudden sound of movement in the house: A door creaked open and closed again softly; there was a muffled exclamation as someone tripped over a chair on the veranda; soft footsteps on the ground outside the house. A shadowy form appeared at the open window, hovered there for a moment, and disappeared.

Fellowes leaped from the bed and ran to the opening. He could just see the outline of two hurrying figures disappearing along the path which led to Corrigan's bungalow.

Thirty seconds—and he was after them.

The night breeze revived him wonderfully. A breeze was still blowing steadily from the sea. Overhead the stars blinked down from a cloudless sky. The moon hung like a toy thing that had been cut out and painted. . . . The mature rubber trees, their leaves rustling like children's whispers, threw each a separate shadow. And somewhere in their black and silver depths lurked the joyous spirit of adventure; for Fellowes felt it, as he dogged the footsteps of those two ahead, taking advantage of every bend in the winding path.

He saw them pause outside Corrigan's broad, squat house, and sat down in the shadow of the bank, watching them. His quick brain, keenly alert, noticed two things that set him wondering. The watchman whose duty it was to patrol outside—was not at his post. Corrigan's hound—the beast that had followed him home—had disappeared. The two dark forms had gained the veranda.

Fellowes, every nerve strained, reached the black patch of darkness thrown by one of the walls, and crept stealthily round the building, his head just above the level of the veranda floor. Presently he had swung on to the veranda itself. He peered cautiously into the room Corrigan employed as his office.

Suddenly a bright light flashed in the gloom, he caught the outline of a stooping form, and saw a woman's hand of incredible smallness passing with rapid, practiced movements over the combination.

A second figure came to her side and, as the perspiration trickled in cold streams from his forehead, a man's fingers passed a bunch of keys into the circle of light—and were gone again, leaving it in the woman's possession. Fellowes saw her select a key, insert it noiselessly—and the door swung open on oiled hinges.

And then—he was blinking furiously into a room flooded with yellow light.

Corrigan, immense in a sarong of terra cotta and red, set the lamp deliberately on the table and looked down the blue barrel of Paterson's revolver.

"You may shoot, Fellowes," he said calmly.

SUSPECTS ARRESTED.

Former Seattle Policeman and Three Companions Arrested in Montreal.

SEATTLE, Wash., Dec. 23.—(Canadian Press).—Clarence H. "Dick" Shively, former Seattle policeman, and three companions were arrested on Canadian extradition warrants in Montesano and Tacoma as suspects in a $40,000 robbery of the Royal Bank at Nanimo, B.C., on December 12th. Three others are being sought.

HEAVY TRADE BERLIN.

Police Called to Quiet Disturbance Caused by Masses of Shoppers.

BERLIN, Dec. 23. — (United Press).—So tremendous has been the volume of Christmas trade that some departmental stores here have been compelled to shut their doors in mid-afternoon to take care of it.

In one case the police were summoned to quiet the disturbance that resulted when the shoppers were refused admission. The shopping district has been jammed with traffic for a week.

MORE CARS EXPORTED.

In November This Year Cars Worth $2,000,000 Shipped From Canada.

OTTAWA, Dec. 23. — (Canadian Press).—The exportation of Canadian-made automobiles for November this year is ahead of the exportation in November last year. In November, 1924, according to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, 4,352 passenger automobiles were exported. The total value of these was over $2,000,000. In November this year 3,907 were exported.

DETROIT ROBBERS GET $35,000 HAUL

Use Violence in Jewellery Store Hold-ups—Several Places Raided.

DETROIT, Dec. 23. —(Canadian Press).— Hold-ups and burglaries yesterday and over the week-end in Detroit and vicinity netted perpetrators approximately $35,000. Two jewellry stores and Broadway market in Detroit, and Royal Bank City Treasurer's Office were among the places raided. Loot worth $20,000 was obtained by a quartet of robbers in jewelry store hold-ups which were characterized by violence.

Three robbers entered Eprilich's jewelry store, leaving a companion at the wheel of an automobile. The proprietor hesitated when one of the bandits ordered him to open the safe. He was promptly knocked unconscious with the butt of a pistol. Two clerks were then locked in the washroom, but a moment later one was taken out and forced to open the safe. Diamonds worth $15,000 constituted the loot, with which they escaped.

Half an hour later, the same quartet to judge by descriptions, visited John G. Scholtz's store. The men entered singly, first one remarking, "Well, we mean business this morning."

PROPHECIES FOR 1925 ISSUED BY PROPHETESS

England to Witness a Tremendous Growth of Socialism.

PARIS, Dec. 23.—(United Press). —President Coolidge will abandon his post.

Russia will change its government.

England will witness a tremendous growth of Socialism.

The King of Italy will have many troubles.

Spain may revolt against the directorate.

These are the principal prophecies for 1925, issued to-day by Mme. De Teleme, self-styled "prophetess of the stars."

AN UNSUCCESSFUL YEAR.

Drygoods Merchants Look Forward to More Business in 1925.

TORONTO, Dec. 23.—(Canadian Press).—While the year drawing to a close has been an unsatisfactory one for the dry goods trade in Canada, the outlook is for better business in 1925. This was the conclusion drawn by Chairman George W. Hambley, of the wholesale drygoods section of the Toronto Board of Trade, in giving his address at the annual meeting yesterday.

EXPECT BETTER TIMES.

Rural Ontario Will Experience Big Year of Expansion in 1925.

TORONTO, Dec. 23.—(Canadian Press).—Addressing the Municipal Bankers' Association, Limited, at a dinner given the officers and staff of the organization last night, Sir John Willison, president, declared that during 1925 rural Ontario would experience one of the biggest years of expansion of any farming community in the world. Sir John made a prediction in proposing the toast to "Canada's Agricultural Industries," which was responded to by Prof. J. B. Reynolds, of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph. Sir John expressed the belief that the era of depression was fading and that prosperous times would again hover over the banner province of the Dominion.

SIDELIGHTS ON CHRISTMAS

By JEANNETTE.

He was fifteen years old. It was Christmas time. He was slightly bored. Christmas was coming along in the same old way and he hadn't the least idea what he wanted. He had just about everything that he required, anyway. If his father would come across with a handsome cheque and let him do what he liked with it, that would be the most satisfactory solution of the problem. It might be a good idea to buy something for the old man in advance, just to give him a hint. He lit another cigarette, drew a sheet of monogrammed paper nearer, and began to jot things down—necktie, or eversharp pencil, or pipe . . .

He was fifteen. It was Christmas time. He was worried. He was the "auxiliary" helper in the little house. An "auxiliary" helper is the young boy or girl who takes up the burden of the family's maintenance when the father gets out of work. His father was out of work, and he himself couldn't get anything more than odd jobs to do. He sighed as he cut up little sticks of wood from a small pile at the back door. It was a chilly fire that came from these pieces of light wood. Coal would make a cheery blaze, but coal is dear. Nellie and Minnie, the tiny twins, came running in as he knelt before the stove, coaxing a mild flame. "Will we hang up our stockings the night before Christmas? Do you think Santa will come down our chimney?" The lad shook his head. "Maybe. You never can tell," he said slowly.

A butcher shop, the day before Christmas: A fat basket, with paunchy sides, leered at its neighbor, a lean package with a brown wrapping. "Do you know what I have inside me?" said the basket. "I'll tell you. A big, plump turkey and a bunch of sage, three pounds of choice butter, a couple of pounds of streaky bacon and a jar of mincemeat. That's something like a Christmas order. What have you got?" The little package replied mildly: "Six pounds of spare ribs and a piece of suet. And there's a half pound of liver. These poor people usually keep a cat, you know."

A woman in an uptown store looked petulantly at the lining of a fur coat. "That isn't at all suitable. I don't like the color. Besides, there's something wrong with these sleeves. My husband is giving me this for a Christmas present, and I'm sure he would want me to be perfectly satisfied. If you can't change this lining, I will cancel the order."

A woman in a shack at the outskirts of the city drew the coverings closer about the baby that lay at her side. She warmed its blue hands with her breath. "Katie, light the lamp and warm up the baby's milk," she said. A little girl got up from the floor and went to find the matches.

The big black horse at the curb hung his head. He was tired. An icy wind brushed past his long tail. He had been on the go all day and would he going most of the night—the night before Christmas. There was a loose nail in an off shoe, but his driver was too hurried to look after it. He blew his breath noisily, to remove the icicles from his nose. A brown collie, his chum, snuggled up beside him.

SCUTARI HAS FALLEN

Albanian Insurgents Entered Tirana Last Evening.

BELGRADE, Dec. 23.—(Canadian Press). — Belgrade newspapers today print advices stating that a column of Albanian insurgents entered Tirana last evening. They also state that Scutari has fallen.

Previous reports of the fall of Scutari have been denied by the Albanian Government authorities. An official message received at the Albanian Consulate in New York on Monday, bringing the situation up to Sunday night, declare the Scutari front was tranquil, with Scutari in the Government's hands.

Germany's Disarmament Status To Come Up Soon

PARIS, Dec. 23. — (Canadian Press). — Germany's disarmament status will come before the Allied Council of Ambassadors Friday instead of to-morrow, as the expected regular meeting of the Council having been postponed. Ambassadors received to-day a communication from the Supreme Inter-Allied Military Commission embodying the latest reports on the subject from the Military Control Mission, and the postponement was decided upon to give them time to consult with their Governments and have the letter to Germany drafted.

Two aspects of the German internal situation that are giving greatest concern are, said in official quarters to be the alleged organization of German police along lines that make it in reality a sort of army and allegations that the clandestine manufacture of machine guns is going on.

SANTA CLAUS HELD UP.

Apsley Man Provided Two New Reindeer to Complete Journey to Peterboro.

Through the piercing, searching, biting cold old Santa Claus, with his merry Christmas bells and sleek-looking reindeers, arrived at the I.O.O.F. rooms on Saturday afternoon about five o'clock and assisted in entertaining the children in the true Christmas manner.

Permeated with the Christmas spirit, the local lodges of Oddfellows, the Golden Link, Rebecca Lodge and Peterborough and Otonabee Lodges, threw open their spacious rooms and provided the children of Oddfellows with an entertainment, banquet and Christmas tree.

Promptly at 2.30 the children, accompanied by their parents, began to wind their way to the Oddfellows' rooms, where they were registered and welcomed by Mrs. Bert Watts, Past Provincial President, and Mrs. Robert Murdoff. Then they were ushered into the main hall, where Mr. Loomis of the Y.M.C.A. entertained them with moving pictures. At the conclusion of this the Y.M.C.A. minstrels took charge of the program, bringing forth rounds of merry laughter from the 300 little tots who had come bubbling over with the Christmas spirit and the thought of a visit from Santa Claus.

During the two hours of delightful amusement with the screamy pictures and funny-faced minstrels poor old Santa Claus was having a terrific grind to get to Peterborough. For the past two days Bros. Arnold McWilliams and Rolly Craig had been in constant touch with Santa by radio as he journeyed from the Ottawa Valley up the back country. Difficulties were encountered this side of Coehill when he was attacked by packs of savage Wolves, losing two of his reindeers and a quantity of toys and candies. Bro. Jimmy Price, with a Lewis gun, was hurriedly sent to the rescue, and in company with Rev. Claude Spence of Apsley, met Santa 10 miles the other side of Apsley Village, and they sure made short work of the menacing vicious wolves.

Upon reaching Apsley, our trusted friend, Ben. Coones, provided two fleet-footed reindeer for the journey to Peterborough, and with a "God bless you, merry gentlemen" from Rev. Spence, Santa and Bro. Jim Price were gliding over the snow-drifts across country en route for the Oddfellows' Hall.

A stop was made at Lakefield to replenish his stock of oranges, candies and nuts. Here Santa expressed a desire to call on an old friend, Past Grand Master Walter Cox, who sent a wire to Bro. Ernie Bartlett stating that Santa Claus, wearied by his journey, was taking an hour's rest and had requested the Past Grand Master to proceed to Peterborough with a message for the children. Bro. Cox arrived at the Oddfellows' rooms at four o'clock and imparted Santa's message to the effect that he would be with them in exactly 61 minutes.

From the entertainment to the prettily decorated banquet hall the children were conducted and seated at tables brilliantly lighted with electric table lamps, the design being worked out and made attractive by Bros. Martin and Mowry of the Triple Link Club. Here the ladies of the Rebecca Lodge had provided a most enjoyable dinner for the kiddies, who by the pleased expressions on their faces, showed that they were thoroughly enjoying the continuous round of pleasure.

But the best was yet to come. Bros. Joe Lancashire and Alex. Dick had just completed the beautiful decorations to the Christmas tree that was made brilliant by the many colored incadesent lights, when it was announced that Santa Claus had reached Auburn. With gasping breath the children rushed into the main lodge room, when old Santa, shrouded in a garment of ice and snow, bounded up the stairs, shook off the snow and ice, and in an instant was in the midst of a clamoring, excited throng of children.

Santa in his brief message to the little ones took them back to the Christmas night in Bethlehem Town, when

"Upon the hills of Bethlehem
The dew hung on the holly stem;
One by one the Shepherds came
To the manger lit with flame;
The oxen and the Shepherds all
And all the beasts of barn and stall
Bent the knee to Him what lay
Like a diamond in the hay.
Over the bleating of the sheep,
Across the midnight's starry deep,
The angel wings were winnowing
Lullabies for the Christmas King."

The folding doors were then thrown back and Santa handed out the well-filled stockings. Not one child did dear old Santa miss. Then with

"God rest us all this night in peace,
And through the year, till years cease."

and extending the greetings of the season:

"May your Christmas be so joyous
It will cheer up other days,
Leave a bit of Christmas sunshine
Spread upon the New Year ways."

he was gone as quickly and mysteriously as he appeared.

A STOVE BLEW UP.

Unusual Accident Reported at Hastings—Occupants Escaped Injury.

HASTINGS, Dec. 23.—A rather unusual incident happened on Sunday morning at the home of Mrs. Hubbs on Front Street West. Mrs. Hubbs was as usual at her morning household duties. One boy of the family was present with her. An explosion was heard and on examination it was found that the water pipes which had been frozen up had burst. The entire stove was blown to pieces and the force of the explosion broke the three windows which were in the kitchen. Fortunately the occupants of the house escaped any harm, but many pieces of the furnishings were wrecked, some beyond repair.

HAS CROSSED THE OCEAN 131 TIMES

Manuel Jagger Arrived on Steamer Marloch at St. John To-day.

ST. JOHN, N.B., December 23. — An interesting passenger on the Canadian Pacific Steamship Marloch, which arrived here to-day from Glasgow and Liverpool, was Manuel Jagger of Huddersfield, England, who completed his 131st trip across the Atlantic. He is an English Director of the House of Hobberlin, a justice of the peace, a county alderman in the west riding of Yorkshire.

He is going to Toronto, where he will visit the technical college. He proposes securing some of the pupils' drawings and taking them with him to England, where he will have the high school pupils, in York-shire examine them, and compare them with their own work which was on exhibition in Toronto.

After completing his trip to Canada, Mr. Jagger will pay a visit to Spain and on his return will lecture before the pupils of the high schools in Yorkshire. He will then offer a prize to the student writing the best essay on his lecture. He has already given a number of prizes for essays in Canada and claims that the students in that section of England know more about the Dominion than any native boys or girls.

Regarding the woollen trade he was none too optimistic. He said the demand is small and prices have increased from 10 to 15 per cent.

He maintains that the political situation in England has tended to restore the confidence of the people, and he is confident of a marked improvement later on. He expressed the opinion that it will take some time for conditions to return to normal.

"We Deliver Anything Anywhere Anytime"

GRANT OF $200 TO DEFRAY PETES' EXPENSES PASSED BY COMMITTEE

Recommended to Council by Legal and Reception Committee — G. N. Gordon Offers Medals to Team.

KIWANIS' GUESTS.

The Legal and Reception Committee of the City Council last night decided to recommend to the Council that the city's recognition of the prowess of the hockey team take the form of a cash grant of $200 towards the expenses of the S.P.A. series. By courtesy of the Kiwanis Club the team will be entertained at the weekly luncheon on Friday and the official announcement made there. Individual medals will also be presented by G. N. Gordon, K.C., Deputy Speaker of the House of Commons.

Chairman Joseph Crowe remarked that the hockey team has brought great credit to the city and has advertised it all over Canada and United States. He reported Mr. Gordon's generous offer of a medal for each player, and remarked the spontaneity with which Peterboro's parliamentary representative rises to such occasions.

Alderman Phelan explained that the proceeds of the S.P.A. series go to the relief of widows and orphans of soldiers, and the teams get nothing for themselves. Even the bare expenses are not met and the players are out that amount.

Alderman Maher said he has always felt that the city does not do quite enough to encourage sport. On an occasion like this where the team has brought honor to the city and has done so much to advertise it, he would like to see something substantial done for the members.

When propositions to give sweaters or club-bags had been debated, Alderman Phelan suggested the alternative of giving something towards defraying the expenses of the trips, and on motion of Aldermen Maher and Stocker the amount was placed at $200.

His Worship Mayor Turner arranged the participation in Kiwanis luncheon, when a public tribute will be paid to the team.

FORWARD PASS UP.

Discussed by Intercollegiate Rugby Union—Open Up Game.

MONTREAL, Dec. 23. — (Canadian Press).—No changes of any importance were announced as resulting from the meeting of the Inter-Collegiate Football Union and the question of the forward pass as a factor in opening up the game has been left over until a report is made some time in January by a committee of three appointed to explore its possibilities.

While it is not intended that the forward pass of the United States Rugby will find place in the Canadian game, it is nevertheless probable that some new style of play will be introduced that will tend to put the second defence line back further than at present.

The matter of penalties was discussed, but no new legislation covering that point was introduced.

LAKEFIELD IN O.H.A.

District League Will Enter Team to Meet Trent Valley Winners.

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 23.—A meeting of the District League was held in the G.W.V.A. Room last Wednesday evening to arrange for the season. The officers of last year were re-elected as follows:

President—Dr. M. P. Kennedy.
Sec.-Treas.—R. H. Graham.

A member of each team in the League acts with the officers as an executive committee.

This League will enter a team in the O. H. A. grouped against the winners of the Trent Valley League. The local games will be run off early as the series must be completed before the last week in January.

Two local teams, viz., the Firemen and the Colts, and a team from The Grove, and also the Warsaw team, are entering. The Tractors will enter the second half of the schedule.

St. Pats Defeat Boston by Score of 10 Goals to 1.

BOSTON, Dec 23. — (Canadian Press).—St. Patrick's overwhelmed the Bruins of Boston before a small attendance at the Arena last night, 10 to 1, in a hard-fought game. The score well indicated the relative strength of the teams, but despite their showing, the Bruins revealed greater possibilities than on any previous appearance here. Their supporters believe they fought gamely, but lacked scoring ability to a marked extent.

He refused to comment on the report of the trades union repesentatives on their visit to Russia.

CHEESE SALES

By H. B. COWAN.

Reports received at the head office in Peterborough of United Dairymen Co-operative, Ltd., from the Montreal and Belleville offices covering the company's sales for the year show the past year to have been the most successful in the company's history. The quantity of cheese sold increased 47 per cent., as compared with 1923. The value of the cheese and cheese factory supplies that were sold exceeded $2,050,000.00. In spite of the fact that the price of cheese was lower last season than in 1923, the value of the company's sales increased by over $400,000.00.

This year United Dairymen Co-operative, Limited, sold cheese for cheese factories from Prince Edward Island to Western Ontario. Cheese factories which have sold through the company this year have been well pleased with the prices received for their second-grade cheese. Factories which have sold on the cheese boards have been docked by the buyers from 1c to as much as 2c a lb. and more on second-grade cheese. Factories that have sold through the co-operative company have been paid from between 5-8 and 7-8 of a cent as much for second-grade cheese as they received for their firsts. In the case of a considerable number of cheese factories the increase they have received on their second-grade cheese alone has more than exceeded all the charges of selling through the co-operative company, including freight, left a good balance to their credit.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE.

LOU MARSH ON THE S. P. S. FINAL.

Toronto Star Writer Says Both Peterboro and the Grey Hounds Played Grand Hockey—Peterboro's Checking Was a Feature and Big Factor.

The following is Lou Marsh's comment in the Toronto Star on Peterboro's victory, Saturday night:

But just let me tell you something—the better team did not win Saturday night. Neither did the better team lose.

There wasn't any better team Saturday night.

The fans never saw two more evenly matched teams than there were out there Saturday night—and they both played grand hockey. On Saturday night's play it was anybody's game at any and all stages. There were no costly breaks, and the Petes won just because they happened to collect the odd goal when the Hounds weakened in the overtime.

The Allan Cup winners played their game for 60 minutes—and there was no choice. Then the grind of two games Thursday and Friday night at the Soo, plus a 500-mile train journey, told, and the Petes, fresh from a four-day rest, gradually assumed command and won out. You could see the break coming for minutes before McLeod finally landed the winning counter.

A Great Battle.

It was a wonderful struggle between to mighty teams. If Horatio could have borrowed Joe Dwyer and Flat Walsh he would be still holding that bridge. Both goalkeepers turned back a million more or less.

The defense pairs were both good—the Petes' pair probably best defensively and the Hounds' pair offensively.

On the forward line the Soo crowd were smoothest on the attack, but the Petes had the most tobasco, and they backchecked like fools. If Ranger Collins, Rose, Burgess and Bailey had stuck to Phillips, Lessard, Woodruff Burke and Campbell like limpets they would have beaten the McLeod Parker-Dwyer defense for plenty of counters.

But the Pete forwards stuck and the Hounds could not get the necessary goals.

The northerners probably had more shots than the Trent Valley gang, but they did not have more dangerous heaves. In fact, partizans of both teams can prove to you with ease where their favorites should have won the game without any overtime. The truth is that each team missed the open net three or four times each.

If you want to know anything about the game just pick up the summary, look up the order in which the goals were scored, and figure two teams going at top speed all the way with no apparent advantage to either other than what is indicated by the bald figures. Both teams got their first goal when the other fellows were shorthanded, and both were earned by perfect hockey. All the other goals wre scored when sides were even. Not one was fluked in.

Donnelly Starred.

Probably the best man on the ice was "Babe" Donnelly, the burly Soo defense man. He stood out—but not by much. Donnelly's defensive work was great, but his offensive work was wonderful. He came mighty close to three different occasions, when he went from end to end and beat the entire Peterboro team except Dwyer. On at least two more the only party he did not beat was Lady Luck. Twice Donnelly had the tomato-topped Peterboro net guardian lashed to the mast with a fake—and then he shot wide or high.

Everybody went home singing the praises of the two goalies. Dwyer with his baseball mit furnished the comedy of the party. Anything that came on his post side he speared with the baseball glove, gave it a shake and then rolled it out like he was playing Senegambian golf. You could almost hear Joseph talking to the spotted ivories. Walsh at the other end played all his shots off his chest or shin guards. He let the high and wide one go by without any monkey-doodle business. He refused to interfere with anything which was not right on his cage. Both men were forced to come out single-handed a dozen times to make the stop. They were both great. Put that in the memo box.

Stan Brown was the weak man on the Soo defense. He has played much better hockey that he did Saturday night. It looked as if the games of Thursday and Friday night and the long train trip had taken more out of Brown than anyone else on the Soo team. He was weak defensively. A heavy body check by McLeod early did not improve his game any.

The rest of the Soo team all played superb hockey. Some people selected Billy Phillips as the star of the forward line and some liked young Burke's sparkling display. If you ask me—I wouldn't dare put one boy above the rest. They were all good.

Parker looked a little better than McLeod on the "Pete" defense, but thn McLeod looked the more dangerous on a rush. He walloped his way through the Soo defense a number of times, but, like Donnelly, he robbed himself or was robbed of half a dozen sure goals. He got the winning tally, and there is a lot of satisfaction in that.

On the "Pete" forward line it would be a crime to select stars. They were all good. They all backchecked to a fare-thewell, and they all did some pretty fair shooting. They lacked the smooth combination of the northerners, but they outstayed them, and that is what finally told the tale and gave them victory. They had the Hounds with their tongue dragging te last ten minutes.

HOCKEY RETURNS. AURA LEE vs. PETERBOROUGH Given out this evening

COME TO THE COUNCIL CHAMBER TO HEAR WHAT NOMINEES PLAN FOR PETERBOROUGH NEXT YEAR

City Council of 1925 Faces Many Important Decisions Affecting the Life of Every Citizen—Aspirants Will Proclaim Their Policies To-night That Electors May Judge and Vote Intelligently.

The City Council will fix the date when work will start on the sewage disposal plant, thus giving employment to out-of-work men.

It must prosecute the judicial inquiry into the electrical power accounts of the Campbell Flour Mills Co., Ltd.

It must set the tax rate for 1925.

It must draw up a budget of expenditures on all branches of civic government and improvement—including road-building, street paving, police department, parks and fire department.

It must appoint efficient members to the Board of Health; select a representative on the Suburban Areas Commission, and may possibly be called upon to deal with the technical school question to be submitted by the Board of Education.

Any citizen who is interested in any one of these important matters, and in seeing that the most capable men are elected to efficiently represent the interests of the city, should be present at the Council Chamber at 7.30 to-night to hear the nominees tell their plans. Only by hearing them speak and seeing them personally can the men and women voters of Peterborough intelligently cast their votes on January first.

And the men who are nominated to-night and elected them will hold office for two years, arranging the expenditure of the people's money and guiding the destinies of the city.

The entrance to the Council Chamber is on Simcoe street, by the door between the city treasurer's office and the city engineer's office. Nominations open at 7.30 and at their close the candidates will explain their policies to the people. Everyone is admitted.

AURA LEE VS. PETES TO-NIGHT

First Home Game of Season Will Attract a Record Crowd.

Bill Marsden's Aura Lee team which will clash with tht Petes at Grock Rink tonight, the game called for $8.30 o'clock should not be underrated. The red and white squad tied Niagara Falls on their own ice and were only beaten one goal by Parkdale in the S.P.A. series. They are keen to beat the winners of the Sportsmen's Series and Marsedn will have all his Stalwarts in line tonight, hopeful of taking a fall out of Peterboro. As the Aura Lee team are in the same senior groups as the Petes the game will be very usful in furnishing a line on the chances of the two teams and should be an interesting display of good hockey all the way

Aura Lee will have Moore in goal, Shaw, Walker and Jack Cain on the defence, and Denford, Bond, Morris, McPherson and other good boys on the forward line, and the Marsden squad are in the best of shape for a hard game The ice will be good.

A record crowd is expected for the fixture as the fans worked up a feverish pitch of excitement by the Petes great work in the S.P.A. series are anxious to see them perform.

MASONIC BANQUET.

Minister of Agriculture Will be One of the Speakers.

The annual banquet of the Masonic Lodges of the city will be held on Saturday, December 27th, in the Empress Hotel at 7.30 p.m.

The principal speaker will be the Hon. John C. Martin, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario, who will reply to the toast to Canada.

Dr. T. E. Kaiser, of Oshawa, will also be present and will reply to one of the major toasts.

The musical part of the entertainment will be supplied by Frank Oldfield, of Toronto, assisted by the local Masonic chorus.

The banquet will be preceded at 5.30 p.m. by the installation of officers of the Corinthian and Peterboro Lodges in the Masonic Hall.

All visiting brethren will be welcome.

BURIED IN BETHANY.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Dec. 23.—Francis J. Lee, for thirty years engaged in the medical profession in this city, and for nearly as long a period a member of the Blodgett Memorial Hospital staff, died on Sunday night after an illness of two years. The funeral services were held Monday afternoon. The body is being taken to Bethany, Ont., for burial.

MAYOR TURNER IS RE-ELECTED

Hartley for placing him on the list for re-election. He congratulated Mayor Turner on the confidence he has gained as shown by the acclamation accorded him.

"I have served three years on the Utilities Commision," Mr. Bradburn said, "and have in that time obtained a certain amount of knowledge of the routine and business of the Commission. I believe the position requires the services of men who have business acumen; men who can conduct the affairs of the ratepayers who own the light and power branches of the Utilities."

Admitting that at the time of the proposal he was opposed to the building of the filteration plant, Mr. Bradburn said he had since come to appreciate its real worth to the city. The city has now pure water for the consumers, something to the credit of the Commission of the day. His fear that the water rates would be greatly increased were overshadowed completely, he said, by advantage in freedom from contagious diseases such as the Cochrane epidemic.

The profit in the water department in the first ten months of this year was $7,854, and the probable profits for the year will be $9,354. In the ectrical department the profit in ten months was $12,697 and the estimate for the year is $14,697.

"If this continues," Mr. Bradburn said, "we shall probably—subject of course to the approval of the Hydro-Electric Commission—be able to give the citizens a reduction of the water and electric rate." (applause).

Referring to the sub-station erected this year, Mr. Bradburn told of the saving effected in its construction and equipment, whereby the commission was able to build an office for the waterworks department and a large garage.

Take Over Utilities.

"Before long," the speaker said, 'we will have to decide whether we will tak over the two utilities in the city—the gas works and the street railway.

The gas is a paying concern at present prices, and these might still be reduced to pay a profit.

The street railway is different .It requires considerable expenditure to make it efficient. Sir Adam Beck would suggest using all one-man cars and making a smoother-running roadbed in an effort to reduce expenses.

It would be a shame to have the street railway closed down, because the men and women who work in the factories must be taken care of. It is just a question of whether one of these Utilities can be operated against the other. It will be up to Council to say what body shall operate them.

I am confident in saying that the proposal will come officially before the council in 1925."

The Judicial Inquiry.

The only comment Mr. Bradzurn made on the judicial inquiry ordered by the City Council was the expression of the hope that the investigation will be a thorough one.

FIRE TO-DAY DESTROYED SOUTH MONAGHAN HOUSE

Cause of Fire Is Unknown—Loss Partly Covered by Insurance.

Fire early this morning destroyed the house of Frank Buckham on his farm in South Monaghan.

The blaze which is believed to have started in the woodshed was first noticed about 4 o'clock and by this time it had spread to the main part of the house.

A small amount of the downstairs furniture was saved, but the house was a total wreck when the fire was checked, the walls being the only part that was left standing.

The loss will be partly covered by insurance.

TORONTO, Dec. 23.—(Canadian Press).—Edward E. Shortill, of Toronto, was fatally injured, and George D. Reid, a chemist of Toronto was painfully burned yesterday afternoon as a result of an explosion of chemicals in the factory of the Continental Match Co., at Aurora, Ont. Shortill, who was in his 49th year was a promoter of the industry which is just beginning its career, and Reid was in its service as a chemist. The latter who is in the Toronto hospital is suffering from burns about the face near the eyes and superficial burns about the body. He is not in a serious condition. Shortill died on his way to the hospital.

ST. MARYS WIN S.P.A. TITLE IN FAST GAME

Defeated Aura Lee at Arena Last Night by Margin of One Goal.

TORONTO, Dec. 23.—(Canadian Press).—St. Mary's retained the Junior S.P.A. trophy by a 3 to 2 victory over Aura Lee in the final game for the pre-season championship at the Arena last night, and it took one hour of thrilling hockey to decide the title, as with less than three minutes to go the teams were deadlocked at two all. Stewart, the Saints brilliant centre player, settled the argument when, with one of his team-mates in the penalty bench, he broke away on an attack, and after drawing the Aura Lee defence to one side, he slipped the puck to Moss, who hoisted it into the nets for the winning goal, which gave St. Mary's the S.P.A. honors for the third successive year.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

Something very much out of the ordinary, in fact, so extraordinary in one portion of its screening that it held even the noisy back benches at the Capitol Theatre silent and watchful last night, is the feature at the Paramount movie house. 'Feet of Clay,'" the title taken from the quotation; "Love with its feet of clay and the golden light on its forehead."

The advanced advertising of this production has not given much inkling of the peculiar nature of the introduction into its make up of Beulah Marie Dix's one-act play, 'Across the Border." To take a frivolous rather erratic story like "Feet of Clay," with its opening scenes that depict the pastimes of the idle rich and make it one of the most impressive pictures seen here in many a long month stamps its producer as a master-craftsman. Nothing just like the other-world portion of "Feet of Clay" has probably been attempted since a movie called "Forget-Me-Not" was filmed some years ago. In that picture the mother-soul is depicted searching in other spheres for her child, but "Feet of Clay" has a more wonderfully impressive portrayal of that shadow land where 'souls go to and fro." With the gas turned on full in their little Harlem flat, the hero and his wife are ending their troubles by suicide. Then comes the interlude with the two struggling up the great incline to the other world, in company with vague, restless forms. Companioned by the murderer who died that morning, the hempen rope still about his neck, with Bertha, the woman whose illicit love for Kerry Harlan had almost ruined their lives and whose life had been, snuffed out in a tragic fall from a fifth storey window, they toil on toward the Keeper of the Book ,the unimpassioned reader of the ledger of life. Just one touch of incongruity would turn this scene into a sham, but DeMille's master hand has allowed nothing to mar it, and it marches on, sublimely tragic. A picture that portrays the suffering caused by decadent passion, that takes its characters to the final Brink of ruin and tragedy, and then brings back for another chance, is "Feet of Clay." The golden light on the forehead of love is the ray that lights the dark way for Kerry Harlan and his wife. Frivolous, foolish, exotic, portraying passion and revenge, suffering and then triumph, it is a marvellously impressive picture. —There is a splendid cast. Julia Fay s the passion-ridden Bertha Lansell, Rod La Rocque is Kerry Harlan and Ricardo Cortez the handsome Tony, Vera Reynolds, a newcomer, is Amy Loring, the heroine, and Robert Edeson plays of Fergus Lansell, the physician who brings Amy and Kerry back from the brink of destruction. Theodore Kosloff is Aemand Bendick, owner of a fashionable dressmaking establishment.

The music that accompanies the big feature production adds muc hto the impressive atmosphere of its finale.

AT THE ROYAL.

SPECIAL PRODUCTION AT ROYAL CHRISTMAS DAY.

Leatrice Joy in "Changing Husbands," a Cecil B. De Mille Comedy.

Two girls with but a single thought—how to find happiness.

That just about sums up the theme of "Changing Husbands," the new Paramount picture featuring Leatrice Joy, which opens at the Royal Theatre Thursday in a nutshell. The story is an adaptation by Sada Cowan and Howard Higgin of the Saturday Evening post serial, "Roles," by Elizabeth Alexander. Frank Urson and Paul Iribe directed the production under the personal supervision of Cecil B. De Mille. "Changing Husbands" is, incidentally, their first directorial achievement.

It is said that we live to learn, and after seeing "Changing Husbands" you'll be willing to admit that Griffith is a real comedian as well as an accomplished dramatic actor. Melford's "Dawn of a Tomorrow" proved the latter beyond a shadow of a doubt. But Griffith's art is peculiar to him alone. Just one facial expression and he has the crowds in an uproar. Varconi is no slouch at the light end of the game either, and ZaSu Pitts is always funny, no matter what her role.

Others in the strong supporting cast of the production include Julia Faye, Helen Dunbar and William Boyd.

"HER OWN FREE WILL" IN EXCELENT FILM

Helene Chadwick is Starred in Gripping Story by Ethel M. Dell.

A conflict of wills between a man and a woman is always interesting. Nan and her husband have a whale of a battle in "Her Own Free Will," Helene Chadwick's first starring vehicle, playing at the Royal Theatre. This screen dramatization of the Ethel M. Dell story is a mighty good picture.

The plot is a rather unusual one. Nan is one of those impulsive, warm-hearted girls who leap first and look afterwards. She marries a man she does not love, to save her father from bankruptcy. Fate seems to reward her by separating them even before the honeymoon but of course he comes back and then the trouble begins. The story works up to a dramatic climax which we are not mean enough to give away. Suffice it to say that it holds you breathless and to use an expression of the sweet young things, "thrilled to death."

Director Paul Scardon did an excellent job. You'll like "Her Own Free Will" so don't miss it.

BENNY LEONARD AT ROYAL.

The best of the "Flying Fists," yet to be screened locally is now at the Royal. We have seen the first two and this series gets better as it goes along. The ring fight in this one looks like the real thing.

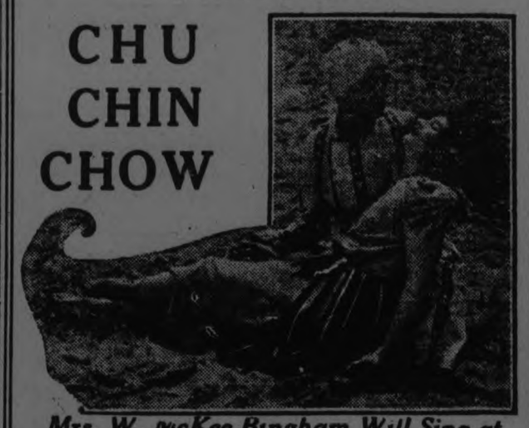
CHU CHIN CHOW



Mrs. W. McKee Bingham Will Sing at Each Evening Performance

AT THE REGENT.

"HUTCH STIRS 'EM UP."

Imagine a cowboy from the wildest West descending upon a sleepy old English village whose squire is so old-fashioned as to wish himself back four hundred years!

The twentieth century and the sixteenth fall foul of one another, and the result is amusing and, with Hurricane Hutch, as the cowboy, immensely exciting.

That, in brief, is the story of "Hutch Stirs 'Em Up." It is, in reality, a brilliant and entertaining satire, full of fun and humour, upon the worst of the hidebound squirearchy—adapted from Harry Harding's clever story "The Hawk of Rede" and made into a holding and dramatic film drama.

Hurricane Hutch came specially to England for the production— the first time he has been produced by a British firm—and his performance is calculated to stir up not only the sleepy villagers of Rede, but the many audiences, who will gasp at some of his hair-raising efforts in the picture.

There are some remarkable falconry scenes in the course of the film, and it may be mentioned that the glider in the picture—another twentieth century apparition which worried the squire—is the actual machine with which F. P. Raynham won a prize of £50 in the competitions organized by the Daily Mail.

The exterior scenes in the picture were photographed in the neighbourhood of Torquay and Falmouth, and include many beautiful West Country sea and landscapes. Anstey's Cove, the picturesque spot at Babbacombe so popular with visitors from all parts of the world, was the centre of some thrilling feats.

The film was produced by Mr. Frank H. Crane from a scenario by Eliot Stannard.

AT THE GRAND.

"CHU CHIN CHOW."

The massive Oriental spectacle "Chu Chin Chow," comes to the Grand Opera House on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week, with matinees on Christmas Day and on Saturday. "Chu Chin Chow" as a stage production made its appearance in the city some time ago, but the moving picture is making its initial bow to Peterboro audiences this week, and is said to surpass anything of the sort yet attempted. The atmosphere of the story and the splendor of detail possible in its screening lends itself admirably to a notable and worth-while picture.

The story of "Chu Chin Chow," is founded on the age-old theme of Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves, from the Arabian Night's Entertainment.

The stage spectacle evolved from this Arabian fantasy had a phenomenal run of over five years at His Majesty's Theatre, London, and for more than three years in New York. The scenarist and director of the movie production has developed the germ story still further, and has made the picture not only a magnificent Eastern spectacle but a romantic drama which grips and thrills and yet relieved by touches of delightful humour.

The story proper centers round the love f Zahrat, the Desert Flower, a beautiful slave, and Omar; and the depredations and intrigues of Abou Hassan, a bandit of many parts who under the modern guise of Chu Chin Chow, has become as famous as Robin Hood, and as charming a villian as Long John Silver. Chu Chin Chow carries off the Desert Flower and she and her lover hae countless adventures that include imprisonment in the famous treasure trove cave of the Open Sesame" legend. The lovers are finally re-united in a successful finale.

The Oriental imagery and splendor of the settings for this massive pictur make it an extraordinary spectacle. The cast has been chosen with care. Betty Blythe is the Incomparable Desert Flower, Herbert Langley is Abou Hassan, the robber sheik, and does some wonderful work disguised as Chu Chin Chow and the Indian Prince Randle Ayrton is Kasim Baba, Judd Greenis Ali Baba, Jess Barlow is Mustafa, the Cobbler, and Jameson Thomas is the interesting Omar, the Desert Lover.

A shawl collar of gold brocaded ribbon makes an attractive finish for a dark gown.

On Tuesday evening, December 23, commencing at 7.30 p.m., sharp, the Sunday chool of St. Paul' church, will hold it annual Christmas entertainment. Members of the school will render the cantata for children "Here Comes Christmas." A most enjoyable entertainment is promised for the members of the school and their parents. As is usual on this occasion the admission fee for the girls of the school is an apple, and for the boys a potato. Donations of fruit, vegetables and groceries, etc., from members of the congregation will be appreciated. These "gifts for the King" will be distributed in baskets amongst the needy. Join the Sabbath school in helping with their Christmas Cheer. 2d148 4875

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

FRUITS OF UNION.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—Glenboro, Manitoba, has been the home of a Union Church for over eleven years, and Glenboro is to-day regarded as one of the cleanest, prettiest and most enterprising small towns in the West. Its citizens are being continually complimented on thier beautiful war memorial, a magnificent granite obelisk, and miniature park that graces the main street; in its strong temperance sentiment, as shown in the various referenda; in the moral tone of its community centres, as, for example, its curling and skating ring, which is an important centre during the winter months, for Glenboro is second to none in curling; and in its general attitude toward all public and patriotic enterprises Glenboro has an enviable record.

Back of this wholesome community atmosphere stands a vigorous and healthy Union Church, well equipped and well able to serve the spiritual needs of its constituency, which includes two country appointments. At the present time it has its boys and girls and young people fully organized under trained leadership, according to the programs of the churches, and in this department the advantages of union are so apparent that the young people simply marvel at the spiritual blindness, as they regard it, of those opposed to Union.

Notwithstanding the more or less isolated position that this local Union Church has occupied, and the consequent handicap of being somewhat out of touch with the larger activities of the mother churches, there have been many evidences of the fruits of union; the greatest of these have been the spiritual advantages. These people cannot help but feel that the long delay in bringing in the United Church of Canada has been an unpardonable sin.

P. N. MURRAY,
Minister of Union Church.
Glenboro, Man., Dec. 13, 1924.

BURNING OF LOG BIG CEREMONY

Many Quaint Beliefs Centre Around Yuletide Festivities.

All sorts of quaint beliefs are centred around the Yuletide festivities. Many of them have been forgotten in our great towns, but amongst country-folks they are still as strong as ever.

The burning of the Yule log is an important ceremony. It must be lighted with the last piece of the log of the Christmas before, and on no account must it be allowed to go out. While it is burning the door must be watched carefully, to see that no bearer of ill-luck, such as a squinting man, is allowed to enter.

Another important Christmas ceremony is the making of frumenty, a kind of porridge made of wheat and milk. If raisins are added you obtain "plum porridge," which was the traditional Christmas dish before plum puddings came into fashion. The eating of frumenty at the proper season is said to ensure months of good luck.

It is important that the first person to cross your threshold on Christmas morning should be a dark-haired man, who is called a "lucky bird," or "first-footer." There are numbers of professional "lucky birds" who have quite a long list of clients. In some cases the office is handed down from father to son for generations.

ROSES STILL IN BLOOM.

Mild Weather in England—Wet and Gusty Christmas Expected.

LONDON, Dec. 23. — (Canadian Press).—The weather has been so mild here lately that roses and primroses are visible a few miles from London. The probabilities are that Christmas will be wet and gusty.

Thanks to definite signs of a general trade revival, many hundreds of thousands of people in these islands will hail Christmas with feelings of greater enjoyment than for many years past. In the great majority of cases stores will be closed from Wednesday night till Monday morning. Only a few food stores will open on Saturday.

The King and Queen and the Prince of Wales with others of the Royal Family will assemble at Sandringham for the holiday.

GOUGH GIVES EVIDENCE TO-DAY IN OWN DEFENCE

Says Annual Report Was Made to Directors For First Time in 1917.

TORONTO, Dec. 23.—(Canadian Press).—R. P. Gough, vice president and director of Home Bank, now on trial on charge of making false statements concerning the bank's financial condition, continued his evidence this morning in his own defence.

Examined by D. L. McCarthy, Crown Prosecutor, Gough said, the annual report was presented to the shareholders at the annual meeting of the bank, in May 1917, but had not previously been submitted to the directors. At various times he had been assured by the general manager that inspections of the head office and the Toronto branch had been made He was therefore surprised to learn recently that the Toronto branch had not been inspected in a year. He declared that all the directors had before them when declaring the dividend was cut and dried a statement from the general manager.

New York Millionaire Gives Wife $2,500,000

A record in Santa Claus gifts was established when a New York millionaire gave his wife 500,000 in her stocking at the festive season.M

Another lucky woman was the recipient from her father of a stocking full of securities worth 300,000.

A novel note was struck by a New York brewer, who pinned to the coverlet of his wife's bed a deed, making over to her a magnificent mansion. The value of this Christmas gift was fully 50,000.

Wishing to give his daughter a unique Christmas present, a wealthy London stockbroker had a beautiful silver casket made, in which he placed fifty 500 notes; while a lucky man, who attained his majority on a Christmas day, found a bulging stocking at the foot of his bed filled with gold, bank notes and securities worth 15,000.

SEARCHING FOR TUG.

Kingston Boy Commands Ship in Search for the Salvage Prince.

KINGSTON, Dec. 23.—(Special).—Over the long distance telephone from Sodus this morning, it was learned that Capt. Charles Willard, of Kingston, in command of the tug Joseph L. Russell had left in search of the missing tug Salvage Prince. At the time the tug left there was was quite a heavy snow storm and the vessel had a lot of ice to break. It is not thought that the Salvage Prince is lost, but that she is in shelter at Stoney Island lighthouse. The tug arrived at Sacketts Harbor on Saturday, and cleared for Sodus on Sunday, and since that time nothing has been heard of her. It is stated that at four o'clock on Sunday afternoon the smoke, of the Salvage Prince could be seen in the vicinity of Stoney Light Island Lighthouse.

IRELAND'S CLAIM TO DIPLOMATIC INDEPENDENCE DELICATE ISSUE

Question Raised by Registering Anglo-Irish Treaty With League of Nations.

EMPIRE PROBLEM.

Irish Cite Canada's Refusal to Indorse the Lausanne Treaty.

GENEVA, Dec. 24.—The delicate problem of the relations between the component parts of the British Empire has been raised anew by Ireland throwing down the gauntlet of diplomatic revolt against the mother country. Ireland yesterday added to the strenuous schedule of Christmas events already before the league, through the Albanian and German problems, by notifying the Geneva peace organization that she entirely dissents from the views of Great Britain denying Ireland's right to register the famous Anglo- Irish treaty.

Ireland in diplomatic phraseology told the league that she does not desire to pursue the controversy with Great Britain; yet makes it perfectly clear that she cannot be restricted as to league prerogatives by any limitation imposed by Downing St. Ireland's note has created an extraordinary interest in league circles because it is thought there that it may be the precursor of similar movements by other parts of the Empire, especially Canada and South Africa.

Far Reaching Question

The question involved is held to be far deeper than anything as to whether the Irish treaty is an international instrument capable of registration with the league. Ireland's move involves the entire relations of the various units of the British Empire with the league, and, in the judgment of officials in Geneva, may settle how much independence of action can be expected from the colonies and permitted by the league itself.

Britain's initiative concerning Ireland, it is thought, will furnish a subject for debate at forth coming Imperial conference which at its last meeting laid down the principle of diplomatic independence of the component parts of the Empire with mutual consultation ,as the guiding rule in foreign policies.

Assent Prerequiste

Irishmen contend that no agreement exists authorizing Britain to speak for Ireland or the other Dominions without first obtaining their assent. They argue that Mr. Chamberlain had no right to take his recent stand against Ireland's liberty of action; they remark that Canada refused to be bound by the Turkish treaty in the negotiations of which she was not represented and declared that not one Dominion would have accepted league membership except on the condition of indepeudence.

Ireland's communication indicates clearly that she stands by her right to register the treaty. Registration gives that document validity before the world court by Ireland's right to appeal to that court should any effort be made to infringe the treaty or detract from her independence.

ACCUSED OF MURDER.

Sequel to Bandit Raid on Melbourne Bank.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Dec. 23.—(Canadian Press Cable Via Reuter's)—A coroner's jury investigating the death of W. Almeida, a bank teller, from wounds which he received in a fight with bandits, has returned a verdict of wilful murder against one of the bandits who was captured outside the bank.

Another man under arrest has been committed for trial on a charge of aiding and abetting in the hold-up of the bank.

On November 28 two armed men entered the Hampton suburb branch of the Commercial Bank and confronted Almeida in the teller's cage with their revolvers. He, however, refused to surrender to them whereupon he was shot and fatally wounded in the stomach. Despite this he seized a revolver in the drawer of his desk and drove the bandits from the bank .One of the hold-up men was captured outside the institution, but the other escaped.

No money was taken from the bank.

The dead are,—E. M. Keyser, and A. S. Mainwaring, chief petty officers; P. S. Gavin, a hospital apprentice and Uriah B. Williams, Jr., of Buxton N.C. Williams was being brought to a Norfolk hospital for treatment for pneumonia.

U. B. Williams, Sr., father of the civilian victim of the wreck, and a retired naval enlisted man; Lieut. W. B. Gwin, pilot, and a radio operator and a mechanic escaped.

The wreck was attributed to a hole in the bow of the plane, which allowed the water to rush into the forward part when it glided into the water. Two of the navy men were struck by the propellors and killed. The other victims were drowned.

The accident was the first of serious consequence since the serial hospital service for the isolated regions of the Virginia and North Carolina Coasts was inaugurated at the Hampton Roads Air Station more than a year ago. Many patients from coastguard stations and villages near Cape Hatteras have been brought to Norfolk Hospitals in that time by naval seaplanes.

Large Passenger Airplane Burst Into Flames and Crashed to Ground.

CROYDEN, ENGLAND.

CROYDEN, England, Dec. 24. — (United Press)—Eight persons were killed at the Croyden Airdrome here to-day when a London-Paris passenger airplane burst into flames and crashed to the ground.

The machine caught fire and fell shortly after starting for Paris.

INCOME TAX OPPOSED BY WINDSOR COUNCIL

Ontario Government Asked to Rescind Legislation.

WINDSOR, Ont., Dec. 24.—The finance committee of the City Council will investigate and report back to the Council the net revenue to the city from municipal income tax.

Alderman Edwards told the council Monday night that the cost of collecting the tax virtually equalled the return from citizens and advocated a thorough investigation by a committee with a view to abolishing the tax if revenue were not shown to be satisfactory. His resolution also also asked that the Ontario Government be asked to rescind legislation which makes it compulsory for municipalities to levy taxes in towns and cities.

"Few places pay any attention to the tax anyway," he said. "In many towns they have no income tax although the law demands that one be levied."

"I am not opposed to the tax but many people who would be residents of Windsor move to nearby centres so they will be immune," Ald. Howell told the council.

KING FUAD DISSOLVES EGYPTIAN PARLIAMENT

Both Chambers of Existing Regime Controlled by Nationalists.

CAIRO, Egypt., Dec. 24.—King Fuad yesterday signed a decree dissolving parliament. Dissolution was decided upon Monday. Elections for electoral delegates will take place January 20, and for deputies February 24. The new chambe will meet March 6.

Premier Ziwar in a letter to the king notified him that it was impossible to associate the existing chambers with the task of reestablishing narmal relations with Great Britain.

"Tho chambers," sai the premier, "are entirely dominated by the party the previous cabinet represented, and continuation of parliamentary debates would only serve to increase the excitement, giving rise to a worse situation and barring the road to a solution of the conflict."

Such a conflic ment either resignation of the cabine of dissolution of the parliament and the premier thought it was not in the interest of the counary that the ministry should resign. Ziwar poned out that his first care in forming a cabinet had been to make sue that Great Britain's action should not destroy the country's independence.

TO PRIVY COUNCIL.

Chief Justice Anglin Honored by the King.

LONDON, Dec. 24.— (Canadian Press Cable.)— His Majesty King George has given his approval of the swearing in of Chief Justice Anglin of Canada, as a member of the Privy Council.

News of the appointment of Chief Justice F. A. Anglin was communicated to Judge Anglin to-day. His actual swearing in cannot take place until such time as he is able to visit the King.

The appointment brings to 14 the total of Canadians ranking as Imperial Privy Councillors, and entitled to be addressed as "Right Honorable." Of these, four are no longer resident in Canada, Dr. T. J. Macnamara, Sir Gilbert Parker, Lord Beaverbrook and Sir Hamar Greenwood.

FOURTEEN MEN ARE NOMINATED FOR FIVE SEATS

Nominations For Aldermen Drew Out Big List of Prospects.

ADDRESS ELECTORS.

Evidences Are of Big Slate For Municipal Election Next Week.

John O. Fife, nominated by George Carpenter and Tobias Fredenburg.

Joseph Crowe, nominated by Walter Stocker and M. McIntyre.

J.. Mendell Greene, nominated by Albert J. Warner and Reg.. H. Turner.

Gustave L.. Hay, nominated by Robert Hamilton and John Speer.

Wilbert J. Hancock, nominated by E.. F. Reid and F.. J Tuggey.

John Hugh Spence, nominated by William H. Lytle and Frank E. Williams..

Robert Morrison, nominated by N. E. Phelan and M. McIntyre.

Roland Denne, nominated by J. G Graham and Albert J Warne..

John W Meyers, nominated by A. A.. McIntyre and J. J. Hartley.

Michael J.. Maher, nominated by R. Morrison and A. A. McIntyre.

Thomas E Sargent, nominated by M.. McIntyre and Tobias Fredenburg.

Frederick T. Tuggey, nominated by James C. Ellis and Geo. Carpenter.

Arthur William Blade, nominated by F. H.. Dawson and W. H.. Lytle.

Frank H. Dawson, nominated by Joseph Crowe and Walter Stocker.

Fourteen names, listed above, were placed in nomination last night for the positions made vacant by the expiring terms of five aldermen. In the addresses that followed the official programme, Messrs. Fife, Crowe, Maher, Sargent, Tuggey and Blade indicated that they will accept nomination and will place their names before the electors. The final draft will not be known until 9 o'clock tonight when qualifications must be filed.

The back benches in the Council Chamber were well filled by interested citizens, and several of the candidates explained their policies in short adresses.

Alderman Fife.

Alderman J. O. Fife, thanking his nominators for the tribute paid to him after two years service, said his council experience has been pleasant and educative. In all matters he had done what he thought was in the interests of the citizens. When he found himself in the minority he threw in his lot with the majority and put his shoulder to the wheel with them for the good of the city..

"I trust the men who fill these chairs in 1925 will appreciate the good qualities of the men who served beside me last year," he said.

"We are proud of Peterboro and its growth. I came before you formerly urging an extensive street paving programme; a start on the trunk storm drain; the new substation and arangements whereby citizens might easily obtain connections for their houses with the sewer. I am glad to say that starts have been made on these.

Many problems face the council in 1925.

Although our tax rate has grown a little year by year I ask you to remember we are building for the future—the foundation of a greater Peterborough. We must uphold our part of the work and build durably and well."

Alderman Crowe.

Alderman Joseph Crowe said that in his seven years in the council he had always found the members interested in the city's welfare. They need the encouragement of the citizens.

Alderman Crowe told about the land connected with the sewage disposal plant and of the fishing grounds that will follow the installation of the plant and purification of the water. He would like to see as much of the work done in winter as possible.

He is in favor of the city owning its own paving plant, since other cities make them pay.

The city officials salaries should be re adjusted, Alderman Crowe said. Peterborough is paying the highest peak salaries while the cost of living has gone down one-third. Some city officials are not getting

FLORA LE BRETON.

British Actress Soon to Star on Broadway.

'Now just what is a three- lettered word meaning mouse-trap? At least that might be the puzzle that is confronting Flora Le Breton, famous British actress, who is soon to star on Broadway in a new musical comedy. For the fair Flora has been bitten by the cross-word puzzle bug, and now, instead of trying to tune in on dear old London with her radio set, the early morning sun usually greets her as she still tries to figure out "cat."

CLYDE TENANTS WERE EVICTED

Crowd Attacked Eviction Officers, But Police Restrained Sympathizers.

FIVE EVICTIONS.

LONDON, Dec. 24.— (Canadian Press Cable.)— There were stirring scenes at Dalmuir and Clydebank Dunbarton county, Scotland, Tuesday when long-threatened evictions for non-payment of rent took place. In connection with the Dalmuir evictions some ugly rushes occured but only one arrest was made.

A body of eviction officers acting in behalf of the landlords, escorted by about 60 policemen, timed the first ejection in Dalmuir so well that the night patrol employed by the non-paying tenants to warn the rent-strikers of the approach of possible "evicters' had withdrawn, and the tenants had been lulled into a false security for the night. However, the alert tenants quickly realized the situation and at once they summoned assistance by the ringing of hand bells.

Rushed Officers

Immediately men, women and children rushed to the scene from every direction. When they observed the evicting officers they made a rush at them, and the attendant noise attracted still other crowds. The police, however promptly stopped the rush and pressed back the intruders.

A press photographer appeared on the scene when the excitement was at its height. He at once started in to take snapshots of the crowd but this roused the hostility of the gathering and a rush was made at him. He was carried off his feet and severely kicked.

The police at this juncture pressed forward and took a hand in the proceedings. It was at this juncture that the arrest was made. The streets were cleared by the police shortly afterwards. Then the eviction officers proceeded with their work of dispossessing non-paying tenants.

The first house was cleared within half an hour. The evicted tenants and their supporters remained in the vicinity, however, and the whole area was seething with excitement. The presence of the policemen though had a restraining effect on the dispossessed tenants and their sympathizers.

Five evictions were carried out at Dalmuir.

THE WEATHER

Several inches of snow on top of what we previously had, gives the countryside a thoroughly wintry aspect, and there is now no question but that we will have a "white Christmas," and probably a cold one. On Christmas day last year there was a little snow on the ground, which came a day or two preceding Christmas, up to which time the weather had been particularly fine. On this occasion I desire to extend my warmest greetings to every reader of these little notes, and trust that he or she, as the case may be, may have, if not a "Merry" Christmas, at least a "Happy" one.—W. IBANEZ WILLING TO FIGHT ONLY KING ALFONSO AND THE PREMIER Spanish Author Says He Has Proved His Courage in Nine Duels, and Will Refuse to Meet Subordinates.

STRIKE AT COUNTRY'S HEADS.

MENTONE, France, Dec. 24.—"Alfonso and Primo De Rivera, whom I have attacked in my writings, are the only two men I will fight in a duel."

Vicente Blasco Ibanez, the Spanish author, made this declaration to the press Tuesday when informed of the numerous challenges emanating from Spain from various personages mentioned in his book who are desirous of seeking satisfaction by arms.

"I need not fight all these people to prove my courage" Ibanez continued. "I have already fought nine duels either with pistols or swords and two of my opponents were seriously wounded, one of them being at the point of death for several days."

The writer remarked that he had received no official challenges either directly or through third parties officially appointed by General Aguilera, General Aizpuru, Viscount d'Eza formen minister of war or Benigno Varela, editor the Madrid Royalist newspaper La Monarguia, all of whom have expressed their intention of seeking a duel with Ibanez or meeting him in some kind of physical encounter.

"I am not acquainted with Senor Varela," continued Ibanez. "I know the others slightly. Refusal to fight them is not due to a feeling that they are unworthy my steel. But I have struck at the heads with my writings and am prepared to trike at them with weapons on the field of honor."

The Spanish author has taken up his residence in his villa, "Fontana Rosa," and intends to spend the bet ter part of the winter here. He declared that threats of duels or sentence of death by court martial in Spain would not deter him from continuing his campaign in favor of the liberty of his country. He is preparing another book in which he promises veritable revelations regarding the regime actually in force in Spain.

SOUTH AFRICA FEARS BALDWIN IMPERIALISM

Government Organ Warns People to "Be on Guard."

CAPETOWN, South Africa, Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press Cable Via Reuter's).—The Deburger, the government party organ yesterday very frankly states its dislike of the new Baldwin administration in Great Britain and warns South Africans to "be on guard." The paper comments as follows:

"Events of the past two months show that with a thoroughbred Conservative Government in Britain militarism is raising its head and imperialism is again seeking to indulge its appetite."

After discussing developments in connection with Singapore base, the Anglo-French alliance, the establishment of an imperial council at London and the alleged denial of Ireland's Dominion status in connection with the treaty creating the IrishFree State the Deburger concludes: "Baldwin's attitude to these matters is a warning for us to be on our guard. From this Conservative Government we only can expect curtailment of the rights which we already enjoy."

PREACHES AGAINST USE OF PAINT AND POWDER

English Minister Says Husbands Live in Perpetual Dread of Arrest For Bigamy.

KINGSTON, Dec. 24.—Rev. A. Wellesley Orr, Vicar of St. Paul's church, Kingston Hill, has come out against use of paint and powder by women. Writing to parishioners Vicar says, even while we are signing marriage registers in church vestry bride may get in few moments work before mirror with powder puff, scissors and bottle. Man who came into church in love with blushing blonde takes out on arm blooming bobbed brunette. Some wives are so constantly changing appearance that husbands live in perpetual dread of arrest for bigamy.

SONG ROYALTIES UPHELD.

Federal Appeals Court Rules Publishers Can Collect From Theatres.

RICHMOND, Va., Dec. 24.—Motion picture houses and theatres must pay royalties to composers or publishers when they use any portion of a copyrighted song or air during their programmes or performances, according to an opinion rendered by Judge John Rose of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

He affirmed he decision of the District Court a Charleston, S. C., that the Pastime Amusement Company must pay M. Whitmark & Sons, publishers, for the use of a copyrighted song in its motion picture theatre.

DOROTHY GISH REDEEMS JEWELS FROM CUSTOMS

Her Husband Pays $12,900 to Recover Necklace and Other Artitcles.

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.— James Rennie, husband of Dorothy Gish, the moving picture star, went to the Customs House last week and paid the Federal authorities $12,900 for the recovery of a diamond and aquamarine necklace and three smaller articles of jewelry which were seized at the White Star pier when the Gish family arrived on the Majestic a month ago.

The necklace was estimated to be worth $6,450 and described as a handsome piece of jewelry by the customs officials who had examined it. The remainder of the sum was the value of the three other articles and the duty, with maximum penalty.

The party consisted of Dorothy Gish and Mr. Rennie, Lillian Gish and her mother, Mrs. Mary Gish. When the jewelry was found in the trunk at the pier, Mr. Rennie told the customs official in charge that he was to blame, as he had forgotten to declare the articles. The necklace and the rest of the property were seized and taken to the Public Stores, where it was kept in the safe until Mr. Rennie paid the $12,900.

TWO KILLED OVER DOLL.

Atlanta Shoppers in Crowded Store Witness Shooting.

ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 24.— The desire of two men for a French doll is involved in a tragedy which has already cost two lives and placed two men in a hospital here at the point of death.

While thousands of Christmas shoppers thronged the shopping district, Edward D. Riordan, former army officer, killed Fred S. Stewart, proprietotr of a shoe store; wounded S. R. Turner, store manager, and H. E. Maddux, department manager, and then shot himself to death.

Riordan, a former employe of the store, was discharged recently after a misunderstanding over the doll which was also desired by Stewart. His dislike for Turner, police said, dated further back.

The police are holding four letters which they believe will explain Riordan's trend of thought when he entered the store and opened fire, throwing the crowded neighborhood into a panic.

CHRISTMAS CALLS

Oh thousands of calls come to Santa
In his generous heart there is place
For wee ones, and young ones and old ones
It is writ in his jolly old face.

He listens to each, though he's busy,
A-packing the toys he will take
To over the world to the children
Over mountain and valley and lake.

The telephone rings, "Oh, Santa,
This is Jimmy that lives by the Mill,
I've four little brothers and sisters,
There are five of our stockings to fill;

"Say, Santa, you fill all their stockings,
Imagine—well, I really don't care
If they get each what they've plighted
Unless me, I'll still call it square."

"Good bye, Sir" and Santa is sighing
For brave little Jimmy-boy's sake
I think he will make a great effort
And something to Jimmy will take.

Ting-a-ling,—again the phone's ringing
They call and they call and they call!
If he weren't so darling and patient
He never could answer them all.

At last he must start on his journey
Ting-a-ling,—It's the bells on his sleigh
Oh, hurry! the reindeer are waiting!
It's time to be off and away!

When Santa arrives with his presents
He is chuckling,—the fun he will give.
And his jolly old heart is a-glowing
Spreading joy wherever folks live.

NEW LAMP BURN 94% AIR

Beats Electric or Gas

A new oil lamp that gives an amazingly brilliant, soft, white light, even bettert than gas or electricity, has been tested by the U.S. Government and 35 leading uniersities, and found to be superior to 10 ordinary oil lamps. It burns without odor, smoke or noise- no pumping up; is simple, clean, safe. Burns 94% air and 6% common kerosene (coil oil).

The inventor, F. S. Johnson, 246 Craig Street W., Montreal, is offering to send a lamp on 10 days' FREE trial, or even to give one FREE to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. Write him to-day for full particulars. Also ask him to explain how you can get the agency, and without experience or money make $250 to $500 per month.

FORMER MILLBROOK BOY SPOKE SUNDAY

Preached Sermon in Methodist Church—Greeted With Packed House.

MILLBROOK, December 24. — Peculiar interest was attached to the morning service in the Methodist Church on Christmas Sunday because of the fact that a former Millbrook boy, Rev. Charles Clarke, of the British Columbia Conference, who is taking a post-graduate course this term at Victoria College, Toronto, was the preacher for the occasion.

The text was chosen from Luke 2, 14: "On earth peace, goodwill toward men," and also from verse 7: "There was no room for him in the inn,' the speaker prefacing his remarks with the statement, "Peace and goodwill will come on earth in proportion to the room we give to Jesus in our lives—business, political, and social relationships."

Pilate questioned, "What then shall I do with Jesus, which is called Christ?" And from the answer, "Let Him be crucified," the truth is driven home that the people in that day had no room for Jesus. Who took up the room in Pilate's judgment hall? Merchants, soldiers, religious leaders, and those who casually make up a crowd. True, a small body did make room in their lives for the Master, and the world has been transformed by these, and others since, who have given Jesus place in their hearts.

Are we any more ready with our welcome to-day? Has Christmas the same meaning to us as the years roll round in a circle, or does each day, each week, each year, bring some new experience of Jesus? Without this, we are not getting far in the Christian life. We speak of "gorwing in grace," but there is no growth, no glorious experience upward, no chance of peace and goodwill becoming universal and permanent, unless room is made for the Saviour as an abiding guest.

Three classes were present when Pilate asked his momentous question, the ruling class, the business class, and the religious class, and we condemn them for their blindness, and hardness of heart, but are we doing right? To the ruling class, might was lord; peace and goodwill were all right so far as they served the ends of Rome. Dare we deny that a similar opinion prevails to-day? Since 1789 up until 1918, there was war every four years, and the greatest and most horrible struggle, graces our day—supposedly the era marked by the highest type of Christian civilisation. In the early days the heathen were used to say: How these Christians love one another," but during the late war they said, "How these Christians hate one another." Even in our churches the battle flags are hung beside the cross. We are trying to make Jesus fit into our programme of war to which He is directly opposed—He represents the force of love as against the force of might. And we haven't learned the lesson though the war is over. What room in international affairs is given to Jesus?

In the economic realm, profit is lord, and graft is king. Engrossed in the struggle for gain, religion counts but little. "Is man of more value than a sheep?" Business replies, "A sheep means an outlay of capital—you can hire another man, but a sheep must be bought." For money a man will damn some of his neighbours, and damn his own soul in the process. Yet Jesus taught that human life is most sacred, and that service is the badge of a righteous life, hence there is here a challenge to put the principles of Jesus into operation in daily business life. He will only come in as you and I take Him there.

In the religion of to-day, is there room for Jesus? It is quite possible to be a religious person without giving room to Him. "The Church is dead," is the criticism from those outside, and it would be well for us to look into the spiritual mirror and find the reason—there can be but one, for "Where Jesus is, there is life."

Is there not truth in the statement that we have departmentalised our lives, labelling one department including in this business and politics, and a third "Sin," when Jesus made but two divisions, "Spiritual" and "Evil." Those outside the church look at life from a different sphere to what we do, and they will not come into its fold because the enrolled members do not practice what they preach. Of course, they are wrong in their attitude—far better to come in and help build up rather than stand outside and throw stones. But if they did would they find room? Are not the church offices passed around to the same few? We hear to-day the question "What must the church do to be saved?" Why? "It is because you are not like your Christ. "He came to seek and to save that which was lost'; "not to be ministered unto, but to minister." He said, "Whosoever will save his life must lose it."

How then can the church render service to the community? Take Jesus seriously; take off the garment of super-righteousness, take up the towel, and wash the community's dust-laden feet. Make it the centre of the community from which life radiates in every direction. Remember the church is to function for this day and generation, not for our grandfather who have gone to glory.

The world needs Jesus, and He is depending on you and me as fit channels for God ot pour His Spirit through, and His power working through us, to bring it to salvation.

Rev. R. T. Richards, of Cavan, preached in Grace Presbyterian Church on Christmas Sunday morning, and conducted aniversary services at St. Enoch's Church, Garden Hill, afternoon and evening. The evening service at Millbrook was withdrawn on account of the anniversary services at the outside appointment, many from the congregation here joining in worship with the Methodist congregation, a special Christmas song service being held in that church at night.

Rink Opened.

The rink was open for skating for the first time this season on Monday evening, the ice being in excellent condition. Quite a number availed themselves of the opportunity of enjoying this healthful sport. The rink will be given over to skaters every night this week, the curlers not opening their season until New Year's Day, when the usual competition between the president and the vice-president will take place.

Rev. Principal Farewell, of Ontario Ladies' College, will preach anniversary sermons in connection with the Methodist Sunday School on Sunday, 28th December, morning and evening, and will also address a mass meeting of the school in the afternoon. For twelve years Mr. Farewell was general secretary of the Ontario Sunday School association before that body became merged in the Ontario Religious Education Council. In his official capacity as secretary Mr. Farewell spoke at a Sunday School convention in Millbrook several years ago, and has not been heard here since that time.

The usual rewards for regular attendance, and recital of verses, will be given out at the afternoon session of the school on anniversary Sunday.

Rev. Charles Clarke is spending the Christmas holidays with his aunt, Mrs. A. Ferguson and Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Eakins.

Capbellford Foresters Elected Officers Tuesday

S.Andrew's Christmas Sunday School Entertainment Monday.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 24.—Tuseday night, December 16, a large attended meeting the officers of "Count Victory" Lodge were duly installed. D.C.R. Bro. Snell of Port Hope, arrived in Campbellford in time for the regular business of the lodge, after which he carried out his duties of installing the officers. The efficient way in which Bro. Snell carried out these duties, commands admiration and great credit is due him. The following are the officers installed for 1925: P.C.R. Bro. Thrower; C.R. Bro. A. J. Morgan; S.C.R. Bro. Williams; S.W. Bro. C. Battman; J.W. Bro. D. Page; secretary Bro. T. Campbell; treasurer, Bro. A. Campbell; J. B. Bro. E. Cleverly; J.B. Bro J. Ray.

After the ceremony the new officers occupied their stations and Bro. Snell was called on to present Bro. E. Southern with his P.C.R. Jewel. Then while refreshments were preparing, Bro. Snell was asked to say a few words on the welfare of the order. His remarks were cordially accepted by the members present. Bro. A. J. Morgan, the new C.R. was then called upon. He asked for the hearty co-operation of the lodge, and the assistance of his fellow officers in helping him to carry out his duties, and urged officers and brethren to be present at the regular meetings. He then called for a hearty vote of thanks for D.C.R. Bro. Snell for his trouble in coming down that very cold night and for carrying out the duties so efficiently.

Bro. Southern was then called upon. He thanked all present for the assistance they had given him while in office, also for his Jewel, which he prizes very much. P.C.R. Bro. Thrower being called to speak, thanked the officers and members for their assitance to him during his term in the chair. Bros. T. Campbell, A. Campbell, C. Battman, Bates, Nancarrow all spoke and promised to carry out their several offices to the best of their ability. The lodge then closed and refreshments served and enjoyed. Afterwards every one joined in hearty singing thus closing a very enjoyable evening.

St. Andrew's Christmas Sunday School entertainment was held on Monday night, December 22, 1924, in the Sunday School room. There was a good attendance. Rev. C. F. McIntosh acted as chairman. The programme opened with a chorus from the Beginners and Primary department. This was well received, the little tots as usual, always pleasing an audience. Then followed a vocal solo, "Holy Night", by Donald Dunk recitation by Jean Haig; a humorous recitation by Hugh Southworth, who always "Got the neck of the turkey".

Miss Mary Watson's class formed a kitchen orchestra ,the players all darkies and their instruments the ordinary kitchen utensils, frying pan, toaster, wash tub, etc. to the accompaniment of which they told the audience that "it ain't going to rain no more." They also sang some of the verses. This caused much merriment.

Miss Buchanan's class gave a humorous dialogue.. This part of the programme closed with a pantomime "Holy Night" by Mrs. Stories' class.

By request the little tots repeated their chorus. The second part of the evening was the "Story of the other wise man", beautifully illustrated by lantern slides and the story effectively told by the minister Rev. C. F. McIntosh. The superintendent, Mr. J. A. Anderson made a few remarks, commending the scholars for regular attendance, and thanking teacher and officers for their faithful service and cooperartion during the year. Santa Claus then appeared with a well laden basket of stockings filled with nuts and other goodies which were distributed among the scohalrs. This enjoyable evening closed with the National Anthem.

Mission Band Concert.

The Mission Band concert given by the members of the band in the Methodist Church school room on Monday night, December 22, 1924, was a decided success and was well attended. The boys and girls of the band did splendidly in their choruses, solos, exercises, dialogues and recitations. The president, Mrs. G. A. Kingston and those who assisted her deserve great praise for the excellent way in which the boys and grils were trained for this concert and the president is to be congratulated on the success of the evenings' entertainment. During the intermission home-made candy was sold for which the sum of about fifteen dollars was received.

The school room was prettily decorated with evergreen and Christmas decorations and looked very nice.. The total proceeds for the evening will be somewhere around forty dollars. The Mission concert is an annual affair and is looked forward to by the parents as well as by the boys and girls. Rev. W. Elliott was the chairman and gave an address.

The following is the programme given during the evening after the opening hymn and prayer; chorus, "Go Ye", by the members of the band about 40 in number; recitations, by George Smith, John Phillip and Clara Lucy; duett, Ina and Jack Boyd (piano and bones); recitations, Donald Wood and Adin Lowe; musical selection by Enid, Ronald and Billy Richardson (piano and two violins) and encore; an exercise Mother Goose taken by several boys and girls as Jack Horner, Miss Muffitt, wise boy, poor child, Bo-peep, Simple Simon, Mary had a little lamb, Jack and Jill and others. This was very entertaining and the little ones took their parts well and all sang "Mission boys and girls are we"; vocal solo, Helen Hind;

Second Part.

Chorus, "Whisper Song", little ones; recitation, Merwin Malcolm and Geo. Palliser; chorus, Children's Christmas, Band; recitations, Merton Pearse and Irene Jeffs; gift exercise, by eight girls; instrumental solo, Mary McGregor; dialogue, The Vision", Winnie Phillips and Edna Stillman; closing chorus, "China for Christ".

Mrs. A. W. Free whos pent several weeks with her daughter in Toronto, returned to her home at Dr. and Ms. H. O. Richardson's, Queen street, last week.

FOURTEEN MEN ARE NOMINATED

what they are worth. "Take our city clerk for instance. I don't believe you can find another like him anywhere." (Applause).

"But others", he continued, "are not earning their money.

The speaker advocated a system whereby young men would be ready to step into the shoes of city officials who retire.. There should be no pensions.

Surface drains could be done in winter in order to give employment, Alderman Crowe concluded.

Alderman Morrison.

Alderman Robert Morrison thanked those who brought his name to the nomination meeting. As chairman of the Board of Works he had endeavoured to give perfect service at economical cost.

The $9000 spent on storm drains this year has not seemed to go far, but it is helping many in the south end of the city and in the west. If next year another $9000 is set aside then finally, year by year, all the city will be served.

As the city's representative on the Suburban Area Commission, he had tried to do his best to represent the city and citizens. From the city's standpoint he believed the Norwood road is the reasonable and right road as against the block road. The Engineer favored this Norwood road.

The commission has this year taken the goose neck off the Lakefield road, and this is a sample of the work being steadily done.

If he decides to qualify and is elected, Alderman Morrison said he would endeavour to serve again without fear or favor.

Alderman Maher.

Alderman M. J. Maher thanked his nominator very cordially; Mayor Turner for his courtesy during the year, and his brother aldermen with whom he had most cordial relations. He paid a graceful tribute to the women of the city, soliciting their support.. He had given his best attention to the affairs of the city that had come before the council.

If he should stand again his only promise would be to give his best attention to the matters coming up during the next two years.

The council has been wise in approaching the building of the sewage disposal plant warily since so many changes have been made in the systems of disposal. The plant finally designed will represent a substantial saving over the first plans submitted.

Thomas Sargent.

Thomas E. Sargent said he would promise not to do anything rashly; he would use his best judgment and would have a sober second thought to questions once decided. He had served two years as councillor in an adjoining municipality.

Alderman Stocker demanded the new candidate's opinion on public work in the city, whether it should be done by contract or day labor.

Mr. Sargent asked to be excused from giving a reply, saying that when he comes to the council he will doubtless have the opportunity to consider the question.

Frederick Tuggey.

Frederick T. Tuggey said he had appeared before and intended on this occasion to take the nomination. Some people think the city of 21,000 needs the same things that a city of 56,000 needs. "I am offering myself because I think I know what's good for the city of Peterborough," he declared.

In connection with the sewage disposal plant, Mr. Tuggey thought the council should move carefully, since it is dealing with other people's money.

"I am in favor of doing all city work by day labor only under a different system than the white elephant over the river. I want to see the city saving money.

I am prepared to stand or fall by the decision of the people on the ballot. I am spending my money in Peterborough. I am building for the future..

I could knock here tonight if I liked, but I'm not here for that. am prepared to give you my best If you don't want me, dont' elec me.

Arthur Blade.

Arthur W. Blade expressed his thanks for his nomination. He would make no rash promises for a promise made is a debt unpaid; but if elected he would give his best services to the city, he said.

The Season's Greetings To You

We take this opportunity of extending our heartiest and most sincere good wishes for a very Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

NEWS FROM MARMORA.

No Skating at Marmora or Delora Yet—Personal Mention.

MARMORA, Dec. 24.—No skating has commenced on the rinks at Marmora and Deloro as yet. Both rinks, however, are receiving attention and may be expected to be scenes of activity ere many nights pass.

The rink at Marmora is being run by Mr. T. E. Neal and Sons while that at Deloro has again been entrusted to Mr.. Harry Smith and Sons.

On Sunday morning the Bishop's Christmas letter was read at St. Paul's in course of the service.

There will be celebration of Holy Communion at St. Paul's at 8.30 a.m. and 10.30 a.m. on Christmas Day.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wells and the latter's mother, Mrs. Reynolds visited friends at Havelock on Sunday afternoon.

Miss Olive Jones, who is teaching in Toronto, arrived home for the holidays on Friday evening.

Merry Christmas

¶ The Good Will and Friendship created at this season of the year are assets of inestimable value.

¶ We should honor Christmas in our hearts and keep it all the year.

¶ We wish therefore to assure you of the sincerity of our sentiments when we express the hope that you may enjoy a Merry Christmas and a Happy and Prosperous New Year.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 24, 1924.

NO MAYORALTY CONTEST.

Peterborough has paid His Worship Mayor Turner the compliment and tribute of returning him to the Chief Magistrate's chair without a contest.

That no opposition was offered to another term for Mayor Turner will cause no surprise.

He has given excellent service in his first year in office, service of such a quality that it would have been an ungrateful community that would have refused him the honour of a second term by acclamation.

The Examiner is sure that His Worship will seek to show his appreciation of the Christmas gift made to him by his fellow-citizens by an even more faithful and thoughtful attention to the duties of his responsible position.

A FITTING TRIBUTE.

The action ofthe Reception Committee of the City Council in recommending to the Council the payment of a grant of $200.00 to the Peterborough Hockey Club to help defray the expenses of the team in connection with the S.P.A. series, will be endorsed by citizens generally, even by those who as a rule take little interest in hockey or the activitie of other sporting organisations.

The pride ofthe community has been stirred by the clear-cut triumph of the Peterborough team in competition with some of the outstanding hockey clubs ofthe Province, including the amateur champions of Canada.

The greatness ofthe victory, the amount of publicity and advertising that is involved in the capture of the Sportsman's Patriotic Association Senior Trophy are appreciated by the community, and it is but fitting that the Council, as the business executive of the citizen body, should express that appreciation in tangible form.

No other method of publicity the Council could have devised could have given Peterborough a tenth of the splendid advertising the S.P.A. record of the Peterborough Hockey Club has earned, and he Legal Committee is quite in order in recognising the debt owing to the players and officers of the club.

A MERRY CHRISTMAS.

The Examiner wishes its readers, young and old, here and scattered over the continent, a Merry Christmas.

The words are hackneyed enough, it is true.

They have been used every year for centuries, and yet no man can say "A Merry Christmas" without feeling a warm glow in his heart, and no man can hear the expression without being a little happier because it was uttered.

What a wonderful story, old, yet ever new, is the story of Christmas, the story of Love Everlasting, exemplified by a babe in a manger.

Its sweetness and charm are as potent as ever, and the writer who said that this old world is a little brighter and its songs ring out a little clearer, and its love reaches out farther and stronger because of the Babe who was born in Bethlehem, was expressing a simple truth.

If the spirit of Christmas can just get hold of us all, if the selfishness and lack of consideration, and the greed and the grabbing and snapping that are too often factors in our everyday life, give way to the spirit of thought for others, the spirit of service before self, the spirit of love, then this Christmas of 1924 will be indeed the merriest we have ever known.

The Christlike world may seem to be slow in materialising, yet each one of us can do much just now to make that part of the world in which we move a little more Christ-like. And as the Christian Guardian beautifully expresses it, "So shall Christ come again to earth bringing the gift of all-transforming love."

CHRISTMAS TREES.

The Examiner touched upon the question of Christmas trees the other day, deprecating the idea that any serious inroad upon our timber resources was represented in the annual cutting of small trees for Yuletide purposes.

Confirmation of the position taken by this paper is furnished by the American Tree Association, which points out that although five million Christmas trees will probably be used in America this year, these could all be grown on an area of 5,00 acres or less.

You would have to multiply this figure by 2,000 to reach the figure of ten million acres which is the forest area of all trees chopped down in a year.

As The Examiner pointed out, Christmas trees obviously form a very small fraction of the total of forest depletion, and if the trees are cut correctly for Christmas use, it will permit sturdier trees to attain greater growth.

In other words, the thinning out is necessary. fast. We are headed toward a timber famine unless the cutover acreage is replanted, the same as a farmer replants his fields for future crops.

But the solution of the forestry problem is not in stopping the cutting down of trees for legitimate purposes.

To the contrary, the solution is in planting plenty of new trees.

As we need more, we should use more—and provide more by reforestation.

There would be as much logic in prohibiting the use of lumber for building homes as in prohibiting Christmas trees.

Life is more than dollars and cents, more even than natural resources.

Happiness is worth almost any price—and nothing brings more joy to childhood than the Christmas trees so many people are making a fuss about.

CHRISTMAS GIFTS.

Christmas is the season of giving, says the Montreal Star. It would be difficult to determine to what extent the spirit of kindliness and of that trait which is summed up under he term of warmheartedness is inspired by the joys and anticipation of giving. We lay so much emphasis o nthe objective side of presents that we forget their subjective end. Yet the making of gifts not only reflects the habits, the tastes and the character of the giver, the very act of giving has its effect on the life and outlook of the donor. Whethere that effect is for good or for evil will depend on the motives of the giving, its influence for good being measured by the degree of unselfishness which has inspired the gift.

Christmas gifts should be of one of two kinds. They may be tokens to loved friends and dear ones, little sprigs of rosemary for the keeping of our friendships green. The intrinsic value of these gifts is of little account. If they are too lavish they embarrass the person to whom they are given. Their merit lies in the thoughtfulness which is displayed in their selection. "Just the thing I wanted," is the finest testimony of the value of a gift of friendship.

There is, too, another class of gifts. These are the gifts of service. First and foremost of these should come the homage paid to Him whose birthday gives the day its reason for observance. To keep His birthday by exchanging gifts with friends and leaving Him giftless is a mean observance of the day. Others, too, want gifts of service. The poor, the less fortunate, the hungry make an especial claim on our sympathies at this time. We shall not liquidate the debt we owe to the under dog by writing a cheque to some organisation, although much good may result from such a gift. That is stressing the objective side of giving. There is, however, a fuller plan.

Let each man and woman in the community search out to find what pleasure he can give to some one less fortunate than himself on Christmas Day. The more time he spends in the thinking the less selfish is likely to be his gift and the investment thus made will repay him an hundred fold, even on Christmas morning, in added happiness and the joy that comes of a good deed willingly and cheerfully done.

THE GREAT JOY.

(A Christmas Message by Dr. Dyson Hague, Toronto.)

A little baby is born. Nineteen hundred and twenty-four years pass. The history-crowded centuries come and go. After nearly two thousand years, His birthday comes again. It rings with songs. It scintillates with merriment. Myriads on myriads of voices utter words of cheer. Myriads on myriads of faces glisten with a curious rapture. Myriads on myriads of hands open to scatter gifts. A world awakens to find itself genial and generous; mellow with tenderness, softened by love. In the wide-spreading joy there is a chorus of gladness, a clasping of hands that sounds over the oceans and reaches all lands.

Think of it, you philosophers! A Baby is born long ago, and the world is excited to-day.

Explain it, ye sceptics! In lands a thousand and ten thousand miles away are festal celebrations.

Behold it, ye critics, and wonder! The great world of the Occident is celebrating the birth of a little Oriental child in a unison of songs, and gifts, and greetings of good-will.

One loves to think of the Incarnation story; the stupendous news that flashed as the angels swept into the sky, the splendour of the encircling hosts of angels. One loves to hear the startling words: Behold I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people; for unto you is born this day a Saviour.

Men's hearts still linger on the sweetness of the adjectives.

It is Good tidings, the gladdest, the happiest news to mortal ears.

It is Great joy; illimitable, transcendant, life-penetrative, age-permanent.

It's universal; to All people, for every soul in this great big world.

And above all, it's personal: I bring You glad tidings of great joy.

And it's so real. Because it told of the birth of a baby, it is ever sweet to children. It touches every mother and father heart.

It binds in bonds of love the members of the family, and brings ever sweet caressings and merry shouts.

Because it was a babe born in poverty, it has ever been a Gospel for the poor; and men think at Christmas as never other times of the feelings of the ill-clad and the starving.

Because it was One who gave up so much to come to us, Christmas has ever been celebrated by an outburst of unselfish kindness.

And because it is the Birthday of the Incarnate God of Love, there circles round the world in ever-widening circles the glad refrain: Unto us a Child is born; unto us a Son is given; and love pours itself out without stint for the cheerless and the Christless, the unhappy and the unendowed in this wintry world.

Yes. It's great joy. The march of time cannot diminish it. The clashings of wars cannot destroy it. So we must pass it on.

O scatter it through the voices of merry children.
Ring it out through the bells of a myriad churches.
Re-echo its music in the carols of a myriad choirs.

Preach it, ye preachers; teach it ye teachers; publish it, ye jowers of the press, till the very strangers within our gates in this Canada of ours shall hear the wondrous story, and learn with amazement that for them also The Child was born, for them also, God's Son was given. Yea, on and on the Great News must be spread, till "the new heaven and earth shall own the Prince of Peace their King, and the whole world send back the song which now the angels sing."

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The Examiner's most sincere Christmas greetings to all its readers.

Real Christmas weather has been provided—to the satisfaction of younger Canada at least.

Across the line they are calling moonshine whisky "bottled death"; and it seems to live up to its name, judging by the casualty list.

As The Globe puts it, to the man who has still delayed it will be at least some comfort to learn that the Christmas shopping will soon be done.

The O.T.A. is being introduced as an issue in the Toronto Mayoralty campaign. It is difficult to see the logic at its projection into the arena, but it is there, nevertheless.

Toronto is having a mayoralty contest which will afford the Star a chance to point with pride and the Telegram to view with alarm.

If "farmers who farm" are to control the U.F.O., how does Secretary J. J. Morrison get in?

The municipal election is drawing rapidly near, but you would never know it so far as talk of possible candidates is concerned.

Wise and Otherwise

Anything can happen. In Gary, Ind.., a cafe cook trying to reduce starved himself to death.

Women will be amused to learn the cook who starved while reducing was a man.

After due thought, we believe we have eaten in that Gary (Ind.) cafe where the cook starved to death.

One of the funniest things we have ever seen was a sign on a safe door, 'Out to lunch. Back in an hour.

More Indiana news: Bank safe was stolen near Terre Haute, the bank being too big to carry away.

Strange Washington news today: Senator sang a song at a banquet. Bet it was "What'll I Do?"

Things have broken so nice for him it should be easy for Dawes to quit swearing on the first.

West Virginia man lost a bet. Must walk to California barefoot. We would hate to be his big toe.

New York man is suing for a finger lost four years ago. It couldn't be that he just missed it.

Chicagoan who had a bucket shop is in the jug now.

Popular song writer got married in New York. Serves him right.

A girl bandit who held up and robbed Diminick Spatgoriy in Chicago was not after his name.

You always have to be a musician to play and the same thing is true of a radio.

It is very easy to tell when a man has been drinking.. He is broke.

A THOUGHT.

WHEN MEN LIE.

It is indeed interesting to study the patrons of a barber shop. Take the man who is having his hair trimmed. While in a sitting position and compelled to be more or less quiet, the man will talk about things that he would not think of referring to while in his business office. In a barber shop, even the conservative man will often make a confidential remark to his barber.

Drop the head-rest low for a shave and get the dignified customer into a horizontal position, and the mind of the otherwise dignified man seems to go off guard.

This may be accounted for in the fact that deep in the nature of all men is a disposition to make a confidant of someone close up. The social status of a man is more often revealed when in a reclining position.

When a man is standing erect and his head is in its highest elevation, his mental machinery is working differently. All elevations are cold.

When men lie they are more apt to tell the truth.

The more comfortable a man is, the more confidential he will be.

But why pursue this thought farther?

To the thinking reader there is a lot of psychology in this study, which can be traced into realms of real research and applied to man, the animal.

MONTREAL, December 23.—Sterling exchange rates were quoted here to-day as follows:

Sterling demand, $4.71¼.

Sterling cables, $4.71 5-8.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Dec. 23.—Wheat scored some brisk upturns in price today, chiefly as a result of the better buying support and owing to a decrease of selling pressure. Closing quotations on wheat were firm, 3-4c to 1 3-8c higher, with May 1.73¼ to 1.73 3-8 and July 1.48 3-8 to 1.48½.

EGG MARKETS.

OTTAWA, December 23.—There is practically no new development in the egg situation. Ontario country shippers are paying, extras 55c, firsts 44, seconds 32, and have made sales extras 62, firsts 50, seconds 38c f.o.b. Toronto market firm, jobbing specials 72 to 73, extras, 68 to 70; firsts 44 to 45, seconds 38 to 39.

Montreal firm, unchanged.

Winnipeg market firm, jobbing extras 70, firsts 65, seconds 42.

MONTREAL GRAIN.

MONTREAL, December 23.—The export trade in Canadian grain here continues dull and exporters generally do not look for any market improvement until after the turn of the year. The demand for cash grain in the domestic market was also very limited, and the prices for oats were unchanged. Ontario No. 2 white is quoted at 64c, No. 3 grade at 62c, and No. 4 grade at 60c per bush, ex-store.

Prices for spring wheat grades of flour were advanced 10c per barrel. The condition of the market for winter wheat flour was unchanged.

The demand for all lines of millfeed continues fairly good for both local and country accounts, and the undertone is firm.

The feature of the market for rolled oats was the advance of 10c per bag announced owing to the strength in the raw material.

Our Wish—

CONSISTENT low prices, service and a willingness to do a little bit more than was absolutely necessary have won us many thousands of additional friends during the past year.

Seventy new stores were opened to meet the ever increasing demand for the economy service of our stores; and sales will show a substantial increase in millions at the end of the year, and we believe Dominion Stores have played no small part in reducing the cost of living in 1924.

Every effort will be made to increase this service because it is our sincere belief that in so doing we not only aid our patrons to enjoy a very Merry Christmas, but also assist them in no small measure, and in a very practical way to have a Happy and Prosperous New Year—and this is what we heartily wish each one of you.

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS.

Greetings, my fellow citizens, and good wishes, most sincere,
For a bright and joyous Christmas, and the best of Christmas cheer,
Wishes that come straight from my heart, to every soul that's found
A dweller at this time within our city's circling bound.
To you be heaps of happiness, and grateful gifts galore,
Aye, all the bounteous blessings that kind heaven keeps in store.

May the brightest of prosperity on you unshadowed shine,
And favoring fortune's fairest flowers around your path entwine,
The spirit of Yuletide, too, preside, guest at your festive board,
And freely the oil of gladness, on each and all outpoured,
Yours, be the precious things of Heaven, and the fatness of the earth,
True love and friendship's priceless dower, than all beside more worth.

May good St. Nicholas come, with pack brimful of gifts and toys,
To fill the stockings all delight, all the dear girls and boys,
And the sweet balm of heaven descend, with soft and soothing power,
On every sad and sorrowing heart, like Israel's manna shower,
To every class and every creed, high, humble, great and small,
Peace and good-will, good luck, good cheer, and Merry Christmas All.

(Mrs.) A. F. Calder, Peterboro.

Q.—What houses are the easiest to break into?

A.—The houses of bald people, because their locks are few.

ROSENEATH NEWS.

ROSENEATH, December 24.—Santa Claus paid his annual visit to this village on Saturday, stopping at C. Brown's general store. He arrived quite early in the morning, waking the wee kiddies up with the sound of his bells. From then until the time of his departure he always had a large retinue of boys and girls in his wake, to which he distributed bags of candy and other things.

Miss Valda Brown, who had the misfortune to break a bone in her leg when her pony, which she was riding, slipped and fell on her, is doing nicely.

The children of S. S. No. 2 gave a concert in the School Room on Friday afternoon.

The Mission Band of the Methodist Church held a bazaar in the Town Hall on Saturday, when they disposed of many useful articles. They made over $30.00 over and above expenses.

Mr. Dan. McHenry, of Detroit, is visiting friends here.

A number from here motored to Cobourg on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Norris are spending the Christmas holiday with friends at Bracebridge and other points in that district.

Miss Bertha Clarke, teacher in the Junior Room here, has gone to Campbellford to spend Christmas at her home.

Q.—Why is it dangerous to sleep in a train?

A.—Because every train runs over all the sleepers on the line.

Our Debt to the World

WHEN we contrast her condition with that of most foreign lands, Canada appears like a ship resting in a sheltered harbor. She is rich, happy and at peace. The very fact of Canada's good fortune makes her a debtor. She owes the debt of goodwill and kindliness which Christmas revives and presses upon us as an obligation to those lands less fortunate than our own.

Over the crowded areas of Asia stalk the skeleton figures of war and famine. Over much of Africa hangs the dense pall of superstition and ignorance that have shrouded her for ages. Europe struggles with almost insoluble political and economic problems, and one Government replaces another, each in turn overcome by perplexity and despair.

Canada although she has a few troubles of her own, is a favored child among the nations, with many reasons for a grateful heart this Christmas. Let us remember our debts as we count our blessings. Let us aid all efforts to spread the light brought down from the skies two thousand years ago by One who "though rich, for man's sake became poor."

COBOURG AND THE DISTRICT

Considerable Election Talk in Town—Two for the Mayoralty.

COBOURG, December 24. (Special.) — There is considerable talk here over the mayoralty of Cobourg for another year. Col. F. D. Boggs holds the position at present and it appears to be quite generally conceded that he will decline to again be a candidate. Lt.-Col. J. W. Odell, public school inspector, is in the field, and Coun. F. J. McArthur is also an aspirant for the position. Col. Odell was formerly mathematical master at the C.C.I., and has been a resident of Cobourg for 20 years and more. Coun. McArthur has lived in Cobourg for 15 years, and for the past eight years has served the town as councillor. He is not aspiring to the offices of reeve or deputy reeve, which would give him a place in the counties council, but has definitely decided to be in the running for the mayoralty, it is understood.

It is thought here that if Cobourg has any acclamations this year they will probably be for the offices of reeve and deputy reeve, now held respectively by W. J. Corbett and H. McGuire.

It is further stated that there may be other candidates for the mayoralty besides Col. Odell and Mr. McArthur, and it is expected that there will be an unusually large number of aspirants for the floor of the house.

Coun. Dan Denton and Coun. John Russell, it is stated, will not again seek re-election.

Election in Haldimand.

There is quite a bit of election talk in some parts of Haldimand township. It is pretty generally conceded that a poll is practically assured, owing to the resignation of Mr. John Harnden from the council, owing to his removal a few weeks ago to his new home at Warkworth. A few of the names mentioned by Haldimand ratepayers are: F. J. Slade, an ex-Reeve and ex-Warden of the counties, Bertram Horken, James Walsh, Howard Machlin, D. Calnan, J. G. West, R. J. Heenan, W. C. Finlay, J. P. Kellogg, Andrew Spear, Robert Libster and, of course, several others.

W. H. Ketchem's Funeral.

Mr. Kenneth McCallam, Mrs. G. M. Roger, Mrs. Donald Macdonald and Mr. Garth Macdonald were at Colborne at the week end to attend the funeral of the late Mr. William Herbert Ketchem. An impressive service was held at Trinity church, conducted by the rector of the parish, assisted by Archdeacon Davidson, a brother-in-law of the late Judge Ketchem, and formerly of Peterborough. Mr. Davidson Ketchem conducted the musical service, which was a very beautiful one, playing at its conclusion the Dead March from Saul. All of deceased's brothers were present excepting Mr. Hugh Ketchem, who is abroad at present.

Youthful Football Star Gets Along On One Leg

RALEIGH, N. C., December 24. — Having but one leg does not stop Buck Cole as a football player. He is the star right guard of the Methodist Orphanage foothall eleven here, has played on the team for the past two years and is considered a tower of strength.

Cole's right leg was badly crushed in an accident when he was seven years old, and was amputated about 4 inches below the knee. He has become so accustomed to getting about on the shortened leg that Jack Cameron, athletic director and coach at the orphanage, declares that he is much faster than many boys with two good legs.

Cole does not wear an artificial limb while playing football. In getting over the field he uses his shortened leg as a kind of spring and jumps instead of runs.

Cole who is 17 years of age,weighs 150 lbs. He will be captain of the orphanage team next season.

STARTED SEASON OFF WITH A BANG

Mr. G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P., set the 1924-25 hockey season off with a bang last night by dropping the puck between the sticks of Frank Collins and Tracey Shaw at the Aura Lee-Peterboro game. He is also showing his appreciation of the Petes S.P.A. showing by presenting them with medals.

FABLES ON HELAT

Whooping cough is a malady likely to visit the children during the winter period, as was the case with one of the Mann youngsters..

Of course a doctor should be called, but in event that a doctor is not immediately available and the child should be seized with a paroxysm of coughing try this:

Raise the child's arms high above the head. Bring them down and press them against the chest. Or turn the child alternately upon his face and his side. Cold water may be dashed in the child's face and mustard packs placed against the feet. A piece of ice placed upon the stomach has been known to furnish relief.

When the weather is mild see that the child gets out of doors as much as possible. Fresh air is a fine tonic, but be sure the child is well wrapped.

It is well to fumigate the room in which the child has slept.

An Assassin's Death March

Daisuke Namba, who attempted to assassinate the Japanese prince regent, paid with his life for his act. He is seen here being led through the corridors of Ichigaya prison, Tokyo, under guard to his doom. His head is covered and his hands are shackled together.

BOOTLEGGERS TURN TO ALIEN RUNNING

More Money in Smuggling in Foreigners Than Whiskey and Rum.

GRAND FORKS, North Dakota, Dec 24—Tightening of the immigration restrictions has turned many erstwhile liquor runners to the less hazardous occupation of smuggling aliens into the United States from Canada, according to William Flynn director in charge of this immigration district.

Two hundred men keep watchful eyes on some 1,200 miles of border line under Mr. Flynn's direction, and it is inevitable that this small force cannot keep under constant observation every mile of the line.

There are two principal methods employed in smuggling aliens, according to Mr. Flynn. One is for the alien desiring to enter the United States to work his way to some city near the border and then watch for an opportunity to walk across the border.

The other and more common method is for veteran smugglers to load an automobile with aliens and drive across the border, dumping them down at almost any place, with no particular regard as to the possibility of the aliens being taken into custody within a short time.

These smugglers invariably leave the alien with very little money, Mr. Flynn declares, and it is easy for the smuggler to average $100 for each person thus illegally transported. As a rule the foreigners are driven only a mile or two across the border but occasionally they are taken to some town on the United States side, perhaps several miles from the line.

While deportation has been common practice, prosecution is being followed in this district and "is getting good results," Mr. Flynn said, as "the prospects of from three months to a year in prison is not so inviting to aliens as the mere prospect of being deported."

The alien runner has been known to make from $500 to $2,000 on one trip. Unlike the running of liquor, there is no original investment and no prospect of losing out, as he collects in advance from his "clients" and then dumps them at the first available spot without danger to himself.

A CHRISTMAS TREE

The annual Christmas tree and entertainment of the Sunday school of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, was held last evening in the Sunday school auditorium. A hot supper was served to the three hundred or more adults and juniors present, commencing at half past five o'clock. Mrs. J. John and Mrs. James McIntosh, assisted by ladies in charge of the Sunday school work, supervised the supper arrangements. After supper a very enjoyable entertainment by the pupils of the different [illegible] of the Sunday school, was put on, commencing with numbers by the Primary and Beginners' Departments, in charge of Miss Grace Allen. Mrs. J. A. McKone had charge of the balance of the entertainment, and both ladies deserve great credit for the excellent programme rendered. The children were arranged in tiers of seats on the platform, and were garbed in costumes representing different nations, the Spirit of Winter and the months of the year. Choruses and duets and solos were given, with national costume dances. Among those who had solos were John Wyllie, playing the violin, Margaret Wyllie and Hellen Hefferman, reciting, vocal numbers by Jean McKone and Bentley McKone, and instrumental selections by Alice Gordon and Jean McKone.

A Christmas tree, with Mr. J. John as the guardian Santa Claus was a jolly portion of the entertainment, each child receiving a gift, also some candies, nuts and oranges. Mr. J. A. McKone received an air rifle as his memento from Santa, and the pastor, Rev. James Gordon, was presented with a little woollen doll.

TICKET SCALPER ?

Mrs. Maybelle Fuller Douglas is one of the alleged principals in the $200,000 Chicago ticket scalpers' syndicate that went to the rocks. Her husband, Captain Bruce Douglas, was previously arrested by police and released on bonds. Mrs. Douglas was captured in a downtown office building.

RAIDING IN THE SAHARA.

Tit-For-Tat Method in Vogue and Excitement Great.

Continuing his fascinating account of his epic journey on camel-back "Across the Great Saraha," Captain Angus Buchanan in the Wide World Magazine, describes the raids which add zest to the lives of the fierce nomads of the desert. He writes:—

"Raiding in the Sahara is a kind of royal game, but everyone can play it. A skilled and enterprising leader, known to his friends to have a good head and warlike courage, can easily sit down on his doorstep and hatch a plot whereby he gradually obtains the secret promise of fifteen or twenty men to join him at a certain rendezvous, mounted and ready for the road, when he gives the signal.

"Such a man is usually one who has himself lost a goodly portion of his own camels and womenfolk in a recent raid, and his plans are devised so that he may make up his losses. Whether he plunders the original offender or someone else is often quite immaterial. "Take whatever comes" may be said to be the general motto of raiders.

"With this tit-for-tat method in vogue, it may easily be seen that raids form an unfailing source of excitement in the Sahara. The natives live from day to day with the thought of possible raids always at the back of their minds, and they are ever on the watch when the animals are grazing.

"The base of operations is very remote, as a rule, from the place it is intended to attack—six hundred to a thousand miles away or even more. Generally a spy arrives at the chosen village a month or two beforehand, and occupies himself in gleaning all the necessary information.

"The raiders travel light and move very swiftly. They have a few dry dates or some meat in saddle-skins, and carry fifty to a hundred rounds of ammunition apiece. After days of steady travel along circuitous routes, so as not to give warning of their approach, they ultimately arrive within striking distance of their quarry—say, some thirty or forty miles away. They then rest themselves and their beasts for a day in some quiet spot.

"When they decide to attack, they mount their camels in the late afternoon, and ride steadily through the night to their goal, which they plan to reach about two or three o'clock in the morning. Then they park their camels outside, and one or two men creep in on foot to ascertain the lie of the land.

"At the first streak of dawn they attack with that curious fatalistic courage that knows no fear, and usually meet with complete success."

CLERGYMEN FACE HARD TIMES.

FOLKESTONE, Dec. 24.—Recent years have not been at all easy for many of the clergy of the Church of England from a financial point of view, according to the Rev. W. H. Elliott, the vicar of the local church here.

Times have been so hard for some of them that one parson had no new clothes for 20 years, Mr. Elliott cited another case where at the tea-table at a clergyman's house there was never butter, milk or sugar; it was just a meal of bread and tea.

ENTERTAINMENT AT ST. PAUL'S CHURCH

Large Audience Enjoyed Play Entitled "Here Comes Christmas."

A very enjoyable and well-directed Christmas entertainment was held last evening in the Sunday School rooms of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, when the children of the school presented the jolly cantata: "Here Comes Christmas," to a large and appreciative audience of juniors and their parents. Mr. M. B. Chenhall directed the cantata, which was put on in excellent fashion by the small boys and girls taking part.

The platform was decorated in appropriate fashion for the occasion, and centred by a large Christmas tree. First came the snowflakes, a group of dainty little girls in white, followed by small boys representing Christmas bells, in red, girls wearing different colors as candles, larger girls as evergreen, in various shades of green, and boys as woodchoppers, doing an effective drill.

The musical numbers in the cantata were particularly pleasing and included opening and closing choruses; "Fling Wide the Christmastide Gates" and "Crown Ye Christmas"; girls choruses, "The Snowflakes" and "The Christmas Dinner," boys' numbers: "Bells of Christmas' and "The Woodchoppers, and general choruses: "The Christmas Greens," "The Yule Log," "Christmas Candles,' "The Icicles," "Star of the Christmas Sky," and "The Hamper from Home."

The Heralds of Christmas were enacted by Daisy Reid and Sybil Jackson, Billy MacPherson acted as Willy Wood, Isabel Pogue was the Spirit of the Yule Log, Eleanor Stacey the Spirit of the Christmas Tree and Margaret Reid the Spirit of Christmas Fun. Mr. W. Madill made a fine Santa Claus.

Each child from the Sunday school brought gifts for the baskets which will represent Christmas cheer for needy families. These gifts were collected and brought in, making a goodly showing, an evidence of the real Christmas spirit animating the small boys and girls.

FRESH WAR WOULD RUIN THE FRENCH

Would Be Wiped Off the Map, Says Premier Herriott.

PARIS, Dec. 24th (United Press). In the event of a fresh war France would be wiped from the map. Let us first discuss the question of adequate security."

This was the attitude of Premier Herriot in his conferences with Premier MacDonald at Chequers last June MacDonald to L'Eclair, which today publishes what it asserts is the text of the conversations.

MacDonald insisted on settling primarily on the report of the experts commission and the contingent debt problems, the newspaper says Herriot, of the other hand, defined security, the most pressing problem confronting Great Britain and France.

"General Nollet reports that Germany has had an army of more than 100,000 men" the French leader is quoted as saying "The Versailles treaty permits the preparation of a new type of army which will repeat what Prussia did to Napoleon.

Our country is facing a dagger thrust at its most vulnerable point. We cannot count on international conference. I freely admit that I prefer France to be unpaid by Germany rather than go on without adequate guarantee of security.

"We are facing dangers that would tend to make the Dawes plan useless. In the event of a fresh war France would be wiped from the map.

"Unless the League of Nations discovers a formula which will protect us ten years hence, what can France do should Germany refuse to pay.

I should be lacking in patriotism if I took no measures to present diplomatic representatives in Albania. Writing in the Isvestia, M. Steslov comments:

Three Robbers Met in Albania.

Italy, desiring to seize all Albania, Jugo Slavia desiring to annex the northern portion and reactionary England, the world robber, protector of every spoilation instigator of every violence.

"Jugo-Slovia showed her real self coming out openly as the bitterest enemy of Russia Wrangle emigres in preference to the Soviets.

VELVET BORDER

A velvet border is frequently used to excellent effect on a gown of crepe de chine or chiffon.

TURKEYS SOLD FOR 38 CENTS TO-DAY

Farmers' Market Small This Morning—Eggs Went For 60 and 65 Cents.

The farmers' market was small this morning. There were only a score of women vendors upstairs in the basket section and half a dozen carts on the open market, supplemented by as many loads of wood, which was priced all the way from $8 to $11 a load, in mixed and hardwood lots.

Turkeys were the main item on the bill of fare upstairs this morning. They were priced at 35 and 38 cents a pound. Geese were plentiful also at 23 and 25 cents. Dressed geese, ready for the roaster, young "July goslings," whose lives were cut short for the Christmas table, were 27 cents a pound. Chickens were scarce. One woman had fifteen, and sold them at 25 cents a pound. Downstairs, ducks were 30 cents a pound.

Eggs were 60 and 65 cents a dozen. One vendor had pure white ones in a basket frilled with deep red paper. Crystallized amber honey was 25 cents for a two-pound jar, and cream was 30 cents a pint.

On the open market, the apple merchant had the briskest sale, and didn't have many patrons, at that. Spies were 60 cents a peck; Starks and Baldwins 50 cents. Two or three carts held meat cascases, with beef at 8 and 10 cents for front sections, and 12 for hindquarters. Pork was 16 and 18 cents a pound.

Two vendors of household devices had an interested crowd. A small boy gazed enraptured at the gentleman whose swift flow of conversation centred around the advantages of a rubber cement, ordinarily 25 cents a throw, with a real Christmas bargain at two for the same price, and another loquacious seller held forth on the benefits to be derived from the purchase of a contrivance that enables the buyer to thread a sewing machine needle in a jiffy.

One man on the market this morning started from his home, ten miles away, at six o'clock, with a load of wood, and found the roads hard to traverse. He and his wife are going to "Grannie's" for their Christmas dinner, and are "taking the goose with them."

REV. L. HIGHT GETS LIFE IMPRISONMENT

Mrs. Elsie Sweetin to Spend Thirty-five Years in Penitentiary.

MOUNT VERNON, Ill., December 24. (United Press.) The Rev. Lawrence M. Hight was sentenced to life imprisonment, and Mrs. Elsie Sweetin to thirty-five years in prison, for the murder of Wilford Sweetin, by poisoning here to-day.

A jury returned a verdict against the defendants after considering the case throughout the night.

A packed court room heard the verdict.

The jury in the Sweetin case deliberated all night and to-day still was deadlocked.

From the jury room came no indication of whether the majority favored punishment or liberation of Lawrence M. Hight, the deposed pastor of Ina, Illinois, and Elsie Sweeting, charged with having poisoned the latter's spouse, Wilfred Sweeting.

The case went to the jury last night at 10 o'clock, after the state had demanded the death penalty for both of the accused.

Many Radios In Germany.

This Christmas Finds 500,000 Radio Subscribers.

BERLIN, December 24. — Growth of radio in Germany is strikingly illustrated by the figures given out by the post office department which is alone in the broadcasting field. Where as at the beginning of the year only 2000 radio subscribers were listed with the department, this Christmas finds 500,000 subscribers.

Crouma Being Recaptured.

Government Troops Sweeping Through Kossivo District.

SOFIA, December 24. — A statement issued by the Albanian consulate here alleges that the Albanian government troops are retaking Crouma in the Kossovo district, from the insurgents, captured a detachment of the Serbian regular troops with field and machine guns from the Serbian arsenal.

Postmen Pass By Houses That Keep Vicious Dogs

VIENNA, Dec. 24.—(Associated Press.) — For protection against burglars, apartment and house dwellers in this city make it a practice to keep watch dogs, mostly of the police variety. But the police dog apparently has no affiliation with the postmen for in the past nine months 38 letter carriers have had to defend themselves against ferocious attack by these household pets.

When the matter came before the postmaster general for action, this official ruled the postmen could decide where they would not deliver letters, on account of the dog, and that the householder would have to call for his mail at the post office.

CHRISTMAS IN N. Y.

Full Christmas Stockings For Millionaire and Working Man Alike.

NEW YORK, December 24. — Full Christmas stockings for millionaire and workingman alike, were in prospect as the merchants throughout the United States reported an unprecedented amount of seasonal sales.

Unemployment throughout the country is at a low figure and both volume and quality of Christmas purchases have reflected national prospects.

DETROIT TO ENTERTAIN SANTA'S MESSENGERS

DETROIT, Dec. 24. — (United Press.)—A gigantic barbecue dinner is being planned here for the 7,000 postal clerks expected to attend the annual convention of the National Association of Letter Carriers in September, 1925.

Belle Isle, famous as the pleasure ground of Detroit, is to provide the grounds for the barbecue after 20 bands composed of letter carriers have swaggered through down town streets and the mailmen have been taken on river excursions and to the International Sweepstakes Power Boat races on September 7 —the opening day.

Postmaster General New has been invited to attend the convention. Trips through factories of the Ford Motor Company and other industries in the city are being arranged for the visitors.

RUSSIA TO IMPORT SUGAR.

Failure of the Beet Crop Forces Purchases Abroad.

MOSCOW, Dec. 24.—Owing to the failure of the beet root crop, the Soviet Government has authorized the importation of 300,000,000 pounds of sugar, the bulk of which will be purchased in the United States, Czechoslovakia and England.

The Government probably will be obliged also to import a considerable quantity of grain to offset the shortage in districts where the crops failed and to enable the authorities to stabilize market prices.

SAUSAGE EATING CONTEST.

BERLIN, (United Press).—How long does it take to eat a dozen sausages? Valentin Hoertlbauer, a young farmer of the village of Ronweg in Bavaria, accomplished the feat in one minute and fourteen seconds at a contest held at the local inn. The second best took two minutes.

PARIS, Dec. 24. — (Canadian Press).—Luis Firpo, who is yearning for another chance at Dempsey's crown, expects to be matched with either Tom Gibbons or Jack Renault for a fight at Madison Square Gardens in April, he told French writers on his arrival here.

C.N.R. TRAIN DERAILED.

Engineer and Fireman Slightly Hurt—No Passengers Injured.

TORONTO, Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press).—When Canadian National Railway train number one bound from Montreal to Vancouver was derailed at Woodlawn, 28 miles west of Ottawa, at 2.55 this morning, engineer Gauvreau and Fireman Deevy of Ottawa were slightly hurt but no passengers were injured.

The engine and tender and seven cars left the rails, all remaining upright with the exception of the Engine and express car.

The sleeping, dining and observation cars were taken back to the Ottawa terminal where the train was detoured via Renfrew sub-division and North Bay for the west.

An official statement regarding the accident was given out here today by C. G. Bowker, General Manager of Central Region of the Railway.

SCHOOL SOCIAL HELD TRENT RIVER SCHOOL

A Number of the Childrens' Parents Enjoyed the Entertainment.

TRENT RIVER, Dec. 24.—The pupils of the day school, under the direction of their teacher, Miss Engisch held their annual Christmas Tree and entertainment at the school on Saturday afternoon. A number of the parents and those interested in the school's welfare were present. Mr. Isaac Lawson, one of the trustees of the school was present and was called upon to act as chairman.

The programme was as follows:

Opening chorus, "O Canada," by school; chairman's address; chorus, "Jingle Bells," school; recitation, Frank Garneau; recitation, Marguerite Revoy; dialogue, "Santa's Boys", by Junior boys; recitation, "When father carves the duck," Marion Glenn; song, "Lullaby", four girls; recitation, Milton Hawley; dialogue, Margaret Brown and Alice Garneau; chorus, school; recitation, Charlie Wight; recitation, Freddie Alley; dialogue, "A wonderful school", by Agnes Wight, Bessie Inkster, Bud Inkster; recitation ,Marguerite Revoy; monologue, Margaret Wilkinson; recitation, "St. Nicholas' Visit" Agne Wight; recitation, Frank Garneau; recitation, Alice Garneau; song, four girls; dialogue, "Kate Maloney's Philisophy", by Margaret and Elgan Ruttan; dialogue, Charlie Wight, Marion Glenn, Beatrice Glenn, Milton Hawley, Blanche Carurite with Frank Garneau as Santa Claus; chorus, "Tinkle tinkle", school.

The interesting number on the programme was the appearance of Santa Claus who approached the tree and disposed of the presents.

Home made candy was served to all by pupils of the school.

Mrs. George Vanvolkenburg was present as representative of the Seymour West Women's Institute and presented this school (which won first prize at the fair) $7.50.

The pupils presented Miss Engisch with a handsome box of writing material.

Miss Engisch returned to her home at Norwood Saturday to spend the Christmas holidays.

The event for this week is the Sunday School Christmas Tree and entertainment at the church Tuesday night, December 23rd.

Dr. Allan Michell left for Toronto last week to spend the winter after spending the past nine months guest at "Cedar Isle."

NEWS OF MARMORA.

MARMORA, Dec. 24.—Miss Muriel Litt, who has been attending the Normal Institute at Stratford, arrived home for the Christmas holidays on Friday noon.

Misses Grace Warren, Margaret McGraw and Reta Kennedy, of Toronto Normal, and Misses Hilda Phillips and Margaret Lynch, of Peterboro Normal, arrival home on Friday evening.

Messrs. W. Regan and A. Hart made a trip to Point Anne this week.

Mr. Almond Boyd has been sick for the past few days.

A young daughter arrived at the home of Tom McInroy on Monday last.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Bell, Miss Lorraine Bell and Miss Jean Thompson motored to Belleville on Saturday afternoon.

The teaching staff of Marmora Continuation School returned to their respective homes for the Christmas season: Miss Campbell to Smith's Falls, Miss Longmore to Campbellford, and Miss Sauve to Chesterville. Also the teachers of the Public School, Miss Topper to Clynburg and Miss Taft to Kingston.

Mr. Harry Pack, of Madoc, visited relatives in town on Saturday.

Miss Margaret McCoy, who is teaching school near Ormsby, arrived home for the holidays on Saturday.

Miss Jennie Smith, teacher, of Deloro, spent the week-end at the Methodist Parsonage.

The box social at Shanick on Friday evening was well attended.

Mrs. Milliken, of Deloro, left for New York on Tuesday. She had received a message that her daughter, Miss Grace Milliken, a nurse in New York, had broken her ankle.

Miss Shea, teacher at Deloro, went to her home in Stirling on Saturday.

Miss Myrtle Naylor took her little neice to her home in Lindsay on Wednesday and spent a day or so with her sister, Mrs. Percy Kennedy.

Miss Mary Oliver, teacher in Belleville, is spending the Christmas holidays with her mother.

Miss Florence Sopha of Belleville Business College is home for the Christmas holidays.

Miss Susan McWilliams, who has been in Rochester for the past few months is home for Christmas.

Mr. Harry Connor, Mr. Clayton Neal and Mr. Ralph Neal were in Belleville on Saturday.

Miss Marguerite Finnegan, who is attending the Convent in Lindsay, is home for Christmas.

Miss Thelma Neal, of Buffalo, is spending her holidays under the parental roof.

The Ladies' Aid of the United Church put on a very successful chicken pie supper on Monday, Dec. 15th, in the Maloney and Forstell Block. There was an abundance of good things to eat, served in a very satisfactory manner, and considering the extreme cold, there was a very good attendance. The proceeds were over $90.

The second annual Christmas entertainment of the United Methodist Presbyterian Sunday Schools was held on Friday night, Dec. 19th, in the Town Hall. A large audience listened to the programme.

The programme was as follows:

Sunday School chorus—"Merrily Ring the Bells."

Recitation, by "Erastus."

Acrostic, "Christmas Morn," Primary Class.

Solo—"I've a Secret," Allie Rylott.

Recitation—Tom Smith.

Canary chorus—Five boys.

Exercise—"Mother Goose."

Recitation—"A Message to Santa Claus." Marion Loveless.

Santa Claus' visit and presentation of candy boxes and oranges to the Sunday School.

The Sunday School Executive presented three prizes to those having the highest attendance during the year.

The winners were: Miss Olive Airhart (5 years), every Sunday; Master Jim Thompson (9 years), 1 Sunday absent; Master Earl Clare (3 years), 2 Sundays absent. The gifts were three books.

The cantata, "Miss Canada's Reception," was a blaze of color, as each representative of the Allies came in native dress. The singing of the patriotic songs was exceptionally fine.

This cantata was trained by Mr. Earl Prentice, Public School Principal.

The tableau drill was practiced by Mr. Aunger. This was given last year and repeated by request. It was very much appreciated and enjoyed.

The appearance of Santa Claus was a climax to a very enjoyable evening for the children. For it was "children's night." The door receipts were $65.40.

Mr. F. S. Pearce, superintendent, made a very efficient chairman.

The Ladies' Guild of the Anglican Church and the A.Y.P.A. combined and held a bazaar and sale of homemade cooking in the Maloney Forstell block on Saturday afternoon. The afternoon proved very successful.

The financial returns were $30 for the A.Y.P.A. and about $100 for the Guild.

The Springbrook Methodist Sunday School held their Christmas tree on Friday, Dec. 19. The following programme was given:

Recitation—Harry Bateman.

Octette—"Like Silver Lamps."

Reading—Cora Bailey.

Duet—Mary Lumsden and Laura Mason.

The Christmas Star Drill.

After the programme, a Christmas tree was disrobed, to the delight of the children. During this time, the pastor, Rev. D. R. Clare, was presented with a large fat goose from the Sunday School.

Mr. T. J. Thompson, the worthy superintendent, was chairman.

CRIME.

In the penitentiary at Joliet, Ill., young Loeb and Leopold become professors in the night school.

They are teaching fellow convicts how to read, write and spell and do sums in arithmetic.

Does it surprise you that these convict students need such juvenile instruction? Ignorance is one of the three chief causes of crime. Others are poverty and mental diseases.

BANK ACCOUNTS SHOW SHORTAGE OF $60,000

V. Baird, Charged With Theft, Remanded Until January 5th.

HAMILTON, December 24. Canadian Press. — V. Baird, an hotel clerk, charged by the Union Bank with theft, receiving and conspiracy, was placed on trial before Judge Gould yesterday afternoon.

John F. McClelland, the former manager of the branch of the Union Bank, now held on a charge of theft, testified against Baird, and when his cross examination was completed the case was enlarged until January 5th.

Baird's bail was renewed. McLelland on the stand admitted that his accounts at the bank showed a shortage of $60,000 and he declared that a great deal of this money had been lost in horse race gambling and Baird had received it.

POPE DISTRIBUTED JUBILEE MEDALS

Reception of Cardinals Held Yesterday—What the New Year Will Bring.

ROME, Dec. 24.— (Canadian Press).—The reception of the cardinals yesterday by Pope Pius in order that they might present their usual Christmas greetings to him was unusually solemn, because it coincided with the opening to-day of the Holy Door and the commencement of Jubilee year.

The feature of the reception was the address of Pope Pius. In it the pontiff emphasized the necessity for true peace, especially at the present time when the Christmastide joined with Holy Year.

"We hope the words, 'Glory to God and on earth peace, good-will toward men,' will come true," said the Pontiff. "May this holy year bring peace to them and peace to the heart and peace to the will; to the mind, to give mankind thorough knowledge of their rights and duties, together with a larger vision of truth; to the heart, so that men may forever more love each other as brothers, both individually and between the classes of the peoples; to the will, because therewith man can put into practice the necessary means to reach peace."

The latter part of the Pope's speech laid emphasis on the meaning of holy year, which he said would be a year of "purification, elevation, santification, redemptions and remission, thus becoming the dawn of that Holy Peace which we wish should reign in the Kingdom of Christ.

The Pontiff ended by saying that the meeting in Rome of so many pilgrims from all parts of the world would contribute toward facilitating universal peace. After his address, Pope Pius distributed to all those present medals commemorating jubilee year. The medals have on one side an image of the Pontiff and on the other side a reproduction of the dome of St. Peter's.

Pope Pius not only looked well, but was strong, alert and vigorous. Denial had been given prior to the Pontiff's appearance of a report that he was suffering from an attack of influenza. The address of the Pope required twenty minutes in its delivery, the Pontiff all the while standing on the throne. Afterwards he conversed with all the cardinals and many of the bishops and archbishops.

AT CAMPBELLFORD.

Mrs. D. A. Owens Receives Word of the Death of Her Father at Madoc.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 24. — This morning Mrs. D. A. Owens received word of the death of her father, William M. Spur, of Madoc, aged eighty-six years. Deceased retired last evening in his usual good health and passed away suddenly this morning. Mr. and Mrs. Owens will go to Madoc to-day. The condition of Mr. J. M. Bygott, who has been seriously ill, shows some improvement to-day. The hiccoughs from which he has been suffering have stopped, and hopes are entertained for his speedy recovery.

DR. FRANCIS LEE FUNERAL TO-DAY

Death of a Former Well Known Bethany Boy.

BETHANY, Dec. 24.—The death of Dr. Francis J. Lee occurred in Grand Rapids, Mich., Sunday evening. For the last 30 years Dr. Lee was an outstanding figure in the medical profession of that city and was a member of the Blodgett hospital staff for as long a period. He has been in ill-health for the last two years and was confined to his bed six weeks ago with Pernicious Anemia. Dr. Lee was born in the vicinity of Bethany, 57 years ago. He graduated from the Medical College of McGill University, Montreal, on leaving college he took up his studies at Detroit, Mich. Later moving to Ada, Mich., where he practiced for one year. He then went to Grand Rapids, Mich., in which place he remained until his death. He formerly was chief of staff at Blodgett hospital and also for one year was president of the Kent County Medical Association of which he was a charter member. He also on several occasions had been a delegate to the Michigan State Medical Society, and was a member of the American Medical Association. Dr. Lee was conscientious, dependable and loyal to the medical profession and to his patients. He leaves to mourn his loss besides a multitude of friends in Canada and the United States, three brothers and two sisters: Dr. R. A. Lee Frobisher, Sask., William Bethany, Ont., and Samuel, Swift Current Sask. Mrs. M. A. Wilson, St. Louis, Mo., and Mrs. S. Jamieson Bethany, Ont. The funeral will be held on Wednesday afternoon at one thirty from the home of his brother, Mr. William Lee, and proceed to St. John's Cemetery, Ida, where interment will take place.

HOME BANY SURVIVED 3 YEARS UNDER HANEY

Had President Not Speculated and Made Money, Bank Would Have Failed Sooner.

TORONTO, Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press).—That the Home Bank could not have survived the three years that M. J. Haney was president had he not speculated with the bank funds and made money, was the startling admission made by Richard P. Gough, former vice-president of the bank, told L. McCarthy, K.C., Crown prosecutor, at his trial before Judge Coatsworth yesterday afternoon. The accused asserted, however, that had he known that Haney had been "trying to rehabitate the bank by speculations," he would not have stayed with it. Asked if Haney had not given him some reason for his having speculated in stocks, the witness replied: "No, and I will tell you why he did not tell me. If Haney was getting part of the profit and the bank part of the profit, and the bank was putting up the money, it is not likely that he would tell me." But having gone that far, Gough declined to go to the extent of making any direct charge against Haney in that regard.

OBITUARY.

MRS. MARGARET GRAHAM.

There passed away at her home in Otonabee on Wednesday morning, 17th December, Margaret Stewart, relict of the late John Graham, in her 80th year.

Her death was unexpected, having enjoyed her usual good health up to the last.

The deceased was a daughter of the late Robert Stewart, one of the early pioneers.

Of a family of four, two are still living, Mrs. Isabell Breckenridge of Havelock and Mrs. J. L. Robertson, of Wenatchu, Washington.

She was a Methodist in religion, of a loving disposition, and ever thoughtful of the good of others.

There is left to mourn her loss, six children, Mrs. B. M. Breckenridge of Norwood, Mrs. G. W. Fife and Mrs. R. J. Steele of Otonabee, and John, Henry and Alexander, of Otonabee.

The funeral was held on Friday, 19th December, from her late residence to Fife's Cemetery.

The services were conducted by the Rev. Andrew McLauchlin, of Keene. Many friends and neighbours gathered to pay their last tribute to one who was respected and beloved by all who knew her.

CHRISTMAS SERVICE AT BURNBRAE CHURCH

"For We Have Seen His Star," Was Subject of Rev. Mr. McKenzie.

BURNBRAE, Dec. 24.—A special Christmas service was held in St. Andrew's Church on Sunday morning at 11. The pastor, Rev. Mr. McKenzie, took as his text, Matthew, 2nd chapter, 2nd verse: "For we have seen his star." He stressed the point that each one should make himself a star to guide some one to Christ.

Special Christmas music was also given. A solo by Mrs. Chas. Milne, quartette by Messrs. Geo. Donald, Allan Hutcheon, H. M. Donald and Ed. Rannie, and an anthem by the choir added to the spirit of the service.

The Christmas entertainment was held in the basement of the church on Friday evening. A varied programme of music, recitations, drills and dialogues was presented by the children and young people of the Sunday School.

A Christmas entertainment was held at S.S. No. 1 on Friday afternoon, and was well attended by parents and trustees. An interesting event was the presentation of a mantel clock to the teacher, Miss Merrill Upton, on the eve of her departure from the section. The address was read by Miss Laura Watson and the presentation made by Miss Jessie Wright.

On Thursday evening last a number of the patrons of Prince of Wales Cheese Co. and neighbors of Mr. Wm. Locke gathered at the home of Mr. Jesse Locke, to spend a social time together prior to Mr. Locke's departure for Toronto, where he intends to reside in the future. During the course of the evening Mr. Locke was presented with a handsome cane, as a small token of his neighbors' regard for him, and appreciation of his services as president of the Cheese Co. The evening was enjoyably spent in music, games and dancing.

Shooting matches have been quite common here this fall, due in a large measure to the low price on the market for ducks and geese. Some of the sports are becoming such accurate shots that it is a hard matter to decide the winner. Mr. Frank Little held a match on Thursday afternoon last, while Mr. Jas. Stewart, Menie, is holding one today.

The annual meeting of Menie Cheese Co. was held on Saturday afternoon. This is a new factory which has just been in operation three seasons, but is already one of the largest in the district, and serves a wide range of dairy country. The total output of cheese for the past season was 151,087 lbs., selling at an average price of 16.17 cents per lb. The price per lb. butter-fat for the season was 37.089. Almost $1,100 was realized from the sale of whey cream. Mr. Frank Little, who has been the maker for the past two seasons, has been reengaged. Mr. Wm. Rannie is president of the company and Mr. W. S. Milne secretary.

The first sawing of the season was done at Mr. Lindsay Watson's on Wednesday and Thursday of last week. Mr. Frank Little and Mr. Wm. Longmuir operated the outfit.

MILLBROOK NEWS

Mr. J. Sloan, and family, have moved to the house near the C.P.R. station, belonging to Mrs. William Turner, formerly occupied by Mr. F. Rowe.

J. Crocker has disposed of the Dominion Hotel property to A. Jeffrey, of Prince Albert, near Port Perry. It is expected that the building will be fitted up as a creamery and put in working condition soon after the new year.

Calomel To-Night

Hot Water Before Breakfast

No more headaches, indigestion, foul breath, constipation, kidney pains, if you will but follow a doctors advice by taking two Tanol Calomel Tablets tonight and a good drink of hot water in the morning to wash from the system all the previous days' poisons and wastes before more food is taken in. Tanol Calomel is harmless, acts on every organ of the body, stomach, kidneys, liver and bowels, no salt or seidlitz are necessary, does not nauseate like ordinary calomel. Get a few of these tablets from your druggist and you will be surprised how much better they will make you feel. These inexpensive tablets can be obtained at F. C. Weber, Charlotte street.

The scarf of this season is wound closely about the throat and the streamers usually hang down in the back rather than in front.

MUNICIPAL ISSUES DISCUSSED AT A MEETING NORTH MONAGHAN COUNCIL

For the Second Time Council Was Returned by Acclamation—The Much Discussed Lockie's Bridge.

SCHOOL PROBLEMS.

The township of North Monaghan once more saved itself the expense of an election and proved its confidence in the present members of its Council by giving them an acclamation nomination yesterday afternoon. This is the second time that township's Council has been re-elected by acclamation. Reeve Rye and Deputy Reeve Lillico have had three acclamations, and are entering on their fourth term of office this year. There were no contestants for the honors of municipal office, and the motion for acclamation put at the nomination meeting, held yesterday afternoon in May's School House, with Township Clerk Bruce Johnston presiding, went through without a hitch. It was moved by M. H. Johnston and seconded by A. M. Laing, and passed unanimously by the meeting, composed of about twenty-five ratepayers of the township. The Council will consist of Reeve H. B. Rye, Deputy Reeve R. T. Lillico, and Councillors R. A. Dobbin G. A. Wood and W. C. Fallis.

Chairman Bruce Johnston, opening the meeting, commented on the smooth, harmonious working of the deliberations of the township's council during the year, and this harmonious spirit was reflected in the conduct of yesterday's meeting, which moved with jovial bits of humour to a successful conclusion. The atmosphere of Christmas-time dominated the school room in which the meeting was held probably emanating from the fat Santa in red habiliments who held his vertical brown reindeer in check on the blackboard, and moved majestically toward three haughty brown chalk camels, treading dicf infully on turfs of green grass.

Suitable acknowledgement of the honor conveyed to them and extension to all present of the season's greetings opened the speeches of the reeve, the deputy reeve and the councillors, who spoke briefly in turn at the meeting.

Reeve Rye touched on several matters of interest to the township. "There has been a good deal of talk that Monaghan was not getting its share of county money. I have tried to get from the county a fair share of the money the county spent on country roads and bridges."

Referring to criticism of Lockie's bridge, Mr. Rye said that one man went so far as to say that it was built upside down. This bridge was considered by experts as being the best type of bridge for the locality it served, and was not an experiment, ridges of its type being in use in different parts of the country. "That road down there is a county road. The county want it taken off the county system and put back on the township. I have been trying to hold that. I think the movement to reduce the mileage of county roads is advisable, but I don't think that North Monaghan has had as much mileage as we are entitled to. Other counties with a lower assessment have a higher mileage. The actual cost of that bridge was $4,301.29. The Government grant of forty per cent, in round figures was $1,720. The cost to the county was $2,580, and to the township of North Monaghan about $300."

Speaking of some matters of public interest, Reeve Rye said that the question of abolition of statute labor might be made and a levy on the municipalities of so many mills on the dollar substituted. The Government would grant a five per cent bonus, providing the township appoints a superintendent to look after the work, paying fifty per cent of the superintendent's salary and thirty per cent of the monies expended on roadways. Two men from the Department came down to consider the application of this change to North Monaghan. This township, being to a certain extent urban in its population, would not, under this system, get an equitable amount of road costs It would be necessary to put on a rate of about three and one-half mills and the farmer would pay twice as much as at present for his road work. "Their suggestion was to raise the assessment in certain sections, but if you start to raise the assessment in the township of North Monaghan, then the county comes nosing around to see if they can get some more money. The Government are now considering some other method for use in a township like North Monaghan, where they admit the system would not work satisfactorily."

Speaking of liabilities on travelled highways, the Reeve said that the Act is on contributory negligence, and is so framed at present that "it is practically, 'heads you win, tails I lose.' If a man driving along a highway gets his car into the ditch, and puts in a claim for contributory negligence, it must be proven how much money that man would be entitled to if there had been no contributory negligence, and in any case, the municipality has to pay one-half of the damages. I think the townships should take this matter up individually and fight it out in the House at the next session."

With regard to the question of hospital bills, and the township's liability for them, the Reeve said "it has got to such a state now that it is almost impossible to protect the municipality against undue costs in hospitals. We had a case this summer where four or five of a family of children were down with scarlet fever. Some of the doctors wanted us to put them in the Isolation Hospital at $4.50 a day, with extra costs and a special nurse, which would probably come to about $7 or $8 daily. Neither the people affected nor the municipality could stand such expense, so we put a nurse in there and handled the case at a cost of about $150 to the municipality."

"With regard to the other hospitals, we have doctors who come in and take out any case they find without consulting any municipal official, and the first thing we know about it is from notification from the hospital that the patient has been admited and hat the municipality is liable for the costs. I don't think that is fair or just. I think that besides having a medical health officer for the township, we should have an indigent officer, and serve notice on the Peterboro doctors that any case to be admitted to the hospitals must have first the authorization of the indigent officer."

Mr. Rye explained the matter of the Suburban Area Commission having started certain work in the Park Street South district as a desire to leave a legacy for the new commission, if they wished to proceed with it. He said that the commission had run out of funds, after its operations in the Goose Neck district at Lakefield, and had implemented a previous promise to do some work for the township by commencing the Park Street work.

John McIntosh, ex-Reeve of the Township, asked how much money the superintendent of county roads got in the year, and was told that he received $2,100 from the county and $1,000 from the Suburban Area Commission.

Deputy Reeve R. T. Lillico confined his address chiefly to a recapitulation of work done at the House of Refuge in Lakefield, of which he had been chairman during the past year. His report was mainly a record of outgoings in the matter of money and of sundry harassments with regard to various matters at the institution. The first item was the sale of one of the teams in use at the House of Refuge, for which $36 was procured at the market sale, and replacement with a team costing about $150. Repairs to the boiler and complete overhauling of the heating system cost the county about $2,465. The bottom then dropped out of the big water-tank in the attic, which was replaced at $360. The windows required weather-stripping and filling in, cement and tiling was put into two lavatories, at a cost in the neighborhood of nearly $600, and the breed of cattle, which were mainly of the beef variety, was changed to the Holstein dairy type. The purchase proved very unsatisfactory, and on top of this disappointment, came a fire, in which, however, all stock was saved with the exception of three or four calves and a pig. Three milch cows were then purchased, with a couple of stockers and eight or ten fat hogs, and a work team of horses. Mr. Lillico's list ended with the information that a new barn would be required in the spring.

Speaking of the school problem in the county, the Deputy Reeve said that arrangements had been in process of making for the past three years, whereby rural pupils from Norwood, Otonabee, Smith and Douro could be admitted to the high schools here.

"Some of you don't know that we are paying a county rate for high schools in Lakefield, and if we send our children to town here, and if we get them in, we pay another $50 out of our own pocket. Now, we claim that it is the county's place to make an agreement with the city, if possible, to get these children taken into the Peterboro schools. I think there is now a movement on foot, whereby the city will accommodate the rural pupils and an agreement be made with the county council to pay the fee. I don't think it is fair for our children to have to go to Lakefield when they can get into the Peterboro schools."

An interjection was made: "Send them to Norwood. You give a bigger grant to Norwood than you do to Lakefield."

Mr. Lillico explained that Lakefield was nearer and the children did not have to board away from home. The railway fare for school children was only fifteen cents return, a very small amount. The grant to Norwood was given in 1923 and also last year, because they had asked for help in equipping an extra room. The grant was $800 this year. Lakefield gets $400.

A member remarked that he had been for eighteen years on the Norwood school board and never in that time had seen a pupil there from Monaghan.

Speeches of thanks were briefly made by the councillors in turn: R. A. Dobbin, G. A. Wood and W. C. Fallis. Ex-Reeve J. McIntosh, who has been present at North Monaghan nominations for twenty-seven years past, also spoke. He explained that he had enquired as to the extent of the salary of the superintendent of county roads for the reason that a motion at the June county council meeting, which had no seconder, had been made to reduce the salary of the superintendent to $1,800. On the morning following, a motion, which went through, placed his salary at $2,100. Mr. McIntosh thought a rider to this last resolution would have saved the extra $1,000 that the superintendent now received.

Reeve Rye said that the Suburban Area Commission, which pays the extra $1,000, is an entirely separate corporation body, and is quite ot liberty to pay this extra amount, if it wishes to.

Reeve Rye also brought forward a matter, which was moved by J. McIntosh and seconded by Jno. Coombes, that taxes for the year be rescinded in favor of Bert Stevens, who recently suffered the misfortune of a severe fire. This was passed unanimously.

The meeting concluded with a universal demand for a speech from John Coombes, an evident favorite with the assembly, who was applauded heartily when he rose to refuse in characteristic fashion to make an address, demanding the closing of the session from Chairman Bruce Johnston, which the latter proceeded to do with a reiteration of hearty good wishes for the Christmas season and the New Year.

The Ladies Aid of the Methodist Church put on the annual entertainment and Christmas tree in the Sunday School room of the Church on Friday evening. The programme was lengthy but many of the numbers were short and much credit is due those who trained the children to perform their various parts as even the smallest child excelled himself. During the evening two telegrams were received from Santa Claus telling of his arrival at Lindsay and later at Reaboro, and would arrive at Omemee about 9.30. This proved great merriment among the juveniles which was greatly enforced when he proved as good as his word, and appeared in due time, to greet the children in their closing number. He then distributed a 130 bags, each containing an orange, home-made candy and nuts among the children, and after wishing one and all a "Merry Christmas" made a hurried exit to his next appointment The following is a list of the programme.

Put on Play.

A number of young people from Bethany motored to Omemee on Wednesday evening and presented their play, "Civil Service," in Coronation Hall, under the auspices of the Athletic Association. The attendance was only fair, owing to the young people of the village being engaged in the preparation of the various Christmas entertainments. However, those who did attend were amply pleased, as the play was one of the best and each character presented his or her part in an excellent manner.

why only natural Bran?

WHETHER you use bran in baking, or sprinkle it on cereals, soups or fruits, it's best to use bran that is not already cooked or treated. Tillson's NATURAL Bran combines best with other ingredients in baking, and its action is more definite and normal.

Bulk bran contains dirt and other harmful impurities. Tillson's NATURAL Bran is carefully purified and sterilised. Then it is packed in dust-proof cartons that maintain its absolute purity.

DAYS OF OLD ILLUSIONS

Days of the old illusions—
These are the sweetest yet,
Believing there is a Santa Clause,
Forgetting the foam and fret;
Hearing the music of far-off things
And mornings of Christmas cheer,
When love was a harp on the tree of dawn and happiness bending in.

I'm fond of the old illesions—
And what if they do illude?
Isn't it fine, for the fancy's sake,
To eat of the fairy food?
Catching the whisper of moment effin as things can be,
And the cedar bough and the citron-wood and the globe of the holly tree.

Believe in the old illusions,
And pay the scoffer no heed
For, oh, how far from the stain and scar
And the ache and pain they lead,
Down into lands of visions and far on the peaks of light,
With the holy star of a golden faith aglow through the deeps of night.

WANTS ONE BOSS IN CITY OFFICE

Alderman Crowe Would Eliminate Waste Motion in City Buildings.

TO SAVE TIME.

Alderman Joseph Crowe, who seeks re-election in 1925, told The Examiner to-day that if elected he will urge the need for a central control of all city office staffs with a view to giving better service during busy periods and eliminating waste.

In explaining his proposal, Alderman Crowe said there are times when one branch of the office staff is very busy while another is slack. Under his plan, the slack staff would take some of the burden off the busy department.

With one person responsible for all staffs there would be an elimination of waste motion, too, that would be a saving to the city. That person would also be responsible to the City Council, who would have an assurance that the $50,000 paid out in wages is returning adequate working value. Any other institution of similar proportions would have this central control, Alderman Crowe believes.

SCIENCE CONFERENCE.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press.) — Delegates from nearly all the Canadian universities will attend the 79th meeting of the American Association for the advancement of science to be held here from December 29th to January 3rd when 3,000 university professors, research workers,, astronomers, educationists, medical men, engineers, agriculturalists and economists assemble for what is virtually the annual North American Congress of Science.

Is Tongue Coated? Try This Simple Mixture

A badly coated tongue is a sign of stomach or bowel trouble. Often simple buckthorn bark, magnesium sulph, c.p. glycerine, etc, as mixed in Adlerika, produces real benefit. Because this is such an excellent intestinal evacuant it is wonderful for constipation—it often works in one hour and never gripes. Adlerika helps any case of gas on the stomach unless due to deep seated causes. Sold by McDermid & Jury and E. L. Payne, druggists.

THE CLINGING VINE.

(By Cynthia Grey.)

A long time ago there used to be the woman known as the clinging vine. She clung. And often she leaned upon the shoulder of some sturdy oak.

* * *

Her own shoulders sloped. Her head drooped. Her lids were lowered. And her step dragged. She was a broken blossom, right!

Men rushed to help her from the horse-cars. Or to pick up her hanky. Or to offer her their arms over the muddy street.

* * *

For those were the days when women could depend upon men and get away with it. And the reason that we see no more clinging vines among the button-shoe boys, the lobby lizards, and the finale hoppers.

CHRISTMAS, 1924.

The world sits at the feet of Christ,
Unknowing, blind and unconsoled,
It yet shall touch His garment's fold
And feel the Heavenly Alchemist
Transform its very dust to gold.

NEW LINE JACKET

This Palm Beach suit shows a clever combination of plain and figured material and a new line in a jacket. It is essentially youthful in appearance and a little less severe in cut than those to which we have been accustomed this season.

BANK CLEARINGS.

Total for Past Week Was Low at $730,671.

The bank clearings for the week ending to-day shows a decrease of $80,043, when compared with last week's total, which was $810,714.

This week's total was $730,671, and for the same week in December last year the total was $805,372.

CHRISTMAS SAYINGS

After Christmas comes Lent.
Now's now, but Yule's in winter.
A white Easter brings a green Christmas.
A Yule feast may be quit at Pasch (Easter).
A bleak Christmas maketh a fat churchyard.
He hath eaten many a Christmas pie.
They keep Christmas all the year.
It smells of muscatel like an English Christmas.
Christmas, long looked for, comes at last.
St. Andrew, the king, three weeks and three days before Christmas comes in.
The devil makes his Christmas pie of lawyers' tongues and clerks' fingers.

Christmas comes but once a year,
And when it comes it brings good cheer.
At Christmas time or a little after,
A crab in the hedge and thanks to the grafter.
Bounce buckram, velvet's deer,
Christmas comes but once a year.

If Christmas on a Sunday fall,
A troublesome winter we shall have all.

If Christmas on a Monday be,
Then a great winter we shall see.

THY GIFTS, CHRISTMAS

Oh! holly branch and mistletoe!
And Christmas chimes where e'er we go!
And stockings, pinned up in a row!
These are thy gifts, December.

And if the year has made thee old,
And silvered all thy locks of gold,
Thy heart hath never been a-cold,
Or known a fading ember.

The whole world is a Christmas tree,
And stars its many candles be,
Oh! sing a carol joyfully,
The year's great feast in keeping.

For once, in a December's night,
An angel—held a candle bright,
And led three wise men by its light—
To where a Child was sleeping.

"CORRIGAN

by EDMUND SNELL

"Put 'em up, both of you," called the first assistant from the window, his automatic leveled.

"Up with 'em!" shouted Fellowes again—and Paterson put them up.

Corrigan relieved him of his weapon. Fellowes climbed into the room, breathing heavily. The sight of the girl he had once kissed shamed him.

"Corrigan," he cried reproachfully, "what on earth does it all mean? They might have killed you!"

"Oh! but I knew you'd be there," returned Corrigan, still with that exasperating grin.

"But it's preposterous! I might have slept!"

Corrigan came toward him and placed a heavy hand on his shoulder.

"You were feeling rather sick with yourself this afternoon. You were getting a notion into your head that I wouldn't trust you—after that." He nodded toward the girl. "I knew I could rely on you, old son. I wasn't taking any risk at all, you see. I knew you'd be there!"

A mist swam before the assistant's eyes.

"But it's wonderful—!" he blurted out.

"I only keep wonderful people about me," laughed Corrigan, "and we'll leave it at that!"

V—THE BLUE MONKEY.

Corrigan sat up in bed, stretched himself and yawned. A tropical deluge was still descending outside, but the fury of the storm god was spent except for occasional flashes at the half-open window and an intermittent rumbling in the far distance. The night air was decidedly cooler. He reached down for the blanket which lay, folded, at his feet, and pulled it over him. He glanced at his watch The radium fingers pointed to ten minutes to two. It occurred to Corrigan, as he knocked the pillow into a more comfortable shape with his fists, that this was the third consecutive night he had woken at that precise moment. He clasped his huge hands behind his head and looked thoughtfully at the roof of white material from which descended the mosquito curtains. On each of the previous occasions he had blamed the dog—that yellow member of a nameless race that had followed him home more than a month before and had so ingratiated itself with the proprietor of the Orang-Puteh Kabun that he had presented it with both a collar and a name. The animal had accepted them with an enthusiasm that bordered on the miraculous; the collar raising it in social status high above all other dogs that prowled the estate, even above Hitam, the black Chow that White's Chinese wife had brought from Hong-Kong; the name—Panus—being a purely personal affair which served to cement the bond of friendship between Corrigan and itself! It was singularly unfortunate that the deep-throated, sleep-destroying performances of the said Panus had almost succeeded in severing that bond of friendship altogether.

But tonight the dog had remained silent—and yet Corrigan had found himself wide awake at ten minutes to two!

Millett, the third assistant, who had arrived in the little coasting steamer from Singapore barely 15 days ago and occupied a room in Corrigan's bungalow, so that the great man could keep an eye on him and mold him in accordance with his views, declared that Panus was a creature of the highest intelligence and that he never barked without good reason; but Millett—a red-headed, freckled youth, was imbued with an inordinate amount of youthful enthusiasm and could not truthfully be said to have had ample spare time for animal study during his brief stay with Corrigan.

Corrigan worked like a horse, and he expected his assitants to do the same. The red-headed one superintended a roll call of his coolies at five-thirty each morning; ate his breakfast under the trees in a remote corner of the estate; returned to lunch in the vicinity of noon; rested his weary limbs during the hottest hours of the tropic day and resumed his outdoor duties from three till dusk. Then followed a whisky at sunset, a hot bath, dinner, a tune on the gramophone—and bed! A fortnight of this intensive training had by no means curbed his youthful enthusiasm. Corrigan noted this—and was satisfied. Already he saw in him the makings of a first class planter; but he wasn't over-inclined to accept his opinion of the yellow dog.

The rain ceased as abruptly as it had started, but still Corrigan felt no desire to sleep.

The moon, emerging suddenly from a cloud bank, threw its sickly rays in at the window, bathing the room in a ghostly light. There came a queer, scratching noise on the woodwork outside and the animal on the veranda found its voice. It began with a low growl, interspersed with short, sharp barks, then bounded into the night, barking furiously.

"Oh, Hell!" said Corrigan.

He parted the curtains with one hand and groped on the table at the side of the bed for cigarets and matches. As he paused, nursing the flickering flame between his fingers, something made him look up. He saw the shutter swing wide open—then bang to, as if propelled by an unseen hand! The match burned his fingers and he dropped the glowing end clear of the bed. Under the window Panus growled and snarled in a paroxysm of canine fury: the scratching on the outer wall had become more pronounced.

Corrigan vaulted from the bed and crossed the room with bare feet. He pushed open and secured the shutter, then leaned out of the opening, peering in all directions.

The dog ceased barking and came toward him, wagging its tail. It placed one paw on a beam that supported the structure and gazed toward the roof, whining softly.

"What is it, old son?" demanded Corrigan.

As if in reply, the yellow dog, its head in the air, began running along the side of the house, sniffing eagerly.

"A damn rat!" declared the planter and went back across the room for his slippers.

Corrigan's "cellar" was a windowless apartment which lay between Millett's room and his own. A sensation of acute thirst reminded him of its proximity. He tightened the sarong at his waist and opened the door. It was pitch dark within and the sea of bottles packed together on the floor necessitated careful maneuvering. Placing one hand on the partition, he stooped and groped for the neck of a bottle.

His fingers closed over a human hand—as warm and as large as his own almost.

"The Devil!" came a familiar voice from the darkness.

"Not at all, my dear Millett!" returned Corrigan, recovering from his surprise. "Observe how great minds think alike!"

"Oh, Lord!" laughed the other. "Couldn't think, for the life of me, who it could be! The dog woke me, y'know. Beer seemed to be indicated—and I pushed in here."

"Get a light. We'll make an occasion of it—on the veranda."

"It'll be pretty wet out there," said Millett, thrusting a bottle into each of the side pockets of the jacket he had slipped on over his pyjamas. "There's a small river flowing under the door of my bedroom at the moment!"

He backed until his heel kicked against a hurricane lamp, picked it up and lit it. Corrigan replaced one or two of the bottles that had fallen and picked his way gingerly to Millett's side. They passed out into the living room and paused at the doorway which led on to the broad veranda.

As Millett had predicted, it was wet and cheerless outside. The canvas of the heavy Sandakan chairs were black with moisture, the cane krosi were equally unusable. The keen odor of damp earth hung everywhere.

The assistant set the lamp in the centre of the sitting room table and pushed a chair toward Corrigan. They sat down simultaneously and Millett opened one of the bottles.

"Sleep," said Corrigan reflectively, "is one of those things I can't afford to lose. That dog'll have to go—there's nothing else for it."

"What d'you propose doing with it?"

"I'll send it across to Fellowes. He can do with a dog."

"It'll come back." Millett emptied his glass and sat back in his chairwith a sigh of contentment.

"Then it'll have to be shot," declared Corrigan with an air of conviction.

A MERRY CHRISTMAS TO ALL OUR FARM READERS

Origin of Christmas Tree

Though the "festive evergreens" are so ancient that their history is buried under the sands of time, the institution of the Christmas tree in English-speaking countries is comparatively recent. It was the Germans who introduced the tree into England, where its transference is attributed to Prince Albert, who retained his German tastes and satisfied them at Court.

In France the Christmas tree was quite unknown until some years ago, but it has been introduced with other customs by way of England. Italy has its Christmas tree, but it takes so many forms there that it becomes scarcely recognizable. In Florence, for instance, it appears as a kind of basket made of straw.

From China.

Originally, the Christmas tree is thought to have come from the land of "the heathen Chinese." In the records of the Tsin dynasty, which ended 247 B.C., and from the name of which our word China is derived, interested delvers have discovered that a tree of a hundred lamps and flowers was placed at the entrance to the audience hall. The celebrated Princess Yang, the all-powerful favorite of the Emperor Ming Huang, A.D. 713-755, caused a "hundred lamp tree," 89 feet high, to be erected upon a high mountain. It was lighted upon New Year's night, and its light was seen for hundreds of miles, eclipsing the light of the moon. At the present time, the Christmas tree is no longer lighted in China, being replaced with enormous quantities of lanterns which are lighted everywhere.

In many countries New Year's Day supersedes Christmas in importance. Thus, in Japan, at that season, two evergreen trees are placed without the house, just opposite the door. These are tied together at the top with a straw rope, and various symbolic objects, such as lobsters and oranges, are fastened to their branches.

Among the Chinese in America, an equivalent to a Christmas tree is erected everywhere at the New Year season. A special altar is built with curious bunches of artificial flowers and paper toys placed in vases on either side. These objects, called "Golden Flowers," are the tree. There is a patron saint of the occasion, too, an old man with a very long egg-shaped head, known as the Starry Sage of Longevity. He is represented as holding a peach, the emblem of long life, and little boys swarm around him, for he is the Chinese Santa Claus.

LIFE'S TOO SWEET.

The life of the bee is known to present perhaps the most interesting drama on earth. But few ever saw its enactment because of the dangers involved. Now motion picture directors have found a way to show the entire story to the public. This is how the operators snap movie photos of the bees. They take no chances.

Christmas Cracker Made 30 Feet High

Christmas crackers have been made in some extraordinary sizes. A North of England baronet once had a huge one built in his ballroom. It was over 30 feet high.

A special device arranged for the customary explosion at the proper moment, and at the same time illuminated the cracker with innumerable electric lights. Inside were hidden attendants, who handed out gifts for youngsters and grown-ups.

Perhaps the most costly cracker was one made for a generous if eccentric donor. Its design was that of a sheaf of wheat; its material solid gold; its contents a ring set with pearls. The goldsmith who made it took six months over the task.

Festive Season Costs King George $40,000

The festive season costs King George at least $40,000.

Each of the 450 servants employed in the royal palaces receives a present valued at about $15. In addition, there are 800 estate employees at Windsor, Balmoral and Sandringham, each of whom receives a gift varying from $5 to $25 in value.

A short time before Christmas His Majesty makes a list of the charities to which he wishes to send donations, and about $15,000 is spent in this way.

An enormous amount of food, consisting of beef, currants, raisins and suet is distributed to the poor from the royal kitchens at this time of the year.

Northern Pines

I pass where the pines for Christmas
Stand thick in the crowded street,
Where the groves of Dream and Silence
Are paced by feverish feet.

And far through the snow and the street cries
My homesick heart goes forth
To the pine clad hills of childhood,
To the dark and tender north.

And I see the looming pine lands,
And I thrill to the northland cold,
Where the sunset falls in silence
On the hills of gloom and gold!

And the still dusk woods close round me,
And I know the waiting eyes
Of my north, as a child's, are tender,
As a sorrowing mother's, wise!

—ARTHUR STRINGER.

Yuletide Riddles

Q.—Why does a dressmaker never lose her hooks?

A.—Because she has an eye to each of them.

Q.—What tongue is it that frequently hurts and grieves you, and yet does not speak a word?

A.—The tongue of your shoe.

Q.—Why is there no such thing as an entire day?

A.—Because every day begins by breaking.

Q.—Why does a donkey eat a thistle?

A.—Because he is an ass.

Q.—Why is a nobleman like a book?

A.—Because he has a title.

Q.—If cheese comes after meat, what comes after cheese?

A.—Mice.

Q.—What is it which, if you name it even, break it?

A.—Silence.

Q.—Which travels fastest, heat or cold?

A.—Heat, because you can easily catch cold.

Q.—Why is a dinner on board a steamboat like Easter day?

A.—Because it is a movable feast.

Q.—Why is a little man like a good book?

A.—Because he is often looked over.

A Visit from St. Nicholas

'TWAS the night before Christmas when all through the house
Not a creature was stirring, not even a mouse;
The stockings were hung by the chimney with care,
In hopes that Saint Nicholas soon would be there.
The children were nestled all snug in their beds,
While visions of sugarplums danced through their heads.
And mama in her kerchief and I in my cap
Had just settled our brains for a long winter's nap;
When out on the lawn there arose such a clatter
I sprang from my bed to see what was the matter.
Away to the window I fled like a flash.
Tore open the shutters and threw up the sash.
The moon on the breast of the new fallen snow
Gave the luster of midday to objects below.
When what to my wondering eyes should appear
But a miniature sleigh and eight tiny reindeer,
With a little old driver so lively and quick
I knew in a moment it must be Saint Nick.
More rapid than eagles his coursers they came.
And he whistled and shouted and called them by name.
"Now, Dasher; now, Dancer, now, Prancer! and Vixen!
On Comet; on Cupid, on Donder and Blitzen!
To the top of the porch! To the top of the wall!
Now, dash away! dash away! dash away all!"
As dry leaves that before the wild hurricane fly
When they meet with an obstacle mount to the sky,
So up to the housetop the coursers they flew,
With the sleigh full of toys and Saint Nicholas, too.

And then in a twinkling I heard on the roof
The prancing and pawing of each little hoof—
As I drew in my head and was turning around,
Down the chimney Saint Nicholas came with a bound.
He was dressed all in furs from his head to his foot,
And his clothes were all tarnished with ashes and soot.
A bundle of toys he had flung on his back,
And he looked like a peddler just opening his pack;
His eyes—how they twinkled! His dimples how merry,
His cheeks were like roses, his nose like a cherry!
His droll little mouth was drawn up in a bow,
And the beard on his chin was as white as the snow;
The stump of a pipe he held tight in his teeth,
And the smoke it encircled his head like a wreath;
He had a broad face and a little round belly,
That shook when he laughed like a bowlful of jelly.
He was chubby and plump, a right jolly old elf,
And I laughed when I saw him in spite of myself;
A wink in his eye and a twist of his head;
Soon gave me to know I had nothing to dread;
He spoke not a word, but went straight to his work
And filled all the stockings, then turned with a jerk.
And laying his finger aside of his nose
And giving a nod up the chimney he rose.
He sprang to his sleigh, to his team gave a whistle,
And away they all flew like the down of a thistle;
But I heard him exclaim ere he drove out of sight,
"Merry Christmas to all, and to all a good night."

—CLEMENT CLARKE MOORE.

His Real Name

Young January, being poor, wears nothing but his skin,
While February, in a robe of ermine rare, comes in.
March shivers in a worn brown cloak,
And April, frail and fair;
May does the apple blossom's pink and June the rose's red;
July, in faded overalls, picks cherries for his bread,
And August treads the sunny fields a stately Indian queen,
Apparelled like the standing corn in silken pods and green.

September, purple cincture, bears a basket filled with grapes—
Dark amethystine globes, from which a juicy dew escapes.
October is a cavilier, so flaunts a crimson plume;
November, telling beads of rain, is cowled in fog and gloom,
But when December comes, behold! he's whiskered, booted, furred.
His ringing laughter, like the sound of merry bells is heard;
His arms are filled with many gifts and holly wreaths because
The little children knew him first and named him Santa Claus.

—MINNI IRVING,
In the New York Herald.

No Santa Then

'Tis said Old Santa Claus one time
Told this joke on himself in rhyme:
One Christmas in the early din
That ever leads the morning in,
I heard the happy children shout
In rapture as the toys turned out
Of bulging little socks and shoes—
A joy at which I could but choose
To listen enviously, because
I'm just "Old Santa Claus."
But ere my rising sigh had got
To its first quaver at the thought,
It broke in laughter, as I heard
A little voice chirp like a bird—
"Old Santa's mighty good, I know,
And awful rich—and he can go
Down ever' chimbly anywhere
In all the world!—But I don't care,
I wouldn't trade with him, and be
Old Santa Claus, and him be me
Fer all his toys and things—and Know why, and bet you he knows why!—
They wuz no Santa Claus when he Wuz ist a little boy like me!"

—JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY

THEIR DESSERT

Lady Visitor—But you're wrong in thinking the birds a nuisance. They devour the insects and caterpillars.

Mr. Stubbubs—I'm glad you told me. It's a great consolation to know that they eat my fruit merely for dessert.

Bringing in Boar's Head

Bringing in the boar's head at Yuletide is not celebrated widely in Great Britain today, and probably the only place where it survives with something of its old-time glory is Queen's College, Oxford University.

The custom is believed to antedate Christianity; in fact, it is said to have come down to Englishmen from the Druids. Freya, goddess of peace and plenty, was always represented as riding a boar, and the Druid priests are believed to have made yearly sacrifices of boars to this divinity in order to win her goodwill.

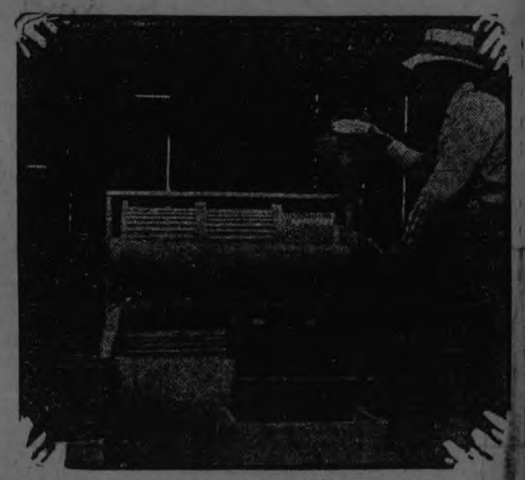
At Queen's the procession of the boar's head forms in the buttery. A soloist, who usually is a former student of the college heads the line. Behind him march two or three broad-shouldered youths, who bear the boar's head mounted on a silver salver. In the old days the head weighed as much as 80 pounds.

Flags and pennants of the college flutter about the head, which is crowned with gilder sprays of rosemary, bay, laurel and other evergreens. A lemon or an orange, the old Norse symbol of plenty, is placed between the tusks.

Behind the bearers of the salver march the surpliced men and boys of the choir, and the organist in a robe of an Oxford doctor of music.

On a dais at the end of the dining hall the provost and the principal guests stand. The provost says grace in Latin; the call to dinner is sounded with trumpets through the cloisters, and the procession starts through the cloisters.

A WINTER CORN JOB.



Seed planted for corn next spring must be handled in the best way possible to cull out as many of the unpromising kernels as can be taken out by mechanical means.

In order to get seed planted evenly it is necessary to grade the corn into various sizes so that the planter can be adjusted to drop the desired number of grains in each hill. Some sort of corn grader, such as the rotary apparatus shown here, is worth while for a farmer who has any considerable quantity of corn to plant or who has seed he is preparing to sell shelled. This machine takes out the very small and the extra large kernels and grades the rest so that those of the same size may be planted together.

GOOD CIRCULATION.

Proper air circulation is essential for good health of a flock in winter Drafts should be avoided, because fowls are susceptible to colds.

GOITER IN POULTRY.

Dr. H. C. C. Kempamp of the University of Minnesota reports he has come across two cases of goiter in poultry. This is one of the rarest diseases with which poultry are afflicted.

Q.—Where did Noah strike the first nail in the ark?

A.—On the head.

DON'T CROWD THEM.

Pullets should be put into the laying house by degrees. Start with about a fourth at a time. If all are put in at once they tend to crowd into the corners.

A BRAIDED MAT.

A braided or hooded mat, preferably oval, is the sort of gift that can be fitted in conveniently anywhere, and lucky she is who receives one among her share of Santa's blessing. When it is in cheerful, bright colors a braided rag rug is especially attractive.

Q.—What is the smallest bridge in the world?

A.—The bridge of your n[ose].

LICKETY-SNIP
The Christmas Sprite

Susie Belle chuckled softly. George demanded to know what she was laughing at.

"Look! Look! Isn't he perfectly cunning—he's coming this way!" Susie clapped her hands.

George looked 'round, and saw a most adorable elf dancing toward them astride a great shining pair of scissors. His quaint suit of holly green was decorated with tiny pine cones, and his perky cap of cherry red, set aslant one eye, was crowned with a bunch of holly berries.

"Who are you, sir?" asked George.

"I'm Lickety Snip, the Christmas Sprite," and with this the elf turned a quick handspring off his steed, caught the scissors by the handles and clashed the blades right merrily. "And this old boy," said he bowing low, "is my good steed, Two Blades, the fastest and most cutting of all the scissors in Santa's shop."

Two Blades acknowledge the introduction by rearing on his handles and falling with a mighty bump. George and Susie Belle stood hand in hand watching this fascinating exhibition.

"We're pleased to meet you" they chorused. "Can you do any other tricks?"

"Indeed we can," said Lickety Snip proudly. "You should see us with Brown Paper. We can cut round it in circles—and scollops too for that matter."

Susie Belle advanced timidly, clasping her fat little dimpled hands.

"I don't suppose," she said, "you—you could really cut out a paper doll, could you?"

"A paper doll," said George. "Isn't such a much. I'd rather see him cut out a kite—I would."

A dark cloud floated overhead, descending lower and lower until the little sprite suddenly jumped up and caught one end of it.

"Here's Brown Paper," he cried. "Now I'll make you a hole so you can climb through and watch us," for the paper cloud had fallen down all over them.

Two Blades cut a hole through quickly and then cut the sweetest little set of steps you ever saw for George and Susie Belle to climb up. George helped his sister, and then came Lickety Snip and last of all Two Blades.

"Ladies first!" cried the elf. "We're off!"

"Oh! Oh!" cried Susie Belle. "It's the most booful Paper Doll, and it's as big as me. I never did have much a nice big Paper Doll."

George helped her fold the big doll carefully so as she could sit down beside them and watch, for Two Blades was already clashing his blades with impatience ready to be off on the next exciting excursion.

"Now, for St. George and the Dragon!" shouted Lickety Snip, and off he dashed again with his trusty steed. It was almost impossible to follow, so swiftly did the strange pair dash about, into and out of corners, cutting around in all sorts of swift little twists and turns.

"What will it be, do you suppose?" asked Susie Belle. George didn't know, but in a minute back raced Lickety Snip and Two Blades.

"There, isn't he a beauty," cried the elf, and he held up a wonderful kite in the shape of a dragon!

"Is he really mine?"

"Can we keep them for good?" cried George and Susie Belle together.

"Indeed you may!" answered Lickety Snip. And away he raced on his flashing steed until he became a tiny green speck in the distance.

George sat up on one elbow, and blinked at the winter sunshine streaming across his bed.

"Why, it's Christmas! O, Susie!"

Susie rubbed her eyes and sat up in her little white bed.

"He was such a nice green elf," she said "and Two Blades was so bright and shiny."

"I know," George chuckled. "Wish I had a horse like that. Merry Christmas, Susie, let's hurry and look at our stockings!"

Original Christmas Date.

Although students of Biblical chronology have gone far towards determining the actual date of Good Friday—probably April 6 in the year 31 of our era—it is unlikely that the real date of the original Christmas day will ever be determined.

We may be reasonably certain, however, that it was not December 25, since that date occurs at the height of the rainy Judean season, when shepherds would certainly not be watching their flocks by night.

In the early days of Christianity the feast was kept up at various dates in January, April and May; and it was not until the fifth century that December 25 was agreed upon, probably from a desire to supplant the Saturnalia, from which pagan festival, however, several of our Christmas customs originated.

Table Decorations for the Christmas Feast

A very dear friend of mine has a marked ability in arranging unusual table seatings for parties, for her children or for special occasions for her friends. Her formal dinners too are most dignified and beautiful.

She is a great lover of silver and one finds her using it most appropriately during the holidays. A large footed Sheffield flower holder, oval in shape, with ring handles filled with red roses she often uses as a centrepiece.

At a Christmas dinner which I attended, she placed the flowers on a lovely large Italian lace cloth, with a pair of silver and crystal girandoles. These girandoles have candle holders for six from which depend crystal pendants and swags. The pair she used at either end of her table and you can imagine the brilliant effect they gave when she lighted her red candles.

This table was set for eight using red and gold service plates with red glass goblets and Italian cut linen napkins, that matched the cloth in design.

During the holiday vacation her high school daughter served a group of chattering bobbed hair girls an informal luncheon. They were delighted with the daintiness of the setting. The entire service including bread and butter plates was very much like Wedgewood in creamy color and were edged with a band of green. These were placed on lace mats with a low footed glass of a clear jade green color, to decorate each place.

At each end of the table stood a tall crystal bud vase containing a single poinsettia. In the centre of the ensemble embedded in a wreath of holly and pine branches was a round sweet meat box with nested china compartments filled with the most luscious sweets, nuts and preserves. The girls fully appreciated this.

My friend gave a children's party for her grammar school youngsters and their friends. There was a squeal of delight when the door opened to their play room and they beheld "their party."

It has been a grand secret about the house for a week just what mother was going to have for them. And here it was before their eyes.

Of course they saw the ice cream first. But such funny ice cream! Sitting on a red plate was an ice cream man built along the bulbous lines of a snow man, with black candy dots for features and buttons and crowned with a green gum-drop hat. So fascinating were the solemn men that the children almost forgot the complete array of the table. Mother had provided low glass mugs with handles; there were short candlesticks of bright green tery each holding a very elevated slender red candle.

New delights awaited their eyes when they looked up from the demolished cream man and beheld a potted Christmas tree made of gum drops at each place while in the centre mother had provided a cotton snow slide on an elevation of books. Little red and green gum drop children raced joyously down the slide on little wooden sleds and coasted upon an oval table mirror giving the effect of an ice pond with a border of salt representing snow banks.

PETERBORO DEFE AT AURA LEE 3-2 FIFTH STRAIGHT SENIOR VICTORY

Fans Show Enthusiasm By Biggest Crowd at an Exhibition Game.

PETES HELD LEAD.

Sticky Ice Slowed Up the Speed of Both Teams—Brilliant in Spots.

The Peterboro Senior O.H.A. team added another scalp to their collection and registered the fifth victory in succession over a senior outfit at Brock St. Rink last night when they defeated Aura Lee of Toronto 2 goals to 1, in an exhibition fixture before the biggest crowd that has seen a non-scheduled game here.

The score sounds like a good game of hockey, but it was far from that. The Petes showed but flashes of the brilliant playing that blazed their trail through the S.P.A.. series.

The reaction after the strenuous excitement of the four hard fought battles in Toronto, coupled with the fact that the ice soon grew sticky and the puck for the most part refused to do anything but roll, were conditions that materially affected the playing of the blue and white squad, while the system that had proven so uniformly successful in the Toronto games did not work nearly so well on the contracted surface of Brock St. Rink.

In fact the Petes were just good enough last night to secure an early lead on Bill Marsden's team and to hold a one goal advantage until the finish.

They got the only counter of the first period, each scored in the second, and the third session was scoreless.

Visitors Strong.

The Aura Lee manager brought a full team of seniors down for the game, reinforced by a couple of crack juniors who did good work when called upon and the crimson clad lads worked their heads off to beat the S.P.A. champions—and frankly there were moments when it looked as if they might do it.

But in spite of the close score the "play the game" boys showed little that should cause the Petes to worry about their prospects in the Senior O.H.A. group in which both teams are starters.

With McLeod only on for one period and the rest of the team displaying but a small proportion of their S.P.A. form, the Petes managed to squeeze out a victory and in their usual stride should repeat much more easily when next they clash with the Marsden brigade..

The most prominent members of the Aura Lee team were Jack Cain, who played for North Toronto against the Petes two years ago; Tracey Shaw, well known to baseball fans as a member of the Leaside Club; Shrimp McPherson, crack young junior player, and Jerry Deniord, who for a short time was a member of St. Patrick's N.H.A. team. Cain, although evidently not in the best of shape, checked and rushed nicely. Shaw contributed some trick stickhandling and Deniord and McPherson were always trying and proved of much service to their team.

Ice Was Sticky.

Peterboro started all their regulars but McLeod only played the first period and the big defence man got little chance to show his real worth in that time. Dwyer was as good as ever in the nets. Halpin finished the game at left defence and did good work. The rolling puck and sticky ice bothered Parker, for whom many a promising rush was spoiled by the rubber getting away and the same conditions applied to the forwards, whose stickhandling suffered from this cause throughout.

Aura Lee, of course, had the same handicap and with both teams playing the six man defence system the game, except in isolated instances, lacked spectacular features and colour.

The most satisfactory thing about it was that the Petes string of victories was extended to five.

Eddie Foley made his debut as a referee and handled the game nicely.

The teams:

Aura Lee—Goal, Moore; subgoaler, Gordon; defence, Cain, Walkem; centre, Shaw; right wing, Deniord; left wing, Bond; subs., McPherson, Morris, Clayton.

Peterboro—Goal, Dwyer; defence, Parker, McLeod, (Halpin); centre, Collins; right wing, Bailey; left, wing, Ranger; subs, Rose, Burgess.

Summary Of Play

The first period opened very slowly. The Petes' forwards lined across the rink stopped Aura Lee time after time in centre ice and the long range shots were easy for Dwyer, while the blue and white had little more luck in penetrating the Aura Lee defence. The crowd got its first chance to cheer half way through the period when after Shaw had been benched for jabbing, Parker, Ranger and Collins got away together and the latter lifted the rubber over Moore at close range for a neat goal..

Parker stickhandled right inside a moment after and with Moore half pulled out of the net shot wide. It was a close shave.

Second Period.

Early in the second period Ranger was chased for tripping and he just got back on the ice in time to score the Petes second goal. Parker carried the rubber up and when chased into the corner, passed out to Ranger whose swift low shot ripped between Moore's feet into the net, putting the blue and white two goals in front.

Aura Lee kept plugging away, however, and were ultimately rewarded when Walken scored on a pass from Bond after a three man Peterboro attack had been stopped. That was the last counter of the game. Toward the close of the period Bailey was hurt but he was back when the last session started.

There was no scoring in the final dash.

The ice conditions were bad, and although both teams showed the most pep of the night in the early part of the period, the antics of the rolling puck spoiled many a likely play. Both goalers did good work on long shots, some of which performed tricky bouncing on the soft ice and the final whistle found the score unchanged.

SUMMARY.

First Period.

1 Peterboro, Collins from Ranger, 9 mins.

Second Period.

2 Peterboro, Ranger from Parker, 5 mins.

3 Aura Lee, Walkem from Bond, 6 mins.

Third Period.

No score. .. ..

Penalties.

Aura Lee— Shaw; Peterboro—Ranger.

LINDSAY'S COMPLIMENT

(Lindsay Post)

Peterboro sure is deserving of hearty congratulations on winning the game at Toronto arena Saturday from the Soo Greyhounds. The Greyhounds, last year won senior honors in Canada and also won the Allan Cup. Peterboro had to travel at their top notch speed and the game was only won after twenty minutes overtime.

Grover Halpin, one of the best hockey men Peterboro ever turned out, subbed for the Petes against the Soo Greyhounds, on Saturday night. He subbed on the defence, and found the game very strenuous at times, especially against such a fast team. However, he is said to have given his best and was quite effective at times.

A HOCKEY FAMILY.

L. LeBarr, Sr., Challenges Any Other to Game.

Lou LeBarr, Sr., suggests that if there is any other hockey family in the city he would like to arrange a game during the holidays. In support of his modest challenge he says he could present the following line-up of himself and sons, all of whom take a keen interest in athletics:

Goal, L. LeBarr, Sr.; defence, Dan. LeBarr and Lou LeBarr, Jr.; centre, Ted LeBarr; left wing, Wilfred LeBarr; right wing, Jack LeBarr.

FOWLER SUSPENDED.

Goal Tender of the Boston Bruins Also Fined for Not Trying.

BOSTON, Mass., Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press)—Norman Fowler, goal tender of the Boston professional hockey team, has been indefinitely suspended and fined $200 for indifferent playing, the club announced yesterday. President Charles F. Adams said Fowler admitted that he did not give his best efforts in the game against St. Patrick's of Toronto here Monday night. The Toronto team won 10 to 1.

Dr. Charles Stewart, formerly of the Hamilton Ontario Club of the National Hockey League, will play in goal for Boston for their game against the champion Canadiens at Montreal Christmas night.

Mr.. T. Gibbons, heavyweight knuckler, has thrown away his wooden casket and bought a long-range cannon.

The St. Paul harp used to be mild as Sunday school punch, but from now on he threatens to be one part wild and three parts wilder.

Gibbons let Carpentier stay at Michigan City when the Frenchman turned an ankle. It was a very pretty gesture and it won him many friends, numbered among whom were NO promoters offering him MORE business.

* * * *

"The next time I let a guy stay," growls the reborn battler, "will be after I have knocked him down. I'll let him stay until his seconds drag him out."

Gibbons has quit smiling and gone in for snarling on a serious scale. He is taking a correspondence course in "Advanced Phases of Brutality" and reads such literature as "The Fine Art of Manslaughter."

Instead of breaking down and sobbing at the spectacle of a man in distress, as he usually does, Mr. T. Gibbons walked over the ropes and asked the boy to please page Jack Dempsey, and make it snappy.

All the Thumping Turk has ever needed to be a headliner on the Tin Ear circuit was self-assertiveness, and now that he seems to have it he may be harder to stop than a new rumor about the village manicurist.

EIGHTY SOCCER CLUBS PLAYING ON CHRISTMAS

Practically All the Games Will Be Repeated on Boxing Day.

SECOND HALF.

Divisions Play Over Schedule Again, Beginning on Saturday.

LONDON, Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press Cable)—Of the eighty-eight clubs comprising the first, second and third divisions of the English League, eighty will go into action on Christmas Day. The holiday schedule calls for eleven games in the first and southern section of the third divisions, and nine games each in the second and Northern section of the third divisions. On Boxing Day—The day following Christmas—practically all of the games will be repeated with the Terrain reversed. On Saturday the clubs will begin to go through the league once more, embarked on the second half of the season, on the home-and-home games.

Taught by experience soccer enthusiasts here refrain from venturing any predictions on the outcome of holiday football, and the general conclusion is that any team may win—even Preston North End may take a couple of point from Blackburn Rovers. In any case, the next few games will certainly witness a general shaking up of the league which has been on a hair-trigger for several weeks.

As matters stand at the moment, only four points separate the first twelve teams in the first division, wih West Bromwich only one point in advance of Huddersfield Town, Notts County, Sunderland and Birmingham are locked with the same aggregate, as also are Bolton Wanderers and Manchester City one point lower, while Aston Villa, Newcastle United(Arsenal, Liverpool and Bury are clustered together with 22 points, the order being preserved on goal average.

These twelve combinations comprise the most serious contenders for league honors, with the odds on Huddersfield, West Bromwich and Notts County. With the exception of Manchester City, the others have not been very convincing as league leaders although both Sunderland and Birmingham have each had a turn at topping the table. Their reign was brief, however, and they were topped with comparative ease. How long West Bromwich, who stepped up into this position on Saturday, will stay there is problematical. Christmas Day will be critical for them because they must perforce travel to Manchester and take on the city. The latter are the most prolific goal-getters in the whole league, having registered 45 tallies in the course of their 21 games, but on the other hand the number of counters recorded against them is exceeded only by Preston North End the cellar occupants.

This indicates that Manchester have an aggressive forward line, but that their defence is nothing to boast about. West Bromwich have not scored so many goals, but they certainly have not had so many pass them—15 only to 36 against Manchester.

Huddersfield Town, who are determined to get back to the place from which they were dethroned about six weeks ago, will have their chance on Christmas Day for they travels across the county line to Burnley should be good pickings.

Notts County are the holiday hosts to Liverpool and the game will be a severe test. Just lately the County have been wobbling and the last few weeks have seen them drop gradually from first place to third.

APPROVES CHURCH UNION.

Millbrook Minister Spoke in Cavan Church on Sunday Night.

CAVAN, December 24. — Rev. G. S. Gervan ,of Millbrook, filled the Cavan pulpits on Sunday last. He preached an interesting sermon in Cavan Church at night, in which he expressed his approval of church union.

Rev. R. T. Richards took Rev. Mr. Gervan's place, preaching in Millbrook in the morning and taking anniversary services in Garden Hill later in the day.

Personals.

Mr. Eber Syer, Toronto University, is spending his Christmas vacation with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. Syer, having arrived on Friday evening.

Mrs. P. McGill and baby, Janetville, have spent the past week with her cousin, Mrs. Bertha McNeil.

Mr. H. Argue has been quite ill. He had an attack of mumps and caught cold, forcing him to remain indoors for a week. He is now almost recovered.

Mr. Austin Williamson, Haileybury, is spending Christmas with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Williamson.

Miss E. Preston is spending the vacation at her home in Lakefield.

Miss Muriel Howson is home for her vacation from Shelbourne High School.

Miss Muriel Newton is home for the holidays from Port Hope.

Misses Alma Perrin and Gwendoline Hunter are home from Lindsay for Christmas, as well as Miss Olive Smith and Mr. Ralph Staples.

Miss Helen Staples, who is attending Toronto Normal School, is home for her Christmas holidays.

Mr. Gerald Staples is home from Peterborough Normal School for a fortnight.

PURCHASED STORE AT INDIAN RIVER

Mr. Edward Dewart Has Disposed of His Farm—News From Douro.

DOURO, Dec. 24. — Mr. Edward Dewart has purchased the general store of Soanes Bros., Indian River, and is giving up his farm to take possession. His sale of farm stock and implements was held on Monday, and was well attended, despite the cold weather. Most of the implements sold very cheap, and the stock also sold at fairly low figures. Cows brought from $25 to $40, and other things according.

The sympathy of the community is extended to Mrs. Catherine Sheehan and family on the death of Mrs. Sheehan's daughter, Mrs. Thos. Roche, which occurred at St. Joseph's Hospital, Peterboro, on Monday, December 15th. Having only been ill for a few days, her death came as a great shock. She leaves to mourn her loss her husband, Mr. Thos. Roche, of Westwood, her mother, two brothers, Michael and Joseph, and one sister, Catherine, all of Douro. The funeral was held on Wednesday morning from her late home at Westwood to St. Paul's Church and Cemetery, Norwood, and was attended by many from this locality.

A splendid new vestment case has been purchased by Rev. Fr. McGuire for use in the vestry of St. Joseph's Church. It is a beautiful piece of furniture, and fills a long-felt want.

Election News.

There are rumors current of an election for both Reeve and Councillors. According to the rumors, the present incumbent of the Reeve's position will retire and two new aspirants will stand for election. The contest should prove an interesting one. Some years have elapsed since an election took place in the township.

The local merchant, Mr. P. G. Towns, has been buying a large amount of poultry during the past few weeks. Last week was the week of heaviest buying, over four thousand dollars worth haing been purchased. Poultry came from as far away as Norwood, Lakefield, etc. Prices paid were: Turkeys 32c, geese 17c, chickens 18c to 20c, ducks 18c. The store was a busy place for some time past.

School Concert.

A very successful and enjoyable concert was held in No. 3 School on Friday evening last. Miss Hill, the teacher, and the others who took part deserve great credit.

Mr. Clarence Staples is in Dummer at present cutting shingle bolts which will later be hauled to the mill here to be sawed.

Miss Ellen Forsythe left Saturday for Detroit to spend Christmas with her brothers there.

Miss Kathleen Condon, teacher at Kirkfield, is home to spend the holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bart. Condon.

Mr. Joseph Walsh, student at the Toronto Normal School, is home to spend the holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Walsh.

School closed in S.S. No. 1 on Friday last, and the teacher, Miss M. Weatherhead, left to spend the holidays with her parents in Peterboro.

The following students of St. Peter's High School, Peterboro, are home for the holidays: Misses Mary, Frances, Margaret and Julia Leahy, Loretto Cavanagh, Mary Tobin, Mary McManus and Masters Bernard and James Collins.

Master Emmett Allen, student at Lakefield High School, is spending the vacation with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Allen.

Mrs. F. P. Moher left last week for her home in Edmonton, after an extended visit with friends here. En route to the West she will visit friends in Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.

Miss Irene Fitzgerald, nurse-in-training, Port Arthur, was called to her home here on account of the illness of her mother, Mrs. Anne Fitzgerald. Mrs. Fitzgerald's condition is greatly improved.

Miss Mary Begley has been re-engaged as teacher in S.S. No. 7. Miss Begley is beginning her fifth year in No. 7, and has been very successful in her work.

TUNNEY IS ORDERED TO FIGHT GIBBONS

New York State Commission Sanctions Title Match.

NEW YORK, Dec. 24.—(Canadian Press).—Tommy Gibbons' challenge to Gene Tunney, United States light heavyweight champion, for a title match was sanctioned by the State Athletic Commission yesterday, and the Commission announced that Tunney would be ordered to accept the match at the earliest possible date. At the same time Gibbons was ordered to post the customary forfeit fee to back up his challenge.

Sid Terris, New York lightweight, who claimed an injured hand, caused a postponement of his match with Jimmy Goodrich, Buffalo lightweight, carderd for last night, was examined by the Commission's physician and pronounced fit. The Commission was inclined to suspend Terris for his action, but in view of his promise to meet Goodrich before engaging in any further matches, he was given a reprimand and ordered to meet Goodrich January 13.

Eddie ("Cannonball") Martin, new bantamweight champion, was directed to confine his fighting activities to the 118-pound division.

George Larue, of Syracuse, who fought Jack Oaks in Syracuse last Friday night, and was thrown out of the ring for stalling, was suspended for 30 days.

FIFTEEN BELOW AT VILLAGE OF WARSAW

Telephone Repairer Had Very Easy Summer—Goose Weighed 21 Pounds.

WARSAW, December 24. — King Winter is making himself felt. In the village the thermometer stood at 15 degrees below on Sunday morning.

The sleighing is quite good. There is a splendid bottom for good sleighing if only more snow would come and not blow. The little that has come has drifted about as much as it could.

Several frozen cars were seen on the road to Peterboro on Saturday.

The ice on the lakes is getting pretty good.

The telephone repairer reports that he has had relatively little to do all season. There has not been a single repair because of electric storms. Last year during the summer he averaged trips twice weekly to Juniper Island. This year he was not called there once after the early summer and other phones have been about the same.

Mr. Bert Rae bought a goose (a this year's gosling) from Fred Hamblin, which weighed 21 lbs.

Entertainments were very much in order last Friday evening. Pupils and ex-pupils of Garbutt's school gave a splendid entertainment. There was not a hitch in the whole programme and each one knew his or her part perfectly. There were a few recitations, dialogues and drills. One number was especially good. Three girls dressed as angels, acted "Jesus Lover of My Soul," as two others unseen sang the hymn. Those who saw it say it was one of the prettiest and best things they ever saw at a school concert. A great deal of credit is due the teacher, Miss Bentham.

Warsaw school had a little Christmas affair for the pupils and their parents on Friday afternoon. The children had recitations and songs. Each pupil brought a little present and each one received a gift. The teacher provided candies and the trustees oranges.. Before separating lunch was served and closed for the Christmas holidays with hearty good wishes all around.

Some who were interested in the Lakefield High School attended the concert there on Friday evening.

The following is the report of the Warminster cheese factory for the season, Charles Calder, cheese maker, Henry Batten, secretary:

1,048,884 pounds of milk made 91,458 pounds of cheese. 34,314.80 lbs. butter fat; $14,522.38 money received; 11.46 lbs. of milk on average for one pound of cheese; average test 3.2.7.

The Anglicans held their Christmas entertainment on Friday evening in the town hall. An oyster supper was served from 6 p.m., to 8.30 p.m. The cakes which were left were auctioned off after the programme.

At 8.30 p.m., Rev. Mr. Cox took the chair and with a few witty remarks, began the evening's entertainment. Mr. Devey of Peterboro, taught some of his pupils. The first number was a pianoforte selection by Mr. Devey, then a selection by the Warsaw orchestra, with Mr. Devey pianist. Miss Zoe Doyle sang "An Old-fashioned House," with "Keep on Looking" as an encore. Two little boys, Masters Hopkins and Howden, sang a duet, and as an encore gave "Hail the Blessed Morn." Miss Bates sang "Floating Ros.." and an encore; orchestra medley and encore; Mr. Willis, "If Winter Comes," and encore; Miss Tucker "There are Flowers at the Bottom of our Garden" and for an encore "Just because of You," and little George Howden caused much amusement by singing "An Awful Little Scrap." Though the audience were convulsed with laughter the little lad kept steadily on and for each of two encores gave an additional verse.

OSHAWA JUNIORS WIN FIRST GAME

Defeated Cobourg Team By Score of 4 to 3 in Fast Game.

OSHAWA, Ont., Dec. 23.—(Special.)—Oshawa's Church League entry won its first game in the junior series of the Ontario Amateur Hockey Association here to-night, when they defeated Cobourg 4-3, coming from behind in the last period to win out. Oshawa scored the only goal of the first period, Walker finding the nets after sixteen minutes of play on a lone rush. In the second Cobourg scored three, Waldon, Cavanaugh and Gibson getting one each, making the score at the end of the second 20 minutes 3-1 in their favour. In the final, Oshawa came from behind, Walker, the local centre boy, hitting the twine for three goals and winning the game by 4-3. The teams were: :

Cobourg—Goal, Lloyd; defence, Waldon and Cavanaugh; centre, Gibson; wings, Brenning and Rollins. Subs, Andrews, Butler and Bebuens.

Oshawa—Goal, Bentley; defence, Conlin and Lowe; centre, Walker; wings, Miners and Kennedy. Subs, Donald and Atkinson.

CLOSE RACE EXPECTED IN O.H.A. SENIOR SERIES

Peterboro's S. P. A. Games Entitle Them to More Than Passing Attention.

TORONTO, Dec. 24.—In Group No. 1 Peterboro and Parkdale are the favorites, but Aura Lee expect to upset the dope. In the S.P.A. series Peterboro came out on top. In beating Preston, Niagara Falls and Parkdale at the Toronto Arena the Petes showed rare ability. Previous to their string of successes it was feared that the Parkdale team would run away with group honors, but it is different now,, and at least four of the starters are conceded a chance to come home in first place.

Parkdale will be stronger with Harry Watson in the line-up than they were in the game against Peterboro, and if the Paddlers get down to business in earnest, they will be a hard team to defeat anywhere. They are strong in every position, and look like the best of the Toronto entrants.

Aura Lee gave Parkdale a close argument in the S.P.A. game, losing by 4 to 3, and may figure in the hunt. Aura Lee have never won an O.H.A. senior title, however, and the old jinx may assert itself. Captain Tracy Shaw is leading a well-balanced and gritty team, one that will likely provide plenty of opposition for any and all comers.

University of Toronto, with Greey and Wright in line again, should do well. The loss of 'Happy' Day certainly did not help the collegians' cause any, but college teams are never more dangerous than when they are fighting with their backs to the wall, and the Blue and White may upset the calculations of teams like Peterboro and Parkdale.

Hamilton Rowing Club seniors are the dark horses of the race. No one knows the strength of the Oarsmen, but on paper at least they do not appear to be dangerous opponents for the favored teams in Group 1. Hamilton, however, has never been represented in the O. H. A. senior series by a weak team, and the newcomers may prove a welcome addition to the ranks. The Oarsmen may upset the dope the same way the unheralded Peterboro seniors did in the S.P.A. series.

LOCAL SENIOR GROUP ANNOUNCES ITS DATES

RESOLUTION SYMPATHY.

A beautifully penned resolution of condolence to the family of the late Mr. C. Crowe, of East City, has been received from L.O.L. No. 321, Downers' Corners Lodge, of which the deceased was a faithful member. The large sheet of white paper is inscribed in fine handwriting and bordered with a heavy black design. The wording is as follows:

Mrs. Bessie Morrison and Family
Peterboro, Ontario.

Dear Friends—"Whereas it has pleased Almighty God our Heavenly Father, to remove from this earthly path of life, your dearly-beloved father, we the officers and members of L.O.L. No. 321 Downers' Corners, desire to tender to you our heartfelt sympathy in the severe trial you have been called on to pass through. We realize how helpless we are to lighten your burden of sorrow, by anything we can say or do. Although the loss of him so near and dear to you may seem a bereavement hard to bear, yet remember that God, who is all-wise and merciful, is able to bless even this severe trial to your good, and to the good of the family. Tnd may you and they through His grace be enabled to say. Thy will be done."

Mr. Crowe was a true and faithful orangeman, and was always with us in person, whenever possible. He was loyal and true to his wife and family, loyal and true to his brethren and the principles of the orange association.

We feel keenly the loss of so reserved a patriot, and patriarch, and our deepest sympathy goes out to his family.

Signed on behalf of the brethren, Downers Corners, Dec. 2nd, 1924, James Chambers, W.M., J. C. Waldie, William Watt, Committee.

SCHOOL CONCERT

A very successful Christmas entertainment and box social was held in the School House at Round Lake. There were in all about a hundred present including quite a number from town. Rev. Mr. Stanley of St. John's Anglican Church was chairman for the evening and after a few well chosen remarks announced the different numbers of the programme which were as follows:

Chorus—Hey for Us! Ho for us.
Recitation — Doris White.
Dialogue—At the Photographers.
Chorus—Day is closing.
An Address—George White.
Dialogue—What became of the false teeth.
Instrumental Trio—Miss M. Pollock, Messrs H. Seeney and F. Pollock.
Recitation—Mr. Isaac Anderson.
Dance—Misses Gladys and Irene Anderson.
Dialogue—The New Hired Man.
Chorus—The Winter time is here.
Hand Drill.
Dialogue—Cousin Imogene's Dinner.
Chorus—I know a Sweet Valley.
Recitation—Mr. Isaac Anderson.
Instrumental Trio—Miss M. Pollock, Messrs. H. Seeney and F. Pollock.
Christmas Exercise.
Tableau.—The nativity.

At the conclusion of the programme the boxes were auctioned and the average price realized was $1.50 and after the refreshments to which every one did ample justice. An enjoyable time was spent in dancing.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

"PEACE ON EARTH AND GOODWILL TO ALL MEN," AND BROTHERHOOD.

Dear Mr. Editor,—I am very pleased to note some of our local organizations fostering the brotherhood idea. Not to confine it to any one particular organization, when I say "Brotherhood." Every man was helping the movement who tried to look upon the people around him, not merely as members of a special social class, the followers of a certain religion, as belonging to a particular nation, race or creed, but as fellow human beings, born in the same infirmities, and destined to the same affection, subject to the same informities, and destined to leave this House of Life by the same door. I regard the spirit of brotherhood as a fundamental instinct in human nature—how fundamental we only realized when we heard of some man, not particularly great, and perhaps not particularly good, laying down his life for a friend, or what is even more astonishing, sometimes for an utter stranger. There has been discussed different explanations for this deep-rooted feeling from different points of view. In reading the experience of some of the great mystics of the world were of interest in connection with this, because they made a very unusual claim, namely, to understand the meaning of the life. There were those who, in search of the inner kingdom, had dived into the depths of our being and had claimed to have made discoveries—that God and man are not separate but are related as the ocean to the bubble; and that there is within, boundless love and boundless light ever trying to express itself on the surface through the heart of man.

The whole purpose of creation, according to them, was that the light and love, to be discerned in a loving mother, a kind father, and an innocent child and a helpful friend and should find full expression on the surface; and it could only do this if man everywhere opened his heart wide to his fellow-man and would not simply shut it again when things went wrong.

Some critics might say, "Why had this brotherhood movement been so long in coming?" According to these mystics, life itself wanted to bring about unlimited brotherhood, but man as an individual always seems to want to keep it limited, wanted to be a brother only to people of his own nation, or those who could co-operate with him in protecting some common interest. But I believe the brotherhood movement of to-day, if successful as a world movement, presented at last a glorious opportunity for the sinking of all rivalries, and thereby removing one of the greatest stumbling blocks in the path of the formation of a real brotherhood of humanity. And endeavor to temper the mind of this age with a fine essence of forbearance, forgiveness, generosity, and human kindness, and then will follow, "Peace on earth and goodwill to all men."—Yours truly,

J. ABRAHAM.

AT THE CAPITOL.

"SINNERS IN SILK" IS XMAS DAY PICTURE AT CAPITOL

"Sinners in Silk" Hobart Henley's first production for Metro-Goldwyn, opens for today and Christmas Day at the Capitol. This picture, the newest of the jazz series, is new in more ways than one. It offers a highly original idea in that the central character, and elderly man in none too good health, is brought once again to youthful strength and youthful emotions when he takes the Seinach rejuvenaion reamen ..... Steinach rejuvenation treatment. With this as a premise, it was natural that Mr. Henley was able to develope a number of highly amusing and thrilling situations, which he did with the fullest degree.

Adolphe Menjou's Best.

Adolphe Menjou, who has become known for his roles of suavity and cynical humor, plays the part of the old-young man. It is undoubtedly his best work yet on the screen. Time and time again the audience roar with glee when this thrilling actor brought home a clever point by mere gesture or facial grimace.

Eleanor Boardman star of "Souls for Sale" and other late pictures, was the girl in the case— typical flapper of the present day. She is never more charming than in the scene where she was overcome by the cleverness of Menjou's sleek wooing

Conrad Nagel, who recently played the role of Angel Clare in "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," has an entirely different sort of part in "Sinners in Silk." He is the youth who loves the flirtatious Eleanor, and finally wins out over the older man. The cast includes Hedda Hopper, Jean Hersholt, Edward Connelly, and John Patrick.

And the Girls.

One feature of the picture from which the audience gain considerable "kick" was the bevy of really beautiful girls who appeared in a sequence showing the swimming pool of a trans-Atlantic liner. These girls in all their glory were Miss Du Pont, Virginia Lee Corbin, Dorothy Dwan, Ann Luther, Peggy Elinor, Mary Aitken and Estelle Clark.

AT THE GRAND.

"CHU CHIN CHOW."

Tomorrow afternoon sees the opening performance of "Chu Chin Chow," the big spectacular picture, filmed from the long-run stage success of the same name. There will be evening showings on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, with matinees on Christmas Day and on Saturday.

"Chu Chin Chow" is one of those massive productions that hold pretty nearly every element to entertain and amuse. There are thrills and tears and touches of humour, with settings gorgeous and wonderful, to carry out the Oriental spirit of the piece. All the fairy-tale atmosphere of the Arabian Nights' story that inspired the germ of the idea of "Chu Chin Chow" is apparent, with a very real romance and the thrills that accompany the adventures of Zahrat, the Desert Flower, and Omar, her lover. At the moment of the marriage of the two, after a romantic wooing, Abou Hassan, the "Chu Chin Chow" of the tale, raids the village where the ceremony takes place and carry off the two into captivity. Omar escapes later, but Zahrat is retained as a slave and compelled to assist the robber chieftain in his nefarious schemes. Plot and counter-plot and intrigue follow in swift succession, as the lovers strive to free themselves from the clutches of Chu Chin Chow. The famous cave of the story of Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves plays a large part in the picture, and there is portrayed also the wonderful oil-jar trick that has captivated the imagination, in story-book form, of thousands of people, since first the annuals of the "Arabian Nights" were penned.

At each evening performance of "Chu Chin Chow," Mrs. W. McKee Bingham will sing.

AT THE ROYAL.

"CHANGING HUSBANDS," WITH LOVELY LEATRICE JOY, COMING CHRISTMAS DAY.

If it were not for the fact that we are opposed to gambling in any form whatsoever, we would be tempted to wager one million German marks that, when "Changing Husbands," the new Paramount picture, featuring the talented Leatrice Joy, opens at the Royal Theatre to-morrow for a three-day run, every woman from eighteen to eighty will be Johnny-on-the-spot for the initial showing.

There is something about the title that strikes a responsive chord in the feminine heart. It is safe to assume that every married woman has at least once wanted to exchange her "lord and master" for something a little better in the husband line. As for the prospective bride, the idea of learning a safe and simple method for acquiring a new "Romeo" in case the one she now has does not come up to her expectations, is bound to have a powerful apeal. So there you are! And if you think the men aren't going to sneak in to see what the picture is all about, then you don't know human nature!

Miss Joy in the principal feature role has a part that puts her ability as a versatile actress to a severe test inasmuch as she is called upon to portray a dual role. Among the principal players in the supporting cast are Victor Varconi, Raymond Griffith, ZaSu Pitts and Julia Faye.

If you are in search of genuine entertainment and at the same time want a litttle food for serious thought, be sure to see "Changing Husbands."

PAL, THE WONDER DOG, AT ROYAL CHRISTMAS DAY.

The kiddies have not been forgotten by the Royal management. "Mind the Baby," a clever comedy, featuring Pal, the Wonder Dog, will be an added feature Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week. Also a prize will be given every child attending the matinees.

AT THE REGENT.

FORTUNE OF REAL MONEY SPENT BY MONTY BANKS ON FIRST BIG L'UGH FILM

No Expense Spared in Giving "Racing Luck" Elaborate and Typical Background.

When the decision was made that Monty Banks would be starred in a big feature comedy, Monty Banks, and the men associated with him in its manufacture, agreed to go the limit in providing elaborate and adequate background and settings for the big scenes. First of all, Gene Havez and Lex Neal, two well known and high-priced writers of screen script, collaborated upon Monty's story that was especially written for him and was called "Racing Luck."

"Racing Luck" is a corking big production in every sense and it marks the debut of Monty as a multiple-reeled comedian as heretofore he has confined his activities to two-reelers. In all films Monty Banks has been the dominating figure in slapstick antics and roughhouse didoes, doing acrobatics one minute and straight pantomine the next. In his "Racing Luck" he works in all his pantomimicry to the fullest and is a real hero in the sense that he has a love affair that is ablaze with life, color and adventure. While Monty goes in for sensational stunts he remains the animated, dynamic principal of the story and he is in there working every moment.

There are some big scenes that convey at once to audiences that no attempt was made to skimp on the settings. There is a grand celebration of the Independence day of Italy in which the entire setting is typical of the country spirit, the background and the decorations being truly representative of the famous holiday. There are native dances with Monty Banks and Helen Ferguson doing a dance that is little short of marvellous in execution.

CRANBERRY JELLY.

POPE PIUS OPENED DOOR OF BASILICA

His Holiness Was Carried Into Church on a Throne.

(By Thomas B. Morgan—United Press Staff Correspondent).

ROME, Dec. 24.—Surrounded by medieval magnificance attuned to the deepest religious solemnity, Pope Pius XI., with three taps of a golden hammer, this evening opened the holy door of St. Peter's Basilica.

Followed by his court and cardinals, His Holiness was carried on a throne into the Basilica, tokening the consummation of another quarter century of christendom.

The Pontiff wore a gorgeous violet mantle interspersed with threaded gold, significant of Christmas, and on his head was the precious mitre. More than a score of cardinals encircled the throne before the ceremony of opening the holy door began, while prelates of the Papal Court occupied places beyond, as the space permitted.

The Papal diplomatic corps in full dress attended in force while the Papal armed forces in gala uniforms, knights of the Holy Sepulchre, the cape and sword knights of Malta and other orders added a blaze of color to the scene.

WEDDING BELLS.

ADAMS—BATE.

On Monday evening, December 22nd, Holy Trinity Church, Toronto, was the scene of a pretty wedding, when Irene Florence May, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Bate, of Peterboro, became the bride of Henry Proctor Adams, D.D.S. of Detroit, Mich., son of Mr. and Mrs.. G. E. Adams, Crystal City, Man. The Rev. Canon Sherman performed the ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, looked charming in her gown of French crepe satin and veil of Brussels net, with wreath or orange blossoms and seed pearls, and carried a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses and lily of the valley.

The bridesmaid was Miss Dorothea McClelland of Long Beach, Cal. (formerly of Peterboro) who wore a becoming gown of yellow crepe satin and hat to match and carried orchid crysanthemuns. The flower girl, little Miss Rosalie Hunter, of 317 Balsam avenue, Toronto, was dressed in pink taffeta and carried a basket of narcissus and American beauty roses. The groom supported by his brother, Charles Adams, D.D.S. of Detroit, Mich.

After the cremony a reception was held at 342 Kingston Road, attended by the near relatives of the bridal couple, and congratulatory telegrams were received from friends at Cyrstal City, Man. and Peterboro, Ont.

Later in the evening the bridal pair left for westen points and will reside in Detroit, Mich.

The groom's gift to the bride was a beautiful platinum watch set with diamonds, to the bridesmaid a white gold ring with aqua-marine stone, to the flower girl a white gold ring set with turquoise, and to the best man a Parker set. The wedding presents from the bride's many friends were numerous and handsome, including several checks.

IN MEMORIAM

JOHNSTON—In loving memory of my dear brother, William James, who died at Fenella, December 22nd, 1923.

Your loving voice is silent—
Your dear head lying low;
But how I miss my brother dear
Just God in Heaven knows.
The depths of sorrow I cannot tell
Of the loss of One I loved so well..

And while he sleeps a peaceful sleep,
His memory I shall always keep,
His smiling face to me, so dear,
His gentle footsteps I no more hear;
His willing hands and face so sweet
In Heaven some day we hope to meet.

—Sadly missed by his sister, Lizzie.

IN MEMORIAM.

LIPSETT.—In loving memory of my dear niece, Mary Margaret Lipsett, who died Dec. 24, 1922:

And while she sleeps a peaceful sleep,
Her memory we shall always keep,
Her smiling face, to us so dear
Her gentle footsteps no more we hear.
Her willing hands and face so sweet
In heaven some day we hope to meet.

—Sadly Missed By One Who Loved Her.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of a dear friend, Mary Lipsett:

Two years have passed, I miss her still,
Her cheerful voice, her bright, sweet smile,
Her memory is as dear to-day
As on that Christmas eve she passed away,
The happy hours we once enjoyed
Are passed forever more.
For death has left a vacant place
To home and friends so dear.

38 BURNED TO DEATH OR MISSING IN RURAL SCHOOL FIRE STARTED BY CANDLE ON CHRISTMAS TREE

Only Ten Bodies Identified Out of Thirty-two Recovered From Ashes of District School Near Hobart, Oklahome—Six Are Missing.

"SANTA CLAUS" UPSET CANDLE FROM TREE AND COTTON BURST INTO FLAME

Parents and Children Packed School House—Many Were Crushed in Stampede — Windows Covered With Heavy Wire Netting — Common Grave for the Unidentified.

FAMILY OF SIX DIED TOGETHER.

HOBART, Okla., Dec. 26.—With 33 bodies, most of them burned beyond recognition lying in a temporary morgue in two store buildings, and six others listed as missing as a result of a Christmas Eve fire at the district school house of Bab's Switch, seven miles from here, Hobart citizens today were continuing their efforts to identify the dead.

At a mass meeting Thursday, called by Mayor F. E. Gillespie, committees were named to look after every detail of the sad task and the work was going forward systematically. It has been decided to bury all the unidentified in one large grave in the Hobart Cemetery and late yesterday a crew of men broke the snow that blanketed the burial ground, to throw up a long trench of earth.

Early last night only ten of the dead had been identified, despite the fact that the morgue was early thrown open to the public. A steady procession of grief stricken relatives filed all day long between the shrouded forms, but so terribly had they been burned that it was impossible in most cases to mark the features of loved ones.

Family Died Together.

Among those who have been recognized is the family of T. C. Coffey, a farmer living near the Babb's Switch School. Six bodies, the bodies of the father, mother, and four little forms, have been placed to themselves in a corner of the awesome room. Survivors tell a heartrending story of how the family, standing in the centre of the blazing schoolroom, every means of escape cut off, threw their arms about one another and in a last gesture of devotion fell together into the inferno as blazing rafters loosened from the roof, struck them down. Amid the awful confusion of the scene survivors say they were struck by the placidity by which the Coffey's met death. There, too, in a place apart, is the body of Mrs. Florence Hill, teacher at the school, who might have escaped had she not tarried in a futile effort to make some avenue of escape of the little charges that were hers. A woman from Fort Worth formerly Juannette Clemmens of Babb's switch district, her three-year-old daughter, Mary, and Vesta Jackson, complete the list of the identified dead early last night.

Many Injured.

Twenty-eight others are listed as dead or missing, and efforts are going forward to determine whether any are among the injured who were taken after the fire to farm houses throughout the countryside.

Death ended the Christmas celebration suddenly, cutting off at its height the programme rendered by the children of the neighborhood. The last little girl had spoken her "piece" and a jolly Santa in red suit and furs had distributed to each chubby pair of eager hands a little sack of candy while parents and friends who packed the small, one-room structure to capacity, looked on.

Tree Was Upset.

Santa reached for one of the few remaining candy sacks. His arm struck a candle on the Christmas tree. The tiny blaze fell from its flimsy perch and in an instant a ball of cotton on the tree burst into flames. A rush to put out the fire, and the tree fell over scattering blazing twigs. In an instant the room was in a panic. Men and women sprang for the single exit at the rear and to the windows, beating out the panes, only to find the openings covered by a heavy wire netting. The windows shattered, a brisk wind blew through the room fanning the flames, and the flimsy structure caught like fire wood.

Many were crushed in the jam before the door and it is believed that most of those, who perished had been injured before the flames found them.

The injured were taken to Hobart in motor cars where emergency hospitals with volunteer nursing staffs ministered to their injuries. Work of recovering the dead was retarded by lack of water on the school grounds, with which to cool the embers.

All the thirty-three victims of the fire which destroyed the Schoolhouse at Babbs Switch Settlement on Christmas Eve have been identified, and the sad work of interment is now proceeding. Twenty persons injured in the wild rush for the door when the fire broke out are still in hospitals. The vigilance of the School Trustees in placing heavy wire screens over the windows to keep out vandals was held chiefly responsible for the heavy loss of life. Could the windows have been used as a means of egress, it is said all could have escaped.

33 WOLVES BAGGED.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Dec. 26. — (Canadian Press). — Albert Moore and Orin Getchell shot their second wolf Wednesday a quarter of a mile outside the city limits. This makes a total of 33 in the campaign.

SATISFACTORY LABOR PROSPECTS FOR 1925

Disturbing Influences Absent Says New President of Federation.

COSCHOCTON, Ohio, Dec. 26.—(Canadian Press).—Prospects for labor in 1925, considering the country at large are "reasonably satisfactory," William Green, newly elected president of the American Federation of Labor, declared. Mr. Green is here spending the holidays with relatives.

His belief, he said, was based upon two factors. The first, he declared, was the stabilizing effect of the operation of the Dawes plan in Europe. The moral effect of the settlement of the reparations controversy upon the working class would be great, he asserted, adding that the markets that would be created abroad would have a direct and immediate effect upon industry in this country.

The second factor was the absence of disturbing influences in the field of labor and industry at the present time, he set forth. He pointed out that there were no strikes or shutouts of labor of any proportion anywhere in the country and that there was no immediate prospect of any.

RICH CAPTURE BY RUM FLEET

Liquor Valued at More Than Half Million Seized After Chase.

BRITISH SCHOONER.

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—(Canadian Press).—Coastguard officers Wednesday night captured 19 prisoners, a British schooner, 13 motor boats and liquor valued at more than $500,000 here. The British schooner Patara, with seven prisoners and 6,000 cases of alleged champagne, liquors and whiskies was among the vessels brought to the barge office.

The seven prisoners on the Patara, a two-masted British schooner, were captured after a 40-mile chase and finally overtaken by the coastguard cutters Raritan and Seneca. The prisoners were held without bail and kept under a heavy Customs guard in the quarters of their ship after the seizure. The ship and prisoners were locked up in "Dead Man's Basin" at the Battery. The schooner was said by coastguard authorities to be the most important seizure here during the past two years.

On Tuesday the speedy launch Dick was caught. On actual test she showed ability to do 38 knots. The Treasury Deartment was notified. The State Department ruled that under the Anglo-American treaty the speed of the carrier, or runner boat, determined whether the supply shi play an hour's run out, or not. The Dick had taken cargo from the Patara.

Seizure Is Ordered.

A wireless was sent from Washington to seize the Patara forthwith. The cutters Seneca and Raritan, which had been laying near the schooner started. But the Patara had picked up the message and fled straight out.

The cutters caught up, but the schooner kept going. Shot after shot was fired from the cutters. At the twelfth shot, the schooner hove to. She was then sixteen miles off Jones Inlet. At noon Wednesday she was boarded and seized by Quartermaster Christensen of the Raritan.

Painted white, and with beautiful lines, the swift schooner has a great record, the coastguard officials say. They estimated liquor worth $5,000,000 has been landed from her in two years and 2,000 cases at least within the last month.

British Register.

Of British registry, she is owned by the Ernst Steamboat Company of Lunenberg, Nova Scotia. The Maritime Register shows she sailed from there November 24 with no other destination than "sea."

IGNORANCE.

Superstition and ignorance are so rife in this world, it's a marvel that humanity progresses as fast as it does.

Dr. T .F. Wall of England is a leader in search for a way to unlock and harness the terrific power pocketed up in the atom Hearing of his experiments, his neighbours flooded him with letters of protest. They fear he may blow up the earth.

The unknown is terrifying.

HUSBAND SHOT WIFE DEAD AND KILLED HIMSELF

Mother-in-law May Die and Her Son Was Also Wounded.

WERE SEPARATED.

Rampage of Murder Ended in Duel With Sheriff—Heavily Armed.

RANDOLPH, N. Y., Dec. 26. — Peter McLarney 25 years old, in a fit of anger against his wife, Dorothy Anderson McLarney from whom he had been separated, late on Wednesday sought her out at the home of a friend and killed her. He then went to the home of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Grace Anderson, wounded her and her son, John, and was himself fatally shot apparently by his own gun, after engaging in a revolver duel with a deputy sheriff.

McLarney and his wife had been separated for several months. She had been in New York City since July. Wednesday she returned to to Randolph for the holidays and went to the home of Mrs. W. S. Atchison, a friend.

Learning of his wife's presence in Mrs Atchison's home, McLarney appeared at the door and demanded entrance Mrs. Atchison refused. She was thrust aside & McLarney strode into the house to find his wife in a bedroom. He fired five shots into her body, killing her instantly. McLarney left his wife's body lying on the floor, thrust his still smoking revolver into his pocket and walked from the house.

Attached Other Two.

Going immediately to the home of Mrs. Anderson, he is believed to have locked his mother-in-law and his wife's brother in the bathroom with himself and attempted to shoot them down at close range. Mrs. Anderson was shot three times through the body, her condition was reported critical. John was shot in the jaw and the shoulder.

An alarm which meantime had gone out brought Deputy Sheriff Bragg to the Anderson home. According to the deputy sheriff, he found the bathroom door locked and he and McLarney engaged in a revolver duel, the bullets splintering through the door panels.

Failing to silence McLarney's gun, Bragg charged the door and battered it down. McLarney leaped at him with his revolver and stilletto in his hands, and then dropped, fatally shot It was indicated that the fatal shot had been fired from his own gun, whether the gun was discharged accidentlly or McLarney deliberately ended his life with a single bullet remaining in revolver, had not been established definitely ..

OTHER TRAGEDIES THAT DIMMED CHRISTMAS JOY

Eight Persons Killed in Hotel Fire and Motor Accident.

STAMFORD, Texas, Dec. 26. — (Canadian Press).—Four persons were burned to death Wednesday night in a fire which destroyed the Stamford Inn. Six were injured. Property loss was estimated at $100,000.

The dead: Mrs. Warren Winters, of Ralls, Texas, her two children, Warren, Jr., aged 3, and a 15-months old daughter, and E. D. Logstpiech, 48, a cotton broker.

FOUR KILLED IN CAR.

WASHINGTON, Indiana, Dec. 26. —Four persons were killed and another probably fatally injured Wednesday when a westbound passenger train on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad hit a small touring car near Shoals, according to information received here.

FREIGHT RATES ARE RESTORED

Crow's Nest Rates Again Temporarily Effective Pending Appeal.

CABINET DECISION.

OTTAWA, December 26.—(Canadian Press).—The Cabinet's Christmas present to the country is temporary restoration of the Crow's Nest rates set aside by the Board of Railway Commissioners. The rates are restored pending appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada by the Prairie Provinces, and they are effective within fifteen days, but 'no person or corporation' is given the right to demand any refund of freight charges paid or owing "in respect of any shipment made during which the higher rates have been or are in force."

"It thus appears," continues the order-in-council, 'that the petitioners (the Prairie Provinces) have reported to the Supreme Court of Canada to have determined the questions of law and jurisdiction. Under these circumstances, your committee (I.E. the Cabinet) is of the opinion that whatever the power of the Council may be in the premises, it is absolutely necessary that the Council should be advised as to the exact situation in reference to these questions of law and jurisdiction before taking any action looking towards the re-adjustment of rates sought by the petitioners.

Story of Proceedings.

"Your committee is of the opinion, however, that Your Excellency in Council has power to grant a stay of proceedings or postpone the operation of the order of the Board complained of pending the outcome of the appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada above referred to, and to direct that the said order of the Board be varied by providing that the tariffs therein referred to shall again become operative and remain in effect until further order of the Board following the decision of the Supreme Court upon the said appeal.

"The committee therefore recommend that the general order of the Board No. 408 be varied so as to provide that the tariffs therein referred to shall again become operative within fifteen days after the date hereof, and remain in effect until further order of the Board following the decision of the Supreme Court of Canada on the appeal to it from the Board herein before referred to; but that such variation shall not be deemed to give any person the right to demand any refund of freight charges paid or owing in respect of any shipment made during the period which the higher rates have been or are in force.

"The committee is also of the opinion that it is manifestly in the best interests of all sections of the Dominion, as well as of the parties immediately involved in the appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, that all parties should join in expediting the hearing of the said appeal."

The Supreme Court meets again for judgments on December 30 and it is possible that application will then be made for a special hearing of the appeal. Otherwise, there will be not sitting of the Court till February.

THE WEATHER

The weather took a decided change to colder for Christmas day. In the morning the temperature was four above zero. During the day it rose to eighteen above, but in the evening went back to its old place of four above. A strong wind from the north west made the day seem colder than it actually was. This morning the thermometer stood at two above. —W. P.

CHRITSMAS WAS CHEERLESS FOR MANY RUSSIANS

Legions Sought Charity, While the More Fortunate Feasted in Plenty.

PLENTY OF VODKA.

Christian Shrine Crowded by Peasants—Kremlin Bells Were Silent.

MOSCOW, Russia, December 26. —Although the Soviet government does not recognize Christmas as a holiday, all the official and commercial life of Russia ceased yesterday.

Christmas dawned bright on a setting of deep snow, biting frost and tinkling sleigh bells.

Vodka flowed freely for the first time since the revolution, the Government having found prohibition unwarkable and unprofitable.

Christmas trees, roast turkeys, sweet-meats, toys and other tokens of Christmas tide were found in the homes of the more fortunate Russians, but in millions of other households there were empty cupboards, fireless stoves and a cheerless atmosphere.

There were millions barely able to buy bread; there were legions of others with homes or lives who sought charity of their impecunious neighbors.

But if the material side of Christ was wanting, the spiritual was much in evidence, for in spite of the communist campaign against religion the greater part of the population in the larger cities went eagerly to church to celebrate the birth of the founder of the Christian faith. In countless homes candles burned brightly in front of ikons.

Shrine Was Crowded.

In the villages the peasants will wait until January 7th, to observe the holiday; this is the old Gregorian calendar date for Christmas. The diminutive chapel of the Iberian Virgin in the heart of Moscow, the most famous Christian shrine in all Russia, was packed with fervent Russians who prostrated themselves on the ice-strewn floor. Not far away was another shrine—that of the Bolshevik revolution. Within it sleeps Lenine in eternity. The town edifices presented a strange contrast —one typified old Russia, the other new Russia.

Little groups of holiday visitors from the villages mingling with the workmen and Communists, stood in front of Lenine's wooden tenement of death in awesome silence as they visualized the unseen spirit of the father of Bolshevism within.

Immediately behind the tomb with their slender golden spires pointed heavenward and touched magically by nature with a glistening sheen of virgin snow, were the churches of the Kremlin, their bells and chimes now stilled in tongueless silence, as they visualized the unseen spirit of the father of Bolshevism within.

Immediately behind the tomb, with their slender golden sires pointed heavenward and touched magically by nature with a glistening sheen of virgin snow, were the churches of the Kremlin, their bells and chimes now stilled in tongueless silence, as if symbolizing the citadel of the Soviet government, which does not recognize Christmas.

BELGIAN ARMY 82,500.

Strength of Defence Force Fixed For 1925.

BRUSSELS, Dec. 24.—The bill fixing the effective strength of the army for 1925 at 82,500 men was passed recently by the Chamber of Deputies. The Socialists voted against the measure on the ground that the Government has not their confidence.

Mr. Vandervelde, on behalf of the Socialists, said:

"We do not ignore the necessities of national defence .We are certainly internationalist and anti-militarist and we hate war, but we recognize that the nation must have a military defence force."

He recognized that Belgium's guarantees of security had got no further than mere hope.

In the course of the discussion of a Deputy of the Extremist Flamington Group requested that separate Flemish regiments and Walloon (French) regiments should be created. The day would come, he said, when Flemish soldiers would refuse to obey those who did not issue their orders in the Flemish language.

ALASKAN WEATHER WAS WARM FOR SANTA CLAUS

Overcoats Discarded in Home —Santa Drove Real Deer.

NOME, Dec. 26. — (Canadian Press).—Santa Claus was given a warm reception in this usually frigid town Wednesday when he appeared on the main thoroughfare here in a sleigh loaded with Christmas presents and drawn by real reindeer. The presents were distributed to whites and Eskimos alike.

While Canada and the United States shivered from sub-zero weather, fur overcoats and heavy clothing was discarded here when the mercury registered forty degrees above zero.

Nearly an inch of rain which fell Wednesday melted the small amount of snow on the ground.

CABINET PAYS EBERT RESPECT

Resolution of Confidence in German President at Special Meeting.

LOYALTY PRAISED.

BERLIN, Dec. 26. — (Canadian Press).—As a sequel to President Ebert's libel suit against Editor Rothardt of the Mitteldeutsche Zeitung, in which the editor was sentenced to three months' imprisonment and the German executive himself was criticized by the court, members of the Cabinet yesterday announced their loyalty by calling on the head of the Republic and presenting him with a resolution in which they expressed complete confidence and gratitude for his unswerving patriotic conduct.

The delegation was led by Dr. Karl Jarres, vice-chancellor.

Presentation of the resolution by the Cabinet members is considered a significant disavowal of the strained interpretation put by the Magdeburg Court on President Ebert's connection with the strike of the munition workers in 1918. The resolution which had been drafted at a special session of the Cabinet recorded the confidence and esteem in which President Ebert is held by the members of the Government, regardless of their party affiliations, and praised the loyalty, devotion and self-sacrifice with which he had administered his difficult post.

KNOX BROTHERHOOD OFFICERS ELECTED

Mr. George Bartley Retired From Presidency After Long Service.

Knox Church Brotherhood Class held their meeting as usual on Sunday afternoon when the annual election of officers took place. Mr. Bartley the faithful President for over 12 years resigned owing to the state of his health and his resignation was reluctantly accepted as he has been a mainstay in the Society all these years. However he assured the Brotherhood he would still have the same zeal out of office. The re-election of Mr. Clark as Teacher was applauded as his services and addresses have been fully appreciated throughout the year. The re-election of Mr. Buyers the faithful Treasurer was also unanimous. The appointment of vice-president, Mr. Benson as President was considered as a step for even greater things for the Society. The Brotherhood has had a very successful year and the finances were reported in good state, and the Trasurer was authorized to disburse several benevolent donations at this Season. The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows:

Officers for 1925.

Hon. President—Rev . M. C. McKinnon.
Hon. Vice-President—Mr. W. G. Bartley.
Teacher—Mr. M. N. Clark.
President—Mr. E. Benson.
Vice-President—Mr. W. Lyburn.
Treasurer—Mr. J. W. Buyers.
Secretary—Mr. A. .Gillies.
Chairman of Sick Committee—Mr. A. Gillespie.
Chairman of Lookout Committee. —Dr. D. W. Clark.

WALL OF WATER LEFT RUIN AND DEATH IN WAKE

Six Dead, Nine Missing, and Thirty-five in Hospitals.

CAUGHT IN HOMES.

'Muck" Dam at Saltville, Va., Broke Without Warning Christmas Eve.

ROANOKE, Va., Dec. 26. -- Six persons are known to be dead and nine missing as the result of the breaking on Wednesday night of a "muck" dam of the Mathieson Alkali Works in the Holston River at Saltville.

Thirty-five are in the hospital at Abington and Saltville, some seriously injured.

Most of the injured last night were lying in an improvised hospital over a drug store at Saltville.

Physicians and nurses rushed from nearby towns were aiding in the care for those hurt while other relief was given those left homeless.

Relief parties were searching the banks of the river several miles below the alkali works, in an effort to recever more bodies. It was feared that some of the missing might be buried beneath the tons of muck released with the waters when the storage dam gave way.

Trapped In Homes.

The flood, which bore down upon the mill settlement nestling below the impounded waters, came without warning and the victims, trapped in their homes, were unable to escape the oncoming wall of water and mud... All of the missing are believed to have been swept into the north fork of the river.

Ten houses occupied by workmen were swept away and the bottom lands of the Holston as far as Tumbling Creek, six miles distant, were covered with sediment released by the dam break.

COOLIDGE SET HOLIDAY NOTE

Simplicity of Rural Vermont Pervaded Life in the U. S. Capital.

FEW RECEPTIONS.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26.—(Canadian Press).—The simplicity that attends observance of Christmas in rural Vermont marked the day at the White House and in a measure pervaded the entire life of the capital. Whether by design or not, observance of the holiday throughout Washington partook of the quiet and simple manner of celebration of President and Mrs. Coolidge.

Cabinet members remaining in the city for the holiday observed the festival with members of their families and those of high and low degree in official and private life followed much the same plan. There were few of the receptions and parties that once marked the day in the capital.

MUSIC A FEATURE.

Attendance Large at Sacred Heart Church Midnight Mass.

One of the largest congregations ever assembled in the Church of the Sacred Heart assisted at the midnight mass on Christmas eve. The accommodation of the main floor and gallery was taxed to capacity and chairs were provided for the overflow. Most of the parishioners attending received Holy Communion. The High Mass was sung by the parish priest, Rev. John J. O'Brien. Christmas carols were sung by the children's choir of the Sacred Heart school before Mass began, and with the special music of the church choir, contributed effectively to the solemnity of the celebration of the anniversary of the Nativityof Christ. During the communion the Berceuse from "Jocelyn" was played by Master Jerry Collins as a violin solo, accompanied by Master Harold Armstrong at the organ. These young musicians acquitted themselves very commendably. The Christmas music was under the general direction of Mr. John Armstrong, organist and choirmaster, and deserved the complimentary reference paid by Rev. Father O'Brien.

Road Commission and Mr. Armstrong

Aug. 19, 1919.—Moved by McIntosh and Griffith, that the road known as the Port Hope Road to Peterboro, thence East through Otonabee, known as the Norwood Road be adopted as a Provincial County Road."
"Carried."

Oct. 14, 1919.—Moved by Anderson and Bell that the former resolution be rescinded and that the Provincial County Road, running East be from the Lock's Bridge straight East."
"Carried."

And is yet a Provincial County Road, but not a S. Area Road.

Norwood Road assumed by S. Area Commission from City limits to 6th line (approved by Department) and $819.70 expended in 1923 on such road, the Government paid 40 per cent, the City 30 per cent and the County 30 per cent. $5,477.40 expended on said road by S. Area Comisbsion in 1924 the City already has paid 30 per cent, County 30 per cent and the Governmen will nay 40 per cent when statements are sent in.

The Government did not stop the work which every member of the County Council knows, and Mr. Armstrong should have consulted those gentlemen before jumping at conclusions.

MUIR'S

Repeating Mr. Muir's words when addressing the County Council and S. Area Commission on February 8, 1924.

"The work of the S. Area Commission is commendable and they are a body corporate.

The old Norwood Road is in the opinion of the Minister the proper road for heavy expenditure on a road running East from Peterboro. "The North Road or old Norwood road, Mr. Anderson."

A by-law is now prepared to lessen the County Roads mileage and the Block Road is left off in such by-law.

I hereby certify that the enclosed statements are correct and true copies of the proceedings and herewith attach my official signature and corporate seal .

County Clerk.

TRAFFIC.

Congestion of traffic in New York streets causes a loss estimated as high as 100 millian dollars a year, For instance, when a truck is idle in a traffic jam, it costs the owner six cents a minute in the form of unproductive investment, etc.

Every autoist and pedestrian has similar costly delay. It is part of the price we pay for advantages of the motor car. Nature always exacts her price. And in solving one problem we usually create several new ones.

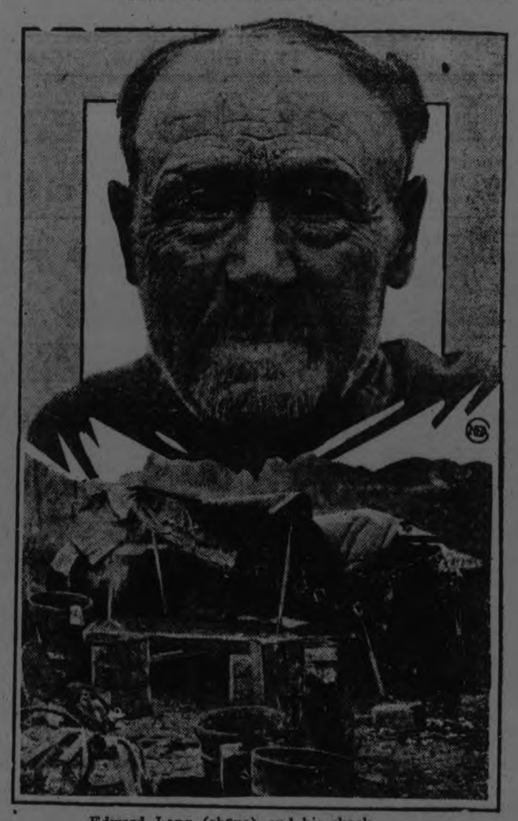
WITH ALL LOST SAVE HOPE HERMIT WAITS FOR "BOYS"



Edward Lang (above) and his shack.

KEARNEY, N. J., Dec. 26.—"I will live until I find my boys."

That is the constant thought of Edward Lang 78, hermit of the Jersey meadows.

All that he held dear in life is gone. His wife is dead, his sons disappeared..

For 20 years he has been a wanderer—searching, ever searching.

Continually he hears his dead wife calling those "boys." She calls long and loud, and her wails are heard long into the night.. Lang doesn't sleep much as a result — and the nights are so long.

Twenty years ago Lang was happy He had a little business that gave him a comfortable livelihood; a loving wife, and two fine boys. One night the boys disappeared.

Lang was dazed. He couldn't understand. Nor could his wife. She sickened and died. She died calling for her "boys."

Those calls lingered in Lang's ears. He couldn't stand it. He sold his business and began to wander, peering into the faces of the young men he met, ever hoping to see a familiar face.

Finally footsore, weary, dejected and penniless he returned to the neighbourhood where he once had been happy.

He settled down in the Jersey meadows, out in the seaweed, away from civilization. That was three years ago. He has built himself a shanty of soap boxes, tin and burlap taken away from the Kearney dumps

A crucifix hangs over the doorway of the shack, a symbol of Lang's hope that some day his sons may come back.

They are about 40 now, if they still live.

"I will live until I find my boys Lang mumbles over and over.

STAY AT COLOGNE.

Allied Council Confirm Decision Taken by British and French.

PARIS, December 26. — The allied council of the ambassadors at a meeting here to-morrow expected to confirm decisions taken by the British and French governments not to evacuate the Cologne bridgehead on January 10th.

The ambassadors in addition, it is forecast, will send a memorandum to Berlin, explaining the decision.

The are not expected to go much further with the matter, however, pending the receipt of a final report from the military control mission, concerning the status of German disarmament, which may be for the coming latter part of January.

BE HONEST, THEN NATURAL

Courtesy is mere piano polish—veneer.

Affability, amiability, politeness—these are ceremonial welcomes or honeyed receptions. People can be so polite that they "dance attendance," so affable that their extreme manners make you feel uncomfortable.

Removing your hat in a public elevator is Chesterfied in the right church but the wrong pew.

Conventional courtesy we must recognize, but the "pink of politeness" is pure bunk.

Sincerity and a consideration of others beats the idea of bowing and scraping—beats the deep salaam.

Just keep in mind the thought that you will always be square and fair with friends—always considerate; then if you should fail to make the right gesture, your friends will understand it was a mistake of manners and not of the heart.

An ounce of sincerity is worth a pound of politeness. Honest consideration of others is of more value than volumes on the rules to be observed in polte society..

The verpolite are seldom able to hold your confidence. The sincere occasionally slip in some ceremonial, but they seldom skid in our permanent respect.

Just be honest, then natural.

OSHAWA TO ASSUME ONE-QUARTER DEBT OF ONTARIO COUNTY

Cost of Administration of Justice Proportioned to Population of City and County.

SEPARATION AWARD.

OSHAWA, Dec. 26.—The award of the Board of Arbitrators in the separation proceedings between the County of Ontario and City of Oshawa, consisting of Martin Hugh Roach, of the village of Beaverton, Arthur Kennedy Bemell, of Brantford, and Judge Edward C. S. Huycke, of Peterborough, was made public Wednesday. It directs that the City of Oshawa shall assume and pay twenty-five per cent. of the indebtedness of the county as it existed on the eighth day of March, 1924, the date on which Oshawa was raised to the status of cityhood.

"As to the share of the costs of the administration of justice to be borne by the city and county respectively we do hereby adjudge and award the same to be paid by the city in proportion as the population of the City of Oshawa, for the year preceding the year for which the payment is being made, bears to the population of the county of Ontario for the same year as that on which the population of the city of Oshawa is based, the said costs of administration to be the net cost thereof, after deducting credits or payments on account thereof from the government or from any other source whatever. The costs of maintenance and upkeep of the court house, law library and gaol are to be apportioned in proportion to the population of county and city, excepting that the sum of $500 shall be credited to Oshawa for the care of that portion of said buildings used exclusively by the county. The maintennace of the registry office is to be mutually taken care of, while as to the insurable interest of the city and county in the county buildings Oshawa has twelve and one-half per cent, and the county eighty-seven and one-half per cent. The arbitrators direct that in case any disputes shall arise between the city and county as to whether any item of expenditure is not properly included which shall be furnished by the county or as to the correctness of any such items, such disputes shall be referred to the judge of the county of Ontario and his decision shall be accepted by both parties as final and binding."

Mayor W. J. Trick has called a special meeting of the local city council for Friday evening of this week, when the award will be read and considered and will no doubt take a prominent place in the municipal election in January.

NEWS OF HASTINGS.

Second Annual Concert Given by Public School Pupils.

HASTINGS, Dec. 26.—The second annual concert was given by the pupils of the Hastings Public School on Monday evening in the Town Hall.

The programme opened with a chorus in unison.

"The Babes in the Wood" was most beautifully staged. Gerrard Scriver played the part of the King and the robbers were Hayden Kelly and Jack Prest. The babes were Vivian Kerr and Pansy Killenbeck; the fairies Jean Baker, Madeline Bond, Lily Dodd, Irene Sargeant, Dora Hubbs; Queen, Annie Spooner, Page, Charlie Graham; Robins, Everett Whitred, Cleveland Smith, Goldie Hinton, Jimmy Montgomery. While each were taking their parts, Mrs. Thos. Chaplin sang "The Babes in the Woods."

Gerrard Scriver gave a recitation and Dorothy Kerr and Annie Spooner, dressed in Scottish costume, danced very prettily, the Highland Fling.

An exceptionally effective "Fairy Tale" was given. Mrs. Thos. Chaplin took the part of the Fairy Queen; Ireland, Dorothy Kerr; Scotland, Jean McKee; England, Hazel Waye; Canada, Dora Hubbs; Miners, Eddie Radford, Charlie Graham, Frank Sargeant; Green Men, Jack Prest, Goldie Hinton, Cleveland Smith, Jimmy Montgomery; Fairies, Bird, Marie Scriver; Water, M. Clapper; Rainbow, Madeline Bond; Tree, Jean Baker; Farmer, Allan Hubbs; Indians who represented the woods of Canada: Chief Walter Whitred, Ted Prest, Kitchiner Smith, Idan Bond, Howard Wilson, Kenneth Doonan.

A Scottish dance, the Highland Fling, and Clog, was given by Miss Ada Bonds, who was dressed in Highland costume.

A flag drill was given by a number of girls.

A negro chorus was sung by about twenty boys and girls who were all in costume.

A negro play, entitled "Sambo's Party," was given by the following: Mistress Sambo, Hazel Waye; Sambo Everett Whitred; Dinah, Thelma West; Rastus, Charlie Graham; Pinky, Goldie Hinton; Lizah, Nicholas Dainard; George Washington, George Dainard; Pompey, Frank Sargeant; Lizil, Miriam Clapper; Emmeline, Marie Scriver; Chloe, Dorothy Johnston; Minty, Helen Smith.

"Mammy's Little Coal Black Rose," was sung as a closing chorus by the negros.

During the evening Mrs. P. M. Howard, Regent of the Hastings Chapter I.O.D.E., presented the prizes given annually by the Chapter to the pupils in each of the schools, namely, the Public and Separate, who obtain the highest marks in history at the entrance examinations.

Mrs. Howard gave a verbal address to the prize-winners and presented each with a beautifully bound volume of Tennyson's poems.

The winners were Miss Mary Fowlds, from the Public School, and Miss Regina Cleary, from the Separate School.

Much credit was given to the teachers, Mr. Thos. Chaplin, and Miss Maude Spiers, for the splendid showing of their pupils.

A vote of thanks was moved by Dr. J. H. Hess, seconded by Dr. W. E. Wilson, to the teachers and all who took part in the entertainment.

Many Visitors Home For Christmas—School Concert.

TRENT RIVER, Dec. 26.—The annual Sunday School entertainment was well attended at the church.

The programme was long and varied. Special mention is made of the pageant, "The Wooing of Canada." Those taking part did exceptionally well for the short time they had for rehearsals; also the dialogue, "Dr. Quack in the Country," proved to be one of the best numbers. The doctor was able to cure any patients who came to him for treatment. After the programme the gifts from the tree were given out by Santa Claus. Candies were given to each child present.

Miss Annie Hutchinson, of Toronto, was home for the Christmas recess.

The annual school meeting of electors of Public School Section No. 10 of Seymour Township is to be held Wednesday morning at the hour of ten o'clock, December 31st, for the transaction of business.

Mrs. Henry Wood has left for Trenton to spend the Christmastide.

NEWS FROM WARSAW.

WARSAW, Dec. 26.—Mr. Currie has gone to his home in Elgin county for the Christmas holidays.

Miss Quinn was home for Sunday but returned to attend the Union School No. 12 concert on Monday evening. Third Line Dummer school also held a concert on Monday evening.

From the U.F.W.O., Mrs. Harold Darling, as delegate, attended the convention in Toronto last week. Mrs. E. R. Hamblin, as county director, Mesdames Rufus Payne and John Cooper and Miss Elsie Cooper also attended. Mrs. Darling will give her report at the regular meeting on Jan. 15th, 1925.

Mr. W. S. Anderson spent Friday and Saturday in Toronto. He attended the directors' meetings on Friday.

Mr. David Miller attended the U.F.O. convention last week and will give his report at the meeting on Wednesday, Jan. 14th.

WOMAN HAS LEARNED PATIENCE FROM LONG WAITING SINCE MOTHER EVE'S DAY

It Is Not Always Kept Secret, But Often Silence is Most Eloquent.

WAY OF WISDOM.

Some one writes in a London paper about the patience of women.

"Woman," sh edeclares, "having been kept waiting since the world began, has learned a divine patience which is her own secret.

Yes, but sometimes she doesn't keep it secret.

She wants full credit for it or the reason why she has to exercise it.

But sometimes the tired smile with which she accepts a man's explanation of why he was so late is worse for him than all kinds of outbursts of temper.

He has to work so hard to thaw out the ice.

That is always a good deal of fun for the woman, unless she is too angry to be amused at anything for a while.

He looks so young and struggling if he is penitent, so young and futile if he raves and blusters.

And she has grown so old and world weary and wise while she waited for him.

After all, she has thought some hard thoughts while she waited; it will be all right to let him squirm a little.

But, unless she is what's known as a shrew, she can't hold out that way so very long. It's too pathetic, and so she relents, and the famous feminine patience has another illustration.

Perhaps she does this because she has seen the exception that proves the rule, and it isn't a pretty sight.

The carefully, oh, fastidiously dressed young woman who looks like a bride of about three years or so was standing in a shop one time waiting for her husband.

He was about half an hour late, and his expression as he came hurriedly in the door and stepped up like a little man to be scolded was pitifully reminiscent of the puppy who has been caught chewing the slippers.

The prettiness had all gone out of his wife's face, leaving her lips pinched, her eyes narrow and blazing, her expression vindictive and determined.

He had made a mistake, had thought they said half-past five, when really they had said five.

Of course, it was thoughtless, and, of course, it was annoying to have to stand there with every chance of the shop's being closed at any minute while an erring husband killed time somewhere and there was no way of reaching him.

But, he knew that. He realized it before he met her, and his expression told that he had.

He began to suffer as soon as the remembrance struck him, a pang of sudden, sharp, apprehensive agony as he suddenly got a picture of his wife that morning, smiling and saying, "All right, dear, five o'clock."

A few kind words, if she wanted to make him suffer would have made him more miserable than the tirade she poured at him as soon as they met; that just made him angry in self-defence—and there was their whole evening together in town, which was supposed to be a lark, ruined completely and utterly because she refused to look into the immediate future and realize how hard it would be to get back to good nature after starting out with a quarrel.

Another wife whose husband resolutely and determinedly declined her advice and got himself into trouble thereby, waited until afterward, when the pleasant drive was all finished and they had had a good time and their guests had departed.

And then she asked him whether he knew how perfectly furious she had been at him.

He knew, yes, and had been thoroughly uncomfortable and had felt particularly sheepish — especially when she restrained the words and the "Ha, ha, I told you so," that would have been perfectly justifiable.

200 TRAINS SCHEDULED.

GENEVA, December 26. — Transportation of the Holy Year pilgrims to Rome is a problem which has necessitated the assembling of an International conference of railwaymen here.

One hundred and fifty to two hundred special trains will be scheduled.

BILLIARD TOURNAMENT.

Seven Players Will Compete for Championship.

CHICAGO, December 26. — Seven players, tree Americans and four foreigners, will compete in the tournament here for the world's 18.2 balkline billiard championship on Feb. 23rd to March 4th.

GIRLS' SCHOOL BURNED.

KAMLOOPS, B.C., Dec. 26. — Fire destroyed the girls' wing of the Kamloops Indian school Tuesday night. The inmates, forty in number, escaped in their night clothes in a temperature of ten below and they are now being temporarily cared for. The building was an old one of frame construction.

A new school is at hand to replace the old one.

KHANHOO.

The mah jongg game, it develops, was introduced into Europe 30 years ago, under the name of "khanhoo."

The public was indifferent, and merchandisers think that khanhoo failed because it was put out in card form. Correspondingly, it is believed that mah jongg caught American fancy years later principally because of the elegance of the inlaid-ivory sets, along with fancy cabinets.

A lesson here, for people careless about personal appearances.

Mr. H. Jordan, of the Continuation School staff, is spending the Christmas holidays at his home in Listowel.

Entertainment.

The basement of Grace Presbyterian Church was filled to capacity on Tuesday evening for the annual Christmas tree and entertainment in connection with the Sunday School.

The pastor, Rev. G. S. Gervan, acted as chairman, and Miss Myrtle Russell was pianist for the evening.

The programme was opened with all singing, "Away in a Manger," and included the following numbers:

Recitation, "Fooling St. Nick," by Joe Thorndyke.

Recitation, "Merry Christmas," by Edna McKnight.

Chorus, "Don't Let Them Scrap the British Navy," by Joe Thorndyke, Garnet Russell, Bruce Lamb, David and Russell Gervan, Gordon Armstrong, and Lloyd Bothwell.

Recitation, "Dolly's Stocking," by Mary Eakins.

Recitation, "If Santa Should Stumble," by May Ferrin.

Recitation, "Seeing St. Nick," by Douglas Carveth.

Motion song, "St. Nicholas," by Jessie Armstrong, Ruth Thorndyke, Vanita Ingram, Edna Gervan, Jean Bothwell, Audrey Larmer, and Aileen Armstrong.

Arrival of Santa Claus, and the distribution of gifts from the tree. Every member of the Sunday School, except the adult classes, received a bag of candy, nuts, and oranges.

Among the prizes given out was one for the best record for attendance in the Primary Department (Mrs. Gervan, teacher), won by Joe Thorndyke.

NEWS FROM CAVAN.

Township Purebred Herd Tested By Accredited System.

CAVAN, December 26. — Dr. W. H. Nicholls, V. S., of the Department of Agriculture, Health of Animals Branch, paid an official visit to Cavan township, and tested some of the purebred herds under the accredited system. Mr. H. I. Seymour's herd passed the test without any reactors. Another clean test in twelve months and he will have an accredited herd. Very few herds pass the first test without any signs of reacting and in some cases practically the whole herd has been wiped out.

Personal Mention.

PITTSBURG PUZZLERS DESCENDED ON MUSEUM

Besiege Curate for Seven-Letter Word for Long Latin Designation and Get Sparrow.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Dec. 24. —A wild-eyed mob of cross-word fans descended on Carnegie Museum today, invaded the department where birds and animals of the Pleoscene and other ages or antiquity are kept, eager in their desire to learn what bird with seven letters in its name belonged to the "sub-order of eleutherodactyli oscines" family of prehistorics.

The first cross-worder dashes to one of the officials and asked:

"I want to get some information on thepterodactyl —the prehistoric bird that Conan Doyle wrote a story about several years ago."

"Certainly," replied the official, "right this way."

With a mob following, the official led the inquirer to a mounted replica of an immense bird with a long neck and legs, sans tail. Its parched and dried skin had a leathery appearance.

With a shout the cross-worders demanded to know what "bird belonged to the same family whose name could be spelled out in seven letters."

"None," replied the museum official, crisply.

"Says so here," declared a demure, young woman fan. "Look for yourself."

Quietly taking the puzzle, the museum official read:

"A word of seven letters meaning a bird of the sub-order of eleutherodactyli oscines."

At first he frowned, then a smile grew on his face as he said:

"Wow! You are in the wrong department. Go in among the birds. What you are looking for is a sparrow."

And so it was—the bird of seven letters of the sub-order of the eleutherodactyli oscines.

LUXURY.

The standard of living keeps on going higher in many ways. More genuine silk is being worn now by Americans than during the war boom. In raw pounds it is almost twice as much as before the war.

Builders point to another indication of increasing luxury: It used to be the custom, in erecting a home, to have a two-car garage and rent one space. But the tendency now is for each family to need the entire garage for itself. The auto industry is moving into a two-cars-per-family era. Sales market widens.

CHRISTMAS WEATHER.

Whether the balance of the winter proves what is commonly described as "over" or not, most people were delighted to have Christmas celebrated amid proper weather conditions.

There are Canadians who as a general rule prefer the winter months to be as clement as possible, but even they are in favour of a Christmas Day such as yesterday with an abundance of snow and the right atmosphere for the year's greatest holiday.

Shakespeare evidently had the sane view of it, for we find him making one of his characters in "Love's Labour Lost" say:

"At Christmas I no more desire a rose
Than wish a snow in May's new-fangled mirth."

Ontario had no complaint upon this score yesterday.

THE DISAPPEARING TURKEY.

Examiner readers will perhaps be surprised to hear—if they are able to stand a reference to the subject so soon after the holiday feasting—that the turkey is losing its popularity over the continent as the centrepiece of the Christmas repast.

In fact, according to the figures of leading poultry dealers in the United States turkey was not eaten in more than a twentieth of the homes in America yesterday.

The turkey is losing out—each year becoming scarcer.

In 1900 there were six and a half million turkeys on United States farms—it is doubtful if there are half that many to-day.

It is difficult to account for the change; the price seems to be only a secondary consideration, and those who have considered the matter believe that the taste of the people has changed.

And yet that is hard to comprehend, for there is a charm and flavour about turkey that is all its own.

Other fowl have their place and season. But Christmas without turkey is, to many of us, like the Twenty-fourth of May without fire-crackers.

After all, however, the turkey is in no danger of becoming extinct.

One of these days the turkey growers will band together and revive the national craving for their birds by advertising —just as the sale of oranges, raisins and other products has been stimulated.

NOW THAT IT IS OVER.

Another Christmas has gone—a pretty happy Christmas for most people, albeit that in many homes there was not the surplus of ready cash that in recent years anyway has come to be regarded as essential to the occasion.

But there were gifts and good cheer—if not as lavish as usual, at least sweetened and enriched by the love that was behind them.

And now that it is over, how about a sincere effort to keep the Christmas spirit alive until next Christmas?

Why should we for a few days in the year forget self and think most of the welfare of others, and then drop it all and pick up the old selfish habits for the next twelve months?

"We ring the bells and we raise the strain,
We hang up garlands everywhere,
And bid the tapers twinkle fair,
And feast and frolic—and then we go
Back to the same old lives again."

The poetess wrote that verse a good many years ago, but the pit of it all is that it is as true to-day as when it was penned.

We do go back to the same old lives again—and what a different world it would be for everybody if we didn't—if in the days that are ahead we would try to be as thoughtful for the pleasure and welfare of others as we were just before Christmas.

The experiment is worth trying.

TOO MANY NOW.

The Kingston Standard sounds a timely warning to Premier Ferguson that in the probable redistribution of seats in Ontario, a matter that will be considered during the next session, he had better be careful about avoiding an increase in the number of legislators.

The Examiner is sure that the majority of the people will agree with the spirit of that advice.

There is a general feeling that we in Canada are vastly over-governed and that we are paying far too much for the small army of legislators, Provincial and Federal, that are considered necessary for the administration of affairs.

If redistribution in Ontario means an addition to the present quota of seats, it is not likely to be any more favourably received than Mr. Ferguson's suggestion that the salary of Cabinet Ministers should be increased.

In fact, a reduction in the number of legislators would be decidedly welcome.

But there is not the slightest chance of that development originating.

The probabilities are that when Mr. Ferguson gets through with providing the additional urban seats the growth in population points to, there will have to be a number of rural constituencies added to balance up.

AS TO CITY MANAGERS.

Six years ago Guelph, Ontario, decided it must have a city manager. The old methods of city government were declared to be obsolete and reactionary. Something brand-new, something progressive and up-to-date, was wanted. Every large corporation had its general manager: why not a civic corporation? So Guelph appointed a city manager.

Guelph has just gone back to the old system.

Guelph discovered, says the Ottawa Journal, what many people discovered before it, namely, that government and business are quite different things, that what a manager can do with private money and private interests cannot be done with public money and public interests. It experienced friction, divided authority, diminished sense of public responsibility, less efficient administration.

The lesson, an old one, is clear. It is that all is not good that is new. People rave against representative government. But the great trouble with their raving is that they compare representative government with an ideal of perfection, not with something else human that would have to take its place.

Democracy, representative government, has its penalties, its defects. Their chief source is in the public's own apathy. But when criticism has said its worst, when the last defect is weighed, it still stands true that government which involves direct responsibility to the people, having regard always to realities, is the best, the most sensible and most successful form of government that has yet been devised by men.

CANADA FORWARD POLICY.

Successive Federal Governments—Liberal and Conservative alike—have failed to grapple effectively with the problem of Canada's economic development. High sounding policies have been enunciated from time to time, but net results have fallen far short of reasonable expectations. Such post-mortems as there have bene have disclosed the same set of contributing factors varied only in degree and by the addition of others peculiarly related to the particular policy under discussion.

The truth of the matter is that our departmental system of government, with its political management of business and promotion departments, is utterly incapable of providing in proper measure and proportion the primary requisites of initiative, driving force, business acumen, and experience, and the necessary variety, adaptability and efficiency of organisation.

* * * * * *

Canada needs all that has been stressed in previous articles in this series, but back of the need for each is the fundamental need of freeing the business and promotion departments of our Federal Government from political management and all that follows in its train, and putting at their head men who are qualified by capacity, training and experience to organise and conduct them on a sound, aggressive, promotional business basis.

Such in fact was the conclusion, after investigation, of the Economic and Development Commission, composed of some of Canada's leading business men, which was appointed in 1916 to make plans for Canada's economic development after the war. "Stagnating methods" was the term by which this commission characterised the operation of our departmental system in a preliminary report of its chairman. This report stated, in part:

"Our departmental machinery is not calculated to adapt itself as would a business organisation to new and advanced methods of developing our resources in those subjects where primitive and aggressive methods are essentials to success. No business organisation would for a moment entertain the application of such machinery as our departmental methods to the transaction of an expanding business. The question, therefore, arises whether Canada must necessarily rely upon the methods which we have used for the transaction in the past of our national business, and which may be said to be entirely responsible for our want of progress, or whether we shall awake to the national opportunities which we are losing and abandon our traditions of stagnating methods and adopt new systems both modern and efficient."

The report stated further that under our present system each minister is "in the very nature of things charged with keeping his department largely in touch with the political fortunes of his party," and that among the officials "initiative is not encouraged, constructive ability is not given full play and aggressive methods are at variance with the traditions of the department."

As for the remedy the report said it was "absolutely indispensable" that active and permanent commissions of not more than three members each, especially selected and especially organised for the purpose, should take charge of (1) immigration and colonisation, (2) agriculture, (3) trade, and (4) development of our natural resources. It recommended also the establishment of a bureau of industrial and scientific research.

Each of these commissions the report decommended "should be charged with the same responsibility and given the same freedom of action as a business organisation would feel it incumbent to apply in analogous cases."

This drastic change was not approved by the government of the day and the commission, regarding it as fundamental, declined to proceed further with its inquiry.

* * * * * *

The need for this change is even greater to-day than in 1916. Canada never had such an opportunity for sound development as that which is now unfolding. But to realise it our national business must have the facilities for sound initiative, quick action, aggressive promotion and definite constructive work that are so essential to the development of private business.

This is of even greater importance than reduction in Federal taxation, highly important as that is. Our present controllable expenditures, tremendous as they are, could be easily borne if we were getting for them results in development work commensurate with present opportunities. Let there be, by all means, every possible saving of waste effort with a view to reducing taxation, but let it be as part of a general reorganization of governmental machinery and method that will get to the very root of our backwardness in development.—Edmonton Journal.

MISCELLANEOUS SHOWER TO EAST EMILY COUPLE

Annual Bethel Sunday School Concert Big Success—Sleighing Good.

EAST EMILY, Dec. 26.—About 85 friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Melville Moncrief last Monday night and presented them with a miscellaneous shower.

Mr. Charles Davis read the address and the shower was bestowed upon Mr. and Mrs. Moncrief. After the presentation was made Melville made a very suitable reply in a pleasing manner, after which the evening was spent in cards and dancing until the wee small hours of the morning when all those present retired to their respective homes, wishing Mr. and Mrs. Moncrief much joy and happines during their future life.

The many friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Franks gathered at their home last Tuesday night and presented them with a miscellaneous shower. The evening was spent in cards and dancing until the early hours of the morning.

Sleighing Is Good.

There is excellent sleighing in this district this week and the cars can also run and the people of this this community are hoping no more snow will fall for some time yet.

The annual Sunday School concert and Christmas tree was held in the basement of Bethel Methodist church on Monday night. There was a very good crowd in attendance and the program given by the kiddies was splendid.

RECTOR OF ST. GEORGE'S OSHAWA, MADE CANON

Elevation of Rev. C. R. Depencier Announced on Wednesday.

OSHAWA, Dec. 26.—The rector of St. George's Anglican church and congregation received a very gratifying Christmas announcement Wednesday when the Lord Bishop of the Diocese created a canonical status on St. George's church and appointing Rev. C. R. Depencier the first canon of the parish and municipality. The honor bestowed on the new canon is a tribute to his efforts over a period of some thirteen years, culminating for the present in the construction of the new St.. George's church which was dedicated to public worship in the month of November last.

His Lordship has in his commission given recognition to the fact that Oshawa has during the year entered upon its enlarged municipal life as a city. This Christmas gift calls forth alike congratulations to rector, parish and the city and it is hoped that the seniority already established for Rev. Mr. Depencier among the clergy of Oshawa, may continue the same spirit of cordiality through many future years as in days already past. While the new honor conferred upon him will naturally draw Rev. Depencier into closer relationship with the councils of his church and with the Cathedral of the Diocese, the citizens of Oshawa are glad to know that the new responsibilities will not in any way militate against his residence or his work in St. George's parish.

PAINT TOYS

Children's games and pasteboard toys soon wear out in the ordinary course of events, but they will last considerably longer if you give them a coat of varnish or shellac.

A THOUGHT.

Rejoice not when thine enemy falleth, and let not thine heart be glad when he stumbleth.—Prov. 24:17.

A WISE MAN

The self-centred individual will consider no opinion but that of his own. The self-sufficient person will ignore most proferred assistance.

These two classes consider themselves clocks of the self-winding type, but study their faces closely and you wil see that they are a trifle "fast" or a little "slow." Most of them are out of order and will not go—cannot go.

A wise man accepts the counsel of his superiors, and learns a lot—a lot from his inuferiors.

SOUTH MONAGHAN U.F.O. FLOURISHES

Bank Credit of $308 Reported at Annual Meeting.

BAILIEBORO, Dec.26. — On Monday evening the Cavan and South Monaghan U.F.O. club held their annual meeting in their club room at Centreville. There was a large attendance of members. The president, Earnest Anderson presided at the meeting, and during the evening Wm. Belch, one of the members who was appointed delegate to attend the annual U.F.O. convention in Toronto last week, gave an excellent report of the proceedings at that convention.

The auditors, Earnest Anderson and Stewart Donaldson gave a very encouraging report, showing that the club had closed this year with a surplus of $308.

Officers were elected as follows: President, Fred Wood; secretary-treasurer, Willard Waterman; vice-president, Ernest Anderson directors, Wm. McCamus, Wilbur Barnard, Cleve Byers, A.. Huggins, Wm. Belch, Richard Moncrief.

School Concert.

The pupils of School Section No. 2, South Monaghan, put on an excellent entertainment on Monday evening.

The school house was packed to the doors, and was beautifully decorated. A large, prettily decorated Christmas tree loaded with gifts put the finishing touches to the scene.

Melville Wood, one of the senior pupils acted as chairman, and ably handled the position. The program consisted of recitation by the small children, readings by Misses Ethel Falls and Velma Nurse, and Mrs. James Long; choruses and drills by pupils. Messrs. Ross and Harold Moncrief also added greatly to the musical part of the program by rendering several splendid selections.

The most important part of the program was the appearance of Santa Claus, in the person of Ronald Deyell, at the conclusion of the program. He distributed the numerous gifts from the tree, remembering all of the children. Quite a number of the young men and women of the community received a small remembrance from the generous hearted old gentleman, and many of these gifts he opened before the cheering audience, and displayed the contents to all.

The teacher, Miss C. McConnachie, was highly complimented upon the success of the entertainment.

COURSE TO COVER MUCH WIDER FIELD

New Correspondence Course Arranged by the Typographical Union.

INDIANAPOLIS., Ind., Dec. 26.—Inauguration of a new correspondence course in the printing arts, under direction of a newly organized bureau of education of the International Typographical Union, will take place January 1, according to an announcement by James M. Lynch, president of the union.

The instruction will cover a wider field than was covered by the course untol recently conducted from the union's educational quarters in New York City. The new bureau occupies quarters in the international offices here. John H. Chambers of Dayton, O. is the new director of the educational bureau the teaching staff of which has been enlarged.

Energy and resources of the union will be devoted to extending work of the educational bureau as rapidly as is practical Mr. Lynch said.

"The newly installed executive council looks upon apprentice training as of vital importance" said Mr. Lynch. "The I.T.U. protective and beneficial institutions such as the Union Printers Home at Colorado Springs Colo. mortuary benefit and old age pension have accomplished much in strengthening the organization, but future welfare of the union requires elevation of craftsmanship and sound education of succeeding generations of printers.

"Employers do not object to paying good wages to good printers, but they will complain against good wages for incompetent men. The same applies in any trade. It is our amition to light the way for other trades in this problem of education."

Under bylaws of the Typographical Union passage of the course in printing by apprentices is compulsory. They are required to begin their educational work in the third year of their six-year apprenticeship, and the work must be completed before they are admitted to membership. The new bureau will provide adequate methods for checking up the progress of each apprentice in his studies.

In addition to the mere technical operations of the printing craft, the course will carry instruction in English, punctuation art in its relation to printing and in advertising composition. The policy of permitting the student t oelect subjects not included in fundamental course, will be pursued.

"Instructors will endeavor to engage the interest of each student by offering individual attention to his needs and by writing personal letters," said Mr. Chambers. "Whenever possible, too, a 'big brother,' for the apprentice will be selected from the printrs in the shop where the lad is employed. The 'big brother' will be in correspondence with the bureau and will be advised of the student's progress and of his difficulties from time to time.

"Apprenticeship committees are maintained by local unions and are charged with responsibility for welfare of apprentices. These committees will be provided with all information needed for encouraging progress n studies, and will be expected to see that each apprentice bgins the course at the proper time and that he completes it satisfactorily before his admission to the rank of journeyman. While the course is designed for beginners, educational work will be provided also for journeymen, who wish to perfect themselves in advanced phases o fthe printing art."

Test questions for use in examination of apprentices by local committees will be supplied by the bureau here.

ANNUAL ENTERTAINMENT OMEMEE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Shooting Match Held by Mr. Calvert Carew at Mount Nebo.

OMEME,E December 26. — The annual Christmas tree and entertainment of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church Sunday School was held on Monday evening. Many parents and well wishers for the Sunday School were present, and took great pleasure in listening to the splendid programme which the scholars had previously prepared. A most interesting feature of the evening was the presentation of a well-bound story book to each of five scholars who had been present at every Sunday school service held during the year 1924. Rev. Mr. Black made the presentations.

Misses Emily Mitchell, Jessie Lamb, Mildred Williamson, Bernice Matthews, and Donald Mahood were the proud recipients.

At the conclusion of the programme Santa Claus arrived in his jolly manner, and after extending greetings to the pastor and recalling to mind many familiar faces in the audience, proceeded to distribute the bags of candy and oranges to the many children present, also a number of other gifts from the teachers to the scholars and vice versa, leaving later for Reaboro, where he had an appointment at a similar entertainment.

The Programme.

The following was the programme given:

Chorus by the School.
Chairman's remarks, Rev. J. A. Black.
Recitation, Doris Hart.
Recitation, Lillian Williamson.
Solo and encore, Donald Mahood.
Recitation, Eileen Rutherford.
Recitation, Betty Deyell.
Recitation, Laura Hall.
Dialogue, "Waiting for the Doctor."
Recitation, Valera Hart.
Dolls' chorus, "Three Little Girls."
Recitation, Vala Endicott.
Dialogue, "Tom's Practical Joke."
Solo, Mildred Williamson.
Recitation, Clinton Endicott.
Recitation, Vedra Endicott.
Dialogue, "Miss Merton, the Milliner."
Song by three little girls, "Hurry, Mr. Clock."
Recitation, Lloyd Hart.
Recitation, Florence Sloan.
Pantomime in three acts.
Instrumental, Bernice Matthews.
Chorus, Mrs. Lamb's Class.
Recitation, Ruth Fairfield.
Chorus by School.
"God Save the King."

Shooting Match.

There will be many duck dinners on Christmas, as a result of a rifle match held by Mr. Calvert Carew at Mount Nebo last Friday afternoon. Shooting was conducted in groups at 20 cents a shot, and many beautiful specimens of the "quack" family were carried off. The crowd was not up to expectations, so that Mr. Carew withheld his geese which he had purposed disposing of in the same manner.

Christmas Tree.

A Christmas tree and entertainment marked the closing of the Public School on Monday. There were many little brothers and sisters of the scholars present.

A varied programme of music, recitations, dialogues, etc., was given, and the children were addressed by the Rev. Mr. Black.

During the afternoon Miss Anderson was the recipient of many gifts from her scholars, while Mr. Widdis received a military case, containing two brushes in French ivory, accompanied by the following address:

Omemee, 2nd Dec., 1924.
Mr. J. Widdis.

We, the boys and girls of the Omemee Public School, wish to extend to you our best wishes for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

We have always found you a true teacher, good sport and willing to take part in our various games.

In order to express, in a small measure, our appreciation of this, we take this opportunity of presenting you with this gift as a constant reminder of your school days.

Signed on behalf of the boys and girls of Omemee Public School

A generous treat of oranges, candy and nuts, provided by the teachers, was distributed among the scholars and the many visitors present, which was thoroughly enjoyed.

High School Closed.

The closing of the High School was observed on Monday afternoon in a very fitting manner. Although many scholars had gone home for the week-end as examinations were over, and did not return for the day, the annual Christmas treat of ice-cream was provided by the teachers, and was served in large orders at the close of an impromptu programme.

CAVAN PERSONALS.

ON BEING ENGAGED
(By Cynthia Grey)

Before marriage a woman stands for romance, moonlight and music to a man.

Afterward she means monthly bills a valet system and an audience for his 10 best jokes.

The things a man most loves a girl for—

The funny way she lights a cigaret,

The way she can talk him down in an argument,

Her bravery in publicly using rouge,

And her interest in his neckties,

Are the very things he most resents in her when she's his wife!

When a girl is engaged to a man she proudly refers to him as "my Jack."

After she's been married a few years, she speaks of him apologetically as just "him."

Christmas— and after

Here is a resolve you will want to keep—to enlist ENO's as guardian of your health.

In the midst of winter—and perhaps with the after-effects of a jolly Christmas to combat—facing the confinement and lessening opportunities for normal outdoor exercise which winter brings, you must look more carefully to your health.

So resolve that first thing every morning you will take "a dash of ENO's in a glass of water." You will look forward to its refreshing taste—you will feel the better for it the whole day through—keen, eager, clear-headed.

ENO's "Fruit Salt" contains no flavouring matter, no sugar, no purgative mineral salts. It is mild and gentle in action, and unlike some of the drastic aperients, ENO's does not form a habit but can be taken at any time with perfect safety by young and old. Decide now to follow the lead of the keen-eyed, successful folk who each year renew their resolve: "A dash of ENO's in a glass of water first thing every morning."

¶ ENO's for Constipation, Indigestion, Heartburn, Nervousness, Impure Blood, Depression, Failing Appetite, Liver Disorders, Sleeplessness, Rheumatic Conditions.

Are You
Making Sure of a Pension?

You may often have wondered how much it is necessary to save each year in order to be sure of $50.00 or $100.00 a month steady income when working days are over,—an income that will continue as long as you live, no matter what may happen to your other plans, or what financial reverses may occur later in life.

We can tell you exactly what amount to set aside and the figures will be of interest to you.

The Canada Life has issued a new

"Deferred Annuity Bond"

which is a guaranteed investment to provide a definite income for wage earners and others who want to be sure of comfort in declining years.

It is a bond which you can purchase by instalments spread over any number of years you decide upon.

It is a bond which is backed by a Company with nearly 100 million dollars of assets, and with the experience of more than three quarters of a century as a guide.

A Savings Policy

The "Deferred Annuity" plan is the most reliable Bond in existence. The most conservative investors have always believed in this form of saving because of its unquestioned safety. Nothing is so absolutely sure as a monthly Annuity, and no other plan for saving can possibly take its place.

The comfort, security and peace of mind which come from having arranged a guaranteed income of this kind makes it valuable, and the fact that this Bond is for men and women of all ages and in all conditions of health, makes it very popular.

Be Fair to Yourself

You can start now and build up by small deposits the fair living income to which you are entitled.

Dependence upon relatives or charity in old age should be guarded against. This can be done so very simply by the Canada Life "Deferred Annuity" that no man or woman should neglect to set aside yearly the small amount required to support them after age 60 or 65.

Why not ask for information?

No financial worry—and leisure to enjoy the good things of life.

An "Annuity Bond" requires no medical examination.

THE HUMAN SIDE OF THE DIVORCE COURTS IN HANOVER SQUARE

Forty Marriages Dissolved Each Day in Laughter and Tears.

QUICK DIVORCES

Romance and the Drama, Not Imagination, But of Real Life.

The reopening of the Law Courts has witnessed an extraordinary rush by all classes to the Divorce Division, where all day long two of our most eminent Judges are dissolving the legal links that bind unhappy couples to one another.

A morning at the Divorce Court any day of the week reveals depths of human tragedy in the social life of the people that have remained hidden sometimes for wellnigh half a century. Not only is it the poor who are now taking advantage of the easier facilities for divorce, but also men and women who were born with blue blood in their veins, and who have sworn to love, honour, and obey before a crowded congregation in the fashionable purlieus of Hanover Square, London.

Here the two Judges, both men of the world, experienced in grappling with the peculiar problem of divorce, each review from thirty to forty cases in the course of a day, pronouncing the decree nisi, which is the first stage of separation or dismissing the action on the ground that the evdence against the defendant is not such as will admit of a legal divorce.

The Divorce Court is a new building, and there one may see women of all grades of society, some in costly furs and fashionable Mayfair dresses, some in the homelier gowns of the social life of suburbian and others in the worn and threadbare clothes of the less prosperous London districts.

Through the swing doors they go, some expectant of a happy release from the misery of years, others with downcast eyes and trembling frame, dreading the ordeal of telling their stories to a crowded Court.

Quick Divorce.

One by one they file into the benches at the back, and there they sit with lack-lustre eyes watching the legal machine revolving so rapidly that before they realize what is happening they are in the witness-box and out again, relieved of a weight that has borne them down for years.

It is amazing how quickly one can be divorced in these days, if the facts are simple and the legal minds are working at top speed. The most conspicuous object in the principal Divorce Court is a large golden anchor which hangs above the head of the Judge. It is a strange symbol to have in a Court where romance is severed, but it is only the accident of circumstances which has coupled the Divorce Court with the tribunal where Admiralty cases are decided.

The President of the Court is Sir Henry Duke, one of our greatest lawyers, whose knowledge of human nature must be greater than that of any novelist, clergyman, or social worker as the result of listening day in and day out to the stories which are told by the men and women who appear before him.

A Judge of benign countenance, he turns a sympathetic ear to all applicants, displays the greatest tolerance towards those who find difficulty in telling their stories, but brooks no delay on the part of counsel.

In this respect, Mr. Justice Horridge is even more exacting. A keen, alert lawyer whose mind is ever working at full pressure, he rules out everything that is gratuitous or extraneous, and will even break in upon the questions of a slow or pedantic counsel, and himself extract the evidence from the witness by a sharp, if brief, fusilade of interrogations.

A man with a perpetual smile, an incisive manner, and the ability to call a spade a spade, he can get at the root of any matter in a moment, yet with it all he is kindly and, especially in the case of the question of the custody of children, humane and just to a degree.

Real Human Stories.

They are all real human stories one hears in this place, throwing a strange searchlight on the lives of men and women in every walk of life.

A young woman of Jewish appearance, expensively clad and represented by King's Counsel, steps into the witness-box and in faltering tones tells of the tragedy which it is evident she has done her utmost to avert.

She is a native of Poland, who has only been a few years in this countrye and incidentally it is a revelation of ths indomitable tenacity and perseverant of a down-trodden race to find that already she speaks the English language almost as perfectly as if she had been born in England.

Her marriage was celebrated in a synagogue in the East End of London, and for a time she lived very happily with her husband. So she says in answer to her counsel, and then, breaking away from the questions, which is a habit in some of the Courts, she looks towards the kindly-faced Judge and tells her story in detail, and in narrative form of how trouble crept into her life.

"One day," she says, "he began to change. He would stay out at night, and I saw very little of him, till at last he left me altogether, and I did not know what had become of him.

"Then, by accident, when I was going home I met him in a tramcar, and he smiled to me, so I went up and spoke to him, and he asked me to get off the car and have a chat with him.

"We walked round the streets, and I asked him if we could not make another start, and he agreed that we might, so that night I took him home to my uncle's house, where we made it up, and I felt very happy.

"We lived happily again for a week, and then one night, to my surprise, he did not come home. I waited for a day or two, and then I went round to where he worked and asked for him at the door of the factory."

There is a wondering look in the eyes of some of the men at the Court as the little woman goes on to tell of her persistence in an endeavour to keep the love of a husband for whom evidently she had very little attraction.

"The door," she says, "was opened by my husband, who asked me what I wanted, and when I told him, replied, 'Well, you can't want to come here. Wait for a minute or two and I will meet you, and we will talk things over.'"

The result of that talk was a declaration from the husband that he was sick of married life, which did not suit him, and that, in spite of his wife's pleading, he was not coming home.

The Eternal Triangle.

The turth of the matter was there was another woman in the case, and when evidence had been produced that this was so, the woman stepped from the witness-box counsel gathered up his papers, and another litigant and other barristers took their places.

The marriage had been dissolved.

The reason for desiring a divorce often seems strange to the person who does not know too much of the world.

The woman in the witness-box now is a typical middle-class wife, expensively dressed, yet in perfect taste, who comes here to this heavy legal atmosphere from a comfortable house in the country where here is everything that money can buy with the exception of love.

She is pretty, she is the mother of three bonnie children, and she has striven hard to keep her husband's love. He is a man of means who is in a position to pay her $75 a week for housekeeping alone.

What is the cause of the misery that has brought her here to seek a dissolution of the marriage, and to tell to the Court a secret she is jealously guarding in the little village where they lived—of how first of all her husband took a flat in London, coming home only at weekends, then gradually dropping off his visits until he never came home at all? The secret is contained in the statement made to her when she asked him for an explanation.

A Court of Surprises.

The Divorce Court is full of surprises. Painfully, slowly, and with the air of a woman who is dragging herself forward to get rid of the dread of a lifetime, an elderly woman steps into the limelight and asks for the dissolution of a marriage that was solemnized in 1884. Think of it. A young, beautiful girl, who, forty years ago saw life through rose-coloured spectacles, is standing in that witness-box, haggard, grey-haired, and miserable, to demand her freedom.

The next to appear is a young woman of the poorest class, who comes from the East End of London to tell the story of a marriage that was not a marriage. From the day of her wedding her husband has shown no love for her, has refused to live with her, and, when pressed for a reason, has told her in the plainest of terms that married life has no appeal for him. Her protests to him are all in vain. He leaves her, and, when eventually she traces him to where he has gone, she is confronted by a rival.

Once more the character changes. This time it is a young man with a marcel wave in his hair and a Bond Street cut in his clothes who has an allowance of $45 a week from his father and no work to do.

A man about town who probably drifted into matrimony, he gets his divorce quickly, and in a few moments is out of the building on his way to the West End to lunch.

In some cases the ordeal that the petitioner has to go through in the Courts is more trying than in the other cases. This is revealed by the evidence which is led to justify the Court in coming to a conclusion that a dissolution was justified.

The evidence savours somewhat of a theatrical play when a pert, pretty servant girl goes into the witness-box to admit frankly that, while listening on a second telephone in the house, she heard her mistress talking to her lover.

Unblushingly she recounts the whole of the conversation, and then goes on to tell how she has watched every movement of her mistress, and retained in her memory such details that leave the Court no other course than to give the petitioning husband his freedom

Titled Lady Petitioner.

Among the petitioners at the Court was Lady Georgina Sholto Douglas, who secured a decree nisi against Lord Sholto Douglas, brother of Lord Alfred Douglas, and son of the famous Marquis of Queensbury.

Another petitioner was Miss Gertrude Chatham, whose husband, a Manchester solicitor, left her to spend his evenings in the kitchen with their sixteen-year-old servant girl, to whom he wrote affectionate letters; while another was the son of a civil engineer, who came under the influence of a Pentecostal sect, and conducted strange religious rites, so that the servants eventually left her.

Lighter of heart than they had been for many years, effusively thanking the lawyers who had helped them, the women tripped from the witness-box through the swing doors with an expectant light in their eyes, to await another visit to the Divorce Courts in six months' time, when, if the King's Proctor has seen no reason to interfere in their cases, the decree will be made out, and they can begin life afresh.

There is more emotion, there is more tragedy there is more drama in this grim, white building in the Strand than in all the books of romance that have ever been written or all the plays produced on the London stage. Here one gets the romance and the drama, not of the imagination, but of real life.

PRACTICAL JOKER IS STILL AT WORK

Unknown Lafayette Mulligan Sent Letter to Bayard Tuckerman, Jr., of Hamilton.

BOSTON, December 26. — Lafayette Mulligan, the mysterious joker who embarrassed official Boston by sending a key of the city to the Prince of Wales, on his recent visit to these parts, has added another chapter to his social exploits.

The elusive Mulligan made his latest bid for notoriety by sending one of the symbolic emblems to Bayard Tuckerman, Jr., of Hamilton, who played host to H.R.R. at the Tuckerman North Shore Estate, on heavy stationery, which bore the name of "Mulligan" embossed on the top.

The city's unofficial donor fo keys informed Tuckerman he sent the decoration "on his own responsibility," because of the latter's "gracious silence, following the mayor's repudiation of his original generous impulse."

The letter was signed "Your humble servant, Lafayette Mulligan, former social secretary to His Honor Mayor James M. Curley."

The sending address was "42 Beacon street," which happens to be the Somerset Club, one of Boston's most exclusive societies.

An inquiry there disclosed there was no one on the membership list named Mulligan.

At the Mayor's office, as on the occasion, when the presentation of the key to the Prince came to light, there appeared to exist complete ignorance of the identity of Mulligan.

The Mayor passed off the incident as the work of a practical joker who did not know when to stop.

TWO ARRESTS MADE.

Officials Charged With Assisting Bootleggers.

MONTREAL, Dec. 26.—(Canadian Press)—J. B. Bissailon, chief of local customs police and Captain Simons, harbour master of Montreal were arrested here on Christmas eve on charge of complicity to defraud the Provinical and Federal Governments by attempting to bring contraband liquor to value of five hundred thousand dollars into Canada.

Case arises out of capture recently of barge Tremblay at St. Sulphice on St. Lawrence, with cargo of liquor. Both men released on eight thousand dollars bail.

TWO CHILDREN LOST.

Fire Destroys Home in Northern Ontario in Absence of Parents.

TIMMINS, Ont., Dec. 26.—(Canadian Press.)—John Casinova, aged two years, and his infant brother, sons of Ermina Casinova, homesteader north of here, both are dead as the result of a fire which destroyed the home while the father and mother were out of the house. The father made an heroic attempt to rescue the children and succeeded in getting the older child out of the burning house, but the little fellow succumbed six hours later. The father was painfully burned.

A SPECIAL HEARING.

Crow's Nest Rates Will be Subject of Appeal.

OTTAWA, Dec. 26.— (Canadian Press.) — Special hearing by Supreme Court will be asked for appeal from judgment of Railway Commission on Crow's Nest rates, following restoration of these rates by order in council yesterday. One question before the court will be as to whether the Railway Commission has power to upset the Act. There will also be the question as to whether the rates are applicable to those lines built since 1897.

VESSEL TURNS UP.

The Salvage Prince Had Hard Battle With Gales.

SODUS BAY, N. Y., Dec. 26. — (Canadian Press)- —Canadian Tug Salvage Prince, that for a week has been battling gales and heavy seas on Lake Ontario, arrived off this Port to-day and was forcing her way through ice floes to reach coal piers of Pennsylanvia Railroad.

The Salvage Prince, with ten men aboard, left Cape Vincent for this port last Friday ,and for two days was believed lost. Little vessel later put in Farheaven where she remained until weather cleared sufficiently for the captain to attempt the passage.

GUNMEN ENTER HOME.

Party Held Up and Relieved of Large Sum of Money.

MONTREAL, Dec. 26.—(Canadian Press)— Two gunmen dropped into the home of Arthur Gardner, on Mansfield avenue, last night when he was entertaining a number of friends at Christmas dinner. Warning all guests that any attempt to raise outcry would bring dire results gunmen forced all present to hand over money and jewelry valued in all about $1,200. Gardner outwitted them to some extent by holding big roll of bills in his clenched hands. Robbers got clear get-away.

FOUR WERE INJURED.

Passenger Train Hit Car at Crossing—Baby Hurled to Ground.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Dec. 26. —(Canadian Press)—Thrown on to the pilot of a passenger train, after the train had crashed into an automobile in which she was riding and injured three members of her family at a crossing here, Mrs. Kenneth Clark, 18 years of age, of this city, had a wild twelve mile ride last night until she fell from the train into a ditch near Oaklandon, Ind. Although unconscious when found by a farmer, she was not seriously injured suffering only from exposure from sub-zero weather, and slight bruises.

Kenneth Clark, 22, her husband, Clyde Clark, her brother-in-law and Mrs. Clyde Clark, were injured when train struck rear end of automobile. Baby twenty months old was hurled unhurt from automobile.

OLDER BOYS' PARLIAMENT OPENS IN TORONTO SAT.

Law Clerk of Legislative Assembly Will Address Gathering.

TORONTO, Dec. 26.—(Canadian Press). — Embryo statesmen from points throughout the province are assembling here to-day, preparatory to the opening to-morrow of the Fourth Older Boys' Parliament of Ontario sessions, which will be held in the Legislative Assembly Chamber. The caucus of members-elect will take place this evening at which party leaders will be introduced. An election of Premier and leader of the Opposition will also be held. The first Cabinet meeting is scheduled for to-morrow morning at nine o'clock, when A. M. Dymond, K.C., law clerk of the Legislative Assembly, will address the gathering on Parliamentary procedure. There will be two sittings on Monday and one on Tuesday. Adjournment takes place at five p.m. on Tuesday.

Motorman Badly Burned.

Short-Circuit Set Fire to the Front of Street Car.

TORONTO, Dec. 26.—(Canadian Press.)—When a short-circuit started a fire under the front part of a street car this morning, Ernest Fenn, motorman, was severely burned. The front of the car was ignited and a small panic developed among the passengers, who, however, escaped from the car without injury.

DOUBLE DROWNING.

Santa Claus Brought Death to Two Burlington Boys.

BURLINGTON, N.J., Dec. 26. — (United News.)— Santa Claus brought death to 16 year old James Major, and his brother William, Jr., who is one year older.

A gun for each boy was among the presents opened on Christmas morning. A few hours later their father heard cries from a lake near his home at Edgewater.

He found William and James struggling to clamber aboard an overturned boat, floating several yards from shore.

They had gone to the lake for a hunt with their new guns. Before another boat could be obtained William and James sank from sight. The lake is being dragged for their bodies.

THE CANADIAN NAVY

Will Leave For Bermuda in a Few Days.

OTTAWA, Dec. 26. — (Canadian Press)—It is announced that His Majesty's Canadian Ship Patriot will leave for Bermuda on December 29 to join the British North American squadron for three month. Lieut. H. E. Reid is in command of Patriot which will be under vice-admiral Sir James Ferguson of British North American squadron.

TWO FIRE VICTIMS.

NORTH TONAWANDA, N. Y., December 26. — Two men lost their lives when fire swept through the Washington Hotel, a workingman's lodging house early today. The dead are William Smith, aged 45, and his chum, Paul Kabby. Kabby reached the street in safety but dashed back in when he learned that Smith had not emerged. Charred bodies were found with arms clasped around each other, in Smith's room, when the firemen were able to enter.

DEATH LIST NOW 13.

Four More Bodies Found Today—Seven Still Missing.

RICHMOND, Va., Dec. 26—(Canadian Press).—Four more bodies were found to-day in the muck from the dam that broke away Wednesday night and flooded the lower section of Saltville, bringing the known death list to thirteen. Seven persons are still missing.

YOUTH PLACED TIE ON C.N.R. TRACKS

Harry Snarr, of Stirling, Arrested Wednesday by C.N.R. Detective Howard.

BELLEVILLE, Dec. 26.—Harry Snarr, aged 19 years, pleaded guilty in Belleville Police Court on Wednesday morning before Magistrate Masson on a charge of placing a railway tie across the C.N.R. tracks one half mile east of Anson Junction on December 18th and was remanded to jail for sentence until January 23rd. Magistratae Masson told the youth that he could be sent to the Penitentiary for fourteen years on this charge. Accused also admitted that he blew a switch lamp two hundred yards east of the junction. Engineer Bathgate, of Lindsay had a narrow escape when he nearly hit the tie on the track.

Snarr was arrested in Stirling on the 24th my C.N.R. Detective W. H. Howard, of Peterboro.

ELECTION GOSSIP AT CAMPBELLFORD NOT VERY DEFINITE

New Candidates Mentioned —Nominations Next Monday—Baptist Church Concert.

HOLIDAY VISITORS.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 26. — Election gossip is rather quiet around town. It is reported that some new men are coming out for Council, and also for Reeve and Deputy Reeve, but nothing authentic has been given. The nominations for the town of Campbellford will be held in the Assembly Hall of the High School on Monday night, Dec. 29th, 1924, at 7.30.

The Township nominations will be held in the Regent Theatre the same day, the hour being 12 o'clock noon.

Death of Mrs. Hendy.

Mrs. Charles Hendy, who lived in Percy Township, just near the boundary between Seymour and Percy, died on Monday, December 22nd, in her seventy-ninth year. Mrs. Hendy has been ill for some time. The funeral was held on Wednesday to Maple Grove Cemetery, Havelock.

Born—In Campbellford, on Monday, December 22nd, 1924, to Mr. and Mrs. Redney Glenn, twins, a boy and a girl.

Christmas Entertainment.

The Christmas concert of the Baptist Church Sunday School was held in the church on Tuesday night.

After the opening and prayer by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Ford, a splendid address was given by Mr. Ford, who has just lately come to Campbellford.

The primary scholars gave the first part of the programme and the older ones the last part. The programme was as follows:

Recitations by Helen Montgomery ("A Welcome"), Alma Carter, Sam. Sampson, Verna Sampson.

Exercise by George and Glennys Shaw.

Recitation—Audrey Shaw.

An exercise, "Christmas Stars," was given by the Primary Class.

Recitations—Douglas Lloyd, Muriel Montgomery ("Christmas Wishes"), Grace Labrash ("A Dolls' Party"), and Donald Lloyd.

Miss J. Weston's Class gave an exercise.

Recitations — Phyllis Sanderson, Bessie Campbell ("A Good Licking"), Gladys Brown, Donald Montgomery ("Santa's Mistake").

Recitations—Willie Carter, Bertha Hicks ("Mumps and Measles"), Warren Reid ("The 26th").

Exercise — "Christmas Helpers," Miss M. Hall's Class.

A little dialogue or exercise—"The Days After Christmas," Grace Cairns, Margaret Blake and Ottalene Reid.

Violin duet—Percy Bland and Gerald Labrash.

A drill—"Eastern Band," was given by Miss V. Shore's class of boys.

Reading—"A Nightmare," Ova Glenn.

Recitation—Willie Mahliot.

A Rainbow Drill was given by the C.G.I.T. Girls, under the direction of Miss L. Weston.

Recitations—"I would not like to be as black as you," by Edmund Sanderson and Clarence Cochrane.

Recitation—"Two Boys," Mansen Labrash.

Song—Miss Verna Shore's Class.

Nursery rhymes—"Shadows," by Miss Myrtle Hall's Class.

Miss Lily Weston's Class then presented a playet.

After this splendid programme was ended, the beautiful Christmas tree was stripped of its many presents and these were presented to the scholars, who were very excited waiting for their turn to come.

The evening closed with the hymn, "Praise God from Whom all Blessings Flow."

Personal Notes.

Mr. Harvey Donald, of Seymour, has purchased the house on Centre Street from Mr. John Duff. He takes possession the first of March.

Mrs. R. O. Bertrand and grandchild, Gladys Bennett, left on Wednesday for Toronto, where they will spend the Christmas holidays visiting relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Dick, Kent Street, left on Tuesday for North Bay, where they will spend two weeks visiting at their old home.

Captain Fisher, of the Salvation Army, left on Tuesday for Toronto, where he will spend Christmas.

Miss Anderson, of the Public School, Toronto, is spending her holidays at her home in Seymour.

Mrs. W. H. Ashton, Inkerman Street, left on Tuesday noon for Ottawa, and Mr. Ashton left on Wednesday, where they will spend the Christmas week with their daughter, Mrs. W. A. Johnston.

HAD NARROW ESCAPE WHEN ICE GAVE WAY

Marmora Boy Rescued from River by Older Brother —Trusted Thin Ice.

MARMORA, December 26.—The boys and girls of town were warned of the dangers of trusting thin ice last week, when Ira Conkwright went through the ice on the river, while skating. His cries for help were heard by a little girl, who was passing. His older brother, Ross, succeeded in getting him out, but not before he went in himself.

Personal Mention.

St. Paul's vestry meeting has been fixed for 12th January.

Mr. John Gibbs spent the weekend at his home in Belleville.

Mr. Howard Bleecker, who is attending Queen's, is home over the Yuletide.

Mr. Russell White, of Stirling, is visiting friends in town.

An Entertainment.

An excellent entertainment was put on at Deloro Separate School by its scholars, under the direction of the teacher, Miss Ellen Shea, on Friday afternoon. Miss Jennie Smyth, with her scholars of the Public School, were also in attendance, making it a joint event. Last year a similar entertainment was given at the Public School.

School Concert.

A bright and enjoyable time was spent at the Public School closing on Friday afternoon. The two senior rooms, with teachers, Mr. Prentice and Miss Williams, united for one concert, while the junior rooms, under Miss Taft and Miss Topper, were having their concert in an adjoining room. All the rooms were decorated with appropriate Christmas decorations, and drawings on the boards.

The music for the drills, choruses, etc., was provided by the victrola, which the School Board so generously gave the school two years ago.

Many parents were present, and by their presence and interest encouraged the teachers in their good work.

In the senior room there were several items especially worthy of mention. One was a manners drill, in which a number of coons were given a drill on manners. Then Little Boy Blue and Miss Bo-Peep drill was bright and interesting.

The costumes in "An Afternoon Tea Party" were very quaint, the children being miniature grandmothers.

The main item was a cantata, "The Reception of Miss Canada," where Miss Canada received representatives of all the Allies. The singing of the National Anthems and patriotic songs was especially good.

Special mention might be made of Master James Rice, the small butler, who made the touch of humour so essential.

In the junior room, a very interesting programme was also presented. "Mother Goose" was well given, and many bright little recitations and songs and drills.

Then followed the disrobing of the Christmas trees, when each pupil received some little Christmas greeting from a fellow-pupil. This was arranged the week before by each pupil drawing a name of another student in his room.

Then the teachers added their gift, which was a liberal supply of candy.

These school entertainments are a wonderful training for the pupils, and much credit is due the teachers, who are interested enough to develop this side of the children's education.

The rink opened on Monday evening, and was well patronised by the lovers of skating.

ARTIFICIAL LAKE TO SUPPLY ELECTRICITY TO MANY TOWNS

By HOWARD MINGOS.

Along the Wallenpaupack Creek in Pike County, Pa., where nature has created a great basin with only a single outlet, lumbermen are clearing away some 6,000 acres of timber. The peace of the countryside is now disturbed by the blasts from countless whistles as they summon to work a new population, workers who are rushing to completion a super-power project.

Whole batteries of steam shovels present a solid front as they move steadily across the valley floor, gnawing at the virgin earth. A washery as big as an office building is turning out thousands of tons of gravel. All kinds of new frame dwellings, sheds and offices dot the landscape. Steel rails, shining new, twist and squirm for miles along the tortuous right of way to Wilsonville, where the outlet of this natural basin yawns for a fourth of a mile across.

There it will be spanned by a concrete dam sixty feet high. When it is completed next summer the waters of the creek will be pushed back through the valley, making a lake sixteen miles long and two miles wide. They say it will be the largest lake in the Keystone State.

This man-made lake is to be a vital unit in a super-power system. As an ordinary hydro-electric project it might have been done years ago, but it would have been too expensive for a power company marketing electric current locally or in one or two communities. No local service could afford to spend $8,000,000, which the project will cost. But as a practical auxiliary for a super-power system which serves 164 towns and a majority of the industries in North-eastern Pennsylvania, the Wallenpaupack Lake promises to be a most economical investment.

The Pennsylvania Power and Light Company, which is building the lake, distributes most of the electricity used in a district lying between Wilkes-Barre and Honesdale in the northeast. Williamsport and Lock Haven in the northwest and Norristown and Easton in the southeast.

Practically all the trolley lines, steel and iron works, car and automobile plants, silk mills, slate quarries, cement mills and coal mines derive their electric power from the seven central steam power plants operated by the company. The mines use the "juice" for ventilating and pumping water. The industries find that they can buy power cheaper than coal. This wholesale distribution of electricity illustrates the super-powers idea, for it means that the current is supplied to an entire region from central power stations so located as to make its use economically possible. In this case an average of 3,000,000 horsepower hours is supplied daily.

Contrary to the general impression that super-power means carrying current over vast distances to the point where it is needed, a much more complicated system is involved. The electric current does not do a hop, skip and jump across other power stations owned by other companies. Instead, the power is moved along from station to station.

In this particular district, the seven steam plants generating current are linked together in a great circle, so that if a station goes out of commission, at Williamsport, for instance, the territory draws upon the adjoining district which in turn receives a proportionate amount of help from the station next in line toward the main switching point. By this method all of the stations are gradually drafted into service, each contributing power to its neighbor.

COOLIDGE WAS BASHFUL WOOER

Had Only One Girl and She Is Still His Sweetheart.

COBBLER'S ADVICE.

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., December 26. — Burnings of the love fire in the bosom of calm, cautious Calvin Coolidge may be hard to imagine.

Yet Eros pricked the heart of the solemn man who presides in Washington—once.

The girl is still his sweetheart to-day.

Back in 1903, when Coolidge was a young lawyer here, and Grace Goodhue a teacher in the Clark School for the Deaf and Blind, they met.

Coolidge had spied the girl as he looked out of his window. A mutual friend introduced them.

Northampton was a small place, and news spread fast.

Cal was a-courting!

But he was not a fervid lover. He took Miss Goodhue on walks and he made punctilious calls upon her. He took her to none of the dances, for the young man was too bashful to dance.

Lucey Advises Him.

One day Coolidge dropped into the shop of James Lucey for a chat. Lucey was—and still is—the village shoemaker and philosopher.

"Look here, young man," Lucey said to Coolidge, pretending to be very cross. "You ain't getting anywheres!"

"You want to walk closer to Grace. Don't go up the street as if you didn't know her, for some of these other young men around town will come and walk between you.

"When you walk home with her to-night, walk very close. And when you get in the parlour, sit very close to her on the lounge.

"First look at her shoes. Tell her what pretty feet she has. Then look at her skirt. Tell her what a pretty dress she has on.

"Then look into her eyes. Tell her what wonderful eyes she has, and how you know she's going to make some young man a wonderful wife, and how you hope to be that man."

Whether Coolidge followed this advice or not will never be known. But a short time later their engagement was announced.

Cal Kept Silent.

But Coolidge knew little of the delicacies of dealings with the fair sex. He did not know that it was his place to ask her to name the wedding day.

The school term closed. Miss Goodhue went to her home in Vermont, greatly puzzled. She did not know whether she should stay there and work on her trousseau, or whether she should make arrangements to return to the school the following term.

While she was in this quandary, Coolidge appeared at her home, dressed in his best clothes.

Miss Goodhue's father met him at the door.

"Up here on a business trip?" he asked.

"No-o, not a business trip," Coolidge replied, shifting to his other foot.

"On a pleasure trip?"

"No-o, that is, not exactly," replied Coolidge. "You see, I came up here to marry your daughter."

This surprised Goodhue.

"Why, I don't think she's ready," he exclaimed.

"Well," said Coolidge, his natural calm returning to him as he took a seat on the porch, "I'll wait then."

It may have been sudden news to the girl that they were to be married right away, but she was prepared for the ceremony in a few months. They were married on 4th October, 1905.

And, say their friends, they are sweethearts yet.

HEAVIEST BLANKETS ARE NOT THE WARMEST

Closeness of Weaving Determines Their Warmth by Retentiveness.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26.—How warm is a blanket? The Bureau of Standards has investigated this important if homely question, and announces the results.

First, as many have suspected, closeness of weave rather than thickness controls blanket warmth. That is especially true when blankets are for use indoors. Putting it scientifically, the bureau announcement said that "the greatest resistence of heat flow by a blanket) in still air was given by a blanket having a density of 0.0835 grams per cubic centimeter."

A heavy, thick blanket is not so warm because, the bureau said, "heat escapes by conduction along the fibres," while the looser weaves in blankets lost much heat through interstices.

Since the warmth of a blanket depends upon how much and how long it can imprison and hold still in its texture the original air content, the bureau said that cotton and wool both had advantages as textile material for making blankets.

Cotton with sheets, indoors, was likely to be better, it was said, and wool outdoors, but "no significant difference in heat resistance or resistance to passage of air or moisture" was found between the two materials.

LAURA SECORD SHARES WITH THEIR EMPLOYEES BONUS FOR CHRISTMAS GIFT.

The Laura Secord Candy Shops have for a second year in succession divided their profits with their employees who have been with the company for upwards of six months. Cheques were last evening received by the saleladies in the local shop. These represented a substantial percentage of the total salary earned by each employee during the past year, making each one a co-partner in the organization.

This came as a complete surprise to the local staff, who expressed delight at such a happy Christmas token.

In presenting these profit cheques to his employees, Mr. Frank O'Connor, president, a former Peterboro resident, pointed out the policy of Laura Secord was to share the profits of the year's business with those who had worked faithfully for its success during the year. "The popularity of our candies is due in a large measure to the skill and expertness of our studio assistants, and the wonderful reputation we enjoy among our friends is due to the courtesy and the unfailing efforts of our saleladies," writes Mr. O'Connor, and "that he looked forward to the business progressing year by year and the same happy feeling of intercourse and association among all the employees continuing, and trusted that in future years this policy of co-partnership inaugurated on the tenth anniversary of the inception of the business could be continued.

Mr. J. D. Hayes, general manager, also congratulates the employees on the loyalty, co-operation and aggressiveness which they have shown during the past year, and looks forward to the future for greater and better things yet to come.

Amongst many good stories told by Miss Norma Talmadge, the famous film star, is one concerning a somewhat down-at-heels individual who applied for a job as a "super" at a studio where she was rehearsing.

As it happened, the producer did want a super just then, but he was somewhat dubious as to the applicant's capabilities.

Looking him up and down, he asked: "Are you an actor?"

"I am," was the reply.

"Ever had any experience of acting without audiences?"

"Acting without audiences," answered the seedy one sadly, "is responsible for the unhappy position in which I find myself to-day."

ORANGE DEDICATION THIRTY YEARS AGO AS RECORDED AT DOWNER'S CORNERS

Building is Stil Doing Service —Many Will Recall the Event—The Speeches.

Mr. J. Graham Weir, 181 Romaine Street, supplies the following news item from the Peterboro' Review of Dec. 13, 1894, which is thirty years ago. The article follows:-

"Last evening the new Orange hall at Downer's Corners, the property of Col. Sanderson, L.O.L. No. 321, was dedicated with the beautiful ceremony of the Orange Order.

The Building.

"The building is commodious and well appointed and is situated one and a half miles from town. It is a frame structure and is 40 feet long by 26 feet wide and has a ceiling which is 12 feet high. The interior is well finished and, as is the exterior, is tastefully coated with paint, which adds to its neatness. At the entrance of the door two ante-rooms are situated. The walls of the hall are decked with appropriate pictures and charters. A good sized shed has been built at the rear of the lodge room. To J. Graham Weir and the other members of the building committee is due praise for the way the work has been done, as they have superintended it carefully, and as a result they have one of the most admirable country lodge rooms in the province. Mr. Geo. Elliott was the contractor for the building and Messrs. Duncan & Gray did the painting.

The Officers.

"The officers of the lodge are: Jas. Murray, W.M.; Wm. Jones, D.M.; Thos. Dawson, Chaplain; W. H. G. Armstrong, Fin. Secy.; Jos. Saunders, Treasurer; George Horsefield, Rec. Sec.; A. Dugan, Dir. of Cer.

"There is a good membership and the Order at this place is in a flourishing condition.

"Last evening was the time announced for the dedication of the hall, and with the most unfavorable weather to contend against the audience was larger than expected, the hall being comfortably filled.

"After a sumptuous tea had been served at the residence of Mr. Wilson, near the hall, the dedication exercises began.

At the Hall.

"The Orangemen filed into the hall in a body and formed a body guard for those who were to take part in the proceedings.

"On the platform were Messrs. Wm. Johnson, Past Grand Master, Ontario East; Belleville, John Burnham, M.P., C. W. Sawers, Past County Secretary, J. Graham Weir, Past County Master, East Peterborough, Robt. Weir, Grand Master Royal Black Preceptory, E. Kempt, George Hall, Dawson Kennedy, Alex. Sproule, and Revs. W. R. Young, R. N. J. Rae and A. MacWilliams.

"The dedication service of the Order was conducted by Bro. C. W. Sawers, D.C.S., who acted as Grand Master, assisted by Bro. W. H. G. Armstrong as Grand Chaplain.

"At the conclusion of this interesting part of the ceremony, Mr. J. G. Weir introduced Mrs. J. G. Weir and Mr Jones, who presented the lodge with a chair and banner, respectively.

"Mr. Sawers, who acted as chairman, on behalf of Loyal Orange Lodge, No. 321, accepted the gifts, and hoped they would embellish the room for many years.

Mr. C. W. Sawers.

"Mr. Sawers said he had consented with a great deal of pleasure to attend the meeting. He had also been asked to act for Hon. N. Clarke Wallace, the Grand Master of North America, who had been invited to attend, but owing to public duties was forced to absent himself. Mr. Sawers was glad to speak of the progrss of the Order throughout Canada and the United States. New lodges were being organized every day. The Grand Master had asked him to express his regret at being absent. Mr. Wallace had said he hoped he would be able to visit the lodge at a future time. Mr. Sawers spoke in laudatory terms of Mr. Wallace, who had upheld Orangeism in his public capacity. Mr. Sawers said in regard to Sir John Thompson's death:- 'Many of you, no doubt, have heard of the sudden death of Sir John Thompson, Premier of Canada, at Windsor Castle in England. In the presence of my brother Orangemen and at the solemn dedication of this Orange hall, I desire to express my profound, deep sorrow and regret at his death, and to say how glad I feel that upon every occasion, both public and private, I upheld him as a pure and loyal subject, and as such he died at the very foot of the throne.'

"Letters of regret were read from Rev. S. A. Duprau, Grand Chaplain, Ontario East, Mr. T. A. Kidd, Grand Master, Ontario East, Mr. E. F. Clarke, ex-M.P.P., Deputy Grand Master of British North America, Mr. James Stevenson, M.P., and Mr. John Kelly, Lindsay, for Mr. Sam Hughes, M.P., expressing their regret at being unable to attend the ceremonies.

Mr. Wm. Johnson.

"Mr. Wm. Johnson, of Belleville, made a speech which was received with enthusiasm by the audience. He congratulated the members of the lodge on the dedication of their beautiful hall. He was certain the members had had their hearts in the work as the new hall evidenced. The building was praised by Mr. Johnson as a splendid and complete one. He spoke highly of Mr. J. G. Weir as a zealous Orangeman. The Orange hall could be used for all good purposes. The church, Orange hall and school on the concession line always were alongside of each other. Speaking of Home Rule, Mr. Johnson said he did not understand how any Protestant who visited Ireland could favor Home Rule To give illustrations of Home Rule he told several stories which were well received. In a happy way he explained the manner in which Ireland was upheld by its people. He spoke of the progress of the north of Ireland, with its disadvantages, over the south of Ireland. He accounted for this progress in the north to the industry of the people. Referring to Orange halls Mr. Johnson thought they should be as sacred as the church. This hall was for Protestants. He spoke of the Revolution of 1688 and what resulted from it. In closing his speech Mr. Johnson pointed out that the Orange Society was the first prohibition society in the country.

The Member for the East.

"Mr. John Burnham, M.P., voiced Mr. Johnson's statement regarding the hall and the zeal of the Orangemen. He was not a member of the Orange Order for he believed all outside organizations detracted from the interest in the church where proper work could be done. He admired that part of the principles of the Orange Order which allowed a man to worship as he pleased. Mr. Burnham said he had heard men say Sir John Thompson, who had passed away, should not have been at the head of the Dominion Government because he was a Roman Catholic. But, said Mr. Burnham, if any Orangeman said that he would be violating the principles of the Order, for it allowed every man a right to his own opinion. As Mr. Burnham's vote on the Home Rule question had been spoken of, that gentleman said he had voted for Mr. Wallace's resolution because he favored freedom of speech.

Rev. Mr. Rae.

"Rev. J. J. Rae made a capital address. He said he was not a stranger on an Orange platform or in Orange halls or to Orange principles. The world needed to-day more of the Word of God which could solve all questions of the day. The Orange Order had brought the Bible to the front and any Order that did not do so was not worthy of support in a Christian country. They wanted a better class of men and women and any organization that tried to develop these deserved to be countenanced. And lastly they needed more of God's power.

Mr. J. G. Weir.

"Mr. J. G. Weir followed and in opening made a few references to the new hall. He then dwelt on Orangemen and their need. He claimed they were the men the country needed. They had won victories in the past and could and were ready to do so now. The Order was successfully pushing forward. He paid a kindly tribute to the late Premier before taking his seat.

Rev. Mr. MacWilliams.

"Rev. A. MacWilliams thoroughly agreed with Orange principles. He was especially proud of one of these principles, that of liberty. Eloquently he referred to the liberty they possessed, not one of license, but one that was privilege of doing what was in harmony with divine law.

Other Speakers.

"Mr. Alex. Sproule, a visitor from Ireland and a leading Orangemen, alluded to the results of Home Rule in Ireland and the rapid growth of Orangism.

"Rev. W. R. Young made a felicitous speech. The dedication of the new Orange hall pointed out that the spirit of the past still lived. It showed that freedom of thought and religion was to be upheld. One of the declarations on joining the Orange Order was that of promising to have a simple, active, personal Protestant faith. That principle was essential to good citizenship.

"Another declaration of vital importance was that the woman at their side should never darken a confessional. They should see that that principle was sacredly guarded. A third declaration was that their children should be trained and educated in the Protestant faith.

"Speeches praising the Order and its principles and expressing gratitude at its growth were heard from Messrs. Dawson Kennedy and Robt. Weir. Mr. Kennedy wanted to see the children of Canada go through the schools and come out Canadians. Mr. Weir favored the training of children in Orangism.

"The exercises, which passed off without incident and with interest, were brought to a close with God Save the Queen.

"During the evening excellent and suitable music was furnished in creditable style by the Harmony club.

To this Mr. Weir adds the following: "A few years ago the hall was raised ten feet and a basement of brick was built under the hall which makes a large suitable room for suppers or overflow meetings and other purposes. The hall is furnished with all modern improvements as a hall, electric lights and many useful and handsome improvements for the comfort and pleasure of the members."

NEW CANADIAN PACIFIC TORONTO TO WINNIPEG 36 1-4 HOUR FEATURE SERVICE

The new daily 36 1-4 hour Toronto to Winnipeg service just inaugurated by the Canadian Pacific Railway not only establishes a record in fast, convenient transportation but provides the traveller with a feature service to Fort William from both Toronto and Winnipeg inasmuch as the Winnipeg Special leaving Toronto at 9.45 p.m. every night and arriving in Sudbury at 5.30 a.m. arrives in Fort William at 11.00 p.m., leaving there 15 minutes later and arriving in Winnipeg at 9.00 a.m.

Returning, the "Toronto-Montreal Special" leaves Winnipeg at 7.00 p.m. ,arriving in Fort William at 6.40 a.m., leaving 15 minutes later, arriving in Sudbury at 1.05 a.m. and in Toronto at the convenient hour of 8.35 a.m.

Direct connections are made by travellers from Winnipeg for all main points in Ontario, Quebec and East, which will receive the serious consideration of those who desire efficient service. Dominion Express shipments are delivered hours earlier which is also a feature.

The most modern equipment, including standard and compartment sleepers, dining and compartment-observation cars, are carried which, with the reduction in the running time and the courteous, efficient service by all employees, makes this new service pre-eminent as the last word in transportation.

DETECTIVES

Plainclothes traffic police are on the wane. Of 61 leading cities, 58 are using only uniformed traffic cops. One reason is that traffic does not require espionage.

A better reason is in the large number of shootings due to motorists' belief that plainclothesmen might be bandits. The law can find enough traffic violations without wearing a disguise.

MAIN STREET OF AMERICAN TOWNS UNLIKE ENGLAND'S HIGH STREETS

Similar Only in Political Conservatism—Main Street Prejudicial and Intolerant—Considers the Religion of Neighbour—High Street Considers the Man Himself—High Street for Rest.

BY MILTON BRONNER

LONDON, Dec. 26.—Every American village, town and small city has a Main Street, according to Sinclair Lewis, popular American novelist. Every English village, town and small city has a High Street, according to Miss Rebecca West, most popular of the younger English novelists.

Miss West knows all about High Street. And not so very long ago, on a lecture tour in the United States, she had some opportunity to visit Main Street. So I asked the beautiful young woman who made herself famous by writing "The Judge" to discuss Main Street and High Street.

"They are alike in one thing," said she musingly. "Main Street largely rules the United States. High Street largely rules England. Main Street, rather conservative in its economics and its politics, is easily frightened. So is High Street. Main Street, appalled by the bogey which was labeled La Folette, was stampeded into giving the Republicans a landslide. High Street, appalled by a bogey which was labeled Bolshevik, was stampeded into giving the Conservatives a landslide.

"But, on the whole, I would say Main Street and High Street are often the reverse of each other. Main Street is largely dynamic. High Street is static. In Main Street all is change. In High Street all is fixed.

"Main Street prides itself upon its new office building. High Street glories in its ancient Elizabethan architecture.

Where Society Changes.

"Main Street has a society that is in a state of flux. High Street has a society that is stabilized. It comes as a result of the very nature of things. America is a young country. England is a very old country.

"In America the people are intensely individualist, as was to be expected from a nation that was founded by a race of pioneers and where, even yet, there is much pioneering of one kind or another to be done. In England the civilization is the result of communal effort which itself is the result of the old feudalism.

"In Main Street the people are on the move socially, and mainly upwards. In High Street, as the result of a very old and finished civilization, people are largely born in a social groove.

"Money and material success count for more in Main Street. Family and lineage count for more in High Street.

"The successful man tends to move out of Main Street into the metropolitan cities. The successful man in England often tends to move from the metropolis to High Street where he can have peace and quiet.

"Main Street works more than High Street. High Street plays more than Main Street.

"Main Street is intense, even prejudiced, in its beliefs and convictions. High Street has the tolerance of an old country which has fought out many problems long ago.

"Main Street gets excited about evolution and fundamentalism. High Street takes things calmly.

"Main Street earnestly considers the religion of its neighbor. High Street considers the man and not his religion.

As To Hecklers.

"Main Street throws out into the street the man who interrupts a political speaker to ask a hostile question. High Street thinks it quite proper to heckle a speaker and see how well grounded are his arguments.

"In Main Street you find more people interested in books, art, the theater. In High Street you find fewer people interested in these things, but they are more intensely, more deeply, more creatively interested.

"From Main Street came the movement which for good or evil, swept the United States into the prohibition camp. No similar movement originating in High Stret has recently swept England.

"Main Street is intensely earnest about drunkenness and poverty. High Street talks sunnily about its golf and tennis.

"The wonder of Main Street is the myriad of comfortable, well-ordered, marvelously clean homes where it is possible to get delicious meals. In High Street you find the well-ordered homes, minus the delicious meals. Main Street cooking charms the palate by its variety. High Street cookery palls because it is anaemic and watery.

"Main Street delights in having guests. High Street is more reserved. Hence the chance visitor has a more delightful time in Main Street."

WELCOMED CHIEF AT HEAD TROOPS

Albania Sees Conclusion of Third Revolution in Two Years.

TIRANA, Dec. 26. — (United Press).—Albania has just witnessed the triumphant, if temporary, conclusion of its third revolution in two years. Tirana, the capital, strewed flowers in the pathway of the youthful Ahmed Zogu, when the chief of the revolutionists, who has once before headed a government here, and has been recognized by the United States, entered at the head of his troops. Once before, after he had overcome the famous mountain chieftain, Eli Zug, young Zogu was received here as a hero. It was on this occasion that recognition of a Zogu government was accorded by the United States, Great Britain and Italy. Ahmed Zogu is 28 years old, although he has twice deposed the government of his country and established himself as Premier. Meanwhile, after Zogu's triumph, which has been in the making for a fortnight, as his followers, including the hard fighting mountaineers from the Dibra region, defeated the Government troops, Premier Fan Noli and his Cabinet fled to Valona. Fan Noli seized power and defied the powers in 1923, so an international complication is created by the Zogu revolution, which may require a deal of diplomatic disentanglement.

When Premier Fan Noli saw he could not hold out against Ahmed Zogu, he and his immediate followers went by steamer from Durazzo to Valona, where they have attempted to set up a separate government and will await a favorable opportunity for a counter-revolution.

STATIC

"Grinder static," which bothers radio fans so much originates chiefly in a district above the western part of the Gulf of Mexico. So claims C. W. Horn, head radio man at KDKA. The disturbance, which spreads all over the continent, is worst during the Gulf rainy season.

Some observers believe that static eventually will be so thoroughly understood that it will help decidedly to forecast weather. Nothing is useless not even static.

SIGNATURES MUST GO WITH LETTERS

All Letters Bearing on Municipal Elections Must Be Properly Signed.

Now that a campaign for the election of Aldermen and Utilities Commissioner is under way all letters addressed to the Voice of the People and bearing on the subject of these elections must carry the correct signature in the paper. This is the usual course followed in the case of an election campaign of any kind and serves in a measure to protect the candidates from the unfair attacks of those who usually hide their identity behind a non-de-plume.

PUBLIC MEETING FOR CANDIDATES

Aspirants For Aldermanic Positions Would Welcome Opportunity of Expressing Their Views.

It has been suggested by some of the candidates for election to local municipal offices that a public meeting be held at which candidates would be given an opportunity to state their policies. One candidate suggested that the officers of the G.W.V.A. volunteer the use of their hall for this purpose.

SOMETHING FREE.

A New Atrocity to Dissipate a Cold.

TRENTON, N. J., Dec. 26. — (United Press).—A machine to produce chlorine gas for the treatment of colds and other infections of the respiratory tract, was put in operation here to-day by the State Department of Health. Free treatment is offered by the public.

Only one patient can be treated at a time. By using the new apparatus which is the result of much experimentation, an average cold can be dissipated in one hour, health officials say.

"CORRIGAN"

by EDMUND SNELL

© 1924 BY NEA SERVICE INC.

"It'd be a pity. What was it barking at tonight?"

"A blessed rat!"

Millett whistled.

"Was that all? Did you see it?"

Corrigan grunted. "I didn't see the damn thing—because it had already taken refuge in the ataps. There are tons of 'em up there. Panus chased it up the wall. When I looked out he was circling the house like a lunatic, looking at the roof."

Millett shook his head.

"Panus isn't a ratter," he declared obstinately. "He doesn't know one from an elephant! Now the little fox terrier the krani clerk's acquired is different. He's dead nuts on rats. I was down at the store yesterday and he turned out three or four. One of them ran right under Panus' nose—and he wasn't the least bit interested. Have some more beer?"

Corrigan pushed forward his glass. He didn't answer for a moment. He was trying to figure out what mysterious agency had caused the shutter of his window to swing shut.

"Dogs are peculiar creatures," pursued Millett warming up to his subject. "Some have a hankering for rats, others go in extensively for birds: Mrs. White's Hitam fancies wild pig. I knew a dog once—"

"What's the particular hobby favored by our yellow friend?" broke in Corrigan suddenly.

"Monkeys!" announced Millett solemnly. "You want to see him busy after we've had a good burn!" He bent down and tucked the ends of his pyjama trousers into his socks. "I suppose these blood-sucking insects'll get used to me in time," he added.

"Monkeys!" echoed Corrigan. "Anything else?"

"Nothing in particular. He takes a certain pleasure in worrying the clothing of anything that isn't white, but you can call him off. You can't induce him to leave a monkey."

Corrigan scratched his chin.

"I've not the least desire to do Panus an injustice," he said slowly; "nor do I want to disbelieve you; but the nearest colony of monkeys I know is pretty nearly a quarter of a mile from where we're sitting. As a general rule, they don't wander into the rubber. Assuming you're right, it'd be a pretty queer sort of creature that'd wander up here three nights running at the merry hour of two!"

Millett looked puzzled.

"At two?" he inquired, helping himself to a cigaret from a tin.

"This is the third time I've been woken in three nights, and always at the same time. The second night I regarded it as a mere coincidence. Among other things, jungle noises and so forth, there was a moon. Most dogs bay the moon. But tonight there was no moon to speak of."

"And he barked again?"

Corrigan thought.

"No," he declared. "That's the devil of it. He wasn't barking when I woke; but ten minutes or so later he began—and has continued ever since."

"I know," agreed the other. "Panus is nothing if not thorough. He's at it now." He rose to his feet and, resting both hands on the table, looked down at Corrigan. "You can take it from me it's not a rat. If it's a native prowling around—he'll come if I call. If it isn't—" He went to the top of the veranda steps without finishing his sentence.

Corrigan heard him calling the dog.

"Panus! Come here! Come here at once!" He resorted to a whistled command. As far as the man at the table could judge from where he sat, the beast paid not the slightest attention.

Suddenly something scrambled on to the rail a couple of yards from Millett, leaped on to the back of a chair and thence to the top of the wooden partition.

Corrigan sprang to his feet and, at the same moment, Millett came back towards him. Both men stood gazing in amazement at a monstrous blue monkey that swung by all four paws from the beading that concealed the sawn edges of the rough planking. A second later and the yellow dog had swept past them like a flash and leaped into the air in a vain attempt to reach its quarry.

"Well," demanded Millett triumphantly, his hands at his hips, "what d'you make of that?"

Corrigan grinned.

"You've won!" he said calmly. "Panus is discharged without a stain on his character!" He went a step closer to the party wall. "By Gad!" he jerked out suddenly. "D'you see that? It's broken away from somewhere. Look!" He pointed to a peculiarly wrought band of what looked like gold passing round the lower portion of the creature's body. "Wonder where it's come from?"

"That may account for the regularity of its habits," put in the assistant, regarding the blue monkey with covetous eyes. The dog, bristling with excitement, was endeavoring to approach its objective by means of a long chair which stood near the wall. Corrigan went to the drawer of a small table and produced a formidable length of chain he had purchased on a recent trip to Jesselton. He secured the dog with an encircling arm, removed it bodily from its perch, and chained it to the stout wooden rail.

"Got any more of that?" inquired Millett.

"Any more of what?"

"Chain. We might manage to gain possession of our friend up there." He nodded toward the monkey.

Corrigan regarded his assistant coldly.

"I hope you're not considering turning my bungalow into a home for stray monkeys," he declared scathingly.

"It's an uncommonly good specimen," retorted Millett doggedly. "If the coolies get it—they'll skin it and eat it; if Panus secures it, he'll tear it in pieces if Panus doesn't get it-its as likely as not it'll continue the regularity of its nocturnal visits—and we shall spend the rest of our nights consuming beer at two-thirty Ak Emma."

Corrigan yawned. There was much truth in the reasoning of his third assistant.

"What do you propose doing?"

"Oh, chaining it up somewhere or other for the rest of the night; getting a couple of coolies to fix a box on a pole outside for it tomorrow—and see how it behaves itself. If it turns out to be a law-abiding citizen—we might keep it; if it don't—shoot it."

"I see," said Corrigan. "And supposing its rightful owner turns up? What then?"

"That depends," replied Millett darkly.

Corrigan turned on his heel and went back to the drawer.

"I feel it in my bones," he remarked, as he came back with the rest of the steel chain, "that nothing particularly good will come of this idea of yours. I'm not satisfied, for one thing, as to the particular significance of that gold band round its loins."

"I don't see what harm there is in looking after it," said Millett.

"Nor do I for the moment," admitted Corrigan, "but I've got a queer notion at the back of my head and, when you know me better, you'll discover that my notions go for something!"

It took five minutes to drive a staple into the door frame, half an hour to secure the chain to the band without getting bitten, and the united efforts of both men to induce the yellow dog to forsake the veranda for the sleeping apartment of Millett.

Up to that point things went comparatively well, but only up to that point! For each time that the monkey moved to the accompaniment of a ghostly rattling of chains, Panus,—the yellow dog—protested vigorously. At a quarter to four the red haired assistan carried the dog in his arms to the bottom of the slope and tethered it to a fence post. As he turned to retrace his steps to the bungalow, he caught himself imagining in a dreamy sort of way that there might be something in Corrigan's notion after all.

Pausing at the top of the steps before retiring once more to his bed, he felt that the beady eyes of the blue monkey were watching him. Apparently it had decided to relinquish all further effort to escape and crouched on the woodwork as far away from the metal staple as the length of chain would permit. It was undoubtedly a magnificent creature. Its fur was long and of a silky texture, its paws were a jet black and it returned the assistant's gaze calmly—almost impudently. With an appreciable effort, Millett broke the spell which seemed to hold him, and turned to survey the coming up of the dawn.

The air was chill. He turned up the collar of his jacket and, leaning on the rail, watched the bars of bright light appearing over the eastern horizon. The rubber trees, mature and regularly planted, emerged from the gloom of the departing night like a phantom regiment. Far beyond the fringe of virgin jungle at the foot of the slope, the padilands lay wrapped in billowy mist. There was a tremulous whispering in the air. From under the house a shrill-voiced cock threw out its challenge to the dawn. Gradually, as the luminous streaks in the heavens extended, the misty pall stirred in the valleys, dispersing presently to reveal an emeral carpet of growing padi—and through the trees to the westward he saw a leaden sea, a cluster of native hutments raised high on long, ridiculously slender poles, like antediluvian monsters paddling in the shallows. . . .

The third assistant stretched himself and smiled. It felt good to be astir when the world was awaking! And then he stopped stock-still, his arms extended. The evil eyes of the blue monkey seemed to burn into the back of his head like coals of fire!

He shook himself defiantly, cursed himself for an imaginative idiot, and strode resolutely into his own room to dress himself for the work of the day that had just dawned.

When Corrigan left the bungalow to catch the train to Jesselton that afternoon, he looked back several times on his way down the slope. Millett was over on the farthest extremity of the estate, looking for Fellowes with a message from the proprietor. Corrigan had signified his confidence in the new man by leaving him in temporary charge of his own portion of the Kabun. He wasn't bothering about Millett. He was regarding that newest addition to the estate menagerie—the blue monkey—that sat on a convenient platform jutting from a newly erected house at the summit of a tall post imbedded in the earth directly outside the bungalow. The creature was dissecting some fruit with a spiky red exterior, that Millett had procured from the jungle. The steel chain, still firmly secured to the band at its loins, was looped round the pole at its opposite extremity so as to give freedom of movement.

At the foot of the flight of steps, Panus—the yellow dog—lay outstretched on the soft earth. Its mouth was open, its tongue was out, and it surveyed the blue monkey with a look that spoke volumes!

Corrigan had the car to himself. It was a long, ramshackle affair and it jolted abominably. At Pinarut, Pennington, the new district officer of Putatan, clambered in.

"Tabi!" said Corrigan pleasantly.

"How's things?"

"Oh! not too bad, considering the price of rubber. How's law and order?"

"Rotten!" declared Pennington. "Damn rotten!"

Corrigan raised his brows.

"Bad as that?"

The other nodded.

"Never get to the end of these confounded religions," he said. "Their name is legion. First it's a beetle, then it's a blessed crocodile, after that a ju-ju of some sort or another!"

"I know," agreed Corrigan with sympathy. "What's it now?"

"A monkey!" the D. O. jerked out wrathfully. "A dirty, vermin-infested monkey—and a blue one at that!"

Corrigan sat up.

"A blue monkey!" he repeated, controlling his features with an effort.

"A blasted blue monkey," said the D. O. again. "As if I haven't enough cases to hear every moment of the day without searching the countryside for some wretched ape that's been stolen from the temple of a cult nobody's ever heard of. It looks like being a serious matter, too. It appears there are thousands of these fanatics round our district. I suppose the damned thing broke loose of its own accord: but they tell quite a different story. According to them some white feller pinched it. Anyhow they're saving up a pretty warm reception for the gentleman—if they happen to run across him. I'm just off to talk it over with the commissioner."

He mopped his brow with a yellow handkerchief.

"Rough luck!" murmured Corrigan—and gazed out at the window.

He was not particularly interested in Pennington's troubles; but the blue monkey gave him serious thought. Cost what it might, he must borrow a trolley and get back to the estate as soon as his business was concluded. He couldn't blame Millett; he had done precisely what any other man would have done in his place; but while that confounded symbol of an oriental cult sat outside the ridiculous hutch for all the world to see, there was danger in the air, the nature of which only a man of Corrigan's long experience could fully comprehend.

He left the D.O. outside the commissioner's bungalow and proceeded along the dusty road toward the office of the government accountant.

The business that had brought him to the coast town took him far longer than he had ever surmised. Tobitt the accountant, was away and not expected back before evening. A certain Chinese merchant from whom Corrigan bought rice was not to be found either at his store or in the native gambling den. In sheer desperation, Corrigan routed out the traffic manager of the railway and succeeded in tracing certain consignments of goods that had been somehow delayed in transit. Moreover, he arranged for a trolley, and the necessary coolies to be in readiness as soon as he himself was prepared to get away.

Circumstances beyond his control kept him at Jesselton until close on midnight. He arrived at the foot of the slope which led to his house at a little after three.

He paid off the men, stretched his cramped limbs, and covered the steep ascent with long strides. As he went up through the trees, something plunged down the path toward him and fell panting at his feet, nearly tripping him. It was Panus—the yellow dog! Its eyes, as he turned his electric torch on the beast, were bloodshot; its fur was caked with mud; the pads of its forepaws were torn and bleeding. Corrigan dropped on to one knee and patted its head.

"What have they been doing to you, old man?" he said.

Ten minutes later he reached the veranda stairs, the dog following painfully at his heels.

Corrigan always boasted of a sixth sense. It was possibly that peculiar acquisition that caused him to stop at the foot of the flight and flash his torch in the direction of the absurd hutch perched on the top of the tall post.

He uttered an exclamation and went closer.

The steel chain, its loop fastened round the very foot of the pole, stretched out along the ground into the darkness. Wondering greatly, he moved the lamp until its light fell on the farthest extremity of the chain; fell on the mangled remains of what once had been a blue monkey—and on the yellow dog that had crept up out of the darkness to sniff at it!

Corrigan rubbed his chin thoughtfully.

"Did you do that?" he inquired fo the dog.

The creature sidled toward him, its tail down, every line of its cringing being proclaiming its guilt.

"Good Lord!" cried Corrigan. It had never occurred to him that the monkey was in danger. His mind had been exercised solely on Millett's account. He visualized a veritable nightmare of unwelcome complications. In Borneo, as he know only too well, news flashed from point to point with incredible rapidity. A hundred coolies, at least, had seen that accursed monkey already. He must see young Millett at once. There was no time for delay. They must destroy every trace of the blue monkey—and trust to providence that the creature had not been connected by those who had seen it with the sacred animal that had been stolen.

He burst unceremoniously into the assistant's room and, at that moment, the torch gave out. He crossed to the bed and felt for Millett's form with his outstretched hands. His fingers met a jumbled mass of torn mosquito curtain, and beyond—nothing but an empty bed.

He found matches and lit the lamp with trembling hand. His eyes fell upon a scene of utter chaos. The frame over the bed was broken in several places; chairs and tables lay strewn in every direction; fragments of broken crockery strewed the bare floor; the lamp itself had survived miraculously by reason of its being swung from a hook in a beam. Scarcely a piece of furniture was whole.

His eye fell on something which glittered almost under his feet. He stooped and picked it up. It was a murderous-looking native knife, its blade a foot long, its handle of buffalo horn. He tossed it on to the bed and plunged out of the room toward the kitchen. On the very threshold of his sleeping apartment, the cook-boy lay prone—his throat cut from ear to ear.

Corrigan's brain reeled. Suddenly something brushed against his leg. The yellow dog leaped up at him, trying to lick his hand. It disappeared again into the blackness, barking furiously, then returned to where he still stood, its mongrel form throbbing with renewed activity.

Corrigan swallowed a lump in his throat, jerked out his broad chest—and went into the house for his automatic. The dog kept close behind him, panting like a steam engine.

As he slipped a refill into his torch and tested it critically, he looked down at the beast he had called Panus.

"I wonder if you can, old son?" he muttered. "If poor Millett has a last chance—you're it!"

As if to justify itself in Corrigan's estimation, the dog took a new path through the rubber, hastening back at intervals to make sure that Corrigan was following. In the light of the newly charged pocket lamp the planter saw that the soft earth showed clearly the imprint of many bare feet—feet that had passed that way only a short time before.

Corrigan, as he hurried after that amazing yellow dog he had once been within an ace of destroying, found, in the invaluable experience born of long years of adventuring in strange places, one pretty solid foundation on which to base his hopes of saving Millett from the fate that threatened him. It was the obvious intention of the worshippers of the blue monkey to sacrifice the Englishman whom they believed to have robbed them of their cherished symbol. If such had not been the case, Millett would assuredly have shared the same fate as the Chinese cook-boy. Now, native creeds are intermingled with weird superstitions; sacrifices to gods are almost invarably carried out in accordance with state customs—and at stated times; at the season of the full moon; when the moon is new; at the falling of darkness; at the rising of the sun. . . . Corrigan fully realized, in the present circumstances, that speediness in despatching their victim was one of the prime factors of the case. Relying on that strange sixth sense he had never known to fail him, he pinned his faith on the dawn; and it was for this reason that he pressed forward with every ounce of strength at his command making the utmost use of each minute hat remained.

AUTO SENSE — GET YOUR MONEY'S WORTH — By Williamson

The man who pays his bill at a repair shop without asking a question or remains in the driver's seat while the mechanic is making a minor adjustment on his car does not get his money's worth and is merely spending money instead of investing it.

You are entitled to a little information that every mechanic will furnish you if you are interested sufficiently to ask for it. If you are satisfied to pay your bill and drive away he will take the money and turn his attention to another job.

There are several advantages to be gained by asking questions. The most important of these is that you are preparing yourself to meet emergencies on the road, miles away from a garage. If the mechanic explains what he did to correct the trouble you will be able to correct it yourself should it develop again. This you can see is an investment.

Another point to be remembered is that the more you know about your car the better service you will receive from the repair shop. The majority of mechanics are honest but occasionally you will find one that is not. If you encounter one of these he will hesitate before charging you for a new spider gear in the differential to cure bucking when the universal joint is at fault; if it is, if he thinks you understand your car and would be likely to call his hand. That is one of the services Doc is trying to perform for you.

VETERANS OUT AT BELLEVILLE

Last Winter's Team With Several New Promising Players Out.

PRACTICE DAILY.

BELLEVILLE, December 24. — Better late than never applies to the rousing practice that was held by the intermediate last night at Gar. Arnott's ice bungalow. For an hour Eddie Thomas drove all last year's team and some new comers at a terrific pace and they werre ready for cease fire at eight o'clock.

"Bill" Green, "Soup" Goyer, 'Stan Nurse, "Stan" Hagerman, "Vern" Weir, "Bill" Finkle, "Ernie" Roy "Bunny" Fretchette, 'James' Hunter "Piper" Latchford, "Albert" Armstrong answered roll call and "Daw" Whalen who is suffering from a bad cold will be around so the team is practically intact and will be ready to take on the "Wanderer's from the east" next Thursday night.

Two teams were lined up and drilled in passing and skating. Most of the boys are in fair condition especially Wm. Green who has not missed a practice and he was going in mid-season form. All the boys went at the job in a workmanlike manner and put in a very useful hour.

Every night from now till Tuesday workouts will be held and the line up looks from this angle to be goal. Nurse, defense, Green, Finkle, Goyer, Forwards, Weir, Hagerman, Whalen, Frechette and Hunter.

Improvment has been shown in Hunter and Roy since practice started. Jimmy has taken on a little weight, skates faster and is shooting in rare form. Hagerman and Weir were going seemingly where they left off last year, while Frechette still has his cunning with him. Soup Goyer is pounds over weight but will be there. He is the same old reliable and his stick handling has not decreased. He will be a big help this year and has definitely decided to help the boys out. Bill Finkle is the same hard checker and Stan Nurse was nearly unbeatable last night.

There was a large crowd of rail birds out and were satisfied with the composition of the team. Probably this line up will be considerably strengthened when a couple more show up. They have been out of hockey for a while and may be induced to take up the game again.

FRENCH SOCCER CLUB PUNISHED

Suspended for Three Years and Several Players Disciplined.

CHASED REFEREE.

PARIS, December 26. — Southern France's warm blooded inhabitants, take their football seriously, not to say passionately, but none more so than the ardent fans of the Lezignan Club.

Recently after a defeat inflicted on their team by the Perpignan Arelquins, according to L'Auto's Perpignan, correspondent, they became so enraged that they besieged the referee in his dressing room for more than an hour.

A few impartial sportsmen who sought to settle the dispute were badly mauled, one having two ribs broken. The referee was released only after he had signed a statement recording the match as a draw.

Upon the referee's complaint the Languedo Football League committee suspended the Lezignan Club for three years, banned the president of the club for life, and severely disciplined several of the players.

GERMAN TEAM WON.

French Meet Old Enemies on Rhineland Field.

PARIS, December 26. — For the first time since the war a French football team has visited the Rhineland to meet a German Club. The athletic club of the Fourteenth ward, Paris, yesterday played the German club of Mayence at the latter city, and was defeated by the score of six to two.

The games was played before a surprisingly large attendance of five thousand.

Prior to the start of the game committees representing both team met in the centre of the field and exchanged bouquets of flowers.

CALGARY ROAD RACE.

Alfred Endersby, of Trail, B.C., Won Easily in Filed of 23.

CALGARY, Alta., Dec. 26.—(Canadian Press).—With ideal weather and thousands lining the course, Alfred Endersby, of Trail, B. C., won the 19th annual Calgary road race Thursday morning from a field of 23 starters. It was an easy win, Endersby covering the distance of six and a seventh miles in 35 minutes 39 seconds. He was fully a third of a mile in advance of Fred Lees, of Coleman, Alta. Stan. Steven, of Calgary, was third. Fourth place was won by Harold Lemherner, and Charles Reid, of Banff, was fifth.

Rus. Waley, 16-year-old, of Calgary, took sixth, just a fraction of a stride ahead of Arthur Woods, of this city, well-known Western marathoner. Twenty-one of the entrants finished.

FLORIDA FAVORED BY MAJOR LEAGUES

Ten Clubs Will Train in South Next Spring.

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—(Canadian Press).—Ten major league clubs will train in the Everglade regions of Florida during the 1925 spring season, while three will go to California, and two will get in condition in Louisiana. Georgia, native state of "Ty" Cobb, will cast its sun upon the remaining entry, the Detroit Tigers.

Florida is steadily gaining as a popular resort for big league clubs to condition themselves for the season's campaign. In 1923 seven teams trained there, while two more were added in 1924.

Five each of the National and American League clubs have chosen Florida. Only two National League teams have shifted their training scenery this year, the Yankees moving from New Orleans to St. Petersburg, Fla.; Chicago going from Winter Haven, Fla., to Shreveport, La.; the Browns shifting from Mobile, Ala., to Tarpon Springs, Fla.; the Athletics swinging into Fort Meyers, Fla., from Montgomery, Ala., and the Red Sox moving into the Yankee Camp at New Orleans from San Antonio.

MISSOURI BEATEN.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Dec. 26.—(Canadian Press).—The University of Missouri football team played hard, desperate football against the University of Southern California yesterday and lost 20 to 7. The winners made all their touch-downs in the third peroid, while the Missouri touch-down resulted when a Missouri half-back recovered a fumble and ran 20 yards across the goal-line in the last 30 seconds of play.

U. S. TEAM WON.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Dec. 26. — (Canadian Press).—An international Varsity Rugby fixture was won yesterday by California from the University of British Columbia, 9 to 0. The game was played on a frost-hardened ground covered with straw which handicapped the players greatly.

DEFEATED BOSTON.

Bruins Showed Smarter Play Than on Previous Occasion.

MONTREAL, Dec. 26.—(Canadina Press).—Canadiens defeated Boston Bruins five to nothing in scheduled N. H. L. fixture play before Christmas crowd of 3500 here last night. Dr. Charles Stewart, star amateur golfer of Hamilton was in the net for Boston and played magnificent game. It was only his second time on skates this year which added to the fact that he was in strange pads and was pitted against fastest shooting team in the professional league made his professional debut all the more impressive.

Boston was outplayed by the brilliant dominion champions, but the Bruins showed smarter play and a better spirit than in their previous games.

TIGERS WON A GAME.

St. Pats Never in the Hunt—Locals Played Good Hockey.

HAMILTON, Dec. 26. — (Canadian Press).—Jimmy Gardners fast going Tigers provided a true holiday attraction for fans here last night, by swamping St. Pats under an 8 to 1 score.

Irish were never in the hunt, locals playing smart hockey at every stage of game and showing much of their true form. Day and Dye made game very interesting and were continual menaces.

Entire Hamilton team played brilliantly.

VETERAN HURLERS ON HARRIS' STAFF

Johnson, Gregg, Mogridge, Coveleskie and Company All Around 35 Year Mark.

Many men think they are growing old at 40. The gray hairs at the temples, the first rheumatic twinge in the legs, the shortness of breath after climbing a flight of stairs—

Shame be upon you, big boy! Don't ever admit that you are entering the old man's division at 40, or when you celebrate your fiftieth anniversary for that matter.

When you 40-year-olds think you feel age creeping up to clamp you, get out a list of the pitchers who will labor for Washington's world's champions next year. A sure cure boys!

There will be Vean Gregg, 30-year-old southpaw, who returns to the majors against his wishes, 'tis reported, because he was just about the best "crooked arm" on the Pacific Coast.

Next to him will be Walter Johnson, leading chucker of the 1924 season in the American League. He has tried to quit big league toil, but it virtually is assured that he will be back with the Senators, a 38-year-old star.

George Mogridge, 36, will continue to throw his left-hand curves, Stanny Covelskie, 34, has been purchased from Cleevland to add a spitball delivery to the regular staff.

Dutch Reuther, veteran southpaw purchased from Brooklyn, will celebrate his 33d birthday in a Washington uniform. Jezebel Zachary, on the Senatorial payroll last year, is approaching the 35-year mark.

That completes a "Big Six." But Russell and Martina are two relief pitchers who are some years past 30.

Veterans Choice of Youngster.

The odd thing about the Washington club's fondness for grizzly old athletes—the comforting thing for we fellows around the 40-year line—is that the manager who is selecting and who will manage these vet pitchers is a 26-year-old boy.

Too often men who bemoan the fact that they are "fat and 40" tell us that they cannot hope to compete with the spirit, the assurance and the physical appearance of youth.

When a kid in his twenties lands an executive position and is in a position to command some of these "fat and 40" birds and say, "Now I'm in a groove; this boy will surround himself with younger men who will look up to him.

Bucky Harris ,the boy manager of the world's champions, has young pitchers and is in a position to add more to them. But he prefers the athletes nearing 40.

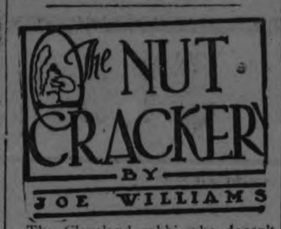
Experience is the factor that appeals to Harris. He knows that the cunning and control of an old-ster who is fit is likely to get his team higher on the ladder than the hit-or-miss speed and energy of the youngster.

Last Spring Harris had a pitcher named McGraw—Dangerous Dan, they called him. He was six feet five inches and 190 pounds of athletic bone and sinew, physically equipped to do a man's job of pitching..

Dangerous Dan, not so far past the voting age may not be on the Washington payroll this year. But Johnson and Covelskie and Reuther and Gregg, who were pitching when Harris was in rompers, probably will be regulars.

Manager Harris is not forgetting the kids. He will have plenty of them at the training camp in Tampa. Several will remain on the payroll throughout the 1925 campaign.

But when a first-class job of pitching is needed, Washington will call upon athletes who are near the age when the average citizen begins to wonder whether his lodge can gain him admission to the old man's home in another ten years or so.



The Cleveland rabbi who doesn't want his son to be a box fighter because it isn't a business, evidently never heard of Tex Rickard.

Well, it certainly was fine how the baseball magnates rolled up their sleeves and went right to the bottom of the Dolan-O-Connell scandal . . . It certainly was!

Headline read, "Everybody Mum on Eve of Baseball Meet" ..... Slight typographical error .....It should have read everybody dumb.

The thing that surprised us about the joint meeting at Chicago was the absence of chiropractors.

England is going to send a team of amateur boxers over to the United States, presumably headed by Joe Beckett and Bombadier Wells..

Mr. Firpo has gone to Europe to take a rest ....It won't be half as satisfying to him as it will be to us.

A Japaneses wrestler announces the discovery of a new hold..Maybe this is what Rockefeller Jr. meant when he said science has gone ahead of religion.

After threatening for three months to sell Shocker to the Yankees, the Browns finally went through with the deal ..... Thereby proving anew the uncertainity of baseball.

"CLOSE HARMONY" A REAL COMEDY

By ALICE ROHE.

NEW YORK, (United Press).—It takes a humorist to sense the pathos of life.

Dorothy Parker's keen humor has interpreted life with rare understanding from the first time she set her pen or typewriter to paper. She has never resorted to cheap wit or shoddy joking. She has always been something more than merely clever and bright. Now she has written a play in collaboration with Elmer Rice and no one who has followed her work is surprised that it has "rung the bell."

"Close Harmony" is one of the best comedies interpretative of American life in many a season. It is better than anything of Frank Craven's, although he has been accepted as a standard of good comedy writing. This superiority lies in one point particularly. It is the authenticity of every scene and character. Indeed the people on the stage are types familiar to everyone. It is what flows beneath the surface in the lives of these people that makes "Close Harmony" a rarely appealing comedy. And humour—priceless humour—in the use of bromidic situations and familiar conversation veils the pathos in continued laughs.

Briefly it is the story of two duplicate suburban homes. In one lives Ed. Graham, a drudge husband and father, with his punctiliously dutiful wife and mother of his ten-year-old child. In the other lives Belle Sheridan, a Winter Garden girl, who has left the stage for marriage in her futile dream of a home. This neglected wife and the neglected drudge husband next door, in their loneliness and longing for human companionship and understanding, feel the fleeting wings of romance brush by them.

Quite unexpectedly as he strums his mandolin, which he is forbidden to play at home, to her accompaniment of "The Blue Danube," the vision of escape in elopement forms itself. But the man, bound by 13 years of habit, can not break the bonds. Yet the vision brings him some emancipation in his dreary life. I doubt if there is a more moving and poignant final curtain than that of "Close Harmony," with the suburban husband, imbued with courage from the vanished Belle, strumming on his forbidden mandolin, "The Blue Danube."

Wanda Lyon as Belle Sheridan, the show girl, longing for a home, gives an inspired performance. Like James Spottswood, who brings rare pathos and beauty to the role of the downtrodden husband, she imbues Belle with actuality. Genius can do no more.

No stage child in my knowledge has given a better performance than that of Arline Blackburn as the detestable "Sister" Graham.

Arthur Hopkins, who produced this comedy, is deserving of a medal or something for having given the theatre two such real plays as "What Price Glory" and "Close Harmony" in one season. He has given us true hope for realism on the stage. In one he has produced as interpreted by men in the trenches. In the other he has presented the bitter tragedy of life, pulsing beneath the appar ent trivialitie of the commonplace.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

THANKFUL FOR UNION.

To the Editor:

Sir,— We are approaching the close of the first year of united effort by the Methodist and Presbyterian churches at Haileybury. One has a feeling of thankfulness when making a survey of what has been accomplished during the year. There has not been the slightest trace of denominational discord. All branches of the church are in a healthy condition and show evidences of steady growth. Although suffering somewhat from the effects of the terrible fire of October, 1922, we, as a result of this disaster, have been able to realize the benefits of Church Union in advance of the general Union throughout the country.

G. L. SUMMERS,
Elder, United Church, Haileybury.
Haileybury, Ont., Dec. 13, 1924.

NO CHURCH BUT FOR UNION.

To the Editor,

Sir:

A western man hastens to give evidence (and his own is but typical) that Union works in the West. It works in a carefully graded Sunday School where there are four organized teen-age classes with an enrollment of over forty. Only last night seven Tuxis boys were initiated in the presence of thirty School Home boys.. It works in the Ladies Aid which last year raised six hundred dollars—only Union that works unitedly does such things.

It works in the W. M. S. where a very fine mutual consideration is always shown. It works in financial matters—and financing in our Battleford district and town, these last few years, is a job for financiers only.. And it works in the congregation generally. Indeed general opinion has it that Union is all that will or can work But for Union there could be no Church in Battleford worthy either of Methodism or Presbyterianism.

Norman G. Campbell.

The Manse,
Battleford, Sask.
December 13, 1924.

UNION ONLY SOLUTION.

To the Editor:

Sir,—Examples speak louder than words, and your readers may be interested in the working of Church Union in the Elk Lake field. I can state emphatically that it has been satisfactory to all concerned. As an Elder and member of the Board of Managers of that congregation for over twelve years, though not now resident there, I am in a position to speak from personal knowledge.

Church Union with us was such an obvious and logical step to take, that there seemed no alternative, and the Union was consumated in 1911 with very little discussion on our part, in fact it was arranged by the District Superintendents of the Presbyterian and Methodist churches. The Elk Lake field was then, and is still, a Home Mission field, and not so large but one church and one minister could easily handle the work. To have this field a charge against the Home Mission Funds of both churches was too absurd to be continued.

At the time of the congregational vote on Church Union the question was thoroughly canvassed in Elk Lake, and there was only one Anti-Union vote cast. At a congregational meeting held previous to the vote one, who is a member of an Old Country Kirk, professed to see rocks in the path of Church Union, but on further discussion it developed that he had not read the Basis of Union, and it is much to be doubted if he has yet done so. From our experience and observation on a limited section of the firing line, it is our conviction that the rocks are largely a matter of human nature and not of fact, and that Union is the only practical solution of a pressing problem. In our own case, in what better way could the Mission Funds of the Church have been administered? We look forward to a further impetus being given to the work when all these outlying charges come under one Union administration.

The Union Church has been and is a decided factor for good in the life of the community, and especially the work done with the children has been appreciated.

As for the larger Union, there is only one opinion, and that is—Union.

H. C. HARVEY,
Cobalt, Ont. Elder.

ORTHODOXY AND CHURCH UNION.

To the Editor, Peterboro Examiner:

Sir,—I have read with much interest a letter in The Globe (Nov. 20) over the signature of Robert Pogue, St. Paul's Church, Peterboro, wherein, Mr. Pogue absolutely challenges the statement that hetrodoxy permeates at least one of the contracting denominations in the so-called Church Union propaganda which is disrupting the Presbyterian Church.

I take it that Mr. Pogue is the pastor of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, in the room of Rev. Dr. Torrence, the minister of 30 years ago, when I was member of that congregation, and I would suggest to Mr. Pogue that he write another letter to The Globe on the subject of "Controversy between Professor Jackson and the late Bishop Carman," touching Jackson's statement before Toronto Y.M.C.A. that the first several books of our Bible are myths and fables." And if Mr. Pogue has not copy of these published articles I will be glad to send them to you for re-printing, so that he may be the better enabled to verify his statement of to-day, that "hetrodoxy has not crept into the church" (?) into which he seeks to carry a portion of that splendid congregation of orthodox worshippers as I knew it three decades now past.

Since leaving Peterboro the greater portion of my life has been spent in the lumbering sections of New Ontario and at one centre I was secretary for the Presbyterian church and saw that church grow from a mission field to an augmented stature and thence to a self-supporting congregation, but that same church was closed by the arbitrary command of Rev. J. H. Pritchard, the congregation scattered to "the four winds," but still the Unionists had it classed as one of the "red" stars of progress in Algoma, where they claim a saving of $40,000 in money, but such saving is at the expense of ruin and disbandonment of one of the foremost Presbyterian congregations in Algoma. And if Mr. Pogue has any doubt of my statement I will be glad to give him the address of a staunch and true member of the former congregation (now absolutely ruined) with whom to correspond.

Yours, etc.,
B. M. WYLIE,
351 Westmoreland Ave., Toronto, Ont.

THE MODERATOR'S MESSAGE.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—Two days ago the press broadcasted a message from the Moderator of Assembly to the Presbyterians of Canada, telling them that ninety-five per cent. of their missionaries and eighty per cent. of their ministers were going into the new Church Merger ("merged" is the wording of the Act). But he omits to tell them that from careful returns, seventy per cent. of the Presbyterian people in Ontario and Quebec, the larger part of the Church, besides the numbers East and West, will not follow these ministers but will remain loyal to the Presbyterian Mother Church.

These people remember that this Merger has been mainly a clerical movement, and that the terms of the Act give these clergy and officials full power to do with it what they may choose — power, through their Settlement Committee, to intrude upon any of its congregations a minister whom the people have not called, and do not want—power to invite to its pulpits, without consent of the session, "any minister of any other religious denomination"—power to tax for their own "superannuation funds" by "assessments"—"which shall be obligatory upon all local churches"—and which, as a civil corporation, they can collect from those churches by law—power to "alter," "change," "unite with any other religious denomination," of any kind, upon any terms they may choose—in short, an absolute despotism,—in which the people's part is work, pray, pay and obey.

The people remember, too, that these ministers have already broken faith with them. They were placed in charge of the Church on their taking solemn vows to "maintain and defend the same" and "to follow no divisive course from the present order established therein," but have broken their vows, violated the constitution of their Church, and used their positions of trust to blot out their Church, to confiscate its civil rights and trusts, to coerce its members by civil law into that merger or onto the street—and all this on a vote of less than one-third of the membership, and in the face of great and growing opposition.

The people also remember other broken pledges—that there was unanimous agreement in 1905, that "Union" must carry the consent of the entire membership—and again, in 1912, that it must have "practically unanimous action"; and yet again, in 1917, that the whole matter be left to "the leadings of Providence in the experience of the people and the lessons of the war," and that after the war the people were never asked for their experience.

In view of the above, the example of these ministers fails to impress, and on June 10, when the Church is blotted out by Act of Parliament at the instance of these eighty per cent. who had vowed to "maintain and defend" her, the people will at once reorganize, not as a corporation made by Parliament and founded on unkept faith, but as a Church of Christ formed by the free action of Presbyterian people loyal to the Mother Church.

These people look forward with confidence. They will be free from the domination which has sought to deprive them of their liberties and rights. They will in a short time have ministers in plenty, after their own heart, who will not seek to be "lords over God's heritage but ensamples to the flock."

As to the missionaries, note—(1) "Denominations," which is but another name for convictions, have given to the world all the Gospel it has ever received; (2) the heathen world, by the "Comity of Missions" is divided among the great churches to prevent overlapping: (3) in mission lands the native Christians are now claiming, as is right, to manage their churches in their own way; (4) the claim that "denominations" prevent the heathen accepting the Gospel, is said by one of our sanest veteran missionaries to be "simply nonsense"; (5) missionaries who go into the "United Church" will be cared for by that Church, and those who remain Presbyterian will be cared for by a loyal Presbyterian people.

Ministers from abroad are continually quoted. A letter said to have been obtained from the Moderator-elect of the Church of Scotland is sent out by the Unionists. If, as is probable, he does not know all the facts, his opinion is valueless. If he knows them, and approves the merger, then he approves of clerical domination and his opinion is equally un-Presbyterian and valueless.

The Presbyterian Council is also quoted as approving. The only meeting of that Council since the war, was nearly four years ago, and this "Union" has never been before it. A committee of that Council gave a qualified opinion but as they heard only one side that opinion too is valueless.

The Moderator's message, true to Unionist ideals, would awe the people by its eighty per cent. of authority, but the minister's only sceptre is not official position but a manly, true, unselfish, devoted Christian life.

CHIMNEY

Most of the heat of your furnace goes up the chimney. Engineers, however, are learning to check this waste. Philadelphia Electric Co. installs equipment expected to establish a record by converting into steam energy 95 per cent. of the heat units of its coal. It has already been done exeprimentally in New York.

This is an economy that would save consumers a fabulous sum if applied to ordinary household furnaces, as it will be in time. With the cream skimmed off our natural resources, economies become necessary.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

TWO DENNY'S PLAY IN BIG PRODUCTION.

Malcolm Denny and Reginald Denny are in pictures together again. This doesn't mean that two brothers are reunited or anything like that. The name's the same—but they're no relation, except that both were officers in the British army and served together in India. Malcolm was an officer in the British army for years, and finally left it to become an engineer, and thence invaded the movies. Reginald Denny served in the Royal Air Force, went to India, then returned to the stage and thence to the movies.

They both appear in "The Fast Worker" at the Capitol to-day and Saturday, Universal Jewel adaptation of George Barr McCutcheon's novel, "The Husbands of Edith," directed by William Seiter. The first picture both Dennys appeared together in was "Sporting Youth." Denny starred, that is, Reginald Denny—and Malcolm portrayed a select character role.

"The Fast Worker" is a sprightly story of a man who essayed to impersonate another, and thus found himself saddled with a wife and family he'd never seen before. Then—to add to his troubles—he met a "sister-in-law" with whom he fell in love.

A big special cast was assembled for the Universal production. Laura La Plante plays the flirtatious sister-in-law, co-starring with Reginald, while Ethel Grey Terry, noted leading woman of the screen and stage, appears as the "wife" of the bogus husband.

Others in the cast are Lee Moran, the comedian of Lyons and Moran fame, Muriel Frances Dana, a diminutive star of five years, Richard Tucker, well known in character leads in the films; Margaret Campbell, who recently astonished Hollywood by becoming the bride of Josef Swickard, the "Desnoyers" of "The Four Horsemen"; Betty Morrissey, John Steppling, T. D. Crittenden, and Clarissa Selwynne.

The story is marked with the regular brand of Denny thrills—a fight or so, a wild automobile chase, a mad dash for a yacht at sea—all enveloped in the whimsical humor that has made Denny the logical actor to be selected by Universal.

AT THE REGENT.

TONY'S GANG FINDS MONTY FULL OF FIGHT.

Band of City Guerillas Encounter a Tartar in "Racing Luck."

Gang rule prevails in all cities. "Racing Luck" is a big story of life in New York. Monty Banks stars in it and as the hero he finds his time taken from the moment he lands on American soil from his quiet little country home in Italy with experiences that under ordinary circumstances would drive the average person to suicide.. But not the intrepid Monty, who fights his way through thick and thin, making life of great moment to those who would do him harm.

Monty as Mario, the Italian youth with the honest heart and the big ambitions, makes a sworn enemy of Tony Mora, a gang leader and ward boss, who puts the jinx on Monty from their first meeting. Francis McDonald as Tony engages Monty in personal fights and although he gets the worst of it in one of the biggest rough-and-tumble scraps ever screened, this hand-to-hand contest is no parlor match.

Tony has a gang. It is typical of the big city in that its warfare is carried on collectively. Monty fears them not as demonstrated by the way he outwits them in the big film. Monty falls in love with a girl, a feminine bit of sweetness and charm, portrayed by Helen Ferguson, and it happens that Tony, the gang chief, also has his eyes set on Helen. Monty and the girl run amuck of Tony's evil influence and it looks for a time as though Tony and his roughnecks were going to case Monty out of the picture entirely by bumping him off as they say in the circles of the underworld.

Monty goes into a big auto race heralded as the champ of foreign champs. As far as Monty is concerned he knows he is the chump of chumps when it comes to driving. He takes lessons. He goes into the race, and wins after destroying about a million dollars' worth of property and almost breaking his neck.

A very funny picture with a very funny star and a very capable supporting cast.

AT THE ROYAL.

HOLIDAY CROWDS THRONG ROYAL.

The Royal was a busy place yesterday and the programme just seemed to suit the holiday crowd. The biggest part of the programme is clean comedy and the Royal management should be complimented on the wonderful improvement in the musical end of the programmes.. Their orchestra excelled themselves and it was indeed hard to keep ones feet still.

The feature presentation "Changing Husbands," has the class and gowns that should appeal to all the ladies.

It is quite evident that there was no serious intent behind the production. It was made entirely in the comedy vein for laughing purposes only. And yet we have a feeling that every girl who wants to be married is going to get excited over this photoplay because it deals with a fundamental feminine problem, the question of getting the most out of life, whether as a wife or in pursuit of a career.

Adapted by Sada Cowan and Howard Higgin from the Saturday Evening Post story, 'Roles," by Elizabeth Alexander, "Changing Husbands" unfolds the tale of a rich young wife eager for a career, who secretly changes places with an actress who resembles her. The husband, none the wiser, falls passionately in love with the actress. The wife loses her heart to the financee of the actress. Here then is a situation that leads to all sorts of complications to the embarrassment of the characters involved but which the audience finds hugely entertaining. As a matter of fact the plot is replete with so many surprising developments and unexpected turns, so crowded with incident and action that you'll want to keep your eyes glued to the screen for fear of missing something.

Make it your business to see "Changing Husbands" if you are in need of a laugh tonic.

"PAL" AT THE ROYAL.

The kiddies will get a lot of fun To-Morrow afternoon out of "Mind The Baby" starring "Pal the Wonder Boy. This is the clean wholesome kind of movie that the Children should see.

AT THE GRAND.

"CHU-CHIN-CHOW."

"Chu-Chin-Chow, the big picture that pictures on the silver sheet, the famous stage play that had such a phenomenal run in London and New York, opened at the GRAND Opera House, yesterday with a Christmas Day matinee that had a good attendance. There was a large crowd of patrons present last evening and many complimentary remarks were heard from the outgoing audience, one lady who saw the stage production twice pronounced the film superior to the drama of the same name.

This production is a massive spectacular romance, with the fairy-tale atmosphere of the Arabian Night's Entertainments woven into its screening. It is filled with the sensuous color of its original backgrounds, and is set in the City of Baghdad, in "the olden time, the golden prime, of the Caliph Haroun Al. Raschid." The desert and its shifting sands, camel trains and elephants bearing the Prince Constantine and his suite, the slave markets where the lovely dessert flower is sold to further the ambitious schemes of her master, Abou Hassan, the bandit, alternate with visions from the Arabian Night's story of Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves.

Betty Blythe makes a wonderful heroine, in Zahrat, the beautiful village girl whose marriage to Omar, her youthful lover, is rudely interrupted by Abou Hassan, who, at the moment of their marriage, raids the village and carries both into captivity. Then Zahrat sold by her captor to Kasim Haba, a wealthy merchant whom the robber seeks to despoil. The slave is used to further Hassan's plot, but when he, disguised as Chu Chin Chow of China, gets possession by a ruse of Kasim's slaves and properties, he imprisons her in the robbers' treasure cave, to punish her for revealing his identity to Kasim's wife, the scheming Alcolom. Kasim's poverty-stricken brother, Ali Baba, discovers the secret of the cave and of its pass-word, "Open Seseame" and helps himself to the treasure. The Kasim intervenes, and finally Chin Chow returns and punishes all three. The plot and counter-plot, intrigue and deception which run likea thread through the Orinetal story of "Chu-Chin-Chow," and the end is as dramatic as the episode which make it an enthralling production.

The principals and supporting cast are all that could be desired and the picture itself is one of those clear photographic efforts whose screening is delightful. The details of magnificent scenes of Oriental splendor have been reproduced down to the last small item, and some of the episodes are georgeous in the extreme. There is a quality of bold, ruthless acting about the part of the robber sheik that harmonizes admirably with the character portrayed. Herbert Langley has an arduous role and a variety of parts, and does them wonderfully As Abou Hassan, the robber sheik, he portrays in turn, in disguise, the dignified Chu Chin Chow of China, who sings in stately fashion of his wonderful pedigree, the rough water-seller, and the splendid dark-skinned Indian Prince.

Jameson Thomas is Omar, the Desert Lover, a romantic figure, Eva Moore is Alcolom, the elderly lady who vamps her foolish lord, Old Kasim Baba, played by Randle Ayrton, and Judd Green is the fat Ali Boba The famous episode of the Forty Thieves, from the Arabian Nights tale, is filmed effectively.

The music that accompanies this production is adapted to its atmosphere and theme, and the Grand Opera House orchestra does full justice to the beautiful musical setting.

Mrs. W. McKee Bingham's singing is an added atttraction to the interest of the big picture. Mrs. Bingham who sang "I'll Sing Thee Songs of Araby' 'last night and was applauded heartily, will sing at the evening performances this evening and to-morrow night.

The presentation of "Chu Chin Chow' is prefaced by an excellent news reel and a very good comedy.

Counterfeiter Run Down By Royal Mounted Police

C. T. Hamelin, of Quebec, Arrested Yesterday Afternoon.

QUEBEC, Dec. 26. — (Canadian Press).—C. T. Hamelin, local resident, has been arrested by officers of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and local officers on a charge of complicity in an attempt to manufacture counterfeit American one-dollar bank notes. The prisoner was taken to Montreal to await his appearance before the Montreal courts in company with another man, Louis Robideaux, who was at Waterloo last week. Hamelin's arrest followed an investigation in which United States secret service officers and Canadian police officers co-operated in an endeavor to locate the counterfeiting plant from which American bills were being circulated both here and in the United States.

HAVE JOINED UNION.

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church at Mattawa, and Eramosa Church, Near Guelph, Voted Into Union.

TORONTO, Dec. 26.—(Canadian Press.)—It is announced to-day that St. Andrew's Presbyterian church at Mattawa, Ont., and the Eramosa church, near Guelph, have voted themselves into United Church without a dissenting voice, making eight Presbyterian churches in Ontario going into Union without taking formal votes of the membership. Those previously reported were Haileybury, Blind River, Alma Heights, Fine River, Thessalon and Callender. Voting in thirty Presbyterian churches in Toronto is going on quietly, though it is well known that a canvass is being vigorously done by both sides.

NOT MUCH MAIL AT POST OFFICE TO-DAY

Local Postal Workers Had a Big Session, With Mountain of Mail.

Although, judging by the quantity of mail received in most houses of the city, the popular idea of the state of the Post Office on the day after Christmas would be a conception of huge piles of envelopes and bundles still waiting delivery.

A bird's eye view of the interior and a glance at the hundreds of assorted wickets that contain the various classes of mail matter, shows a very different situation. An orderly atmosphere and a clean-swept board is the condition at the Post Office today. The thousands of pieces of mail that have been received there for Christmas delivery have gone to their several destinations and nothing remains, with the exception of possibly half a dozen parcels received today, as many packages for people who are out of town for the holiday, and a box containing about a hundred and fifty envelopes and cards, wrongly addressed or without sufficient address. These have been checked up several times already and will get a further thorough sifting out. "No return address on the envelope" is the difficulty with the majority of them. Some of the mid-winter catalogues were included in the Christmas delivery work, and most of them have been disposed of already.

A warm tribute to the co-operation and diligent service of the staff this year is made by Postmaster Lacheur. Since Monday of this week, an extra amount of work has been done, with all-night shifts, and an extra corps of eighteen assistants engaged one for each letter carrier and three auxiliary inside helpers.

This year according to authorities at the Post Office has seen the handling of more mail matter than in many seasons past. It has been one of the biggest Christmas mail deliveries in the history of the local office. And there were more Christmas cards than ever before. Possibly the financial situation has caused more people to substitute the cheaper card for the Christmas present. Mail was posted earlier than usual also showing co-operation on the part of the public and American parcels were received at an earlier date than on previous years.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER.

FINE WELCOME IS EXTENDED TO S.P.A. WINNERS

Peterboro Hockey Club Civic Guests at Kiwanis Luncheon.

MR. GORDON'S MEDALS.

Players Receive Token of Success from Deputy Speaker.

The appreciation of the citizens generally of the splendid record of the Peterboro Hockey Club in winning the S.P.A. series was demonstrated to-day when through the co-operation of the Kiwanis Club, the officers and players were the guests of the City Council at the Kiwanis luncheon at the Empress, and were tendered a most hearty reception. During the function the Hockey Club was presented with a cheque for $200, a grant from the Council towards the expenses of the S.P.A. series, and the players with fine individual medals, the gift of Kiwanian G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P.

President Jack Marshall, of the Kiwanian Club, occupied the chair, and the whole proceedings were devoted to honoring the Hockey Club, the President striking the keynote in his brief speech of congratulation in opening the programme when he promised the players the hearty support and co-operation of Kiwanis during the season.

In presenting the city's gift of $200, His Worship Mayor Turner said that the amount to be donated was necessarily governed by the fact that the end of the year was at hand, and appropriations exhausted, but he assured the members of the Hockey Club that the City Council, as representing the citizens, was fully appreciative of the great honor brought to Peterboro in the winning of the S.P.A. series, and also of the advertising that the city had gained as a result. His Worship expressed his appreciation of the fact that the employers were co-operating in giving the players the necessary time off to participate in the games, and also in making it possible to attend the luncheon, and on behalf of the Council he thanked those who had materially helped in this way.

Eddie Wright, manager of the Peterboro Hockey Club, in receiving the cheque, expressed the hearty thanks of players and executive and promised that the team will exert every effort, not only to win the O.H.A. honors, but the Allen Cup as well.

Medals for Players.

Kiwanian G. N. Gordon, M. P., in presenting medals to the players, pointed out the very great honour that had come to Peterboro, showing that last year the S.P.A. trophy had been won by the Canadian Olympic team, which afterwards won world honours in France. Mr. Gordon stressed the debt of gratitude that the citizens owed to Frank Convery, the secretary, and Ed. Wright, the manager of the hockey club, who had given unsparingly of their time, and risked their money, to develop a winning team for Peterboro, working in and out of season to that end. The speaker referred to te players individually, expressing apreciation of their great work and assured them they were the heroes of every youngster in Peterboro, who through them were learning what could be accomplished by perseverance and quickness of decision, and the clean living that kept the body fit for such games.

Mr. Wright received the medals on behalf of the players, expressing his thanks to Mr. Gordon

Mr. W. H. Bradburn, M. P. P., who was the guest of Mr. Gordon at the banquet, added his congratulations to the hockey club and urged the citizens to support the team by attending the games during the season. Mr. Bradburn who was one of the founders of hockey in Peterboro and the first goal keeper who played here, gave an interesting account of the beginning of the game here, and of the difficulties experienced by the hockey pioneers. It was a bit of sporting history that was appreciated.

The affair was a great success throughout.

President Marshall, before the programme opened, read telegrams from a number of Kiwanis Clubs, extending holiday greetings to the local members.

EARTHQUAKE FELT.

Dishes Knocked From Tables in Roanoke, Virginia.

ROANOKE, Va., Dec. 26.—(Canadian Press).—Vibrations, believed here to be an earthquake, and strong enough to shake pictures from walls, knock dishes from the table and rock buildings, were felt in Roanoke and vicinity last night. A watchman in the silk mill said the floor in the brick building he was patrolling trembled and the furniture rattled about.

48 BELOW ZERO.

Chicago Witnessed Coldest Christmas in Fifty Years.

CHICAGO, Dec. 25. — (Canadian Press).—Eastern states to-day were due for their turn at fighting off the wintry blasts which brought the coldest Christmas in years in many sections of the Middle and Far West. The temperature registered 48 below zero yesterday at Elko Nevada. Chicago's Christmas was the coldest in fifty years.

Minister of Agriculture Will be One of the Speakers.

The annual banquet of the Masonic Lodges of the city will be held on Saturday, December 27th, in the Empress Hotel at 7.30 p.m.

The principal speaker will be the Hon. John C. Martin, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario, who will reply to the toast to Canada.

Dr. T. E. Kaiser, of Oshawa, will also be present and will reply to one of the major toasts.

The musical part of the entertainment will be supplied by Frank Oldfield, of Toronto, assisted by the local Masonic chorus.

The banquet will be preceded at 5.30 p.m. by the installation of officers of the Corinthian and Peterboro Lodges in the Masonic Hall.

All visiting brethern will be welcome.

CHALLENGE ACCEPTED.

Herb Allen's Family Meet Lebarr Family Some Time This Week.

Herb Allen's family, of Morrow street, have accepted the Lebarr challenge for a game of hockey. The Allen-Lebarr game will likely be played at the Brock street rink some time this week. Both teams will be composed of members of each family only and the game should be a good one.

CAN YOU SING A CHRISTMAS CAROL.

Can you watch the Yule log burning
With the old time Christmas cheer,
Listen to the fun and frolic
Of your children, and not hear
Little voices in the distance—
Maybe somewhere in this town—
Where the chimneys are too gloomy
For old Santa to come down?

Can you light the colored candles
On your pretty Christmas tree
And be happy while your kiddies
Dance around in childish glee?
If you know one empty stocking
Will be hanging limp, forlorn,
With its baby owner sobbing
Out its heart on Christmas morn?

Can you sing a Christmas carol
On that Holy, Silent Night,
When the earth is filled with music
And the sky with Bethlem's Light.
If perchance, you have forgotten
Something that you might have done,
Just to make it seem like Christmas
To some more unfavored one?

You can sit beside the Yule log
Singing carols from your heart,
If you know that of your plenty
You have given up a part—
If you've given joy and gladness
If you find it on your tree,
Inasmuch as you hae done it—
You have done it unto Me.

MOTOR BOAT SHOW.

Peterborough Will Be Well Represented in New York.

Mr. G. N. Gordon, K. C., M. P., has received word from the Department of Railways and Canals that the Trent Waterway Exhibit, including the working model of the lift-lock, will be on hand at the National Motor Boat Show, New York, on January 2nd to 10th.

Mr. Alex Kay of the local Trent Canal office will take charge of the exhibit for the Department.

Mr. W. H. Bradburn, M. P.P., has been advised by the Department of Game and Fisheries that six small mouth black bass, two sturgeon, six salmon trout and four rainbow trout will be shipped on Monday, the 29th inst. from the Brantford hatcheries to exhibit. Unforunately the fourteen maskinonge secured by the Department were not able to survive out of the native waters, therefore, specimens are unable to be forwarded. The fish to be sent will be presented to the New York Aquarium on January 12th.

The Canadian National Railway and the Canadian Pacific Railway will distribute literature at the exhibit.

The Secretary of the Trent Waterway Development Associaton will be in attendance with Mr. Kay at the exhibit.

No Loss of Life — All Employees Are Out on Strike.

SCRANTON, Pa., Dec. 26—(Canadian Press). — The powder house at the Underwood Mine of Pennsylvania Coal Company exploded early to-day. There was no loss of life. Employees of the mine have been on strike nearly four weeks.

VOTE TO Re-Elect W. H. BRADBURN

Member of the PETERBORO UTILITIES COMMISSION

For Utilities Commission

To the Citizens of Peterboro.

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

I have been nominated for the position of Utilities Commissioner for the City, and have agreed to stand for election. In recent years I have had considerable municipal experience, having been Mayor for two years and Alderman for ten years, and when serving the public I have made it a point to endeavor to look after the interests of the people as a whole. If elected, I would feel that my previous work in the Council would be of considerable benefit as a Utilities Commissioner, and would give the best of my ability and time to the consideration of questions that might come up for consideration.

Wishing you all the compliments of the season, I beg to remain,

Yours faithfully,

A. A. McIntyre

1d-150-4917

To The Electors of Peterborough

Peterboro, December 26, 1294.

Since I was nominated for the position of Alderman, I have found out, as the result of a conference with my employers, that it will cause so much conflict with my, and their, business interests if I am a member of the City Council, and require to give my time to Civic matters, that I cannot be a candidate.

I am disappointed that I am not able to serve my City as a member of the City Council, but nevertheless my interest is in an economic and thrifty civic administration, which, in my opinion, is more necessary now than at any time in the past.

Although my name will appear on the ballot paper, I ask my friends not to vote for me, but to support candidates pledged to economic and careful government.

Wishing you the Compliments of the Season, I remain,

Yours truly,

A. W. Blade

SAGE.—To Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Sage, 268 Munro Avenue, on December 23rd, a daughter—Ruth Madeline.

G. L. Hay For Alderman

After strong pressure, I have consented to offer myself as candidate for Alderman. Having had previous experience in the Council, and long connection with the business section of the city, I feel qualified to assist in an intelligent business administration of the important affairs of the city, and take this means of soliciting the support of all who wish this kind of representation, and believe I can give it to them. My election will show your confidence in me, which I will do my best to retain.

G. L. Hay

Roland Denne Yours as Alderman For 1925

If my long business experience, and many years before you in municipal work as member and chairman of the Board of Education, merit your support, then mark your ballot for Roland Denne on January 1st.

For Alderman

J. M. GREENE.

My experience of seven years on the Board of Education and this year as its chairman, coupled with a successful business career of 20 years, should be a valuable asset on your Aldermanic Board.

MOUNTED POLICE PATROLS COVER NEW TERRITORY

Establish New Trade Points in Far North Early in Year.

TO THE ARCTIC.

Consider Need of New Police Station—Hunt Peddlers of Liquor.

OTTAWA, Dec. 27.—(By Canadian Press).—The mounted police are strengthening their net across Northern Canada. Within the next few weeks two patrols will push out across unemployed territory, one with the purpose of establishing a new trade route and the other to ascertain the need for a new permanent police station.

From Rae Post on the north arm of Great Slave Lake, a patrol will go north through the chain of lakes leading into Great Bear Lake, then north-east through unmapped territory known as the Diemal lakes and it is hoped, that the party will be able to connect with another patrol at Coronation Gulf of the Arctic Ocean. Last summer a party under Inspector H. L. Fraser, went from Rae as far as Lac Ste. Croix, which is part way to Great Bear Lake and established a cache of supplies there for the use of the expedition that is to set out shortly.

Liquor Trading.

The other patrol will go up the Peace River from Northern Alberta to Finlay Forks, Northern British Columbia, where the Peace, the Finlay and the Parsnip Rivers join. Reported illicit trading in liquor and the relations between the white trappers and the Indians are the reasons for this work being undertaken. Last summer this country was patrolled by a party of mounted police and officials of the Indian Affairs Branch. The report of the expeditions, which set out next month, will determine whether or not a permanent post will be established. It is reported that the white trappers in the country are making it almost impossible for the Indians to obtain a livelihood. It was from North of Finlay Forks, in the Peace River Country, where two Indians were taken out last summer by Mounted Police, on a charge of murder. One of their family, an eighteen-year-old boys, was thought to be bewitched and was bound and left out on the ice for six days without protection. Finally a woman of the tribe released the boy, but he died later as a result of the exposure. Two members of the family are at present awaiting trial.

MEMORIAL TO NURSES.

Temporary Plaster Cast to be Placed in Parliament Buildings.

OTTAWA, Dec. 27.— (Canadian Press—A temporary plaster cast of the proposed memorial to Canadian nurses who died during the war is being erected in one of the niche's of the centre block of the parliament buildings. The memorial is the work of G. W. Hill of Montreal, portrays a group of ten figures of about two thirds life size in relief. The temporary model will be inscribed by a committee of nurses and a committee of the cabinet before any final decision is made.

LABOR LEADER LOSES HIGH SALARIED POSTS

Frank Hodges Says He Will Return to Work in Mines.

LONDON, Dec. 27.—A drop from $100 to $25 a week in income seems to be the fate of Frank Hodges, one of the ablest of the Labor leaders.

As Civil Lord of the Admiralty under Premier MacDonald, Hodges' salary was $5,000 a year. Prior to taking office he was secretary of the Miners' Federation and leader of a million men.

He was too moderate, however, for the extremists, who ousted him from the job.

He has refused offers of other labor offices and announces his intention to return to the pits and continue his work for the betterment of miners' conditions, until he regains his former leadership.

ALLIES REMAIN ON THE RHINE

Alleged Discovery of Hoards of Arms Brings Decision.

VIOLATE TREATY.

(By A. L. Kradford—United Press Staff Correspondent).

PARIS, Dec. 27.—The conference of Ambassadors in sessions here today agreed not to evacuate Cologne. The conference will send a collective note to Germany on the question.

The Ambassadors met at noon, with M. Cambon of France presiding. Marshal Foch and a number of military experts were summoned. At the same time German Ambassador Von Hoesch was received by Marshal Foch in his bed chamber, where he is confined by illness.

The Allied activity followed rapidly on the receipt of news of the discovery of huge illegal arms stores in Germany, which France claims is a direct violation of the disarmament provisions of the Treaty of Versailles.

GERMANY'S DENIAL.

BERLIN, Dec. 27—(United Press) — Reports that huge amounts of illegal arms have been found stored in Germany are viewed as "diabolically ridiculous" by the German Government.

That phrase appeared in "Die Zeit," the organ of Foreign Minister Stresmann, which declared the Allied claims of such discoveries were without foundation.

As to the decision not to evacuate Cologne, the newspaper added ominously, "From this new wrong to Germany serious consequences can come."

Disappointment was expressed because of America's failure to intervene in the Cologne question, although it is hoped that President Coolidge's wish for amicability may influence England and France.

CHURCH TREASURES TO BE DISPOSED OF.

The report is that the church treasures of Russia are to be seized for the purpose of raising money to relieve the starving natives. The most famous of these is the bejeweled ikon Our Lady of Kazan, in the Kazan Cathedral, Petrograd. It is a representation of the Virgin in beaten gold weighing ten pounds and decorated with 1655 large diamonds and 1432 smaller ones, 638 rubies, 1400 pearls, seven sapphires and 155 other jewels, besides a diamond necklace of great value draped around the image. The diamonds are all first water stones.

PORTABLE SUPER-HET.

Sets of all kinds have been tried out for portability, but this is the first time that the superheterodyne has been made compact enough to be carried in a suitcase. Brent Daniel, who was formerly in the radio labratory of the U.S. Bureau of Standards, did it. He is shown here with his portable seven-tube superhet, which can be carried in suitcase form with dry batteries, loud speaker, and loop. He has heard Pacific coast stations from Washington with this outfit.

CABINET FLEES WITH MONEY AS REBELS ARRIVE

Government of Albania Again Under Control of the Former Premier.

NO BLOODSHED.

Albanian City Welcomed Ahmed Zogu After Few Months' Absence.

ROME, Dec. 27. — (Canadian Press).—The members of the Albanian Cabinet, headed by Premier Fan Noli, fled the night before the capital was occupied by the rebellious forces of Ahmed Zogu, former Premier, according to the special correspondent of the Giornale D'Italia, at Tirana. The Fan Noli Cabinet embarked at Durazzo for Avlona.

The correspondent learns that Ahmed Zogu's government will install itself at Scutari.

Describing the entry in Tirana of the Zogu forces, the correspondent says:

"The first detachment, strong, sturdy mountaineers from the Dibra region, arrived at ten o'clock in the morning, commanded by a lieutenant. Their ragged uniforms showed the hardships they had experienced. The population of Tirana sent special delegates imploring the commander of the rebellious troops to enter the city without causing bloodshed.

Welcomed By City.

"As the contingent of troops arrived, the city, which only a few months ago, was beflagged for the arrival of Fan Noli, was decorated for the entry of the Zogu troops. Communication between Tirana and Durazzo had been interrupted, both by the disbanded government troops and by the rebels pursuing them.

"From my hotel I witnessed the departure of Fan Noli in an automobile loaded with valises. Simultaneously at the Ministry of Finance the State funds were being loaded in an automobile.

"Durazzo remained for two days without a government, because the prefect representing the Cabinet of Fan Noli fled, carrying with him 150,000 lire in gold, from the Post Office.

Confidence Returned.

"When Tirana awoke to the fact that it was without a government there was panic at first, but shortly the fusilade, which could be heard together with the crackling of machine-guns on the hills nearby, suddenly ceased. After a time the populace which had barricaded their houses, gradually regained confidence; windows and doors were opened and flags were displayed. They were further reassured when the rebel contingent entered without molesting the inhabitants.

"Ahmed Zogu made a triumphant entry, saluted by the booming of cannon and enthusiastic hurrahs. He wore a lieutenant-colonel's uniform. He proceeded on horseback, bowing and smiling to right and left in acknowledgment of the shouts of greeting.

"There are many in Tirana who believe that the position of Premier Fan Noli is untenable, even at Avlona, as Mufid Bey, one of Zogu's chief lieutenants, has already occupied Argyrokastron, making the situation at Avlona most precarious."

SURPLUS U. S. POTATOES EXCLUDED BY BRITAIN

British Fear Introduction of the Colorado Beetle.

CARIBOU, Maine, Dec. 27.—Shippers in this section, Maine's great potato growing region, declared Friday that the Colorado beetle, to prevent the introduction of which Great Britain yesterday banned the importation of potatoes grown in the United States, is not considered a serious crop menace here. Shippers here further asserted that Great Britain was open to the same danger from the importation of potatoes from Canada where the Colorado beetle, otherwise known as the common potato bug also exists.

Growers in this region who have been faced with heavy loss owing to inability to market large stocks of potatoes, assert that Canadian crops were also larger this year than usual. Efforts had been made by Aroostook County potato growers and shippers to find an outlet for their surplus in the British Isles.

TRADE SLUMPED UNDER WEATHER

Extreme Cold Reduces Volume of Business in West —Collections Slow.

BETTER IN EAST.

WINNIPEG, Man., Dec. 27. — The weekly trade report of the Canadian credit men's trust association, limited, states:

Halifax—Wholesale trade reports business satisfactory. Retail trade reports business being good due to season demand for seasonable lines.

St. John—Wholesale trade conditions only fair. Retail trade fairly good due to demand for seasonable lines and Christmas shopping activity. Collections fair.

Montreal—Boots and shoes—sales for the past week have increased considerably, due to the severe cold snap, also holiday season. Collections are reported fair. Groceries—there is decided improvement over sales of last week, no doubt, owing to the Christmas season—collections at this time fair. Hardware—very little increase over sales of last week collections poor. Dry goods—conditions in this commodity is reported very fair for the last week due to the holiday season, and collections at this time fair.

Toronto—Wholesale trade— The past week has been fairly active, it has helped to hold up the figures for the year which have been low. Retail trade—Doing a satisfactory Christmas business, prices are stationary—Departmental stores report a good volume.

Winnipeg—Wholesale trade reports business for the past week as being fairly satisfactory. The weather has been most unfavorable and has had considerable effect on trade in general. However, retail trade reports considerable improvement due to Christmas season collections just fair.

Regina—Wholesale trade fair to brisk for this season of the year, retail trade fair only—not up to expectations. Collections quiet.

Saskatoon—Wholesale trade business showing improvement. Retail trade extremely quiet for this season. Weather very cold—has had effect on Christmas trade. Collections fair.

Calgary—Both wholesale and retail report that business has been more or less disappointing due to the extremely cold weather. Just a fair volume of business being done. Collections are practically at a standstill as a result of the tie up caused by the recent storm.

Vancouver — Wholesale trade — Hardware slight falling off of sales but considered good. Groceries normal, boots and shoes slight activity owing to Christmas trade. Dry goods trade considers business very satisfactory. Collections fair. Retail trade quite an improvement in this business, but this is due to Christmas.

CARRY SERVICE CARD

Not all motorists who carry insurance in the largest companies know that by carrying the insurer's service card with them and presenting it to the nearest local agent or representative in event of accident, fire or theft of car, much of the detail is lifted off their shoulders. The insurer has his interests at stake, relatively small as they may be, and for that reason his representatives are instructed to render every possible and reasonable service to the insured. Think of your insurance service card when you have had some trouble, but don't make the mistake of thinking of it before. Always drive your car as though you didn't carry a cent of insurance.

CHEMIST UNDER SUSPICION FOR TYPHOID DEATH

Had Investigated Bacteria Cultures and Typhoid Germs at Laboratories.

TO BE QUESTIONED.

Received Two Millions in Will of Rich Orphan—Body Exhumed.

CHICAGO, Dec. 27. — (Canadian Press).—An autopsy over the body of William Nelson McClintock, "millionaire orphan," who died three weeks ago at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William D. Shepherd, his foster parents, while Miss Isabelle Pope, his fiancee, waited to marry him, has disclosed the presence of typhoid germs, but has not determined the cause of death, Coroner Oscar Wolff announced Friday.

The death certificate showed young McClintock, who left his fortune, under the terms of a will, to Mr. Shepherd, except for an $8,000 annuity for Miss Pope, had died of typhoid fever. It will take two or three more days to complete the chemical analysis and determine exactly what caused death, the coroner was informed by his chemists.

An indication of the thoroughness of the investigation came last night when George E. Gorman, assistant State's attorney, made public a statement made by F. T. Breidegan, of Battle Creek, Mich., formerly in charge of clinical routine of the Illinois research laboratories here.

In 1919, Breidegan said, Dr. Olson, now dead, and a brother of Judge Harry Olson, Chief Justice of the Municipal Court, and a friend of the McClintock family, who asked that the investigation be launched, brought two men to the laboratory.

Visited Laboratories.

They were introduced to him, he said, as "William McClintock and Mr. Shepherd." The man known as Shepherd, Breidegan said, came to the laboratories several times with Dr. Olson, and later made three or four trips alone.

During visits to the laboratory, Breidegan said the man known to him as Shepherd watched his work and expressed particular interest in bacteria cultures, also discussing typhoid germs with Breidegan, explaining that he was a chemist and druggist and was interested in clinical routine.

On three occasions, he said, a woman introduced to him as "Mrs. Shepherd," accompanied the man, but she did not enter the laboratory. The last time he saw the couple, the statement said, was at the funeral of Mr. Olson, but he added that he did not talk with them then and did not know where they lived.

William D. Shepherd is now on his way back to Chicago from [illegible] buquerque, N.M., where he and [illegible] Shepherd went to rest after yo[illegible] McClintock's death. He is expected to arrive here to-day, and Robert E. Crowe, State's attorney, has indicated that Mr. Shepherd, who was a druggist and chemist, will be questioned at once about young McClintock's death.

Circumstances Queer.

The circumstances surrounding the death of McClintock which caused Chief Justice Olson to urge the inquiry now under way were outlined by the Judge in a statement. The disinterment, he said, was "a mere formality" to make "more solid certain evidence" now in his possession.

His statement, in part, said:

"I also have found from my investigation that the Kenilworth residence of the Shepherds is not theirs, as has been heretofore said. The property and everything in it belonged to McClintock.

Disagreed With Shepherds.

"His life with the Shepherds was not full of harmony, either. Partial proof of this is the fact that a greater part of last summer McClintock could not agree with the Shepherds and he had been staying at the home of his fiancee, Miss Pope.

"While Mrs. Shepherd had a bedchamber equipped with the best of luxuries, McClintock was forced to occupy a small room at the end of a dark and narrow hallway and adjacent to the kitchen.

Another proof that McClintock was the owner of the Shepherd residence is that not long ago he had offered the property for sale through the Northern Trust Company.

"There is something strange, too, in the death of McClintock's mother. She was buried at night, and the reason given for this was because a certain minister, the Rev. Balcomb Shaw, then of the Second Presbyterian Church in Chicago, had to leave for some other town, which likewise appears rather queer."

COLD WAVE FROM WEST ARRIVES IN NEW YORK

One Man Found Frozen—Another Suffering From Exposure.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27—The cold wave which inflicted the most frigid Christmas in many years upon the middle and far west reached New York yesterday. The rise in temperature to 23 degrees in the afternoon, following a drop to 11 above zero at 7.30 yesterday morning, the lowest point to which the mercury had sunk on December 26 since 1872 will be only temporary, the weather bureau predicted that this morning's cold breezes would probably be duplicated today.

The body of an unidentified man who evidently had been frozen to death was found in Scotch Plains, N.J., yesterday.

James Martin, 24, of this city who said he had no home, was discovered suffering from exposure near the North River and was sent to a hospital by the police.

ENGLAND MERRY ON BOXING DAY

Second Holiday Featured by Outdoor Sports and Theatre Parties.

ADHERE TO CUSTOM.

LONDON, Dec. 27.—(Canadian Press Cable).—Boxing Day, in contrast ith Christmas Day, which is essentially a home and indoor festision, was devoted mostly to outdoor sport. Numerous race meetings, soccer and Rugby football matches featured the day and the sports were favored with fine weather.

the theatres, music halls, cinemas and other places of entertainment were crowded yesterday aftrnoon and evening. The chief features of the shows yesterday were pantomines, children's plays and circuses.

Boxing Day is the frst week-day after Christmas. It a legal holiday, on which present (Christmas boxes) are given to errand boys, letter carriers and others who usually are remembered by households on this day with tokens of the season's good will.

ZINOVIEFF DELAYS FIGHT ON RELIGION

Admitting It Was a Mistake, He Says Communists Can't [illegible] Such a Luxury

4 p.m., Evening Prayer and H[illegible] Communion.

The Rector will preach at both s[illegible] vices.

[illegible] national, made a significant pronouncement concerning the Communistic campaign against religion. He admitted that the Communists had gone too far in their propaganda against existing religious rituals, and their efforts to establish atheism.

"In a peasant country like ours," he said, "where the majority of the population is illiterate, and where the peasantry pays so high for articles of necessity, we cannot allow ourselves such a luxury as a vigorous and inflexible religious campaign. We shall pursue our attacks on Almighty God in due time and in an appropriate manner.

"We are confident we shall subdue Him in His empyrean. We shall fight Him wherever He hides himself, but we must go about such a question as anti-religious propaganda more carefully in the future.

"I have been informed by old workmen that not only the young Communists, but boy scouts are mocking people who are religious. I have also been told that groups of boy scouts have even imprisoned whole congregations in church while they were worshipping. This is a mistake. Our campaign against God and religions must be carried out only in a pedagogic way, not by violence or force."

SEA GIVES UP ALCOHOL.

Five-Gallon Cans Come Bobbing Ashore on Cape Cod Coast.

PROVINCETOWN, Mass., Dec. 27.—From Wood End light to Pamet, a stretch of more than fifteen miles of shore line at near the tip of Cape Cod, five-gallon cans of alcohol in wooden cases came bobbing ashore or floated outside the surf. Coastguardsmen destroyed many of them, the Race Point station accounting for more than forty cases.

The absence of wreckage indicated, the coastguard officials said, that the alcohol was thrown overboard when a rum-runner was pursued by revenue agents.

GIRL FLUNG TO PILOT OF TRAIN, CARRIED 12 MILES AND FELL OFF

Automobile Demolished at Crossing—One Dead, Two Others Injured.

NUMBED BY COLD.

Unconscious She Rolled Off Into Ditch—Tells Story in Hospital.

INDIANAPOLOIS, Ind., Dec. 27. —"I've thanked God a thousand times that I'm alive," sobbed Mrs. Mary Clark, 19, as she lay on a hospital cot here on Friday and described a Christmas night ride of twelve miles on the locomotive pilot of the Knickerbocker Special, a fast New York Central train running from Indianapolis to New York. Mrs. Clark was caught on the pilot when the train demolished an automobile at a crossing here, killing one member of her family and injuring two others.

"It was the most terrifying experience I ever expect to have," said Mrs. Clark as she told of clinging to the locomotive until she finally became unconscious and was swept off into a ditch where she was found by a farmer.

"It was just a natural thing to do," she said. "When the engine hit our car and it was thrown into the air my hands went out above my head and caught something in the dark — God knows what.

"But I held on for dear life and realized soon that I was clinging to the front end of the engine and riding fast.

"So I stuck, but the cold air seemed to bite right into my bones and pretty soon I didnt seem to remember much and I guess I fainted."

Mrs. Clark smiled again. The next thing she remembered was when she was lying on a bed in a farm home with a group of people trying to restore her to consciousness.

"It seemed like I was waking up out of a dream," she said.

The Knickerbocker special on the Big Four Railway, travelling eastward at sixty miles an hour, struck an automobile in which Mrs. Clark was riding at a crossing in Indianapolis. The impact was not noticeable to the crew because of the speed at which it was travelling.

A station agent notified the police he saw a woman riding the pilot of the Knickerbocker special locomotive, screaming and waving a handkerchief.

A special switch engine trailed the fast train to Fort Harrison and returned to Indianapolis. Farther on, near Oaklandon, 12 miles from the scene of the accident, a farmer picked up the girl's unconscious form and notified authorities.

WEST IS PLEASED.

Glad to Get "Pet Crow" Back Says Motherwell.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 27—"If I might presume to speak for the Prairie Provinces generally, we are all very pleased to welcome our Pet Crow back again, even though it is suffering from a broken pinion."

This was the only comment, Hon. W. R. Mothrewell, Federal Minister of Agriculture, would volunteer yesterday, in connection with the temporary restoration of the Crow's Ness Pass agreement by the Dominion Cabinet.

Mr. Motherwell, who took part in the Privy Council deliberations, intimated that the permanency of the ruling would depend entirely upon the subsequent action of the courts and possibly of Parliament. He is on his way to his home constituency where he proposes to spend the New Year.

MARKET RESTS AFTER A RUSH

Christmas Business Over and Farmers Stay at Home.

EGGS 65 A DOZEN.

There was a very small farmer's market this morning. A few loads of wood, some meat carcasses and a couple of barrels of apples.

Bellflowers selling at 60 cents a peck, russets at 50 cents, constituted the open market offerings.

In the basket section, fowl was very plentiful. Turkeys were 35 cents a pound, larger birds going for 28 and 30 cents, geese were 25 cents and ducks the same price. Chickens were priced generally at 25 cents a pound, one woman asking 30 cents for her supply. Eggs were 65 cents a dozen and butter 38 cents a pound.

In anticipation of the coming holiday, market habitues were wishing each other a "Happy New Year" this morning.

BRIDES NOT NERVOUS.

Minister Says Some of Them Sign Their Name So Vigorously They Spoil His Pen.

LONDON, Dec. 27.— (Canadian Press). — There may be blushing brides but they have no trembling hands when in church of vestry, says Rev. Joseph Wallet, pastor of a prominent church in Southport.

"You know what some authors write about the trembling bride," he says. "It is all bunkum. The girls write in a bold firm, free hand. It is the man who has the wind up. The bride gets hold of the pen in one hand gathers up her draperies in the other and after signing the register throws down the pen as much as to say "thats that." The poor man always makes a mess of it. Some of the girls are so vigorous that they cross the nib of my fountain pen."

ALLIES PRESENT A UNITED FRONT

Notes Announce That Cologne Will Not Be Evacuated.

PARIS, Dec. 27—(Canadian Press) —The allied council of ambassadors met this morning to determine the nature of the note to be sent to Germany informing her that the Colonge area will not be evacuated on January 10. There is full agreement on this point. The only question at issue being the reason to be given for the continuance of occupation beyond the stipulated date. The French wish to tell Germany that the postponement is due to the discovery of arms in Germany but the British merely desire to inform Germany that the evacuation will not take place.

The council agreed on the terms of the letter to Germany announcing that the Colonge area would not be evacuated. The text of the letter will not be given out till it reaches Berlin. The note will be presented by the five Allied ambassadors in Berlin simultaneously, thus presenting a solid front to Germany.

'DRY' AMERICA EMPTIES SCOTCH DISTILLERIES

Famine in Matured Stock is Threatened in Scotland.

EDINBURGH, December 27. — Scotland is threatened with a whiskey famine because of the enormous demands from America.

The stores of the Scotch distilleries are almost entirely depleted by the constant calls for liquor from the West Indies, Bahamas and Mexico, whence the stuff is smuggled into the United States.

Established firms are obtaining the heaviest premiums for whiskey destined for American consumption and as a result the matured stock is nearly all gone.

Smaller distilleries are springing up making whiskey, which is shipped to America after ageing two or three weeks.

The law requires that whiskey must age three years at least before it is sold in England.

A GOOSE FAIR IN EARLY AGES

Famous Fairs Date Back a Thousand and Some Years.

By E. H. R.-BENNETT.

"I wish you every success, and I have very great pleasure in declaring this Fair open."

With these words the Mayor, resplendent in his robes of office, steps down from the dais which has been specially erected for his use in the great market square. There is a tremendous burst of cheering, the densely-packed crowd moves and breaks like a mob of school children let loose, bands and steam organs and all sorts of mechanical instruments blare out in sudden, deafening, joyous clamous.

The Goose Fair has begun.

This famous Fair dates back probably a thousand years. It is first mentioned specifically in the charter granted to Nottingham in 1284 by Edward I., when he confirmed the ancient right to hold the Fair for eight days, commencing on the Feast of St. Matthew, 21st September. On the alteration of the calendar, in 1752, the date of the Fair was changed to 2nd October. Its duration of eight days was at one time extended to nine days, but was reduced in 1876 to five, and in 1880 to its present length of three days.

Goose Fair claims to be the largest affair of its kind in the British Isles. From time immemorial it has been held in the Great Market Place (the largest in England), right in the centre of the city. To this scene of gay festivity flock townsfolk and villagers alike, rich and poor mingling freely together on Nottingham's great autumnal holiday. It is a real fair this.

"Care to try the jolly old Houp-La, what?" asks the "knut" of his best girl, trying to appear tolerantly amused and succeeding only in looking the delighted boy he feels. "Yes, let's!" cries the girl eagerly. She had already forgotten to be dignified.

Near by, a seven-year-old turns fascinated eyes towards the brightly-painted entrance to "Barnum and Bailey's." "I want to hear the lions roar," he whimpers, as he is dragged firmly away by a relative with a rooted objection to wild beasts. "If you're not a good lad we'll be hearing you roar directly," promises his aunt darkly, but she immediately follows up the threat by the offer of a ride on one of the green dragons. There must be no tears shed to-day!

And so it goes on; a three days' round of pleasure, excitement, mirth, of money-spending and money-getting. Making a round of the stalls we see toys and purses and trinkets by the score; here the boards are piled with golden brandy-snap; there the crisp-coated pork pies, for which the pleasant little town of Melton Mowbray is noted, are laid in tempting rows.

Side shows are very popular. Are you curious to see the smallest lady in the world, or the fattest man?

Here you are, then! Threepence only, and the diminutive female will give you a bored smile, and the immense gentleman will roll up his sleeves and expose wonderful muscles to your admiring gaze.

"No, you don't!" exclaims a mother of several lively youngsters, grabbing her spouse by the coat tails, just as he is sneaking into a booth where a negro boxer claims to hold his own against all-comers. "You're not going after any nasty fights. You promised to help look after the children, and you'll stop here and do it." The man turns sheepishly as three small boys pounce upon him, demanding joy rides. But he doesn't mind. Bless you, nobody minds anything on Goose Fair day!

WASTE OIL KILLS BARNYARD PESTS

Many farmers have learned to make good use of the oil drained from the crankcases of their automobiles and tractors as an insecticide for use against mites in the poultry house and to rid hogs of lice. The fact that such oil is black and filled with dirt does not in the least detract from its effectiveness for these purposes.

Oil cannot be used on the chickens themselves, but may be sprayed about on the roosts and in all parts of the house where mites hide during the day. For the lice on the birds, poultrymen have had great success with sodium fluoride, a white powder which, when distributed over the bird, will soon get rid of all the parasites.

"CORRIGAN" by EDMUND SNELL

But the dog Panus—the hound of nameless race—seemed to have found a second wind. In the depths of the virgin jungle, now that the open lands had been left behind, the Englishman could discover no trace of the native raiders who had spirited his assistant from his bungalow; but the yellow dog clung to their scent with dogged persistence. Times without number, in the long stretches of almost impassible undergrowth, serious doubts rose in Corrigan's mind as to the accuracy of the route by which the dog was leading him—only to find irrefutable proofs in the soft earth of a clearing, of a recognized forest track; in the marshy ground by the bed of a stream.

He paused for breath, resting one hand on a forest giant, and saw by the dial of his wrist watch that dawn was only a matter of minutes away—fifteen at the most. Panus raced back along the path he had been following, seized his trousers in his teeth and tugged at him till the material tore. The planter looked down at the animal from his great height and smiled faintly.

"I'm nearly done, old son," he muttered, gulping in great draughts of air.

The dog raised itself on its hind legs, pawed for a second in the air, then wheeled once more on to the track. Corrigan braced himself for a final effort—and staggered after it.

A hundred yards—and he halted, listening. He thought he had caught a sound borne on the breeze—the sound of guttural voices rising above the incessant murmur of jungle noises. As the dog came bounding back, he hooked a finger through the ring of its collar and advanced with caution in the direction from which the sound had come. The creature strained like a greyhound at the leash—and Corrigan shifted his grip on to the broad band of the collar itself.

He listened again. Somewhere very close at hand, men were talking in the discordant Dusun dialect he partly understood. Like an inspiration it flashed upon him that the extra sense in which he placed his faith had not failed him; he realized, too, that the night was slipping away and the hour of dawn was almost come.

Clinging to two trees that rose with amazing straightness like pillars fashioned in stone, he gazed before him into an open space, a natural temple encircled by trunks from which the lower branches had been cut away. A score of half-nude, brown-skinned natives lay prone before a stone altar, long and narrow, shaped like an Egyptian sarcophagus. At either end rose a jagged monolith in which a worn metal ring was imbedded. The ring at the right hand end of the altar held only a dozen links of rusted chain; but to the opposite stone was tethered an enormous blue monkey, a replica of the creature for whom his assistant had caused a house to be made.

A white man, bare to the waist, lay outstretched in the light of a torch, of which the rezinous fumes rose to the heavens. His hands were secured beneath him. Corrigan could see the leathern thongs that gripped his feet. The planter's heart stood still. His free hand closed over the handle of his automatic. A native, in a conical hat of plaited rotan, held a knife, the point of which rested on Millett's flesh just over the heart; he appeared to be gazing toward the east, and presently Corrigan saw that a dark figure swung in the topmost branches—waiting for the first bright streak to give the signal to the man below. . . .

Corrigan's strength was returning to him in great waves. A mist rolled from his brain. He levelled his weapon carefully.

The atmosphere was fraught with a sense of hideous expectancy. The blue monkey strained at the chain which held him from tearing at the intended sacrifice. . . .

Suddenly, as the figure in the tree-tops stiffened, as the forms of the worshippers rose to their knees, throwing their arms toward the heavens—the dog Panus broke from Corrigan's grip and shot like an arrow across the clearing. Corrigan stood aghast, his heart thumping against his ribs, while the yellow dog flew straight for the sacred monkey.

A guttural cry rang out above the inarticulate gibbering of the frenzied worshippers. It was the warning from the lookout in the tree-tops that the hour of sacrifice had come.

And, at that moment, Panus—the hound of a nameless fusion of races—closed its teeth over the throat of the sole remaining symbol of one of the vast orient's myriad religions. The knife descended—not into the heart of the prostrate Millett—but into the back of the yellow dog! And Corrigan—that giant among men—slipped his automatic back into the side pocket of his coat, crossed the natural temple in a dozen strides, and turned to face a mob of murderous, dark-skinned assassins, armed to the teeth. He stood on the far side of the stone altar—and Millett stared up at him in mute astonishment.

The man with the knife swaggered up to him—and retreated before the look in those steely eyes.

With deliberate movements, the planter opened a pocketknife and set his assistant free; then he mustered up all the vocabulary he could remember of the Dusun dialect.

"The hour for sacrifice has passed," he cried in a ringing voice, the tone of which carried weight. "The gods have been good. The innocent"—he pointed to Millett—"have been saved from unjust punishment. The guilty"—he indicated the dog—"have been punished! The hour is passed; the sacrifice is accomplished; the gods are satisfied. . . ."

He paused, his keen eye alert for the first sign of hostile movement; but none came.

"I come from the great white king who lives beyond the dark waters. Listen to the message I bring from him: I am angry that these people have slain the servant of one of my sons; but, because they have acted in error, not knowing what they did I will forgive them—and before another moon has passed, I will send them more blue monkeys. . . ."

There was a murmuring among the swarthy ruffians, and Corrigan, whose ear was attuned to native murmurings seized upon this moment for a strategic retreat.

"It is well," he continued, turning to where Millett sat chafing his ankles with both hands. "I go to join my soldiers who are awaiting my signal. Presently I shall return for your answer."

He thrust one arm through that of his assistant—and strode majestically through the gaping throng into the virgin forest.

For reasons best known to himself, Corrigan did not return for a reply. He ran, by an accident that was nothing less than providential, into a posse of Pennington's men who had been sent post haste to preserve law and order in that district, where rumors were afloat of smouldering rebellion. An orderly accompanied him to the D.O. himself, who was suffering acutely from jungle-sores and the too friendly attentions of thirsty mosquitoes.

"Just off to settle that affair I told you about," said the D.O. between scratches.

"Ah!" commented Corrigan, cheerfully. "I'm sorry to poke my nose into these state affairs, but I'm afraid I've settled the whole business for you. It was quite a bloodless victory, I can assure you."

Pennington looked relieved. Corrigan had a reputation in those parts.

"Then there's nothing left fo me to do?"

The planter beamed and rested a heavy hand on the harassed official's back.

"Nothing whatever, old son," he said, "except to procure a couple of blue monkeys—and present them to the gentlemen concerned—with all due pomp and ceremony!"

Pennington gulped.

"Where the hell d'you suppose I'm going to find blue monkeys?" he bellowed.

"I'm afraid I must leave that to you," said Corrigan, seriously. "I've lost a damn good dog over this business already."

OBITUARY.

MRS. DAVID ROBERTSON.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 27.—Mrs. David Robertson, who has been ill for some months past, died at her home on Queen street at midnight, on Friday, December 26th. There will be a short private service at her late residence on Saturday night, after which the remains will be taken on the seven o'clock train to Montreal, where the deceased will be buried beside her husband, who predeceased her some years ago. The family moved here about fifteen years ago from Montreal. Survivors are two sons and one daughter, Dr. Armour Robertson and David S. Robertson, of Montreal, and Miss Mildred, at home.

W. J. FACEY

William Joseph Facey, an ardent worker in Little Trinity church, died Wednesday at this home, 171½ King street east, after a lingering illness. Although only 24 years of age he had been connected with all departments of the church, and had been in the choir since a boy. He was past president of the Trintiy East A. Y. P. A. Born in Peterboro, he had made his home here with his widowed mother and a sister since he was very young. He had been with the J. A. Simmers, Ltd., since he was 16. Taken ill last January he had spent some time in the Weston Sanitorium.

By using SAFE Milk in your Home. Every rose has its thorns. Milk also has its dangers. It is apt to become contaminated and convey the germs of disease. Infections transmitted through infected milk are numerous. The dangers are sufficiently real and frequent to make us careful.
Fortunately, we possess an easy, safe and reliable method of preventing these dangers—namely, Pasteurization. Filtration will take out the specks and clarifiers will make the Milk look cleaner, but these processes do not improve the Milk except in appearance. Pasteurization saves lives and prevents sickness.

MR. JOS. J. DUFFUS CELEBRATES HIS FIFTEENTH CHRISTMAS SEASON IN THE AUTOMOBILE BUSINESS.

Conversation with the Examiner representative revealed the fact that Jos. J. Duffus has completed his Fifteenth Year in the Automobile Business, now being conducted under the firm name of Duffus Motor Sales.

Few people are fully aware of the fact that this business, which started from a very humble beginning, now gives employment to between fifty and sixty employees, which is quite as large as a number of the industrial concerns in this city.

The business of this firm has rapidly increased from year to year, as is evidenced by the fact that the first year only nine machines were sold, and during the last year this increased to the significant number of three hundred and forty-nine.

It is generally admitted by those who are familiar with the automobile business, that the firm of Duffus Motor Sales, Peterboro, is one of the most complete and best organized of its kind to be found anywhere. So thoroughly equipped are all departments that anything and everything pertaining to the requirements of automobile owners can be thoroughly, expeditiously and satisfactorily taken care of.

SALES ORGANIZATION.

A well organized sales department and sales staff, under the supervision of Mr. J. J. Duffus, takes care of everything pertaining to the sale of Lincoln and Ford cars, trucks and tractors.

ACCESSORIES, TIRES AND PARTS.

Purchasing and disposing of accessories, tires and parts form a separate department, and so complete is the arrangement that the turnover of this department is one of the largest of its kind in the Province of Ontario. Beautiful show cases, a large and well-arranged assortment of goods in the hands of thoroughly trained stock men and clerks, plus first class service, has commanded the attention of automobile owners.

SERVICE AND REPAIR DEPARTMENT—UPPER FLOOR.

The Service Department on this floor has a Superintendent in charge, and a sufficient number of first-class service men, competent and courteous, who take care of all adjustments, storage, etc., and do everything possible to cheerfully comply with the wants of tourists and all others who desire quick and efficient service.

GASOLINE, OIL, GREASE, ANTI-FREEZE, ETC.

This forms a separate department and gives continuous night and day service, under the management of specially trained men, who thoroughly understand what is required to give the best service on all makes of cars.

Two 5-gal. street gasoline pumps and a battery of oil pumps with two men in charge night and day, the year round, making it possible to serve any number of customers without undue waiting, as the pumps are automatically operated by air, so as to consume the least possible amount of time.

WASHING STATION.

Two thoroughly equipped washing stations, one on the upper floor and one on the lower floor, provided with every facility for efficient, prompt and rapid service, comprise a separate department. Warm and cold water and an abundant supply of Linseed oil soap, are used at all times, and every effort is put forth to give satisfactory and fully guaranteed service.

PAINTING DEPARTMENT.

A thoroughly modern equipped paint shop capable of turning out six jobs per week, in charge of a master painter and several efficient men, have repainted during the past year many of the very best automobiles in the city and surrounding district, and so thoroughly satisfied are customers that this department has been enlarged from time to time.

Lettering, signs, etc., are also done in this department when customers so desire.

More recently the policy of simonizing cars has sprung into prominence and thoroughly simonized jobs are being turned out weekly.

BATTERY AND RADIATOR REPAIRS.

This department is one of the most thoroughly equipped of its kind to be found anywhere, and in charge of two men who are competent to take care of all battery, generator and electrical work.

Batteries re-charged, thoroughly overhauled or re-built, together with winter storage, comprise the undertaking of this department, and arrangements have been recently made whereby all this kind of work can be executed from either floors.

In addition, all kinds of radiator repairing and rebuilding is done in this department.

VULCANIZING.

Just recently, in fact the latest equipment to Duffus Motor Sales, is an absolutely first-class and up-to-date vulcanizing plant capable of doing everything in tire repair work and this promises to be one of the biggest departments in connection with the business.

REPAIR DEPARTMENT—LOWER FLOOR.

The repair department under the supervision of Mr. Bert Duffus, has expanded beyond all expectations, which is, no doubt, due to the fact that it is equipped with every conceivable piece of automatic machinery for taking care of an unlimited amount of thoroughly first class work in the shortest possible time.

An automatic air compressor, which works day and night, takes care of several air lines, one in the paint shop, one in the radiator repair department, one on the street, and one on each floor, which anybody is cordially invited to use any time during the day or night.

An overhead automatic lifting system, a burning-in and running-in stand engine stands, rear axle stands, lathes, drills, machinery for reboring and re-grinding cylinders, generator test stands, magneto test stands, a magneto re-charging outfit, a 20-ton press for taking care of bent and damaged parts, an automatic machine for "relining brake bands "while you wait," and very many other machines, tools, etc., too numerous to enumerate, constitute the equipment of this splendid service department, which is said to be as modern as any in the Province of Ontario.

Everything that thoroughly competent, honest workmanship and management can do is being done to satisfy the hundreds of customers, tourists and travellers who entrust their work to this firm.

Possibly one of the most important things in connection with a business of this kind, where there are so many valuable automobiles from time to time, is that the building constituting all these departments is thoroughly modern and as near fireproof as it is possible to construct. Fire doors with automatic checks provide entrances to the different departments, and men are continuously engaged in keeping all thoroughly clean.

BOOKKEEPING AND ACCOUNTING.

A special bookkeeping and accounting system capably managed by an expert accountant and staff, is responsible for the accuracy of customers, and purchasing accounts, as well as costs, and segregation of inter-department items, so that comprehensive information as to the standing of all accounts and departments is available at all times.

EXCELLENT ADVERTISEMENT.

This high-class, thoroughly equipped and well conducted Service Station has been the subject of many complimentary remarks from tourists and travellers from far and near, and is a splendid advertisement for the City of Peterborough.

INTEREST IN PUBLIC AFFAIRS.

That Mr. Duffus enjoys the confidence of the general public is evidenced by the progress and prosperity of this business, and it is safe to state that "Joe" Duffus is one of the best known men in the City and County of Peterborough and surrounding district.

Born and raised on the farm, he has a keen appreciation of the problems of the average farmer and his family, hence he has retained a deep and sustained interest and devotion to agriculture, and all those engaged in this important calling.

Characteristic of his ambition and public-spiritedness, from boyhood days, he has taken a deep interest in public affairs, and rose to the top of the ladder in almost all his undertakings, notably among which are Alderman of the City of Peterborough for six years, and Mayor for two years, retiring with what may be termed an enviable reputation as a city official.

He has held the position of President of the Ontario Retail Merchants' Association. At present he is Chairman of the Advisory Committee of the Automotive Dealers of the Dominion of Canada, and the member for the Province of Ontario on the Dominion Board. For three years he was President of the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce, and at the present time is a member of the Board of Directors. He is Vice-President of the Ontario Associated Board of Trade and Chambers of Commerce, and also Vice-President of the Ontario Plowmen's Association; a prize plowman of provincial-wide reputation; a capable judge of plowing competitions, and frankly admits that high-class agriculture claims his deepest interests.

JOSEPH WEARING ADDRESSES BOYS

Emphasizes the Importance of Character to All Saints' Young Men.

The regular monthly meeting of All Saints' Athletic Association was held last night in the parish hall. Fathers of the members were the guests of honour. The meeting was one of the great jollity which was so contagious that even so dignified a person as the principal speaker, Mr. Joseph Wearing, forgot himself to such an extent as to tell an ancient story.

It did not take long for the hungry men and boys to demolish the imposing mound of provisions which the members of the club had accumulated. The chairman, Mr. H. E. Ashmore President of the club expressed the pleasure of the members in entertaining their parents and friends He spoke of the untiring efforts of the Rector in obtaining speakers. He also reminded the parents that the chief reason for the existence of the club was to provide a place for the boys to gather for healthy recreation. He then called on the Rector to introduce the first speaker, Mr. George Ling, director of boys work at St. Alban's Cathedral, Toronto. In introducing the speaker, Mr. Paterson said that when he had first met Mr. Ling he had been impressed by his great interest in boys work and that when he saw him in church on Christmas day he had lost no time in getting in touch with Mr. Ling and pressing him into service as a speaker for the gatherng.

Life As An Investment.

Mr. Ling said that it was a fine thing to see such an interest taken in boys work as it had always been his experience that this was reflected by greater efficiency in all other work of th parish. When he had been in the United States he had been approached by church workers for p inters on boys work which he had found of value in ihs own experience. The subject of his address was "Life as an Investment." A young man starting out in life should weigh everything and proceed as carefully as if he were planning the investment of a great amount of money. He should endeavour to find out just what his work in life was as everyone was put in this world for a definite purpose which could be filled by nobody else.

The next part of the programme consisted of community singing, led by Mr. R. J. Devey. After considerable musical effort on the part of the club Mr. J. Wearing gave the principal address of the evening. Mr. Wearing's subject was the Building of Character Character, as built up in youth, is the force that makes men the successes or failures they become in later years. Every boy has some ambition in life which may not be very high but will govern his whole life. There are very few men who do not desire popularity and the respect of their fellows. These also are determined by character. There are seven cardinal points to strive for. Sacrifice is necessary. A glance through an old family album reveals many pictures of the pioneers who toiled and sacrificed to make the pleasant homes and farmland of this district. A rigid adadherance to the straight line of truth and rectitude is also necessary. One false step introduces a defeat into the structure which endangers its safety.

Virility Needed.

Driving force and virility are also needed. It is the man who has the extra ounce of power who outlasts theother fellow and reaps the reward while the fellow who has no life and is a wet blanket at all times can never achieve great things. Beauty not of countenance but of manner also should be acquired. Memory and respect for the customs and laws build up as the result of the experience of generations and obedience to parents and persons in authority are also very necessary points and lastly a trust in the Great Builder of Character.

Hearty votes of thanks were tendered the speakers and the ladies who served the banquet. The Sunday School Orchestra dispensed suitable music during the early part of the evening and received the hearty applause of the gathering.

Mr. Burrwood Collinson, a former officer of the club, now residing in Ottawa, was called for a few words in response to his welcome home. The meeting then ended with the Benediction and the National Anthem.

THE TRAFFIC OF LONDON TOWN.

Twenty years ago there were no motor omnibuses on the London streets and the horse omnibuses were but a fraction of their number. During the busiest hours to-day 640 omnibuses pass Charing Cross in the hour, 556 pass the bank, 542 pass Oxford Circus and 518 pass Piccadilly Circus. Omnibuses and underground trains carry 4,000,000 passengers a day. The population has increased less than 20 per cent. since the beginning of the century, but for every journey in bus, tram, train or cab made then, there are now made between thirty and forty to-day.

THE CYNICAL AFRICAN NATIVE.

The native of tropical Africa, it seems, gets a good deal of amusement out of the white man. He is quick in noticing his chief characteristics, to which he attaches a name which usually fits him admirably.

For example, that one man who takes a lot of time thinking out a thing is known as "Mr. Lot-of-Thought." Another whose gait is peculiar, is "Mr. Peacock." One who never lets the grass grow under his feet" as "Mr. Rush-about." Another who likes a joke is "Mr. Laughter."

DEATHS

Get together a crowd of 10,000 average Americans. In a year 123 of them will die. That's the mortality rate shown in latest checkup by the United States.

Montana has the lowest rate, only 87 in 10,000 dying in a year.

Rival cities and states, inspecting the figures, will make a lot of foolsh claims. In some places mortality is high because many invalids go there to die.

The time of death is, to considerable extent, determined in youth. To lesser degree, it is regulated by heredity—before we are born.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 27, 1924.

THANK YOU.

In reviewing the joys and blessings of the Christmas that has just passed, The Examiner is sure that the average citizen will not fail to remember the services of the postal employees, whose work each year has come to be such a big factor in the celebration of Christmas.

The inside staff, from Postmaster Lacheur, who had to deal with such masses of incoming and outgoing mail, and the letter-carriers, who had to struggle in weather conditions far from clement, to see that Peterborough got its gifts and letters and Christmas cards, worked many hours at a stretch—and they did their work efficiently and well.

Sure its their job, and they were paid for it—but we owe them a hearty vote of thanks for putting it through.

Yuletide means a period of heavy work at high pressure for the postal employees, and the way in which the local staff buckled down to their big task and saw to it that our parcels arrived on time and that nobody was disappointed, entitles them to a word of commendation.

So The Examiner is confident that it is but living up to its responsibility as a community voice when it says to every member of the staff, from the postmaster down to the temporary carrier, "Thank you, and a Happy New Year."

THE OKLAHOMA TRAGEDY.

The Christmas Eve holocaust which wiped out 38 lives during an entertainment in an Oklahoma village school was horrible in the loss of life it entailed, and alarming in view of the fact that it should bring us face to face with the situation that in our own district—our own city, for that matter—a similar catastrophe is not impossible.

The conditions that caused the death of over thirty people in Hobart, Oklahoma, are to be found in many buildings not many miles away from Peterborough.

We crowd people into places that are fire traps, where exits are such as even an alarm of fire and the resultant panic would cause to be responsible for loss of life—perhaps on a worse scale than in this terrible Christmas Eve accident.

In how many small buildings in Peterborough County during the festivities of Christmas week were the chances of escape any better than they were for the Hobart victims were the Christmas tree decorations to have caught fire as they did in the Oklahoma tragedy?

Only a tiny candle was necessary to take so many lives.

A room packed full of people, only one exit, the windows covered with wire, a candle falls into a ball of cotton on the tree—and thirty-eight people are burned or crushed to death.

The tragedy should cause a lot of earnest thinking as to the safety of places at home here where crowds congregate.

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION.

To the Board of Education have been added three new members in the persons of Messrs. J. F. Strickland, E. F. Reid, and W. F. Turner, who with Mr. J. A. McKone, former member of the Board, have been returned by acclamation.

The dropping out of Messrs. Roland Denne, J. M. Greene, and A. A. Fowler and the failure of other candidates to qualify, made an election unnecessary.

The three new members represent the new trend in public affairs, the advent of younger men into into positions of civic responsibility. Messrs. Strickland, Reid, and Turner should bring the vision and optimism of youth to the deliberations of the Board of Education, and in their own careers have given evidence of the possession of qualities that should enable them to be of valuable service to their fellow-citizens.

Good work and years of service was the contribution of the three members who have seen fit to retire from the Board, and it will be the duty of the recruits who now take their places to "carry on."

That Mr. McKone has been returned for another term is a matter for gratification in view of the good record he has established for himself as a faithful and capable member.

The Board of Education has heavy responsibilities and it is most satisfactory that it continues to attract to its service citizens who realise the imporance of the task that is entrusted to them.

EVERYBODY'S DUTY.

President Jack Marshall, at yesterday's meeting of the Peterborough Kiwanis Club, reminded the members that it was their duty as Kiwanians and citizens to interest themselves in the municipal elections, and to do their part in seeing that a large vote is polled.

The advice is excellent, not only for Kiwanians, but for citizens generally, and it should be followed.

The fact that there is to be no mayoralty contest is being given as a reason for lack of interest in the election.

That should not be a factor.

There are five members to be elected to the City Council, and Mayor Turner would be the first to say that upon the choice made by the electors a great deal hinges as to Council's action and activities during the next year—or rather two years, for the five aldermen chosen next Thursday will occupy seats in the Council until the end of 1926.

It is of the greatest importance, therefore, that a sincere and honest effort should be made by the ratepayers to elect the five representatives who promise to be of the best service to the community for the next two years, having regard to the fact that upon their opinions and views the policy of Peterborough for many months will to a great extent be based.

It would be a fatal mistake for the impression to become general that because a mayor is not to be elected this year that it makes little difference whether or not there is much interest taken in the municipal election.

RURAL CREDITS.

If further testimony was required to support the statement made so frequently in the Star that the granting of long term credits to farmers is not a normal function of our banks, it may be found in the address delivered yesterday by Premier John Bracken of Manitoba to the delegates of the Conference of Rural Credits Societies which gathered in Winnipeg, says the Montreal Star.

When the Canadian banks refused to be drawn into the dangerous shoals of rural credits several of the Provincial Governments, always willing to flirt with that elusive and deceptive fascinator, State Ownership, initiated their own scheme. Among these was Manitoba. The result was disastrous, as might be expected. A Government which had neither the experience nor the machinery to operate any plan of rural credits could hardly expect to make a success of an experiment for which experts of long training were essential and in which there could be no expectation of success without the absolute divorce of the working of the scheme from any suspicion of personal or political discrimination.

Within a few years the Manitoba Government found itself faced with a serious loss. The Government had lent hundreds of thousands and in many cases not even the interest had been paid. Now Premier Bracken announces that these men who borrowed from the taxpayers, acting in their corporate capacity as the Government, "are not to be unduly pressed if there was a possibility of the party overcoming his difficulties." What Micawber-like faith. There is always the possibility of the "Party" liquidating his indebtedness. "No solvent borrower is to be harassed with regard to payments so long as creditors are given consideration according to the farmers' earnings."

One can hardly imagine a bank operating on business lines for the benefit of its shareholders issuing such a statement which is practically an invitation to the borrowers to cease from worrying themselves about back payments. State Ownership advocates are prone to be very generous with other folks' money. It will undoubtedly satisfy the borrowers and may win another election for the Progressives, but is it business and is it fair on the taxpayers?

THE UNIT-EMPIRE.

That was important news Premier Stanley Baldwin gave the British House of Commons when he declared his interest in the proposed economic committee. This suggestion came from the Imperial Economic Conference a year ago, and if made effective will give Canada representation, together with the other Dominions. It jibes well with the Imperial preference scheme, for apparently Britain no longer will isolate herself in trade policy from the Empire.

With an Imperial economic committee functioning to make the Empire, in one sense, a fiscal economic unit, Mr. Baldwin entrenches himself as no other Premier of Britain has done. By this means he can shape a policy to increase consumption in Britain of Empire products and thus, as he says, "promote the interests both of producers and consumers."

There ar e big things in sight for this committee when it is formed, for Britain's preference scheme will have to be elastic. Premier Baldwin is bound by election promises and by the feeling of the country to make it so. But preference will be reinforced by a million pounds a year spent on promoting Empire trade in food products, and these will comprise meat and fruit principally. All resolutions of the Imperial Economic Conference which bring a reduction of duties will be brought before the House.

Premier Baldwin's program is so complicated with concessions and remissions that the Budget debate will probably stumble into many errors. Here are the high lights of it—they are a formidable list:

General protection against unfair competition to any industry that proves itself substantial and efficient.

Improved methods of marketing between the Empire and the United Kingdom. One million pounds a year for this object, starting with remission of duties on meat and fruit.

Al l conference resolutions which reduce duties.

Money equalling benefit from food taxes to be used in developing trade within the Empire. (Food tax "not practical politics.")

In the first, Premier Baldwin lets himself in for protection, because most industries will be able to establish a case against some part of the world on either depreciated currency, longer working hours or lower wages. The duty applied to remove this discrepancy in each case will apply to all countries (so as not to interfere with most-favored-nation clauses in other trade treaties). A committee will decide the case of the industries and it will have a stormy time.

Correspondents and Ottawa observers are still rather at sea on the preference proposals, but the majority admit that Australia and New Zealand will benefit more than Canada, as they interpret the plans, for dried fruits will be principally affected. However, sugar and tobacco also figure, and that is interesting for Western Ontario and Essex County.

Ottawa circles divide the preference offer of a year ago roughly into two sections: (1) Higher or stabilized preference on specified articles already dutiable by Britain and, (2) Imposition of duties against foreign countries but not the Dominions, on certain articles now entering Britain free. Ottawa believes Mr. Baldwin plans to put the first division into effect and drop the second. The first includes dried figs, raisins, plums and currants, sugar, tobacco and wines. Canada loses under this arrangement, because the second division included dried and green apples, dried pears and peaches, certain canned fish, honey and fruit juices—all Canadian products.—Border Cities Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

And now make your New Year's resolutions early, for as the cynic puts it, you'll keep them that much the longer.

The Mayoralty contest in Toronto seems to be a case of war to the Hiltz.

It is an unusual thing for the Board of Education to have three new members all at once. And by acclamation, too.

That Hamilton policeman who had his pocket picked should be given a desk job, or he'll be losing his shield.

Dr. Hastings' orders to avoid raw oysters is hardly necessary in view ofthe price of the succulent but costly bivalves.

A THOUGHT.

A CANADIAN QUOTATION.

O Canada, the sweep of empire rolls
athwart
Thy broad, abounding lands, prefiguring the part
Which thou must take unfalteringly
On east and west the conscious seas reverberate
Their far-resounding theme: "Thy future way lies straight;
Achieve they fated destiny!"

Turn not, O Canada, as nations in the past
To thrall of riches ,and the rule of Might; at last
Relentless Fate wrought out their fall.
Choose thou, O Canada, the spiritual plan;
Build thou a lasting Kingdom in the heart of man
And make thine Empire imperial.

Criminologist Declares Victims Make Crime Easy

OAKLAND, Cal., Dec. 27.—Crime is made easy by the excessive number of dupes in the country according to George C. Henderson, an authority on criminology.

"It is the victim," he explained, "the sap, due, gull and easy mark, whatever you want to call him, who supports the thousands of crooks in America and give the country credit for a two billion-dollar loss by crime.

"They leave their automobiles unprotected, for thieves to steal. They carry large sums for pickpockets to get. They are weak when they cash checks for strangers. They purchase real estate without looking up the title, invest in schemes without consulting their bankers, pay mediums to talk to the dead, play cards with sharks and bet on prearranged events

"It is hard for the police to guard them entirely; they must learn to protect themselves."

TORONTO LIVESTOCK.

TORONTO, Dec. 26.—Cattle receipts this week were under 1,500 head, and except for the export steers the quality was well below good, and only a few butchers were able to realize as high as $6.75 a cwt.

For any handyweight killing cattle there was a good demand, and buyers called prices 25c to 40c a cwt. higher than the week before. Most of the butchers did not grade above good mediums and mixed bunches of these sold at an average of $5.50 a cwt. Common butchers sold from $4 to $5. Export quality cows sold from $5 to $6 a cwt., and the few good cows at $4 to $4.50. The bull supply was small and prices were fully steady.

Most of the week's supply of stockers came from the West, and the demand was none too good. Those 800 to 900 lbs. each went around $5.25, and light heifers were about $3.75 a cwt.

An excellent market for calves in Buffalo took care of most of this week's supply here, and the price of choice calves was up $1.50 a cwt. Tops made 12 to 13½ cents and any good calves were 10 to 11 cents and mediums were 8 to 9 cents. Common calves averaged 7 cents and grassers were 2½ to 4 cents.

Only a very light supply of lambs came in and prices were unchanged. The top for light lambs was 13 cents and heavy lambs and bucks were 10½ and 11 cents a pound. Sheep were quite steady, with good butchers 7 to 7¼ cents.

Hogs have crawled up 75 cents a cwt. over last week and a few have sold as high as $10 a cwt., f.o.b. The small supply has caused sharp competition from the packers and prices are expected to hold firm until the receipts again become heavy.

The Love that never Dies

The Man We Forget

Many a man who cashes in a life insurance policy

—admits to himself that he could have saved twice as much, —wonders what he did with the money that would have paid for more, and —thinks he was wise in doing what he did, because he hasn't saved much besides.

It does not always occur to him to thank the life insurance man for having induced him to save money.

Yet, if it were not for the life insurance man, the Canadian people would have very little of the $3,500,000,000 of insurance now in force.

Is it not about time we recognized the good work the Life Insurance Man is doing for the community?

Minister of Law and Justice Collapsed After Signing the Death Warrant for the Execution of Rory O'Connor, Who Had Chosen to Follow De Valera Against the New Irish Government and His Sinn Fein Friends.

(By Milton Bronner.)

DUBLIN, Ireland, December 27.—I had come to Dublin to see the hero of one of the greatest stories ever told, and found a very busy young man trying to do a hard day's work, and anxious to avoid the spotlight.

You may not recall his name: Kevin O'Higgins, Minister of Law and Justice of the Irish Free State.

But surely you will remember the story, for it is one of the great dramatic situations of all time. Every civil war has produced it; families divide, brothers often fight brothers, and friends strike death to friends, though their hearts be breaking.

And so it was with Kevin O'Higgins and Rory O'Connor.

The winter snows are painting white the black sod that covers the grave of the valiant great-hearted Rory. And the good folk gather about the fires and recount the oft-repeated tale, first told by J. H. Thomas, Colonial Secretary in the late Labour Cabinet.

This was the story:

In all Ireland there were no better friends than Kevin O'Higgins and Rory O'Connor. In the long years of fighting between the Sinn Fein and England they were united. In each burned the same fires of struggle. When O'Higgins married it was O'Connor who was his best man. But when the treaty with England was signed there came a parting of the ways.

O'Higgins went with the new Free State and became its first Secretary. O'Connor could see no middle course and followed the De Valera group. Still they remained friends.

When the "irregulars" held the Four Courts in Dublin it was O'Connor who led them. The place was besieged by Free State troops and O'Connor was captured. As a rebel he was sentenced to death. And as Minister of Law and Justice the death warrant came before O'Higgins to sign.

There it lay upon his desk: the death warrant of his best friend.

Pressure was being brought from every side to save Rory.

But O'Higgins signed the paper!

It is related that the Minister did not leave his desk throughout the night.

At eight o'clock in the morning news was brought him that the execution had taken place at daybreak. Rory O'Connor, his best friend, had been killed.

Then O'Higgins collapsed!

And, if this be not sufficiently dramatic, there is a sequel: When the will of Rory O'Connor was found a few days later, it left all to his friend O'Higgins.

So I went to Dublin to find the hero of this story.

He is a young man in his middle thirties. He has coal black hair and Irish blue eyes. His face tells the story of determination, iron will and self-control. He has a mild and pleasing voice. In the Dail he has the reputation of being sardonic. But that is because he is truthful and frank. He says what he thinks regardless of the hurt.

KEVIN O'HIGGINS. RORY O'CONNOR.

He asks but one question on any problem: "Is it right?"

And yet he is humorous in a true Irish way, and has a great fund of stories and humour.

But when I asked him about the O'Connor story, he swiftly dodged the role of hero.

"You know as well as I that this dear land has always been a place where legends and fairy stories grow in abundance," he smiled. "Yes, it's a great story—it's a fine story. Only his death warrant came before the whole Cabinet and we acted jointly. If I had to vote for the death of my friend in this instance there were other Cabinet ministers who have had to do likewise. This tragic period, you must remember, divided even families."

The other Cabinet officers told me, however, that O'Higgins was far too modest. The sentence, they said, was the result of joint Cabinet action, but O'Higgins was centre of attraction and the vote of the others had depended on his to a great extent. If he voted "aye" then, they decided, there must be a very strong case.

So he dodges the hero role and turns the subject.

"Let's talk about serious things," he suggests — "Now there's the boundary question—"

But there are those who will tell as long as there are listeners the tale of how O'Higgins collapsed on the morning they brought the news of O'Connor's execution.

WISE WOMAN PLANS OUTFIT IN DETAIL

Milady is Known by the Accessories She Keeps, Bendel Says.

BY HORTENSE SAUNDERS.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—A woman is known by the accessories she keeps these days.

That was impressed on me by Henri Bendel, New York's famous fashion designer, as we studied his latest models and analyzed their chic.

No gown is complete in itself any more," he pointed out. "Unless one chooses careful companions in the way of shoes, hat, gloves and handbag, and unless the accessories are selected to each other, the necessary harmony is not achieved.

The whole interest of a costume, Bendel believes, may lie in the scarf that is worn with it or the handbag that is carried, each of which might appear to have been an afterthought, selected at random.

"But the wise woman learns there is nothing hit or miss in fashion," he insists. "Everything must be planned to the last detail, if only so that the wearer may look casual and unstudied.

"The dress that is so perfectly cut and well designed that it calls not attention to itself, but merely directs the attention to a high spot in the way of jewel or a flower is the triumph of sartorial art.

"Take the scarf, for instance," Bendel urged as he showed me a square of printed chiffon, then tied it in a fetching manner on the mannequin and completely transformed a costume.

"From the large and colorful Spanish shawl that is worn for evening to the tiny square that is knotted about the neck to protect the coat collar, this accessory is most important.

"The scarf gives to the evening gown the grace movement and feeling of changing line that relieves the severity of the modern frock while to the sport costume, the gargonne type of frock, it adds a touch of coquetrie and dash that is most appealing and feminizes the effect of rought wools and perseys."

Next in importance to scarfs are hand bags, Bendel thinks. "Bags allow greater latitude in selection than any other accessory. For general wear the envelope style is most popular. The beaded bag of very small beads, woven into a complicated tapestry-like pattern, are most elegant. So are those of petit-joint or antique embroidery.

Some have silver or gold frames set with pearls and are lined with delicate silks and fitted with gold or silver fittings.

"Many bags are formed of brilliants or pearls on a mounting of satin or leather. There are long pins that may be applied to bags to give a jewelled effect and monograms to give individuality.

Naturally, jewels are most important. He showed me ropes of pearls in all sizes and in shades of pink, blue and gray as well as the natural color, and strung with imitation emeralds or diamonds at regular intervals.

"Flowers are a most interesting way to complete o costume," he concluded. "The orchid, carnation, rose or camellia worn on the shoulder is almost as inevitable as the necklace of pearls, while the smaller flower or combination of small fowers is seen on nearly every coat."

SAYS U. S. OWES BIG DEBT TO INDIANS AND NEGROES

Great Debt Is Owed to Foreigners as Well.

CHICAGO, Dec. 27.— (United Press)—Southern culture owes a great debt to the Negro; the culturd Southern home with its leisurely aristocratic character and charm, was made possible by the presence of the Negro, according to Alexander Goldenweiser of the New School of Social Research. He spoke here today before the American Statistical Association on the contributions of various races to American cultural development.

"Whatever the Southerner may say about the Negro's moral qualities," Dr. Goldenweiser declared, "he has passed practical judgment on him in the past by permitting Negroes to educate his children.

"Like other bad institutions, the institution of slavery, with the amiable, dignified master and the happy serfs living in mutual love, produced one of the finest forms of living known to men."

Dr. Goldenweiser was pessimistic as to the solution of the Negro problem, which he said was the foremost problem before Americans today. "We need not endorse the methods and ideology of the Ku Klux Klan," he said, "but the fact remains that one of the stimuli for their attitude is the realization of the presence of the Negro as a basic problem in American life. Whereas dread of the Bolshevist, the Red, the Leninite is an artificial will-o-the wisp stimulated by misinformation, propaganda and pseudo-scientific dogmatizing, and whereas the same can be said about our Nordicising race maniacs—the problem of the Negro is one of complete reality."

Dr. Goldenweiser also paid a tribute to the American Indian:

"Among the many 'foreigners' to whom Americans owe a deep debt for cultural contributions, a race standing high in the list is the American Indian—a race to whom the earliest Americans were themselves 'foreigners.' "

He continued: "American anthorpologists have led the world in recent years in unearthing the truth about prehistoric man. The reason for this leadership is that we live in the most remarkable labaratory for such study, the ancient home of the American Indian.

"The American Indian also gave us corn, and he was the inspiration of the most romantic tales of American folk lore and poetry, the hero of stirring romances and poems by Cooper, Bret Harte, Longfellow and other American writers."

White silk sport dresses for Palm Beach wear are trimmed with borders and designs that are painted by hand.

A BEAUTIFUL CALENDAR.

The calendar to be given by the Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal to subscribers whose subscriptions are received in time, is a most beautiful work of art. The figures of the calendar are easy to read and the picture, entitled "The Sale of Old Dobbin" is a masterpiece in colors, suitable for framing. The subject of the painting is so full of human interest that you will never tire of looking at it. In addition to the calendar and picture, the Family Herald offers to each subscriber an opportunity to win as much as five thousand dollars in an easy and interesting contest. A catalogue of valuable articles which are given as rewards for new subscriptions can also be obtained free from the publishers of the Family Herald. The Family Herald as an interesting journal carries everything before it.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Dec. 26. — (Canadian Press).—Besides crossing to above $1.80 for the first time, the wheat market to-day shattered all high price records this year. New buying was based largely on an estimate that the exportable wheat surplus looked for in Argentina would amount to only 112,000,000 bushels. Rye, as well as wheat, went beyond previous top levels. Wheat closed strong, 3½ to 4 7-8 cents net higher, May 1.80 7-8 to 1.81¼, and July 1.54 3-8 to 1.54½. Corn finished 1½ to 2 7-8 cents up; oats showing 1 3-8 cents to 2 cents gain, and provisions at a rise varying from 12 to 40 cents.

MONTREAL GRAIN.

MONTREAL, Dec. 26.—(Canadian Press).—Owing to its being a holiday in England to-day there was no change in the condition of the export trade in grain here. Prices for Canadian Western oats were advanced 1 cent per bushel. Ontario grades were also 1 cent higher, No. 2 white selling at 65 cents, No. 3 grade at 63 cents and No. 4 grade at 60 cents per bushel, ex-store.

The local flour market for spring wheat grades of flour displayed further strength and millers announced another rise of 40 cents per barrel on all grades. Business was very quiet. There was no change in prices for winter wheat flour but prospects are that an advance will be announced in the near future.

Prices for all grades of mill-feed were advanced $1 per ton. The market for rolled oats was strong and higher prices are expected soon.

Crop beans were quoted at $2.70 and $2.80 per bushel.

ADVENTURES OF SANTA CLAUS IN MANY COUNTRIES

Morning of the First Christmas After the Armistice in Bethlehem.

HUNGRY BEGGARS.

Santa Claus Is Not the Only One Who Was Busy Making Toys for Christmas.

The war was over. It was the morning of the first Christmas after the Armistice, in Bethlehem. But the place where the Prince of Peace was born proved the scene of hatred and violence. Of course, that hatred and violence were held in leash by the hand of the British administration. Two British Tommies were on guard beside the silver star which, according to tradition, marks the spot upon which the angels looked as they sang of good will among men. Those soldiers were on guard with bayonets fixed on their rifles and cartridges ready to see that fanatics did not start trouble.

Tommy Atkins in Palestine was a wise and weathered man. He refused to worry himself sick about th graft and bigotry of the holy places. He was there for the sole purpose of guarding them, of doing his duty.

Nor his to reason why. As I left the church I asked a sentinel (with a wound stripe and many service stripes) where the field of the shepherds was.

"I don't know, sir.' '

"How long have you been stationed here?"

"Six weeks, sir."

Men might crawl out of bed before the dawn and walk the six muddy miles from Jerusalem to visit the field where the shepherds watched their flocks by night, but this field of shepherds was nothing to him.

It was something to me, however. I hadn't fought four years in the war; on Gallipoli and then across the scorching sands of Sinai. (I had come up in comparative comfort six months before on the "Milk and Honey Express.") I hadn't marched with a ninety-pound pack all the way up the Philistine plain and then through the slush and storms of the Judaean hills to David's home town. So the field beyond Bethlehem was worth some walking to see.

It was only half a mile from the church, over a hill and then down again. Walking up through the narrow, twisting streets, I passed a string of kneeling camels, an immense solemnity in their faces as they chewed their cud; and donkeys, the most lovable little fellows with fuzzy eyebrows and a patience in their eyes born of carrying innumerable burdens. Their backs would bend, but apparently without pain, as they twinkled down the street, half hidden under bulging sacks of grain and clover. One moment's hesitation, and "Thwack!" would come the driver's stick on the mouse-brown haunches, with the exhortation, "Yu Hamar!" (O donkey!) These drivers were robed in jellabias or glorified night-gowns, originally a bright Prussian blue, but now, thanks to many washings, the mild colour of the sky. They were amiable barefoot Syrians who seemed genuinely to mean their deep-throated salutation of "Salaam aleikum!" (Peace be upon you!.

They are a strangely lovable people, the Syrian village folk, even if they do overload their animals. To be sure, they have weaknesses. They do not seem to be interested in veracity; possibly they have no conception of what it is. They are not keen on what we call co-operation; there is too much jealousy and distrust all round for that. They do not abound in initiative and the strenuous life. But they have a gift for quick sympathy and a dignity like the dignity of some children, that suggests the kingdom of God. Their lives are taken up pretty largely with finding sufficient grass for the family donkey and earning enough pancake-loaves of bread for the hungry mouths in the limestone box of a house where parents and little ones all literally go to bed with the chickens.

Olives and occasional figs, or a special slice of impossible cheese, with grapes in summer time and a rare Jaffa orange, serve for dessert. Since this is Christmas time, they will indulge in three or four pieces of bouclauwa, or honeyed pastry, and the children will make piles of coloured eggs on which have been etched, with a nail, the manger scene or the Wise Men. Nearly everybody will join in, for the little town of Bethlehem is mostly Christian, and the few Mohammedans are not unwilling to help the Christians keep their festival.

As I reached the top of the hill and looked back over the hollow where huddled the small white houses of the town, I saw that most of the windows were margined in spite of their lack of glass; margined with blue, in honour of the Mother of Our Lord. Bethlehem from this distance was lovely to look upon, "all bright and glittering in the smokeless air."

What met me as I left the town behind and started eastward down the hill was even more enchanting. For there in truth was Palestine! Simplicity and peace! In front of me, across the field gleaming with barley stubble, was a yoke of slow-moving oxen, fresh brown in the sun, tugging away at a wooden plough, and followed by a peasant crooning an eery song.

That plow could have been used by the servants of Boaz in this self-same field where Ruth gleaned among the harvesters. With that song Abraham may have heartened himself along the Bethlehem road as he set out with his camels for pastures new. And these watch-towers—tall cylinders of unhewn stone — that stood as sentinels among the terraced vineyards on the hillsides round about. Did not David survey this very valley from towers like these? Perhaps the fig and olive trees were thicker then, and the vines more generous; for half the trees of Palestine the Turks cut down, and blighted all her fairness.

The boy David must have loved these hills and ways, that distant wall of blue whence the sun had risen, the mountains of Moab that for ever haunt the Holy Land. Perhaps he led his flocks over this field to nibble grass or dewy moss among the crannies of stone walls.

Anyway, sheep were browsing on the edges of the field, and there were two or three shepherd boys; ragged young barefoot Arabs, as native as the oak or thorn. Possibly they had gathered here deliberately on Christmas morning in the field where the shepherds watching their sheep had heard the good news from Heaven.

I did not know. It was enough to admire the nine-year-old shepherdess holding in her arms a kid with a shining jet nose, a picture of tranquillity.

After exchanging "peace" with these carers of the flocks, I climbed up the hill again toward the little town, and as I climbed I remembered they all were looking for a king To slay their foes and lift them high. Thou camest a little baby thing, That made a woman cry.

Nearing the crest of the hill, I noticed, stark and white, clear cut against the blue—the Cross.—Allan A. Hunter.

THE DEVIL-DANCE.

Once more the demons that assail the lamas of the Far East have been danced away in the annual "exorcism assembly" that takes place in the Tibetan border. An eye-witness describes the ceremony as follows:

Tachienlu, in the Chinese province of Szechuan which borders Tibet, is quite free once more from devils, demons, and evil spirits. Recently they were enticed into a lump of tsamba and butter and shot into oblivion at the river side. Freedom from wicked spirits is no mean blessing and the people of Tachienlu, Man, Han, and Fan should be very grateful to the assiduous lamas for helping them to get rid of such pestilent individuals.

Devils, dragons, and demons are not easily moved, nor are they easily persuaded to give up their nefarious work. The lamas, however, have a way all their own, and year by year Tachienlu gets a regular clean-up, the evil spirits apparently being sent about their business.

Different religions use different means of getting rid of different spirits. Some people use prayer, others use gunpowder, the lama ingeniously uses the "Devil Dance." The lama believes that arrayed against him and therefore against all people, are diabolical sorcerers, scheming necromancers, common swindlers, artful jugglers, expert conjurers, and a whole host of fortune-tellers. And they are all scheming to destroy the lama's peace of mind, his accumulation of merit, his prospect of paradise, his hope of Nirvana.

Lama Espied Evil Spirit.

The visitor to this border town has only to see a "Devil Dance" to realise how real and potent is the spirit world in the mind of every lama. During the devil dance a lama was walking somewhat gingerly round the temple courtyard, when suddenly and mysteriously he espied an evil spirit in the horn of a yak which was lying uselessly on the stone slabs. He pounced precipitately on this simple, harmless, yak horn and forthwith expelled the demon. How it got there and why it was there and how he knew it was there and how he drove it from there no one seems to know.

The devil dance is simply this — the interpretation depends entirely on whether we use the inductive or deductive method. No two men receive the same impression; no two lamas give the same explanation; no two temples perform the same incantation. Europeans call the performance a devil dance, the Chinese call it an exorcism assembly, the Tibetans call it a religious dance performed by monks; the populace regard it as play-acting, with a religious significance. What it really is, however, history has obscured, tradition has obliterated, and custom has abused.

This year the devil dance was held on the tenth of the seventh moon, Padma Sambhava's birthday, and at the Red sect temple, just outside Tachienlu. This religious festival is now becoming one of the most popular holiday seasons on the Tibetan frontier. For days before the dance, elaborate preparations are made to feed and accommodate the large concourse of people.

Temporary booths, open-air teashops, and a large variety of restaurants cover the open space in front of the temple. The Tibetans erect their tents near the lamasery, and live there while the performance lasts.

Life and Death Struggle.

What to the lama is apparently a life and death struggle—evil versus good—is to the ordinary population of this border town a time for nice dressing and fine feasting. The Tibetan ladies with their Tibetan husbands and their servants turn out in all their finery——silk embroidery and gold ornaments of every description. Chinese ladies and their husbands and families are there in large numbers in their finest silks and satins.

The wealthy families in the city pay from 20 to 50 rupees for a box and this includes tsamba and butter and sweets while the show lasts. Facing the temple courtyard on which the dance takes place there are one hundred boxes, or in other words, the domiciles of the lamas. A huge awning stretches across the courtyard, protecting the dancers, the band, the attendants, and the large audience occupying the pit.

On the morning of the tenth, Padma Sambhava's birthday, the dance begins by a kind of religious opening ceremony; then follows the sweeping of the courtyard and the show begins. For two solid days the lamas dance themselves tired, the band blows itself tired, and the onlookers gaze themselves tired.

The music is quite weird and uninteresting and to the monotonous drone of the pipe and drum the lamas masquerade for hours round the temple courtyard. One reason why the show is called the devil dance is the fact that the lamas who perform are dressed in every synonym for hideous, impish, demoniacal silliness. Some masks give the impression of a weird, uncanny, lunatic performing from sheer pleasure.

Bait to Entrap Devils.

The interpretation or explanation of this two days' dancing is not widely known nor are the lamas very clear about its signification. Padma Sambhava when he came to Tibet from India is supposed to have driven a great many devils from the roof of the world. When he did so, how did he do it? Did he dance them out, decoy them out, push them out? Are the devils driven out every year the same devils or are they new and quite modern? or are they new and quite modern? What is the relation between the dancing devils and the spirit world?

The simplest explanation we can get hold of is this: The lamas dance in every evil, distorted, weird guise they can think of, and while dancing, by some mysterious magic art, they are able to "hook" any daring spirit bold enough to show its face within the temple courtyard. As the "hook" must be free to "hook" more devils, a contrivance, made of tsamba and butter, called by the Tibetans a "linga," that is an image, is placed in the temple courtyard.

At the close of the dance, when all the demons, devils, ghosts, goblins, have been "hooked," grabbed and stowed away in this image of tsamba and butter, the lamas carry it to the riverside and there it is blown into oblivion.

Eaten by Hungry Beggars.

The last and final act is a terrific scramble by all the local beggars to get the biggest share of the tsamba and the butter. The lamas throw the image away and the beggars grab and eat it thereby consuming a great many devils.

Another interpretation is this: The dance is merely a performance to ensure good luck, good harvests, good weather, freedom from war, pestilence, and famine. The dance in some way is connected with appeasing or destroying the evil spirits which cause and bring misfortune and disaster.

This year the British Consul and several other European visitors to the border witnessed the dance.

Present to Organist.

A pleasing feature of the evening was the presentation to Miss Annie Tinney by the school of a leather hand bag.

Miss Tinney is the organist of the school and a great help in all departments of church and Sunday school work.

Next Sunday evening the service in Cavan Methodist church will be conducted by the pastor, Rev. R. T. Richards. The service will combine a Christmas and New Year's message.

At this service the pastor will give a recital of Henry Van Dyke's book entitled "The Other Wise Man."

Miss Ruth Keegan, nurse-in-training in Rochester, arrived on Wednesday to spend Christmas and a few days following with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Keegan.

Mr. John Steele, Millbrook, spent Christmas, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. James Paul; also Mrs. Paul's sister, Mrs. Reynolds and son, Gordon.

SEASON OF FASCINATING COLOR

Lovely Colors and Laces of Palm Beach Clothes Bridge Winter and Summer, Bendel Says.

BY HORTENSE SAUNDERS.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27. — Palm Beach clothes have a much greater importance in the sartorial scheme of things than merely furnishing the excuse to buy a complete new outfit.

They are of great interest to all women, not merely the fortunate percentage who spend their winter months in the south, but to the stay-at-home woman who looks ahead in her buying.

"Palm Beach clothes," as Henri Bendel, New York designer, expresses it, "bridge winter and spring so far as costuming is concerned. They definitely establish the spring mode and mean that the winter season has had its run.

"There are many women who buy their spring outfits early because they believe the styles then are more lovely and that the selections are better than later in the season."

And certainly it does seem as if the clothes for southern dwellers are much more interesting than the spring models that follow later in the season.

Pleasant Contrast

The lovely pastel colors and laces are a pleasant contrast to the dark, serviceable type of clothes we need north. They have the charm of strawberries in January or any unseasonable and highly expensive delicacies.

"This is the season of color," this mentor says. "There are lovely pastel shades, besides the more dazzling tones of rose and deep red and orange, and the more conservative grays, beige and the grayed blues and greens.

"Silhouettes remain straight, but not severely so, and fullness is achieved in many subtle ways by large and small pleats, and by flare treatment in the front combined with a straight back.

The tunic and the variations of the tunic are especially featured."

One of the most charming tunic outfits in Bendel's collection is the one photographed on the lovely Elsie Lawson. It has a straight tunic of white crepe de chine embroidered in old blue with an intriguing bird design. This is worn over a narrow slip of white satin.

But one of the most striking costumes from Bendel's Palm Beach collection is the oddly printed model of black and white crepe foulard trimmed with tiers of white silk fringe put on to give the effect of frills, but there is also a tendency to ornament the surface of a frock with beading, embroidery or hand work."

Ensembles Popular.

Ensemble costumes hold over as a staple in the wardrobe. Crepe de chine and kasha dresses have their coats carrying out the general note of the costume.

Short blouses are worn with pleated skirts—a sport style that has been some almost perennial.

Collars are worn high or low, many of them converted in such a way as to completely change an outfit. Hats for spring deserve a whole article by themselves, but I can't resist mentioning how effective are the highly colored felts and the colored linen models that are being shown.

It will be hard for women to practice the restraint in buying that fathers and husbands commend so highly.

THE YEAR'S TEN BEST IN PETERBORO WOULD BE DIFFICULT TO SELECT

A Lot Depends on the Individual Viewpoint of the Movie Fan—Some People Enjoy a Movie That Makes Them Cry; Others Like the Hard-Boiled Type.

(By Jeannette).

"An Ardent Fan" has suggested that we write a piece about the "year's ten best," having reference to the best ten pictures presented by the local moving picture palaces during the past twelvemonth. Now, it is all very well to suggest things like this, and we would like to oblige "Ardent Fan" but the difficulty lies in their carrying out in the proper manner. The innocent bystander seems to think that a newspaper scribe carries information around in his or her dome with regard to everything in general.

To write intelligently about even such a frivolous subject as the ten best pictures of the year would require a great deal of tact. There are four theatres in the city that cater to the moving picture fan, and it is quite certain that they, each and severally, regard their year's programme as the very best to be had. You will get dozens of people to swear that Betty Balfour at the Royal in the "Squibs" series can't be surpassed anywhere, then you have fans who regard Douglas Fairbanks' creation of "The Thief of Bagdad" at the Grand Opera House as incomparable. And along will come the devotee of Lillian Gish, in "The White Sister," that packed the Capitol for a trio of nights and days, or the admirers of Marion Davies at the Regent in "Little Old New York." When it comes to a preference in moving pictures, there are as many varieties of fan as for phonograph records. Some like them snappy, and some like them sobby, and again there are others who prefer them straight, as one might say, or the type of educational film that tells you all about the discovery of a new tribe of aborigines in some forgotten land, or illustrates the proper method of rolling leaf lard, or a like important subject. This last type of fan is few and far between, although, as a matter of fact, there are interesting things about these educational films. A small one, inset into a variegated programme, a picture that showed just how ball bearings are made, might be used for a very good sermon. Ball bearings, it seems, after manufacture, are rolled down an incline and compelled to spring hastily up in the air and vault over a sort of hurdle. The ball bearings with a "weak heart" fail to make the grade and drop back into the discard. The others go sailing on and up to a life of intensive usefulness.

Some people enjoy a movie that makes them cry. They can't be satisfied unless the deaf and dumb drama sets them groping for a lost handkerchief. Others want the second-hand pleasure of a thrill. The people who wouldn't think of driving a car faster than twenty miles an hour can get a real punch out of the spectacle of a speed fiend rushing about an inclined bowl at the rate of a hundred and twenty per. The same with a horse race. It's a sort of suppressed ambition, or one of those inhibitions that trouble nearly everyone, according to the psychologists. That's why most women love to watch Gloria Swanson trail about the stage in fish tail gowns that leave off just about where they should begin. They wouldn't think for a minute of indulging in the antics that the gorgeous Gloria goes through, and they would blush, some of them, at the mention of a cigarette-holder to be used as she uses her long jade trinket, but they like to watch her, just the same.

It is probably this element of watching oneself in the pictures, as it were, that fascinates the little boys who applaud the hero and hiss the villain at some of the less circumspect shows. The only trouble about this habit of the little boys is that they don't always applaud in the right place. To sit and watch a "sob" picture with a little boy for companion is a trial of patience. As like as not, he will chuckle over the heroine's love woes, and be likely to whisper the advice to "sock him one in the bean," as she stands helplessly defying the villain.

This habit of the ladylike heroine of being helpless at trying moments is aggravating, to say the least. In modern times, the voting sisterhood should have a little more pep than the attitude depicted when they look on dumbly as the victorious desperado ties the hero to a nearby tree trunk and advances to claim the beautiful heroine as a prize. Mary Pickford, who has ideas of her own, upset moving picture ideals in "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall," when she joined in the free-for-all that took place when her father and suitor found her lover and herself in a tete-a-tete scene. But then she was depicting a madcap heroine. Possibly if she had been doing a perfectly ladylike creation, she wouldn't have intervened at all, but have stood by, wringing her hands and looking beautifully unhappy.

They have got away from close-up agonized effects in most of the pictures nowadays. Time was when the lady, to be perfectly convincing in her agony, had to go through reels of celluloid with her features in bas relief, as it were, registering untold torment. That was the sort of thing that Lillian Gish went through in the closet scene in "Broken Blossoms." It was effective enough, but rather crude. Nazimova tried a little of the same thing lately, in her presentation of a lady with a lurid past, in "Madonna of the Streets", and she also used a real stage mannerism, the habit of dragging her feet when she left the hero in a tragic moment, a form of exit that evoked delighted giggles from the juniors in her audience. The modern method of exhibiting emotion is a more subtle one, done by means of little by-plays, such as the clenching and unclenching of covetous fingers in a small scene in Pola Negri's latest local vehicle, "Forbidden Paradise." There were no sub-titles for this scene, but the idea was plainly created by the pronounced opening and closing of a pair of hands, in greedy assent. The old way, when the lady wept long, slow tears down writhing features was perhaps more harrowing, but one couldn't help wondering just whether she used an onion or whether it all came out of the glycerine bottle.

In the world of the comics, subtlety still remains a somewhat unknown quantity, although the days are also gone when a fat comedian being doused in an unexpected tub of water could cause shrieks of merriment. Harold Lloyd and Larry Semon and Lloyd Hamilton get much of their funney effect by insistence on a set of mannerisms and familiar facial expression.

A MERRY CHRISTMAS FOR OLD JOHN BULL

By CLIFFORD L. DAY

LONDON, Dec. 27. — (United Press)—John Bull celebrated Chirstmas Thursday in every corner of the globe.

Neither the sun nor the moon ever sets on the British Santa Claus.

A fine chance, this white-whiskered old gentleman has of sneaking down all the chimneys in his vast realm after all the millions of kiddies have gone to bed. In one brief night, he is expected to drop in at every one of the many far-flung lands within the British Empire.

And somehow he does it.

Wherever the Union Jack is flying, Christmas trees were groaning and Christmas stockings bulging with gifts from the Isles over here which are known to Britons all over the world as "Home."

Christmas ships have, for more than a month, been radiating out from London across the seven seas to the offspring dominions and colonies, to isolated islands, to mandated territories, and to occupied areas.

Plum-puddings have been going forward by the ton to the far-off prairies of Canada, Australia, India and Africa. Books have been billed in library proportions to the "bush" of Africa, New Zealand, India, and other parts. Cakes have been coasting along the high seas to China to Palestine, to lonely coral islands, and to points in between. Post offices all over the earth have handled hundreds and thousands of parcels of tinkling toys outward bound from London.

The shipment began unusually early this year. A month before Christmas Day, postal officials here reported that early parcels were fifty to sixty per cent above the normal Christmas average.

More than 10,800 packets left for India alone in one week's consignments. Besides these, there were 5,400 to Australia, 8,277 to South Africa, 2,600 to East Africa, 7,200 to New Zealand, 3,100 to the Straits Settlements, and thousands of others not only to British possessions but to foreign countries as well. And still they kept pouring into the London post offices by the thousands right up to the very last week when there were scrambles to catch the last mails to the United States, Gibraltar and the Continent.

At "home" Thursday John Bull sat smoking before his traditional Yuletide log fire, took part in the century-old custom of domestic charades, theatricals and games in which grand-daddy always capers about with youngsters, or watched again the familiar old pantomime restaged at theatres in cities and towns throughout the British Isles. Hotels and restaurants in London had their usual batch of lonely far-away-homes, to which they catered with especial favors and efforts to help fill the gap of loneliness.

Churches held the usual special services and, in the early hours of the day, itinerant groups of Chrismas carolers could be heard along many a country road and city street.

The royal family spent the day at Sandringham, as has been customary each Yuletide.

John Bull is happy in the conviction that his pdospects are on the mend, that the year which begins a week from today promises to be the first British banner year since the war.

Citizens of the United States, the South American republics and other countries, resident or visiting in London, participated in British home celebrations or celebrated the day in social functions within their respective colonies.

People of U. S. Like To Look At Themselves

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27. — (United Press).—American people are becoming more and more concerned about their personal appearance.

This is indicated in the figures of the last biennial census of mirror manufacturers in the United States made public by the Department of Commerce to-day, which show an increase of more than 100 per cent in the value of mirrors produced last year as compared with 1921 production.

To meet this demand last year 196 manufacturers produced mirrors valued at $33,507,973. This was an increase of 100.2 per cent over the production of two years pervious.

The mirror industry paid $4,892,543 to 3,471 wage earners last year and the cost of materials going into the manufacture was estimated at $20,103,199. The value added by manufacture was $13,404,774.

SUICIDES ON LOVER'S DOORSTEP.

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, Dec. 27.—Refused admission to the home of the man she loved, Eva Baker drew a revolver and committed suicide on his doorstep.

PLAYGROUND EXPERTS TO MEET IN NORTH CAROLINA

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—In recognition of the big strides which the south is making in playground and recreation work, Asheville, North Carolina, has been chosen as the convention city for the Twelfth Recreation Congress, October 5-10, 1925, from a field of invitations presented by 30 cities representative of 13 states, Canada and Belgium.

The congress will be held under the auspices of the Playground and Recreation Association of America, and delegates from all states in the Union are expected. The movement has made marked progress since its inception in 1906. Then only 57 cities reported recreation systems; today there are 680.

LOCAL FIRM WILL USE A NEW METHOD

Fitzgerald and Company Install New Method of Automobile Painting.

Fitzgerald and Company, corner of Brock and Water streets, are installing equipment for the finishing of automobiles by the new method which is generally known to the paint trade as the "lacquer process."

There are several varnish makers engaged in the production of the material used in this new departure in the world of car finishing. One of the first of these to get their product in favor with the automobile builders was the Dupont people who named their lacquer "Duco" and to many of the unititiated this system of finishing cars is known as the Duco process. Others who have been successful in marketing a satisfactory lacquer for this purpose are the Murphy Varnish Co., Holland Varnish Co., as well as others who are, at the present, working on it. One of the chief difficulties met with in this process was the question of undercoatings but in this last year the makers have made decided improvements in this line and it is now offered to the public with considerable confidence.

The lacquer process of refinishing cars is a distant departure both as to application and result from the old method employed. The material is to be applied with a spray gun under air pressure and the preparation of the surface for the color coats is most important to obtain a good result. In addition to this amount of rubbing the final coat receives determines, in a large measure, the appearance of the job. The attractive feature of this process to the manufacturers of cars is, however, the saving of time. Speed in the re-paint shop has been clamoured for by customers whose cars have become so indispensable to teir business or social use that they want them repainted as quickly as possible.

Regardless of any claims of perfection which may be made, this new type of finish is in the development stage. It admittedly has excellent possibilities ,but to produce the ultimate, perfected product, the interest and co-operation of the customer and the public is absolutely essential. The intelligent observation of it in actual application and service will furnish the experience necessary to produce further desirable refinements.

The refinement and depth of lustre so characteristic of a fine varnish job is not possible with this type of material. Whether it ever will be is problematical. With lenient cooperation by the customer and the public, the finish may be improved to a point where its initial appearance, as compared with a varnish finish, may be quite acceptable to the general public. Its improvement in appearance as it gets older, is already a factor in its favor.

This process to be satisfactory requires the installation of some fairly expensive equipment and the motoring public will no doubt be glad to know that their requirements in respect to this finish are being anticipated by Fitzgerald and Company, who would be glad at any time, to give further information on this live subject.

"Bell the Cat," Says Pittsburgh Woman

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Dec. 27.—(United Press).—Prolongation of bird life by means of a tiny bell attached to the neck of that night prowler—the cat—is advocated by Anna Moody Browne, a prominent citizeness, in a letter to a local newspaper.

She suggests that some progressive business concern put on the market an inexpensive strap and buckle with a good bell attached.

"It's a shame," Miss Browne says, "that something cannot be done to preserve bird life. Cats in my neighborhood have destroyed any number of bird nests and they all ought to be properly 'belled,' so that birds are warned of their coming."

Miss Browne points out that in Massachusetts there is a state law that cats must be belled.

AGAIN DIVORCES HUSBAND.

Bridgeport Woman Says Her Second "Term" Was Worse Than the First.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., December 27. — Laura E. Robbie, of this city, got a second divorce from Joan G. Robbie, of New York, through Judge John R. Booth, in the Superior Court here after two twelve-year terms of married life.

Mrs. Robbie received her first divorce in 1908 and was re-married four years later.

"The second twelve years were worse than the first," Mrs. Robbie said on the witness stand.

Both decrees were granted on the ground of cruelty.

CONVICT ONLY ASKED SKATES FOR CHILDREN

Fifteen Year Convict Requests Attorney to Buy Roller Skates for His Children.

OMAHA, Neb., Dec. 27.—(United Press).—"Hard-boiled Pat" Carrol, 40, confessed pail dynamiter and yegg, whose very name makes cold chills dance along spines of police officers from coast to coast, didn't bat an eye when sentenced to 15 years in the penitentiary, but requested only that his attorney, Richard Organ, buy two brand new pairs of roller skates for his children, a boy of 5 and a girl of 7.

Organ told of "Hard-boiled Pat's" weak spot while loading up with toys in Omaha stores.

"I didn't believe there was a flaw or weak spot in his armor of reserve," Organ referred to Carroll. "He never flinched when sentence was passed. I asked him if there was anything I could do for him before they took him to the pen. 'Not a thing, thanks,' he replied, then—

"Yes, there is just one tning. I don't want the $2.4 you have of mine. Keep it. But I would like to have you buy a pair of roller skates each for the kids.'"

Organ smiled, although there was just a shade of mist in his eyes as he told of it. "They'll get the roller skates, all right," he assured the reporter. And displaying a large assortment of bundles—'and plenty else, besides."

HUGE SUMS PAID TO EASE TRAFFIC.

LONDON, Dec. 27.—(Associated Press.)— The widening of the Strand, in the heart of London, is an expensive proceeding, according to H. H. Gordon, a former London county councillor. He places the cost at $25,000,000 a mile. Traffic congestion makes the operation necessary.

SWISS SCRAP STEAM LOCOMITIVES.

ZURICH, Dec. 20.— (Associated Press.)—The Swiss national railways will spend $8,000,000 in 1925 to continue the work of electrifying the entire railway system of the country, according to the government budget for 1925. Already 400 miles of track have been electrified, and next year is to witness the electrification of 92 additional miles.

DESPITE POLITICS, ITALY WAS PROSPEROUS IN 1924

In International Affairs Many New Treaties Won Fame For Premier Mussolini— Assassination Mars the Reign of the Fascisti.

BY THOMAS B. MORGAN

ROME, Dec. 27.—(United Press).—Italy through 1924 was replete with market political vicissitudes, favored with unusual diplomatic success and blessed with a large measure of industrial and commercial prosperity.

At the beginning of the year, Premier Mussolini's government enjoyed a popularity no other Italian government had enjoyed for decades. Toward the end, that popularity changed to an undisguised antipathy.

The old parliament, against which much had been said for its weakness, still held over, but in February by the King's decree, that parliament was dissolved and new elections ordered for April 6. The elections were held under a new law, according to the provisions of which, the party amongst the numerous Italian parties securing the largest number of votes would be allotted automatically 356 seast out of the 535 in the Italian Chamber of Deputies. The remaining 179 seats were to be divided amongst the whole of the remaining parties in proportion to the number of votes polled. The elections resulted in a Fascist victory, 356 Fascist deputies taking their places in parliament.

The new parliament met for the first time on May 23, opened in full ceremonial by King Victor. To add to the strict form, deputies were ordered to wear full dress suits, according to an old Italian usage. Mussolini and his ministers donned full ministerial uniforms. The King's message was delivered and was mainly devoted to an appeal to the spiritual unity of the country and internal tranquility.

Despite the two-thirds majority which the Fascists held, the sessions of the parliament were turbulent. The Socialists were the most numerous of the minority parties with a representation of 65. Their chief spokesman was a young deputy, representing the city of Rome, Glacomo Matteotti. He vehemently attacked the measures and was scheduled to make sensational exposures before the Chamber on June 10. On June 10, Deputy Matteotti was mysteriously kidnapped near his home and whirled into the Roman countryside. His disappearance remained a puzzle but it was generally concluded that he had been assassinated. Late in August, his body was found in a thicket, 18 miles from Rome. Several Fascist chiefs were arrested charged with complicity and several lesser chiefs with having perpetrated the bloody affair.

Fascist Party Weakened.

From that incident, the prestige of the Fascist party began its decline. There was a complete turn in the popular mind. Succeeding events served to accentuate the repugnance. A strict press decree was passed and the right of freedom of assembly and speech curtailed. The local administrations in the provinces were in many cases dissolved and commissioners sent from Rome to administer the local affairs. On September 12, an irresponsible shot and killed Signor Armando Casalini, a Fascist deputy. In late November, several exposures were made charging Deputy Italo Balbo, generalissimo of the Fascist militia, with ordering the clubbing of opposition voters.

Through the recurrence of these adverse circumstances, Mussolini was able to retain his post as premier due to the large majority which the peculiar electoral law had given him. There was however, a strong nucleus of former supporters arrayed against. These included Former premiers Giolitti and Orlando and the ex-servicemen.

In the diplomatic field Mussolini's success was phenomenal. His negotiations with Yougla - Slavia brought a prize for which all other Italian governments have been angling since the war, namely, the annexation of Fiume to Italy. The King personally performed the formal ceremony on annexing Fiume to Italy on March 16, amidst the indescribable enthusiasm of the Italian inhabitants of the town and thousands who had journeyed from the rest of the kingdom.

A treaty very favorable to Italy was signed with the Russian Soviets who were formally recognized by Italy on February 7. Numerous commercial and comity treaties followed. On July 14, another treaty of commrece and navigation was signed with Yougo-Slavia. On July 15, the treaty formally annexing African Jubaland to Italy was signed with England. An economic treaty was signed with Austria on July 16. Switzerland signed an arbitration and commercial treaty with Italy on Sept. 20, while Finland followed with a general treaty on October 22.

The position of Italy in international affairs has been regarded as greatly enhanced by the numerous treaties. In December, the council of the League of Nations met in Rome.

In internal economic affairs, the country arrived at heights hitherto untouched since before the war. The Italian State budget which had an adverse balance of two billions at the beginning of 1924, has been balanced and fiscal measures undertaken by the ministry of finance are expected to greatly strengthen the state financially.

Adverse Trade Balance.

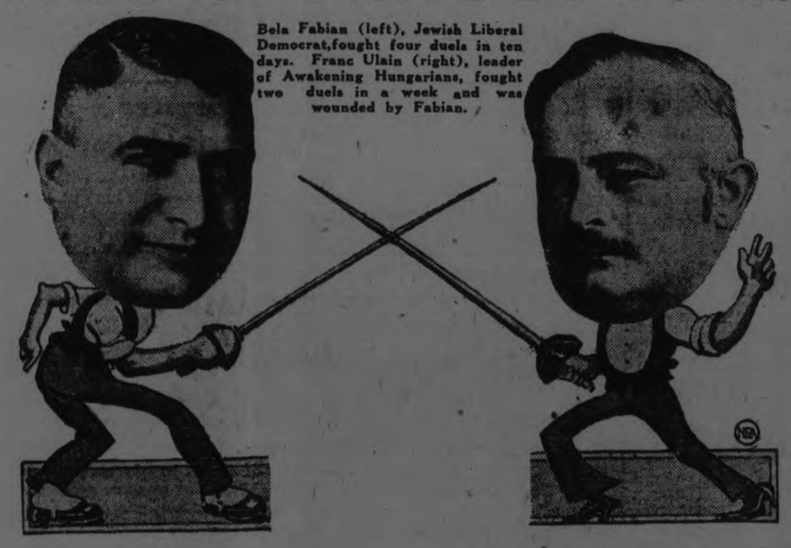
The adverse trade balance was reduced from an average of 511 millions a month in 1923 to 483 millions a month in 1924. Besides, the increase in tourist expenditures in the country and emigrant remittances are figured to overcome the balance. Savings bank deposits increased from 32 billions on June 30, 1923 to 35 billions on June 30, 1924. Invested capital increased by 2,300 millions during 1924, while unemployment decreased from 280,765 on Jan. 1 to 115,591 on Sept. 1.

The firmness of Italian State bonds continues almost at par. This has been extremely encouraging, inasmuch as Italian State bonds were quoted at twelve points below par at the beginning of 1924.

The future depends so much on the political situation. The present unpopularity of the Mussolini government may be overcome, but it still remains to make the situation uncertain. Despite the desertion of a large mass of the people from the Fascist idea, there has been a steady tendency to invest so that new companies in all branches of industry are steadily organizing.

The year of 1925 will be the Jubilee year of the Catholic church. This event is expected to bring between two-million and four-million visitors to Rome from all parts of the world. This influx is calculated to benefit greatly the general wealth of the country and to serve to reduce the high rate of exchange from which Italy suffers.

BUDAPEST DIPLOMATS SETTLE AFFAIRS OF STATE BY DUELS



Bela Fabian (left), Jewish Liberal Democrat, fought four duels in ten days. Franc Ulain (right), leader of Awakening Hungarians, fought two duels in a week and was wounded by Fabian.

BUDAPEST, December 27 — Duelling, and the cavalier's code of honor that goes with the custom, are for from dead in this city, capital of the Magyar nation of Hungary.

Gentlemen of Budapest still settle their differences as they did in the romantic Middle Ages—bythe sword.

In the National Assembly which is supposed to represent the best of Hungarian manhood and intellect, is duelling especially frequent. Since the assembly opened there has been an average of one duel a day between members.

An insult calls for blood, always; and many are the insults passed in debates in the Parliament "Nemzetayules" which is composed of fiery Magyars, a few proud and able Jews, and dignified Germans.

A recent sword encounter between Parliament members resulted in a serious wound to Franc Ulain, most fiery of the "Awakening Hungarians," society of patriots and anti-Semits.

Ulain's opponent was Bela Fabian, the slender young Jewish Liberal Democrat, who fought and won four duels in ten days following the opening of the Parliament. Fabian has acted as champion of his creed and political beliefs against the supporters of the Monarchist regime and the persecutors of the Jews.

All Hungary took sides when the Budapest newspapers announced that Ulain had challenged Fabian.

In a debate in the assembly, Fabian bitterly complained of the dismissal by the courts of two men charged with throwing a bomb into a semi-Jewish gathering last Christmas when three persons were killed and 26 were injured. Hooted by his opponents and baited by the "Awakening Hungarians" Parliament members, Fabian charged that Ulain was responsible for the acquittal of the bomb throwers and characterized Ulain as an "advocate of murderers."

After the session Ulain's friends delivered a challenge to Fabian. The encounter was set for the following Friday morning in Santelli's famous fencing institute.

Ulain recovered from the cuts he received in duel with Lorinez Hedry, United Government party representative, some days before, was the strongest opponent young Fabian had had ever met. Ulain is a large man, over 40 years old, and an experienced swordsman.

According to the press reports of the duel, Fabian surprised his antagonist by taking the offensive and beat down Ulain's guard. Although he could have killed the challenger the young man administered only one cut on the head and left the scene.

Ulain's injuries are expected to heal but it is certain that his head will be left disfigured.

Fabian's first duel was with Julius Gombos, a member of the anti-Semitic party. Gombos was injured but recovered in time to act as a second for Ulain. Fabian within a few days met and defeated Karl Wolff, a member of the government party, which is anti-Jewish, and Tibor Eckard, another anti-Semit.

The police take no cognizance of duelling, which except in cases where well-known men take part, receive very little attention from the public. Fatalities are rare, although blood must be drawn in a duel before the victor is decided.

Encounters usually are held in the fencing academies. There are eight of these in Budapest—all well patronized. For a duel the combatants hire a portion of the building at a fixed rate of 400,000 korona, something over $5.

The situation is very tense in the Parliament now. Since the end of the war and the separation of the Hungarian nation from the former empire, nationalism has been growing. Hungary, already the most Oriental of the Central European countries, developed strong nationalist tendencies. Duelling and other old customs had a revival. With this came the religious issue.

The Jews, who number more than 200,000 in Budapest, were the victims of pogroms in the streets of the capital. The rise of the "Awakening Hungarians," a faction so anti-Semitic that it bolted the more Conservative government party, added to the persecution of the Hebrew population.

The three Hebrew members of Parliament are continually clashing now with the five members of the "Awakening Hungarians" who have seats in the House and the unfinished debates of the body frequently are concluded with swords in the fencing academies.

TRY TO AVOID A CONFERENCE

Geneva Arbitration Protocol Imperial Conference Not Favored.

TRY CORRESPONDENCE.

OTTAWA, Dec. 27.—(Canadian Press).—The Canadian Government, it is intimated, has still under consideration the invitation of the Baldwin Government to an imperial conference on the Geneva arbitration protocal. No formal reply has yet been made but the expectation is, as previously indicated, that the Government will suggest full recourse to correspondence and consultation with the Dominion representatives in London before resorting to the conference.

Owing to Parliament being in session, March the month suggested, would be inconvenient for Canadian ministers.

France and Morgan Loan.

Chamber of Deputies Votes on Disposal of $100,000,000.

PARIS, Dec. 27—(Canadian Press)—The Chamber of Deputies today voted unanimously without a roll call the Government's convention with the Bank of France regarding the use to be made of the $100,000,000 Morgan loan.

The agreement provides that the "State will pay to the account of the Bank of France in New York the proceeds of a $100,000,000 loan contracted on the United States market and the Bank of France will credit the state in France with a sum corresponding to this deposit on the basis of five francs 18 centimes to the dollar. This credit in francs will be applied to the reduction of advances of the Bank of France toward the amount of the next repayment which is fixed at 1,200,000,000 francs."

I.O.D.E. DANCE AND CARD PARTY

Peter Robinson Chapter Had Most Successful Event Last Night.

"SNOW BALL DANCE.

One of the most successful dances of the season was the "Snow Ball" held in the G. W. V. A. hall last evening, under the auspices of the Peter Robinson Chapter I.O.D.E.

There were about two hundred and fifty people in attendance and everyone appeared to be having a thoroughly enjoyable time. The hall was decorated in cool, attractive fashion with white and rose. Long streamers of white crepe paper simulated falling snow at the windows and the orchestra played behind a real-looking snow bank of sparkling white. The lights were masked with elongated shades of rose paper, each streamer weighted with a white snow ball. Evergreens decorated the entrances and formed a small alcove at the north door. Upstairs, where cards were played, red and white formed the decorations, with a large basket of waxed red dahlias on refreshment table.

Fifteen tables of bridge were played, the first prize winners being Mrs. J. A. Aylmer and Mr. E. A. Peck. Mrs. R. A. Carmen won the consolation prize, and Mrs. A. F. Cornish the lucky number prize. The handsome smoking set which formed the first prize for the gentlemen was donated by Mrs. Walter Belleghem.

Mrs. F. C. Webber, Regent of the Chapter, acted as general convenor. Mrs. D. L. McLaren and Miss Hazel Buller had charge of the card room; Miss Gladys Patterson of refreshments, and Mrs. N. Birks and Miss Genevieve McCarthy, of the decorations. Patronesses were Mesdames F. C. Webber, D. L. McLaren, W. T. Regan, J. K. Hughes, W. T. Belleghem, J. L. Gillespie, F. E. Hooper, J. Wearing, B. H. Meyers, J. A. McNabb, G. R. Scott, N. L. McNaught.

Stewards: Messrs. W. F. Huycke, G. D. Dunsford, W. Stevenson, W. M. Perks, D. A. Loucks, G. L. Stevens, A. Stevenson, H. Mason, R. D. Mulholland, C. S. Browne, H. Wilgar, K. E. Stuart.

Ken Wilson's orchestra from Toronto, provided splendid music for dancing. There were a number of Novelty dances, including a balloon dance, with white balloons sprinkled with snow, and two pretty favor dances, the first with old fashioned red and white paper flower nosegays for the ladies, and boutonnieres for the men, the second with ingeniously-contrived little red and white harlequins on sticks, and pretty paper fans.

Among those noticed on the dance floor and at the bridge tables were Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Carmen, Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Hughes, Mr. and Mrs. D. L. McLaren, Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Webber, Mr. and Mrs. N. L. VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

To the Editor of Examiner,

The Peterborough Utilities Commission in 1923 was a wholesale purchaser of 4738 electric horse power delivered at its sub-station at a cost of $22.50 per horse power, thereby making the total wholesale cost for the year to the Commission $112,528.25. The cost of distribution to the power and light consumers is extra.

It is positively asserted that this City can save on its wholesale purchase of power $50,000 each year.

If I am elected as a member of the Peterborough Utilities Commission I pledge myself to do my utmost to have a full and impartial enquiry made into our local and undeveloped water powers to see if such an enormous annual saving can be made and to submit the facts to the ratepayers to determine our future action.

A. A. McIntyre.

WINS BY 193 RUNS.

This Was the Result of the Cricket Match Between Australia and England.

SYDNEY, Dec. 27. —(Canadian Press).—More than one record was broken in the Test cricket match between England and Australia which was concluded yesterday with a victory for Australia by 193 runs. It was the longest test match in the history of cricket as well as being a record fourth innings whes England scored 411.

GAVE AWAY STOCK.

Lumber Magnate Commended by Coolidge for Generous Present.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—(Special.)—William M. Ritter, founder of the Ritter Lumber Co., of Columbus, Ohio, was publicly commended by President Coolidge for his act in giving his employees a quarter of the capital stock of his concern as a Christmas present.

MOUNTAINS OF JEWELS.

MOSCOW, (United Press).—Following a successful expedition to the unexplored mountains, 40 miles beyond Urga (Mongolia), the Russian professor, Krijanovski, has returned to Leningrad. The expedition discovered rich beds of precious stones, amethists, aquamarines, and rubies, of which samples have been brought home. One of the specimens is a Mongolian topaz, extremely rare and of immense value.

LONDON'S DANGERS.

LONDON, Dec. 26 (United Press).—The streets of this city are becoming increasingly perilous. During the first ten months of 1924 more than six hundred persons were killed and 61,964 injured in street accidents. This is an average of 100 deaths per annum more than 1923.

But to this increasing traffic danger Londoners are becoming more interested daily in safety first measures.

POWDER SHIP EXPLODES.

Several Hundred Casualties and Disastrous Fire Follow.

TOKIO, Dec. 27. — (Canadian Press).—Several hundred casualties were reported when a powder cargo exploded aboard a ship in the harbor at Otaru, business centre of the Hokkaido Island group, which forms the northeastern part of Japan. A disastrous fire resulted from the explosion, according to reports received here.

WOMEN AND WAR.

NEW YORK, Dec. 26 (United Press).—One thousand delegates from 10 of the leading women organizations in the United States will meet in Washington, January 18-24, 1924, to confer on "The Cause and Care of War." Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt issued the call.

Card To The Electors

Ladies and Gentlemen.

In offering myself for re-election as Alderman I do so with my record for the past two years before you, and if my work on the Aldermanic Board during thait time has met with your approval, I respectfully solicit your vote and influence in my behalf, and if elected will give the best of my ability and approach all questions with an open mind that come up for discussion.

W. J. HANCOCK
FOR ALDERMAN
1925 - 1926

Dear Fellow-Ratepayers,

Having been nominated to fill one of the vacancies in the Aldermanic Board, I have decided to let my name go to ballot.

This being my first attempt to take a hand in your municipal legislature, I trust you will realize that I am one who is continually on your streets, not above approach, but one going in and out and amongst large gatherings of people in pursuit of my own occupation, which I think affords me the greatest opportunity of hearing and knowing your wants, thus forming a conclusion of the required legislation for the present and future of our city; also having had thirteen years of the closest connection with the real estate activities of this city.

I feel that I do know Peterboro and something of the taxes we now pay, and can assist materially in administering the affairs of our city.

I now offer my services for the coming two years, and trust that you will all accept this as a personal solicitation of your vote and influence, which would be impossible for me to make due to having such short notice.

If elected, I will endeavor to prove worthy of your honor and support.

Wishing you all a Happy and Prosperous New Year, also lower taxes for 1925.

I remain, yours truly,

The Present Decline Will Be Made Up Later By Increased Values.

REDUCED WHEAT.

OTTAWA.—Export trade during November took a slump, the total value of exports during the month being approximately $119,000,000, or about $19,000,000 below that for the corresponding month of last year. Imports were valued at approximately $65,000,000, or $7,000,000 below that for November, 1923.

The drop in the value of exports is to be attributed to the reduced exportable wheat surplus. In November, 1923, shipments of wheat to other countries totalled 64,196,000 bushels, an unusually large amount, greater even than during the whole of some fiscal years. This was worth $63,395,000 or a little less than $1 a bushel.

Last month's wheat shipments were only 26,982,000 bushels, a decrease of over 37,000,000 bushels, as compared with the quantity in November a year ago. But the increase in the price helped to narrow the spread in value, for, instead of being worth slightly less than $1 a bushel, it was worth $1.52, or a total of $41,159,000.

At this rate there will be another marked drop in the value of exports during December, as during this month last year they reached a very high figure. But there is not the wheat for export that there was a year ago. There is also a well-defined impression that owing to the existence of the Western wheat pools, it is not coming to the market nearly as fast as it did a year ago. With prices still rising there is a disposition on the part of farmers to hold. This holding-off process will, if anything, be strengthened, for those who have had to sell their wheat in order to get money have done, so. The remainder can afford to hold even if they are not in the pool.

During November, imports continued to drop for at $65,000,000 they were about $7,000,000 below those for the corresponding month last year. They may drop again this month, but, on the other hand, as it was during December last year that they began to slump, it is quite possible that the bottom may have been reached. The impression among trade experts now is that they are too low for the good of business, in that they really indicate a much reduced home demand for general merchandise.

The indication are that from now on to the end of the fiscal year, exports will fall behind those for the corresponding months of 1923, due chiefly to reduced exports of grain. At the same time it must be remembered that up to the end tof November only 59,722,000 bushels of wheat had been exported, as against 109,936,000 for the corresponding period of last year. So with wheat prices still mounting, much of the decrease in the value of exports may thus be made up.

BUGS TO CURE BUGS.

Two American scientists have been sent abroad for the purpose of scouring the world to find a pariste that will eradicate the gypsy and brown tail moths. S. S. Crossman has gone to Spain, Italy and Austria, where he will confer with expert entomologists who may be able to give him some assistance. Dr. John W. Summers has gone to Spain for the same purpose.

Newly-Wed Would Rather Buy Her Eggs Wholesale

A dealer at the Peterborough market on Saturday reported that a newly-wed lady, armed with a big carry-all and a small note book, asked him the price of eggs, the best eggs.

"Around 64 cents a dozen whole? sale and 70 cents retail," he replied.

"I'll take two dozen wholesale," said the lady.

RADIO CATCHES THIEVES.

Two Men Charged With Stealing Radio Sets From Houses.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2?—(United Press).—A warning broadcast from station WNYC resulted in the arrest of two men who will be arraigned in court here today, charged with the larceny of radio sets and accessories valued at more than $15,000.

It is alleged that the two men—Martin Chate and James De Luca—both of the upper west side, visited the homes of amateur radio operators and represented themselves as agents for a big New York House, got permission to take receiving sets away for repairs. The owners never saw their sets again.

EX-KAISER'S CHRISTMAS.

Clothing Given to All William's Family—Children Got No Toys.

PARIS Dec. 27.—(United Press).—The Hohonzollern Santa Claus this year is apparently in the clothing business.

From his son and heir, William reserved Christmas presents yesterday in the form of a raincoat and a heavy winter overcoat.

From the Princess Hermine he received two suits of clothing. Princess Hermine, on the other hand was presented with two evening gowns by her former august husband and the children and servants at Doorn Castle received nothing but clothing from the ex-Emperor this year.

STEAMER DISABLED.

Vessels Rush to Assistance of R.M.S. Sarth, Helpless in Gale.

LANDS END, England, Dec. 29.—(Canadan Press.)— The Royal Mail steamship Sarth, bound from Southampton for South America, wirelessed this morning that she was disabled in a gale south-west of Scilly Island and was in need of immediate assistance. Two vessels have been despatched to her assistance.

Another Ship Founders.

CHRISTIANIA, Dec. 20.—(Canadian Press.) — The Norwegian steamer Sortland, is reported to have foundered north of Trondhjem. Nine of the crew were rescued, and a second lifeboat was picked up with 12 men. One man was lost.

The Sortland is a small vessel of 538 tons gross.

CANADIAN WINS WITH HIS WHEAT

J. C. Mitchell Started With 160 Acres—His Wife Saved Grain.

WORLD CHAMPION.

J. C. Mitchell of Dahinda, Sask., whose victory in the International Fair made him world champion wheat producer for the third time in the last decade, took up a 160-acre homestead from the Canadian Government in 1907, when he left a cotton factory in Manchester, England, to "take up farming."

Mitchell thinks the most interesting thing about his victory with a fine specimen of Marquis, Red Spring variety, is that his wife saved the crop from ruin after it had been shocked in the field.

Last September, the story goes, Mitchell received a long-distance telephone call at the provincial seed show at Regina from his wife at Dahinda. She told him his prize wheat crop was about to be ruined by rain.

"What shall I do?" she asked.

"Put caps on every shock, and we will have a prize bushel at least the champion grower answered.

Mrs. Mitchell hurried to the field in the rain, capped the shocks with canvas and saved the bushel of wheat which made her husband international champion. Mr. Mitchell's specimen bushel of wheat will net $675 in prize money, the Chicago Board of Trade silver trophy, and the championship honors.

DO ANIMALS LIVE TO AN OLD AGE

Earl Haig Had Two Horses With Appropriate Names.

Surrounded by a little group of people, most of whom were children, a man was digging a hole in the bleaching green of a village house. On making enquiry, a passer-by learned that a funeral was in progress—the funeral of a great-grandmother cat who had died shortly before, in her twentieth year. She would probably have completed that year, but as she had grown weak and feeble from sheer old age, she had been mercifully chloroformed by her mistress. The latter could supply full details regarding the cat's age, her birthplace, and her career. Twelve or thirteen years is generally regarded as about the limit for cats, but this venerable creature had considerably exceeded that.

Another—this time a great-grandfather cat—is known to have attained the age of forty-two before being gathered to his fathers. He lived in Scotland, and was of a singularly gentle and even melancholy disposition. "Major" had a large and expressive countenance, but he never seemed to allow his voice to be heard. As the family to which he belonged sat around the fire on a winter evening, it used to be quite an entertainment for one of them to set his foot gently upon "Major's" tail. Alwayt on the offering of such an indignity, ths cat would turn a solemn look upwardse and two great unbidden tears would fal, upon his whiskers. Whether this wasl the result of his training or was due to long reflection in solitary places, was never precisely ascertained.

A veteran cat succeeded in keeping death at bay until he was in his twenty-seventh year. There was no uncertainty regarding his age, because he was born on the same day as his mistress. On the occasion of her marriage, she took "Tom" with her to her new abode, about two miles distant; but true to the feline character, he returned "home" at once. After the way of cats, he had evidently attached himself more to the "place" than to his mistress. Nothing could induce him to take up house in any other spot. As his mistress returned, after a couple of years, to live in her old home, things got righted. His owner enjoyed his companionship all his life, with the exception of the short interval mentioned.

The average age of horses is about thirty-five years; but a delegate from South Africa to a recent conference in England told about a horse which reached the good old equine span of thirty. This animal had carried its owner safely right through the Boer War.

An exceptionally clever and agile pony, won many prizes at sports—including those for table-jumping and fugitive races—was twenty-four when it achieved these triumphs. Two ponies let him go, with this inscription:—"Alexander, the son of Jupiter, dedicated Ajax to the sun." This elephant was actually found—according to the story—350 years after! Cuvier, the naturalist, declared that whales may sometimes live 1,000 years. An eagle which died at Vienna was said to be 104 years of age. Swans have been kmown to reach the age of 300, camels the age of 100, and which belonged to the Haigs of Cameron Bridge lived to be well over forty. They were the animals on which Earl Haig and his brothers and sisters first made the acquaintance of the saddle. The names of the ponies were "The General" (a very appropriate designation) and "Bismarck" (also curiously fitting in the light of after events). In the year '84, both of the ponies had been for some time on the retired list. "The General"—the older of the two—was well over forty-one when he died; and "Bismarck" who survived him, had passed the age of forty at the time of his demise. The hoofs of the two ponies were carefully taken off and mounted. Some were then made into inkwells, and distributed amongst members of the family.

Elephants have been known to reach great ages. When Alexander the Great had conquered Porus, King of India, he is said to have taken a powerful elephant which had fought valiantly for the King, to have named him Ajax, to have dedicated him to the sun, and then to have tortoises the age of 107. A celebrated lion which bore the name of "Pompey" survived its seventieth birthday.

THE POPULATION OF AN ANT HILL.

Wishing to arrive at an approximation of the population of ant hills, a scientist abroad gassed the ants and then undertook to count the contents of three hills of average size. The largest contained 93,694 and the smallest 17,828. Allowing ten thousand ants for those which escaped and which were out at the time of the gassing it makes the population of an ant hill more than one hundred thousand.

CRACKLING LOG BRINGS COMFORT TO FARM HOMES

Inexpensive Fireplace Makes Farm House More Home Like.

EASILY BUILT.

Cheer and Warmth of Hearth Draws Family Together In Happiness.

It is said that man originally built his home about a fire by the gradual growth of improvement of a simple shelter from cold winds, and there may be much truth in the theory that our common delight in the glow of an open fire is a survival from ancient times when the flickering light of the campfire made a circle of safety from prowling terrors of the night as well as of warmth and life.

It requires no great effort of imagination to picture those primitive ancestors, overtaken by night, far from their cave shelters while following the wild horse or reindeer herds, hastily making fire as darkness came on and crouching closely all night about the blaze that was reflected in the glare of savage eyes of the wild, held at safe distance only by the leaping flames.

Whether so far-fetched an origin seem probable or not, there is no denying the pleasure and comfort we all find in a crackling fire on the hearth. Everybody likes to "see the fire," but opinions vary greatly as to the value of op fireplaces as means of heating the home.

Draw Smoke and Reflect Heat.

"I would not trade one good box heater for a dozen of them," was a remark heard by the writer during one of those rambling discussions that pass the time when country people are waiting for their mail, or boat or train. This is the extreme view held by one whose house is troubled by a small, badly-built fireplace that rebels against a strong wind from any direction, yet will not draw without a breeze. Fireplaces may be roughly divided into two classes, those that smoke and those that do not, and if the latter also throw the heat of the fire well out into the room they approach the ideal in two most important qualities.

Having recently had something todo with the building of several fireplaces in country homes, the writer offers a few suggestions that may be found useful. The description given here is of a fireplace with cobblestone front and concrete mantel-shelf that "works," so far as it has been tested, in all weathers that we experience.

The pebbles were picked for beauty and variety of color. When washed clean of lime and mortar—which should be done as soon as the front is built—and given a taste of varnish these stones shine out in their true colors and are worth all the labor bestowed on them. I would not care to buy fuel by the load for this fireplace; but with us, and the majority of country folk, the labor of cutting and hauling is the cost of our firewood. We find, too, that fuel of a kind unsuitable for stoves and ranges may be used with satisfaction on the hearth, so that the economy in cutting and splitting and in the use of limbs, tops and knotty "chunks" quite balances the extra amount of fuel consumed. And the cheer and warmth of a good hearth are without price to a country household.

In regard to practical details, we use one barrel of lime, six sacks of cement, about sixty firebricks and two iron bars, one for the arch and the other for the support of the front wall at the throat of the chimney.

Material Handy.

The remainder of the material used—stones, gravel and sand—was got from beach or creekbed, as near as possible to the job. The chimney is built of concrete blocks cast in an L-shaped mould, the question of using concrete or brick for all the work being decided by the comparative cost of both and the amount of ready money available. It takes less time to build with brick, but often we go the longer way around in order to use less cash, of which there is ever a shortage, by the use of more labor.

The success or failure of a fireplace depends very much on the "throat"; the actual opening into the flue should be nearer the vertical than the horizontal. A gust of wind, rushing down the chimney, is arrested and turned by the projecting smoke-shelf and directed upward again instead of belching out into the room. A damper may be built in, a few feet above the throat, with a thimble above it for entrance of the kitchen stovepipe, if desired, so that one chimney will serve the house.

It is safer to pour the concrete mantel-shelf into a form, built in place as when cast separately they are often cracked in lifting; or a wooden shelf may be used. But this matter and the "finish" of the front are for individual choice and taste. It is important to have a solid foundation, a generous opening in front—three to four feet—a good bevel in the sides and back; and a throat as herein described.

So far as the writer can distinguish between things that are worth while and things that are not, it seems to him that labor of head and hands, and good materials, may be safely spent and used in the building of a hearth which shall be for ourselves and for those that come after.

TURKS INTRODUCED TO OUR CORN.

The American relief is doing much to make American corn popular in Turkey as a substitute for wheat and rice. Corn flour and corn grits may be the means of relieving the situation and when the natives learn to like corn they will save much money, as it can be supplied much cheaper than wheat and rice.

FRESHEN COWS IN NEXT FALL FOR BIG YIELD

Maximum Results When Prices For Produces Are at Their Peak.

PLAN PROFIT NOW.

Modern Methods of Feeding Solves Winter Problem With Success.

By F. W. ATKESON,
Head of the Dept. of Dairy Husbandry, University of Idaho.

Now is the time for the farmer to make plans for his dairy herd next fall. Under most conditions, it is more desirable to have the cows freshen in September, October and November than at any other time. In order to accomplish this, the cows should be bred during the months of December and January.

Not only is it important to breed the cows at the right time of year, but it is equally important that an accurate record be kept of all breeding dates. It is foolish to depend on memory for such important facts. It is impossible to intelligently manage the cow previous to freshening if the probable date of freshening is not known.

Freshening Date Important.

The farmer should know this date in order that he will know when to dry his cow off and allow her six weeks of rest. He should also be able to tell from the date of breeding whether his cow is making preparations for normal calving, or whether she is going to abort her calf. The date of freshening is also of value in laying plans for his feed and labor, and for increased sales of dairy products, as he will know by the breeding dates when to expect his fresh cows.

The gestation period of cows varies considerably, but the average used for most gestation tables is 283 days. Very old cows will usually run several days over that figure, and young cows may fall short of that number of days. A table, based on the average of 283 days, is very convenient in computing the probable date of freshening. This will be given on the next farm page.

Advantages of Fall Freshening.

There are many advantages in having the cow freshen in the fall. One of the important reasons for this practice is the fact that the cows are in heavy production at a time when dairy products are high in price. The reason for the high price in the fall and winter, and low price in spring and summer, is merely supply and demand. In the spring the supply of dairy products produced is very much greater, due to the many spring fresh cows and the ideal feed conditions. The dairyman is very fortunate in being able to control the time of heavy production, and produce the most during high prices.

Tests show that the peak of production came in June, with over 120 million pounds, while the same month re sters the lowest price, with a little over 40 cents a pound. It is very evident from this that the heavy production months are the low-price months.

Labor Factor.

Another advantage of having cows freshen in the fall is that it makes dairying fit better into the farm organization. If the cows freshen in the spring, they are producing heaviest and demanding the most time and labor right at the season of the year when the farmer is busiest with his seeding, tilling, haying and other cropping operations that demand all the time he can give them. If the cows are bred to freshen in the fall, the farmer has the fall and winter months, which is good practice, to give his cows good attention. If he allows the cows to be dry two months, which is good practice, they will require a minimum amount of attention all summer, and no milking will be necessary during the harvest season of August and September. Many men complain about the cows demanding too much time needed on the crop farming. A little planning will offset this advantage. The fall-freshened cows will give the farmer greater returns on his labor during the winter months, and usually the cows get better care.

The fall calves are well fed during the winter, and are old enough to be taken off skim milk and turned on to grass in the spring. Usually better calves are raised under this system. The cows also produce more, due to the fact that after they have been in milk all winter, the fresh grass in the spring tends to stimulate production and greatly increase the flow right at a time when they are inclined to go down in milk.

Fall freshening not only gives greater production, but also greater profit over feed cost. This is brought out very clearly by the table at the end of this article. The figures represent the records from 64 cow-testing associations.

The table shows that the season for freshening ranked as follows, both in average production and profit over feed cost: Fall, winter, spring and summer.

Important to Fair Exhibitors.

Breeders of pure-bred cattle who plan to exhibit their animals at fairs should be very much interested in the month of breeding. The dates that are used as bases in figuring the ages for classification in the show ring are February 1 and August 1. Any animal born between February 1 and August 1 will show that same fall as a junior calf. An animal born between August 1 and February 1 will be shown the following fall as a senior calf. Junior and senior yearlings are the same, except that they are a year older.

Everything else being equal, the larger the animal the better chance it has over other smaller animals. Animals so born that they are very young for their class are at a distinct disadvantage. For example, a calf born on August 15 would have a four months' advantage in age over an animal born December 15, yet they must both show in the senior calf class. Therefore it is important to plan to breed the cows so that the calves will be the proper age for show.

August and September freshening makes good-sized senior calves, and February and March calves make good-sized junior calves. Of course, this question is of little importance to the grade cattle breeder, but is well worth serious consideration on the part of breeders of pure-bred cattle.

A little planning ahead at this season will make possible better production and better profits from the cows; better fed calves and better show calves; and better farm organization next year.

Date of Freshening, by Seasons, with Average Yearly Feed and Production Records, per Cow.

Season	Number of Cows	Milk production Pounds	Butter-fat production Pounds	Cost of roughage	Cost of grain	Cost of feed	Income over cost of feed
Spring—March, April and May	8196	5842	236	$37.51	$19.22	$56.73	$70.73
Summer—June, July and August	1328	5941	236	$37.62	$22.48	$60.10	$66.39
Fall—September, October and November	2862	6689	263	$38.94	$28.45	$67.39	$76.65
Winter—December, January and February	3484	6439	258	$37.65	$25.51	$63.16	$75.66
Total and averages	10,870	6269	252	$37.95	$24.06	$62.01	$73.36

This article by Prof. F. W. Atkeson, head of the department of dairy husbandry at the State College of Agriculture, University of Idaho, will be read with interest by all local dairymen for several reasons. It has as its subject a matter upon which all progressive dairymen are agreed—fall calving. Furthermore, it gives facts and figures on production and prices received across the boundary. These figures may be used as a comparison with local conditions.

Next week's Farm Page will have a large table showing served and due dates. It should be pasted on cardboard and hung in the barn for handy reference.

HOME AIDS HELP WOMEN ON FARM

Pay Their Costs Many Times Over in Leisure and Comfort.

A NEW DIGNITY.

No one has profited more by labor-saving machines than farm women. Her own sphere has never been more fully and ably filled than it is to-day. Many more young women are in schools than young men; and in high schools and colleges young women have taken their place alongside the sterner sex, assuming a new dignity, fitting themselves for greater usefulness and contributing in a large measure to the progress of the land and the whole world.

Why is all this true? Because mothers and daughters are no longer needed at the spinning wheels and the looms. Knitting needles have given way to books and papers; a hundred and one mechanical devices have been brought to the home, decreasing the manifold demands upon women, preparing the labors of the home in a tenth of effort. Fifty years ago farm women took all of the day and much of the night to do the home work, to run the spinning wheels and to weave and make clothing. We have more clothing at but small part of the cost in comparison with what our forebears had a half century ago. Machines have brought rest to the body and have clothed us with better and cheaper raiment.

It is well to recall these things in order to appreciate the radical changes that have taken place in agriculture and in the farm home. Man has put thought into steel and iron, and wind and sun and plant and soil, and has given tools to replace labor and recreation to replace drudgery. Not many years hence the farm home will be equipped generally with modern lights, modern heating plants, bathrooms and sewage disposal, and all the modern conveniences of use and service. Many of these homes possess them now. When farm women "spunk up" and join a programme for a more universal adoption of mechanical devices and home conveniences, these will follow as similar labor-saving devices have come to the barns and fields. It is up to the women now.

CUTS WORLD'S WHISKERS.

The American safety razor is given the credit of having conquered the Spanish beard. On account of the heaviness of their beard, the Spanish men generally shave much less than those of other countries and the result was they presented a rather unshorn appearance. The visit to the barber was a serious matter and the Spaniard selected his barber as other men would select a dentist, the one that was the least painful. But the American safety raozr is said to have overcome this and the men are not only enabled to shave themselves, but to shave more frequently.

Scots Are Good Farmers Show Records of Yields

Whether they want to or not the Scots will have to admit that they are better farmers than the Englishmen, at least the average yields from the northern portion of the kingdom are higher than they are in the south, the following being official figures of the averages for the ten years, 191221:

Wheat—Scotland, 39.3 bushels per acre; England, 30.3 bushels.
Barley— Scotland, 35.3 bushels; England, 30.9 bushels.
Oats—Scotland, 39.3 bushels; England, 38.9 bushels.
Beans—Scotland, 36.7 bushels; England, 27.3 bushels.
Turnips and swedes—Scotland, 16.6 tons per acre; England, 12.1 tons.

THE APPLE IS KING OF PERFECT FOOD

Has Many Advantages Over All Other Fruit—An Apotheosis.

By Dr. HAYDN BROWN, L.R.C.P. Fellow of the Royal Society of Medicine and of the Royal Institute of Public Health; author of "Vitality and Diet," etc.

As a perfect article of food surely the apple stands supreme. It exhibits sheer assurance of very great worth, even if you merely judge it from outside appearance. Its two contrasting sides present an artistic variation of suggestive complexion which compels instant calculation of outer and inner values, whether it be picked out by epicure or animal. The "rosy apple" you say, when you approach a tree of them and cannot help selecting the ones which are specially so. Does not this very example of contrast in nature seductively invite you simply to take your choice out of so many? Ar you not drawn to free selection as a lapidary is at once keen to single out the more precious examples, from a miscellaneous heap which he has very easily happened on?

No wonder that the words, "tree of life," "apples of gold," "apples of Eve," have through all evolution's æons come to be expressions indicating superlative value. Even the "apple of discord" implies a nadir that truly indicates its very zenith—the first fruit of eternal life—as certainly as a round earth signifies seasons.

You are taught through the eye to appreciate; for, otherwise, what would be the meaning of attractive coloring? The fact that all special structures vary in nature shows clearly that you are expressly invited to discriminate. It is expected of you that you make intelligent choice. And to ignore is surely going a long way towards conveying common insult. And, mark you, to question the dictates of nature is as really offensive as to court crass foolishness itself—sometimes of a kind that involves rapidly fatal consequences, as almost everyone knows. There are uniformly red berries which kill. It is left for us to learn these things, for all the use that true knowledge may be to us regarding nature's behests.

As certainly as the color on a fair maiden's cheek may compete successfully when royalties make their choice, so do we find corresponding insignia compelling preferential regard in nature's vast store of smaller good things that grow. Nor can you overlook the bloom; mere mist you may imagine it; but a telling tribute all the same—significant of finely wrought texture and the letting through of rich coloration—as gently and ethereally laid on as a gossamer veil partly concealing the priceless tinctures and wonderful essentials within.

Here you have fine food. Also good medicine. Can you deny these qualities, as though they were not?

While fruit is one of nature's first pharmacoporial protectives against disease germs of the interior, actually made for cleansing, at the same time constituting a perfect blood purifier, we cannot avoid feeling astonished and incontinently grateful as we comprehend the wonderful advantages which some of its best representatives offer.

The apple is the finest dentifrice in existence. Its hard juicy substance quickly cleanses the teeth from impurities while it is being eaten.

The smooth skin protects the rare esences within from any contamination by handling, storing, or conveying. If ever there were a food item that could take first place as God-given for very special purposes, it is the apple—a fruit that is easily transferable to every corner of the earth, whether in hot climes or cold—in great variety of appearance and flavor.

Receives Compensation For Loss Of Blind Eye

ST. PAUL, Minn., Dec. 27.—(United Press).—N. E. Moeggard has won his claim for compensation for the loss of the "sight' of a sightless eye.

Moeggard was born blind in one eye. While employed by the Minneapolis street car company Moeggard's useless optic was damaged so that it had to be removed. The Minnesota Labor Board awarded the injured man compensation at the rate of $18 a week for 102 weeks.

An appeal by the street car company was decided Friday by the Minnesota Supreme Court with a ruling that the removal of a sightless eye necessitated by an injury sustained while at work entitled the injured man to be compensated under the Workmen's Compensation Act.

DO YOUR SHOPPING IN THE VALLEY.

Things lose weight as they go up. They lose at the rate of a millionth part of their weight for every ten feet of ascent. The reason why is easily understood, it is because the force of gravity lessens the altitude.

SHOULD REDUCE FEED PURCHASE

Uneconomical to Buy Food That Can Be Grown More Cheaply.

GROW TO LIMIT.

A farmer told me the other day that feeding stuffs to the value of over $500,000 were sold to farmers in his district last year. These feeds included not only ground concentrates of the protein order, but corn and hay. I know the place very well. It is a splendid farming section, but the farmers failed to raise all the feed they required.

"Yet," this friend said to me, "not only was it possible to raise a supply of feed equal to that purchased, but also another quantity double the amount to sell."

These farmers will correct this fault or live to regret their plan of action. The farm is a place to raise things, not a place to consume purchased things that can be raised at home. There are few farms raising their limit of food crops. I believe in buying grain concentrates to balance the home-raised carbohydrates. But I have never yet seen an average general farm on which grain and live stock are raised that could buy hay and corn cheaper than these same farmers could produce these crops, or barley instead of corn.

In the first place, feeds raised to replace purchased feeds are really sold at the farm at the cost that you would give for what you buy. This portion of the farm feed—when you buy it—is expensive feed; it costs big money. When you raise it you make it unnecessary to buy; hence you save or sell—whichever you choose to call the method of accounting. Look right now at the open cornfields standing bare. Were these same fields seeded to rye, or crimson clover, they would yield a lot of green field both for this winter and the early spring. Such a field will almost support a bunch of pigs, or the brood sows—and both pigs and sows would be in better health for the exercise in gathering food.

Moreover, the rye or other winter-growing food would pick up plant food that might otherwise leach away, and this same rye, eaten by hogs or sheep, would lessen the demands on the barley bin and mow. The saving here may in itself be sufficient to make it unnecessary to purchase either hay or grain next spring. There are many ways of adding other acres to the farm without adding to the acreage, one of which is to keep every acre busy all the time. The best way to let a field rest is to cover it with a growth of clover, cowpeas or other legume. It will freshen up the physical and plant food condition so thoroughly that the other crops coming after will increase their yields.

Look at it any way you will, our problem is to grow feed crops to the full limit to feed our live stock better and at cheaper cost. Our great trouble is that we are all wild about growing plant crops for human beings. We are neglecting plant crops for the livestock. As a consequence, we have gigantic, potato and vegetable crops, often marketed at less than cost. Had we been content with a fair acreage of wheat during the past five or six years we would have had no wheat losses. All that saved our skins this year was a 13 per cent. shortage in food crops in other parts of the world. Next year it will be the same story over again. An old philosopher who exclaimed, "What fools we mortals be," was just about right.

Anyway, when I find all the other people rushing to wheat or potatoes or other crops because a small world shortage boosted the price, I am going to turn about and grow something that all the other folk are abandoning. Or I will stick to my usual acreage, not increase it. It is the only way to keep the farm balanced.

SENTIMENTAL.

A church in N. J. has been criticized by some editors for spending $4,000 in a year to keep a tree alive. It's pointed out, how much good could be done with the $4,000.

The answer to this is that the $4,000 wouldn't be made available by its contributors, for any other purpose. This tree happens to be the oldest oak in the state. It was planted 400 years ago. No price is too high, for keeping alive a worthy sentiment or tradition. We already have entirely too much of time clocks and other "practical things."

BEADING USED.

Beading in colors and embroidery is being used on cloth of gold gowns and wraps.

OLD BOYS PLAY AT "Y" TO-NIGHT

Some of the Stars of Yesterday, Home on Holidays, in Line-up.

MEET HOME TEAM.

All basketball fans of the city should take a tip and drop around to the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium this evening if they want to feed their eyes on the game. Doug. Loomis promises something good.

A team composed of players who first threw at a basket and learned the game in the local "gym," but who have sought greener fields far-away, now home on the Christmas vacation, will play a team composed of All Stars who still find Peterborough a profitable field. This looks like the real thing. On the Old Boy's line up, not many of them are old, are "Benny" McClean and "Lis" Hopkins now of Cleveland who won fame as the battery for the Woollens' fast-climbing softball team and who played forward on the "Y" junior team two years back. Also "Alex" Elliott who played the centre position for the junior team of the same year and who is now with the Osgoode Hall quintette. He will play at his old corner. Then there is "Hip" Hardill who played with the others, now travelling for the Westclox, will play guard. "Angie" McCleod of the old Intermediate squad, now located in Detroit, will play the defence with Hardill.

Against this array, Mr. Loomis will have to call upon his best and he claims he has a team that will stop them.

The basketball outlook in the city this year is not very bright and there may not be a team entered in the O.A.B.H. However, there will likely be a good city league and this will keep the boys in trim and bring along some new material.

Bruce Copping caught a place on McGill University's fast Intermediate basketball squad, but he may not be able to continue in their games owing to a short illness which kept him out of the practices of the last few weeks.

ALLEN-LEBARR GAME SLATED FOR MONDAY

Families Clash at the Arena at 6 O'clock.

The hockey game between Herb. Allens brood and Lew LeBarr's clan is stated to take place on Monday evening at six o'clock at the Brock street igloo. This game is not to conclude a family fued but is the most friendly affair. Not much is known of the hockey ability of the Allen's but the LeBarr outfit is prominent in local athletic circles. However, the game is creating real interest and their will be a crowd out to see it. It promises to be a struggle that will rival those remembered struggles in which the Kiwanians and the Rotarians did combat.

WANTS TO WIN TITLE.

Roger Couti Declines Willie Hoppe's Christmas Gift.

PARIS, Dec. 27.— Roger Conti, French billiard star after reading despatches from New York reporting that Willie Hoppe had said he would give him the world's title as a "Christmas gift because of the former's record-breaking performance last Wednesday when he ran 477 in 18.2 championship declared:—

"I am deeply at the generosity of my eminent rival and friend, Hoppe. In the course of three worlds championships in which I have participated in the United States, I have learned to appreciate the wonderful playing which has made him universally recognized as the world's champion billiardist. However, if some day I am to become champion of the world, I must win the championship with a cue and not through a Christmas gift."

VILLA FIGHT CALLED OFF.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27. — Bill Kenny, representing Johnny Breslin, who was to have gone to Manila, P. I., for a 20-round decision fight with world's champion Pancho Villa on February 22, has called the trip off.

SOCCER SUPPLANTING BULLFIGHTS IN SPAIN

Professor Ortega Talks of Popularity of New Sport There and Discusses Spanish Politics.

Bull fights are passing out in favor of English soccer football as the favorite sport of Spain according to Professor J. Oretga of the Spanish department of the University of Wisconsin, who recently returned from conducting an American student tour in Spain during the summer months.

"The people of Spain are building large stadia holding 35,00 spectators They run their games on Sunday afternoon in competition with the bull fights, and the football takes the people," said Professor Oretga. "The kids who used to play at bull-fighting, now are playing football in the streets like American boys. The Spanish people are fitted for English soccer by their size and agility. They never could play the American style football. They can play there all year around, and the game requires greater agility, vision and skill than the slow American game.

"Sports in Spain are entirely separate from the universities. The University of Madrid is an old building in the heart of the city, much like an old house, and is exclusively an academic affair," explained Professor Oretga. "Different city and regional clubs foster the sports of Spain. All of these clubs have English names—the Athletic Club—the Racing club, the National club—are purely social affairs. Also the sport vocabulary is entirely English terms —tennis, cricket, soccer, are all written and spoken in English. The clubs play each other and the contest narrows down to inter-regional championships. Eight or ten regions play off the contest, until possibly the championship is between Leon and Castile. Then the excitement runs high.

"A Spanish crowd surely can show 'pep.' No organized cheering like that of stiff, unresponsive Americans. The whole excitement is spontaneous and when 30,000 throats burst suddenly forth with 'Bravo!'—then you hear real cheering.

"The players in Spain are sons of aristocrats bankers and men of highest esteem in the cities. There is no professional sport type as in America. The clubs pay their players enormous salaries and upon their skill and agility and vision rests their popularity."

JUNIOR TEAM HAD WORKOUT

Campbellford Boys Play High School Team—To Meet Hastings.

COME ON WELL.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 27.—The Junior hockey team had their best work-out yet, playing a practice game against the High School team last night. They are rapidly rounding into shape, and most of them could go a full game without relief now. Coach Archie Wood thinks they are just about good enough to take a fall out of the highly-touted Hastings Intermediates when they hook up with them in an exhibition game at Covert's Arena next Tuesday night. They visit the Tannery Town Monday night, and all the boys will be given a chance to show their wares in a regular game.

JUNIOR CURLERS ELECT OFFICERS

Doug. Widdess President—Applications Should Be Sent in at Once.

The Junior Curling Club made plans for the present season in their first meeting yesterday afternoon held in the Curling Club's quarters. This club was organized last year. It consisted of nine rinks, formed for the greater part of students of the P.C.I. This year they plan to fill the full quota of 40 members allowed them by the parent organization, the Peterboro Curling Club. A membership fee of one dollar will be charged, and all those wishing to join should get their names in early. The ice will be at the disposal of the boys during the afternoons of the holidays and throughout the season. A big bonspiel will be held near the end of the season. The skips will be chosen shortly and a schedule got underway.

The following were elected: President, Douglas Widdess; Vice-President, Robert Cormack; Secretary-Treasurer, Warde McDonald; Executive: Bruce Fraser, Walter Rye, William Cormack and Alan Killaly.

Alex. Kay is the sponsor of the Junior Club, and lends it his full support.

THE SPEED OF THE FINGERS

The fingers of the right hand are quicker and more accurate than those of the left.

The ring finger of the left hand shows speed whenever it can work with the forefinger of the right hand; and it slows down noticeably when it must team with the middle finger of the left hand.

Two fingers working together are faster than one going alone. And a combination of two fingers on opposite hands is faster than two fingers on the same hand.

FEW HINTS ON FARM MOTORS

Reasons Why Engines Are Hard to Start—Points in Favor of Honey in Anti-Freeze Mixture.

FORD DONATION.

When an engine is hard to start, a large number of drivers immediately jump to the conclusion that the carburetor requires adjusting, and proceed at once to "adjust" it. Strange to say, they sometimes find that it is impossible to adjust the carburetor so that the engine will start any easier. When the cold weather arrives it is usually necessary to adjust the carburetor, but before doing so one should be sure that the ignition system is in perfect condition and that a good spark occurs at the points of all spark plugs. The mixture from the carburetor may be perfect, but if the spark at the points of the plugs is weak or faint, it will not fire the charge quick enough and the engine will be hard to start.

"First," says E. H. Scott, "take out the spark plugs and examine them. The porcelains must be quite clean and dry and the gap set correctly. If the plugs have not been removed from the engine for some time, it is practically certain that the points will be burned away slightly, making a gap a little too wide for easy starting. First brighten the points with a piece of fine sandpaper. A well worn dime makes a good gauge to set the plug points with. For Ford cars set the gap so that the dime will just pass between the points, but for all other cars the gap should be just a trifle less than the thickness of a worn dime.

Examine Gaskets.

"Before replacing the plugs in the cylinders, see that the copper gaskets on the plugs are in good condition. If they fail to make a tight joint between the plug and the cylinder, you will have an air leak that will make the engine hard to start. When replacing wire on the plug treminals do not use a pair of pliers with which to tighten the nuts or you may twist the centre electrode and alter the spacing of the gap at the points of the plug.

"Now test to see if the contact breaker, distributor, coil and battery are O.K. An easy way to do this is to replace the plugs in the cylinders and attach the ignition wires, but leave one wire lying on top of a plug terminal so that when the engine is started, you can lift it off. When the engine begins to fire, lift the wire off the plug and hold the end of it about 3-16" away from any metal part of the engine. If you notice a good snappy spark passing from the end of the wire, you can be fairly certain that the ignition system is in good condition. If, however, you have to hold the end of the wire close to the metal part before a spark passes, then it is a sure indication that either the contact breaker, coil or battery require attention.

Take off Dust and Grease.

If the spark is very weak, unsnap the clips at side of distributor head and pull it off, leaving the wires attached. This will expose the rotor arms and contact points. First take a piece of cloth and wipe all dust or grease off the distributor both inside and out. If there are a series of small pins inside the distributor head, brighten them up with a piece of fine sandpaper. If there are flat brass segments, polish them with some metal polish.

"Now remove the rotor arm and examine the condition of the contact breaker points. Insert the hand crank and turn the engine over slowly until you notice the points open at their widest gap. If it is more than this, it is likely that the points require dressing up and setting at the correct gap. The gap at the contact point varies on different systems and runs from .015" to .025", and it is important that it be exactly correct.

TAXICABS MADLY DRIVEN RULE SANTIAGO STREETS

Bus Operators Take Advantage of Withdrawal of Number of Tramways.

SANTIAGO, Chili, Dec. 27. — A score of motor trucks, hastily converted into rude motor buses during a tramway strike in 1923, was the start given to the motor-bus industry here, in which at least four millions of dollars are onw invested.

The streets in every part of the city are crowded with the buses, large and small, cheap and expensive, imported and home-assembled and a serious problem in traffic control has thereby arisen.

The bus operators have taken advantage of the traction company's withdrawal of a large number of tramways, due to its failure to obtain a fare increase, and it is now estimated that the buses have taken about 20 per cent of the traction company's business.

The fact that the traffic laws here are poorly enforced is responsible for the heavy accident toll caused by reckless driving on the part of green or careless bus chauffeurs. The death and injured rate has risen so high recently that the municipal authorities have awakened to the need for stricter regulation.

However, no one has yet deterred the bus drivers from running their machines at a speed of from 25 to 40 miles an hour even in the center of the city. The Santiago police have had no efficient training in traffic direction. At the same time the penalties for traffic rules violations are mild.

GERMANY SEES HOPE IN PROMISE OF NEW YEAR

Drs. Dawes and Young Consulted Over Fevered Nation and Their Prescription is Being Taken With High Hope of a Complete Cure.

By CARL D. GROAT

BERLIN, Dec. 27. — (United Press)—Germany is completing a year of reason and reconstruction —the first since the war.

Just as madness marked the year 1923, so did common sense and a forward looking spirit mark the year just closing.

The last vestiges of the insane, destructive inflation period were out and stability and conservation stepped to the fore.

The beginning of the year 1924 saw Germany passing through a convalescence crisis. It was shaking off the last of the inflation illness, and having a hard time getting through the recovery days. Credit was frightfully short; business was stagnant; and many firms were toppling day by day. Banks demanded interest running from 50 to 100 per cent per year.

Then came General Dawes, Owen Young and the other Dawes Plan experts. They sat as doctors in consultation over the fevered-inflation patient. Their verdict was that there was nothing intrinsically wrong with Germany. She was a going concern, a nation of sixty million with a patient, efficient, hardworking population. These experts opined that such a nation would not crumble if given a bit of support and something like a breathing spell.

The majority of the nation held the same view. The nationalists, however, held that the Dawes plan would cripple rather than aid Germany so they fought it to the last ditch, collapsing only at the 11th hour in the Reichstag.

Dawes Plan Turning Point.

The acceptance of the Dawes plan laws in the Reichstag marked the real turning point in German affairs. Unemployment, which last winter reached 1 3-4 million or more, had been cut by the end of this year to a figure around 300 to 400 thousand, with business in general looking up.

On the political side of things, Germany tended also to greater sanity. The putsch spirit of the fascisti and communists died with the ill-fated beer cellar coup of Hitler and Ludendorff. The Dawes plan further helped to put an end to the wild radicalism of these two extreme groups.

In May, a new Reichstag was elected, with the nationalists showing greater strength than previously, but the government was still the middle block which had hitherto ruled. One of the remarkable features of the last Reichstag was the presence therein of General Ludendorff, tried but freed of a treason charge as a result of his part in the Hitler putsch. Though he never opened his mouth in the Reichstag, Ludendorff continued throughout the year to play a leading role in fascisti matters.

In the fall, after the nationalists demanded their pound of flesh for voting favorably on the Dawes plan, a new cabinet crisis came, and elections were held on December 7th. These elections clearly indicated the weakening of the monarchists on one side and the communists on the other. The victory was for the carrying out of the Dawes plan and the continuance of the German Republic. No one of the many parties favorable to the Republic had a majority but the elements involved indicated clear continued Republican control of the Reichstag by a party combination.

Germany Regains Pride.

In the realm of scientific achievement the year was marked by the completion of the American reparation Zeppelin ZR-3 with its successful transfer from Friedrichtshaven to Lakehurst, New Jersey, U.S.A. This event, with its favorable impression in America, had far reaching effects in Germany. It tended to create an unified national pride and national spirit which had been lacking to a great degree since the war.

Germany looks out on the future with a great deal of more confidence than at any time since the war. Though she still has to contend with numerous troubles, such as high costs of living, taxation and the like, there is nevertheless an air of serenity and a great deal more of well-being than has been the case since the war.

There are many prophets who forsee that the Dawes plan has not brought the millennium as its warmest advocates predicted. Germany will fulfill her obligations if that is humanly possible, according to all in touch with the national policy.

But many foresee that the Dawes plan is not only a temporary thing which will require a new reparation adjustment probably within another year. Germany is rapidly being freed of French occupation, and the nation as a whole prefers a sensible and reasonable payment of reparations to sanctions of Poincareites.

This is a hopeful symptom which justifies the statement that Germany is very much on the mend.

FUN

What did we do for amusement before we had the movie and auto? People often ask. For one thing, we worked longer hours and did not have much spare time. Many spent their evenings with a bottle at the poor man's club on the corner.

Prohibition paved the way for radio, mah jongg, crossword puzzles and an endless chain of similar diversions to follow. We'll have a lot of time-killing fads as years slip by and people seek new substitutes for alcoholic exhilaration.

THEATRES

AT THE GRAND.

"THIS WOMAN IS MINE."

There will be an added attraction to the entertainment at the Grand Opera House on the first three days of next week, when a double vaudeville act will supplement the regular picture programme.

The feature picture for Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday will be the romantic production "This Woman is Mine," a picture centred about the ever old, ever new problem of man and woman, a production that is taking by storm the restless population of present-day America and shattering all records of romance. It pictures the ebb and flow of passion and love and excitement, the constant working of the ferment of modern existence, and shows in its filming some of the brighter and the darker sides of life as it is lived in modern times that are said to rival ancient ages in their every-hurrying pace.

With good and catchy music, a fund of irresistible mirth, fun, wit and humor and a bevy of pretty girls and other original features and ingredients, there is every reason to predict one of the most successful engagements of the season at the Grand, commencing January 3rd. The event will be the appearance in the flesh of America's most famous destroyers of gloom and depression, Mutt and Jeff. From all accounts the noted Bud Fisher cartoon creations have never had a better opportunity of displaying their ability to arouse wholesome laughter than in their latest medium, a two-act comedy by John P. Mulgrew and Leo Edwards. The offering permits Mutt and Jeff to indulge in a series of amusing and side-splitting complications and situations. From start to finish, it is promised, they will be the central figures in a bedlam of joy and happiness, besides establishing their right as two of the foremost laugh getters in the history of American enterprise and production. Mutt and Jeff are a real institution and favorites of long standing. That their reputation will be enhanced and perpetuated in this instance goes without saying. At any rate their million of admirers throughout the world may be assured that they will have plenty of opportunity to acclaim them which is something to boast of in this age of progress and ever-changing fashions.

AT THE ROYAL.

MORE BABIES THAN IN ANY OTHER FILM.

"What Shall I Do?" Breaks Record for Number of Infant Players.

Frank Woods, author-producer of "What Shall I Do?" the Dorothy Mackail feature which comes to the Royal Theatre for a three day run next Monday, started something when he staged a baby show in the Fairbanks-Pickford studio at Los Angeles to choose the prettiest and most intelligent baby for an important part in the picture.

One hundred and fifty mothers with their young hopefuls between the ages of eight and eighteen months responded to the invitation to compete. It is said that after the final selection both Sheriff W. I. Trager and Police Judge James Pope who acted as judges, left the studio by a rear entrance in order to avoid the 149 indignant mothers of unsuccessful candidates.

Some of the maternal wrath soon cooled, however, for Mr. Woods engaged between fifty and six.. infant cherubs to laugh and frolic in the unique prologue with which the story is introduced. The in addition to the five babies who have more or less important parts in the picture cause Mr. Woods to put forth the claim that more babies play a part in "What Shall I Do?" than in any single motion picture that has ever been made.

"What Shall I Do?" is the story of a young wife deserted by her husband and forced to fight single handed for her baby's life and her own existence. In support of Miss Mackail in the leading role, appear John Harron, Louise Dresser, and William V. Mong.

BENNY LEONARD AT ROYAL.

Benny Leonard, the lightweight champion in the "Flying Fists" series of prize ring stories, will be seen again on Monday at the Royal. A Larry Semon action comedy also accompanies the big production, "What Shall I Do?"

FILM DRAMA OF OPEN COUNTRY

"The Beloved Brute" is full of Action and Suspense.

"The Beloved Brute," which will be shown at the Royal Theatre on New Year's Day, is a picture of open spaces, the dance hall, the travelling circus, and a near-lynching bee. It features Marguerite de la Motte, Victor McLaglen, William Russell, Mary Alden and Stuart Holmes. It is filled with exciting situations that grow upon the mountainsides and plains.

Two brothers love the same dance hall girl, and one saves the other from being lynched by claiming to have committed a murder. In the finale the girl saves them both by proving neither of them committed it. The photodrama is an adaptation from the famous novel by Kenneth Perkins made into a screen production by J. Stuart Blackton.

AT THE CAPITOL.

The popular Reginald Denny in "The Fast Worker" is the feature picture at the Capitol Theatre for this week-end. The versatile Reginald is at his best in the role of a man who assumes a friend's name to help him in a commercial fight, and involves himself in all manner of perilous situations. The high spot of the picture is the sensational race in which the hero stars in a real thrilling speed episode.

The comedy that accompanies the feature, Mack Sennett's latest "Lizzies of the Field," is a hilarious affair, all about a Ford race, and holds plenty of laughs.

The story of "The Fast Worker" deals with a man who agrees, to help assume his friend's identity and a friend wage a commercial fight, to assume his friend's identity and prove an alibi. Richard Tucker plays the harassed financier; Denny is the friend.

Denny starts gaily on a trip west under his friend's name and then, to his comic dismay (finds he has a "wife" and a "daughter"—his friend's family—to play paterfamilas to. The consequent dismay is something hilarous to behold—and added to that, there's a "sister-in-law," played by Miss La Plante, with whom he promptly falls in love. But in this state he discovered that his problems were only beginning.

Grief galore results—the "scandal" for the "married man" and the "sister-in-law" attracts the attention of the Summer visitors at Catalina—then the attention of the house detective, and an investigation discloses that the "husband" isn't a husband at all and the sheriff camps on his trail.

A sensational climb on a fifth-story pergola—a fight—a wild dash in an automobile when "hubby" and "sister-in-law" escape for their honeymoon are thrillers of the first water—with comedy relief for every twist of the story. This is still more so when the lovers discover after their mad fight that their haste was all in vain, for everything had been settled.

Denny's whimsical humor was never better exemplified than in the role of the husband-by-request, and Miss La Plante's blonde beauty and piquant personality are alluring and charming.

Ethel Grey Terry makes a statuesque and aristocratic "wife" for the hero, and Muriel Frances Dana is seen as the troublesome and mischievous small daughter, who keeps her "Daddy" in hot water continually.

Excellent character roles are adequately filled by Margaret Campbell, John Steppling, T. D. Crittenden and Clarissa Selwynne.

Betty Morrissey plays a flirtatious blonde flapper opposite Lee Moran, who proves just as funny as in his Lyons-Moran days in the eccentric role of a pampered son of the rich.

NORMA TALMADGE, In "Secrets," at the Capitol, Three days, next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

SCREEN PLAY FOLLOWS STAGE PLOT CLOSELY.

"Secrets" Adapted To Film With Fidelity To Original.

Norma Talmadge's screen version of the stage drama, "Secrets," at the CAPITOL Theatre, next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, has been filmed almost as it was played on the stage.

For the first time since the evolution of the cinema a stage play has been transposed to the screen in identically original form. The mooted question as to whether such a transpositon could be made without alteration has at last been answered.

Frances Marion prepared the screen script of Edgar Selwyn's smashing New York stage success, which Frank Borzage directed with Miss Talmadge and Eugene O'Brien heading a celebrated cast. Miss Marion found that the dramatic devices upon which the stage play revolved could be applied as well to the screen production.

Instead of altering the action and tampering with the motives and idea of the story as it is often charged continuity writers do, Miss Marion divided off the stage manuscript according to camera scenes, added a few exterior scenes ,and handed it over to Producer Joseph M. Schenck with the original dramatic form intact.

Mr. Schenck, Miss Talmadge and Director Borzage all concurred after a study of her script that it was adequate for the screen presentation, so the finished job is the stage play in celluoid.

The spoken words were converted into subtitles, which means that the subtitles for the most part will be conversational helping to develop the action of the story rather than to cover elapses of time.

In "Secrets," Norma Talmadge has again for her leading man Eugene O'Brien, the most poplar male support with whom she has ever played. The Talmadge-O'Brien combination was broken up a year ago when O'Brien decided to return to the stage, but public demand was so persistent that Producer Schenck was compelled to lure O'Brien back to the screen.

"Secrets" is Norma Talmadge's greatest picture. In this Joseph M. Schneck production Norma plays four roles, that of a girl, a young mother, a middleaged matron and an aged woman. The picture is cast in four periods, 1923, 1888, 1870 and 1865, and the action takes place both in the far West and in modern society settings. In all four periods Norma displays a remarkable range of characterization.

Frank Borzage, of "Humoresque" fame, directed "Secrets," with the veteran Gaetano Gaudio as his cameraman. Heading Norma's supporting cast is Eugene O'Brien, the "perfect lover, and a famous star of both stage and screen.

CAVE KNOWN TO INDIANS CONTAINED FORTY ROOMS

Largest Room is 100 Feet Long by 30 Feet High and 15 Feet Wide.

DENVER, Dec. 26—Colorado's newest underground cave, already known to contain 40 rooms, will be explored further with a view to establishing its availability as a national monument. Coloradoans who have penetrated the subterranean passages declare, when exploration work has been completed, the cavern will rival the Cave of the Winds near Colorado Springs, known to thousands of tourists.

The largest room in the cave is 100 feet long, 30 feet high and 15 feet wide, according to J. M. Eubanks, a homesteader who has done most of the exploration work. The smallest room is about six feet square.

There still is much exploring to be done. This includes a search for the opening, believed to be somewhere in the rugged, rolling hills of Park county probably covered with timber and underbrush.

Mr. Eubanks says the cave has three levels. The rooms are filled with stalactites and stalagmites, many of weird shape. A serpent is clearly defined in the figures. A crown crest is shown, and an Indian moccasin is easily discerned. On the upper level two large rooms have been named the Queen's Chamber, because of their great beauty. Temperatures within the cavern are about the same winter and summer. The main formation is limestone and magnetic iron ore.

The cave is 18 miles north of Salida and 25 miles southeast of Buena Vista, near the Fremont county line. The property derived its name, Porcupine Cave, from the fact that porcupines live within it.

FABLES ON HEALTH

HOW WE BREATHE.

Did you ever stop to wonder how you breathe?

Most people, like Mr. Mann of Anytown, took this function for granted as he did most of the bodily functionings.

To begin with, the body is supplied with nerve-muscle apparatus that expands and contracts the best in the movements of breathing. Air is breathed to supply oxygen to the blood for use of body cells. In exhalation carbon dioxide is given off as a waste product.

Oxygen is carried by the blood to the various tissues there to be burned as fuel, creating water which is given off through the lungs and skin as vapor and through the kidneys. The process is just about the same as the burning of coal and wood.

Calls for oxygen depend largely upon bodily activity, and when the muscles are in use, as in exercise, the calls are more frequent.

The mechanism centres in a group of cells called the respiratory centre which govern the muscular movements in respiration and which dwell in the lower part of the brain, being known as the medulla oblongata.

Control of the mechanism is entirely unconscious and a complete smoothness of operation is assured when regular usage is adhered to.

This is one of the strong arguments for regular exercises, which enable a person to exert himself without discomfort. An active muscular life is a great aid to keeping the respiratory machine in good condition.

PUZZLE

In the insane asylum at North Warren, Pa., inmates are wildly enthusiastic about crossword puzzles. Physicians say there is little effect, one way or the other, on the patients' minds. It neither improves nor makes them worse. Which should comfort many a wife who fears the crossword craze may unbalance Friend Husband's mentality.

To the contrary, any kind of puzzle is good brain exercise.

PLAN AIR ROUTE TRANS-ATLANTIC

No Realization of Plans in Immediate Future—Huge Airships Being Built.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—(Canadian Press)—A trans-atlantic commercial air service will not be realized in the immediate future but will come eventually with the development of airships of huge capacity, said Brig. Gen. Lord Thompson in an interview yesterday. Lord Thompson formerly a minister of the British labour cabinet, arrived here last Wednesday.

The big airship is the great factor in future air craft development," he said, "and we are now building at Cardington a ship of 5,000,00 cubic feet gas capacity. Another is being constructed by a group of interests including Vickers Ltd., It is expected that these two ships will be ready in 1926, one of them to undertake, a flight to India via Egypt.

Both will be of a type suitable for troop carrying and for the transportation of airplanes. In addition, the government is reconditioning several ships of the "R" design.

IS YOUR HUSBAND ALSO A FRIEND?

Are You Pals? Frankness Between Husband and Wife is a Fine Thing and Much Too Rare.

BY CYNTHIA GREY

You probably are a good wife.

Most women are. But are you a good pal?

Or have you let marriage turn you from a chummy girl into a cross between a school teacher, a maiden aunt and an angel on a pedestal?

Have you your husband's friendship as well as his love and respect?

Does he dare to tell you when he's lost $10 playing poker?

Does he still enjoy having you go fishing or hiking with him?

He may love and respect you, but unless you still are his best pal and playmate, you are not making of your married life the happy thing it ought to be!

That doesn't mean, of course, that the minute your best beloved comes home at night you ought to run to him cutely and say:

"Let's go out for dinner, and dance somewhere afterwards. Let's call up the Browns and make a night of it!"

Rather, it means comradeship. It means talking to your husband about the things that interest him—making a hobby of him as you used to do in the pre-marriage days when you were doing your best to "bag" him.

It means listening to him when he tells you how things went wrong at the office that day. It means being a silent partner in his career.

It even means laughing when he tells you the same stories of his boyhood that he has told you twenty times before, instead of sarcastically asking, "Where have I heard that before?"

Just because you happen to be married to a man, you have no more right to be rude to him than you have to any other nice man of your acquaintance.

I know a very brilliant man whose silly little wife is forever apologizing to her hostesses because he "talks so much."

The truth of the matter is that most people are glad to have him at their houses because he is sure to make a party "go."

Frankness between a husband and wife is a fine thing and much too rare.

The slangy slogan, "Get it off your chest," would make many marriages much more human and happy than they are.

Husbands and wives have an unwholesome way of bottling up their hurts and wounded feelings for weeks until the inevitable family row over a late dinner or some such triviality, stirs them up. Then the truth comes out.

"Yes, and don't forget how you treated me the other night at the show!" the wife will shrill, "Talking to that Mrs. King all evening and never even looking my way once!"

"I looked often enough to see what a good time you were having with King!" the husband will retort in kind.

You see, what the quarrel really is about is not the late dinner at all, but the jealously over the Kings that both have been nursing for days and days!

And this is often true of family jars. The real cause of them is obscure and deep-seated—not at all what it seems to be on the surface.

If married people were as frank with each other as they are with their friends—if they were good pals to each other—it would bring marriage very close to the ideal.

FRENCH REPORT EXCLUDES DEBT TO THE ALLIES

Balance Sheet by Ministry of Finance Includes Dawes Plan Annuities.

DEBTS DISCUSSED

French Cling to Hope of Special Treatment in Final Finding of War Bill.

PARIS, Dec. 29. — (Canadian Press).—France's war debts to the United States and Great Britain, amounting close to 31,000,000,000 gold francs, are absent from the liabilities of the French treasury as shown in a balance sheet issued by the French treasury as shown in a balance sheet issued by the French ministry of finance.

The amounts due France from other countries including Russia, for war and post-war advances, amounting to 15,000,000,000 gold francs are also not included in the assets. The inventory was issued "for non-party purposes" with the view of creating confidence by a clean breast of the facts, as the document says.

On the other hand 13,000,000,000 paper francs as the capitalization of the French share in the Dawes plan annuities, are included in the assets.

Part of Allied Pool.

Although the figures are omitted from the balance sheet, inter-allied debts are freely discussed throughout several pages of the inventory, finance minister Clementel renewing the French thesis that these debts form part of the general allied resources pooled in war time. He argues that a strict equity would seem to demand a general addition of war expenses and their distribution among the allies in proportion to the wealth of each, without taking into account special undertakings imposed momentary necessities.

The finance minister insists that France, therefore, is entitled to special treatment. He remarks in the inventory that the choice of French soil as a battlefield saved the allies much blood and money. He also avers that America and Great Britain pocketed duties on profits made by British and United States firms which fulfilled French wartime orders. He suggests that the amount of these duties should be deducted from the French debt.

M. Clementel concludes his statement by declaring that France has no intention of repudiating her debts but that she is convinced an appeal to conscience and the sentiments of justice of the allies will not be in vain.

TOWN HAD GLOOMY DAY BECAUSE OF BANK CRASH

Milford, Ind., Had Little Christmas Money With $200,000 Stolen by Trusted Citizen.

WARSAW, Ind., Dec. 29.—"Merry Christmas!" had a hollow sound as a greeting in the little town of Milford, twelve miles north of here. The word "merry" did not express the feeling of the people of the community. They had not forgotten how James T. Shepherd betrayed their confidence, looted their bank and left their community in a state of financial paralysis.

James Shepherd, bank cashier, was the big man of the community. Every man, woman and child knew "Jim." They went to him for advice and they trusted him. Then, just at a time when they were preparing to celebrate the Christmas time, came the crash. The bank failed, and more than $200,000 disappeared like a cloud. "Jim" confessed that he stole the money, and confidence was turned to hate, and the Christmas spirit gave way to gloom.

As the result of the bank crash Santa Claus failed to make his appearance in many of the homes. Christmas entertainments, which were being planned, were cancelled.

The downfall of "Jim" Shepherd was a hard blow to the church. He was a trustee in the Methodist church and was always on hand to pass the basket and count the money when collections were taken. About $1,500 of the church's money was put in Shepherd's bank for safekeeping until it could be used to pay for the new parsonage. This money went with all the rest.

Anastasis Verigen, niece of Peter Verigen dead Doukhobor leader is striving to keep Peter's son from succeeding his father, it is reported. She wants the job herself, friends say. And they fear that in her ambition to obtain it she will attempt to have the son deported on his arrival in Brilliant, B.C., from Russia.

GAVE MILLIONS TO EMPLOYEES

"Happiest Christmas of My Life," Said Lumberman—Denies Being Radical.

MOST OF FORTUNE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29.— "All the persons participating in my Christmas gift need what I have given them, and I believe they, as well as myself, will find life much brighter in the future."

This was the explanation made by William McClelland Ritter, multi-millionaire head of the Ritter Lumber Company, who astonished the business world and his own employes by announcing a stock distribution which bankers estimate will approximate between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000.

Long Considered It.

In the library of his home in Massachusetts avenue, Mr. Ritter said he had been considering the plan for more than a year. He added:

"I have only done what I have wanted to do for some time. And I do not want to be considered radical or revolutionary."

The gifts, he explained, will go to the families of 124 of his employes, scattered through twelve States, and including telephone operators, clerks and department heads. Each beneficiary has been considered and investigated carefully by the donor.

The lumber man added:

"This was the happiest Christmas of my life."

Ritter's own Christmas was a quiet affair, celebrated at his home here. A modest little Christmas tree, no larger than those of the employes he has benefitted, stood in one corner of the library.

No "Strings" To Gift.

The stock will be held under a trust arrangement, although the gift itself is without "strings."

THIRTY STORES WIPED OUT IN SUNDAY BLAZE

Loss of Nearly Two Millions From Oil Heater's Fire.

CORINTH, Miss., Dec. 29.—(Canadian Press).—An entire business block on the west side of Court House Square here was destroyed by fire Sunday. The damage was estimated at between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000.

Buildings destroyed included the post office, a jewellery store, the old opera house, the Corinth Bank and Trust Company, and the Ford Museum.

The fire was believed to have started from an oil heater in a cafeteria.

Over thirty stores were destroyed by the fire, which, for a time threatened to wipe out the entire business district. After a six-hour fight in bitter cold, the fire department succeeded in confining it to the single block.

FARMERS OPPOSED TO GRANT TO DOMINIONS

"Monstrously Unfair," Says President of British Farm Union.

LONDON, Dec. 29.—(Canadian Press Cable)—Agriculturists of Great Britain are greatly perturbed over the proposal of the Baldwin Government to grant £1,000,000 to the British dominions for the purpose of improving facilities for marketing their farm products in the motherland.

At a large meeting of farmers Saturday at Worcester, President Rylands of the Farmers Union was asked whether the proposed grant would not be harmful to British agriculture and he replied that it would be monstrously unfair if the state, being unwilling to help the British farmers, was going to help the people in the overseas dominions to beat down prices in Great Britain. It would be the duty of the union, he said, to see that British agriculture would not suffer under the scheme.

200 PERSONS DEAD FROM NEW MYSTERIOUS DISEASE

The Victims Bleed Profusely From Nose, Mouth and Eyes and Turn Yellow After a Few Hours.

LONDON, Dec. 29. — (United Press.)— More than 200 persons are dead and many more are dying of a new and mysterious disease which has broken out on the border between Persia and Afghanistan, in the Karez district, according to a Central News despatch from Allahabad.

The population of the stricken district is terror stricken and local doctors are unable to diagnose the malady.

The victims bleed profusely from the nose, mouth and eyes and turn yellow aftter a few hours.

PAINT ABSORBS THE ECHO.

A hall which has conflicting echoes may be improved by rebuilding to the extent of changing some of the lining of the interior, but a second method is to make the reflecting wall a good absorber, so that the sound is swallowed up and little or none reflected.

Painting the wall accomplishes this. It is less expensive than the other method, and can be easily done. The paint, however, to have the greatest sound-absorbing factor, should have the qualities of porosity and bexibility; consequently thickness is a very important requisite. High plasticity is desirable for certain finishes.

Several successive coats of paint may be applied, or one heavy coat with the special sand, cork, or the sponge treatment.

Announcement

In view of the fact that the Peterboro Intermediate team has been advanced by the Ontario Hockey Association to the Senior Series, a new scale of prices at Brock Street Rink for the Senior Series is necessary to take care of increased operating costs as follows,—

Reserve Seats	$1.50 plus 15c tax
Front Row Balcony	$1.00 plus 10c tax
West Side, Gents	75c plus 5c tax
West Side, Ladies	50c plus 5c tax
East Side	50c plus 5c tax

Patrons holding subscribers' tickets for the three games, not wishing to pay the advanced prices, will kindly turn their tickets in Bond's Drug Store before Dec. 30th, 1924, and get total refund. Those wishing to retain same may obtain their reserve tickets at an additional price of 50c plus tax 15c for reserve seats and 25c plus 10c tax for balcony.

With it went his prosperity. He became penniless. Undaunted, he undertook to sell life insurance. Today he is one of the highest-salaried men in a line of high-salaried men. He has taught himself the Braille system and out of his own funds, is educating 40 blind men in its benefits, so that they, too, can have a chance at the success that has been his.

HAIR BOBS PROVE VERITABLE KLONDYKE TO BARBERS OF THE WHOLE WIDE WORLD

LONDON, Dec. 29.—Unquestionably 1924 will go down in history as the year in which hairdressers the world over became the beneficiaries of a fashion which doubled or trebled the volume of their business—shingled heads," so declares H. Gordon Selfridge, American proprietor of London's biggest department store, he added:

"Hairpin manufacturers have practically ceased to exist, but the old-fashioned hair comb makers managed to save themselves by inventing all manner of combs suitable for shingles.

"Formerly women could fix their long tresses themselves and visits to hairdressers were few and far apart. All this is changed. Your shingled lady cannot stay away from the hairdressers more than a fortnight at the longest.

"Far from dying out the fashion, in my opinion, is here to stay. Women will never go back to long hair."

RIOT OF NAVVIES.

Meeting Disapproved Type of Immigrants to Australia.

ADELAIDE, Western Australia, Dec. 29.—(Canadian Press Cable) via Reuter's) —An ugly riot occurred here Saturday as the result of a meeting of navvies to express disapproval of the type of immigrant coming to Australia. At one stage of the disturbance the crowd numbered 500, mostly foreigners. The police quickly took hold of the situation and restored order.

FELT EARTH TREMORS.

Quake Registered at Washington Probably in Japanese Area.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29.—Earth tremors of "very pronounced intensity" were recorded beginning at 6.08 p.m. Sunday on the Georgetown University seismograph.

The tremors were still in progress at 7.20 p.m. having reached the maximum of their intensity between 6.44 and 6.50 p.m.

Father Tondorf, seismographer of the University, estimated that the centre of the disturbance was approximately six thousand miles to 6,100 miles from Washington and possibly within the Japanese earthquake area.

GERMANY RE-ARMING.

British Troops Will Not Be Withdrawn from Cologne.

PARIS, Dec. 29. —Germany's alleged violations of the treaty of Versailles in respect to armaments have been registered by the Allied Council of Ambassadors. The council instructed its secretary to draft a note notifying the German government that the Cologne bridge head will not be evacuated, as stipulated in the treaty, January 10.

The allied ambassadors were unanimous in recognizing that Germany is re-arming and that progressive withdrawal from the Rhineland must await further investigation of the interested governments.

PERFECTS SWEETER CORN.

Luther Burbank Has a New Variety —Also Transforms Zinnias.

SANTA ROSA, Cal., Dec. 29.—Luther Burbank, noted plant culturist, who lives here announces that he has perfected a new variety of sweet corn which he believes will prove more productive and sweeter than any sweet corn yet produced. He also announced the perfection of a new variety of gladiolus and two varieties of zinnias.

DYNAMITE EXPLOSION KILLED 50 JAPANESE

300 Injured Saturday in Harbor of Otaru.

TOKIO, Dec. 29.—It is estimated that fifty persons were killed and 300 injured when a dynamite cargo exploded in the harbor of Otaru, Hokkaido Island, Northeastern Japan, Saturday. The explosion occurred while six hundred case of dynamite were being transferred from a lighter. One large vessel was damaged, several small boats sunk and the waterfront was wrecked.

50 SUICIDES CLOUDED CHRISTMAS IN BERLIN

Domestic Woes Motive of Most of Those Who Died.

BERLIN, Germany, Dec. 29. — Fifty cases of suicide on Christmas day were reported to the Berlin police authorities, marring an otherwise agreeable holiday. Most of the dead were victims of unhappy marriages.

Very few persons left Berlin on Christmas day. The usually crowded Paris-Warsaw express was almost empty. The theatres and movie houses, however, were crowded. Even burglars took a rest, the usual number of robberies being much reduced, and the police had a respite. The customary sensational crime failed to materialize.

The only losers on Christmas trade were the Christmas tree merchants. During the last few days the number of trees was so great that the merchants had almost to give them away and stand a loss.

PRISON AND LASHES.

Severe Sentence Meted Out to Pair of Edmonton Robbers.

CALGARY, Dec. 28. — Found guilty of assault and robbery in Edmonton, Edward Bond was sentenced here Saturday to five years in the penitentiary with 25 lashes, and Isaac Proulx, his confederate, to three years and fifteen lashes. Bond was also given five years for housebreaking in Calgary, the sentences to run concurrently. Bond pulled a gun on police who arrested him here.

AGED PATIENTS BURNED.

Three Died in Illinois Insane Hospital Fire at Alton.

ALTON, Ills., Dec. 29.—Three aged patients of the State Insane Hospital near here were burned to death Saturday when a farmhouse was destroyed by fire.

The dead:—Charles Sunderland, 67; Henry Langguth, 70;, and Fred Lange, 50. Thomas Guyn, a fourth patfient, was severly burned.

ELSIE SWEETIN VISITED GRAVE

Threw Herself in Snow on Mound Where Poisoned Husband Lies.

"LAST CHANCE" PLEA

MOUNT VERNON, Ill., Dec. 29. —How Mrs. Elsie Sweetin, who was found guilty by a jury here of the poison murder of her husband, Wilford, threw herself in the snow upon her husband's grave Christmas eve, was told by Sheriff Grant Holcomb, who took the woman to Benton, where she is held in jail pending disposition of her motion for a new trial.

As the motor car in which Mrs. Sweetin was driven to Benton reached the cemetery at Ina she begged the sheriff to stop and let her visit the grave of her husband.

Makes "Last Chance" Plea

The sheriff at first declined, but Mrs. Sweetin implored him to grant the request ,asserting it probably would be her last chance to visit the cemetery.

The sheriff then consented and ordered the car stopped while he and Mrs. Sweetin walked through the snow into the village cemetery. When she reached the grave of Wilford Sweetin she threw herself across the snow-covered mound, sobbing and crying that she was innocent, and although convicted, had not poisoned her husband.

Mrs. Sweetin refused to leave and the sheriff was forced to carry her from the scene. She was hysterical when she again entered the car, but gained her composure before she reached Benton.

Hight Going to Chester.

Lawrence M. Hight, Mrs. Sweetin's alleged pastor-lover, probably will be taken to the southern Illinois prison at Chester and Mrs. Sweetin to the prison at Stateville. Formal sentencing by the court was deferred pending the new trial motions.

Mrs. Sweetin was sentenced to thirty-five years in prison, while Hight was given a life sentence by the jury, which tried them jointly.

THE WEATHER

Yesterday was another cold Sunday. Between Saturday evening and Sunday morning, the temperature was down to 12 degrees below zero. During much of the day the temperature was around zero, two above being the average figure. The lowest last night was 2 above—the thermometer having remained stationary since Sunday afternoon.—W. P.

HOBART HONORS BRAVE TEACHER WHO GAVE LIFE

Grief-Stricken Town Recovering From Daze of Christmas Eve Holocaust.

MORE WILL DIE

Teacher of the School Saved Children—Pushed Them Through Window.

HOBART, Okla., December 29. — At the funeral services arranged for the thirty four victims of the Christmas tree fire at the Babb Switch schoolhouse, Miss Florence Hill, the teacher, who saved many children, and died herself, was enshrined in the community's memory as its most unselfish heroine.

With the exits jammed by a panic stricken crowd, Miss Hill burst out the window glass and thrust through to safety child after child.

She last was seen with her hair burned off and her clothing ablaze, as she fell back into the flames with a child in her arms.

Plans for one grave for the victims of the Babb School Christmas disaster were abandoned when the relatives of the dead decided that they would rather bury their own, even though but partly identified, in their family lots. Thirty-four perished and twenty were injured.

Among the dead were many poor. Business men of Hobart raised a fund to be sure that every victim would have a funeral without cost to the stricken family.

Business stood still in Hobart. Store clerks, truck drivers, merchants and clergymen halted to dig graves.

C. J. Goforth died on Friday, a few hours after his brother John. Little hope is held out for seventeen others.

Visitor from New York.

Mrs. Juanita Stephenson, of New York City, one of the victims, and her baby, also dead, were visiting her parents, who died in the fire.

Hobart's story of the tragedy is just being told. The little inland town was too dazed on Christmas. The survivors were unable to recall anything but the horror of the night.

Now it is established that a few persons were saved by being pushed through the wire netting that barred the windows of the school, but only a few. One window alone, the one through which Mrs. Florence Hill, who gave her life for her pupils, thrust a few children, yielded to the efforts to tear away the screens.

The story of the tragedy is brief, but in its details more horrible than its first report.

Lamp Exploded.

A candle ignited some cotton on the Christmas tree. The cotton then dropped into a bundle of paper taken from presents. Then a lamp exploded. Flames leaped to the cardboard ceiling and fiery death fell from above on the struggling, panic-stricken throng of fathers, mothers and children.

The floor caught and flaming death again leaped at the hysterical crowd from the floor. The windows smashed and in a moment the whole place was a furnace. Hobart's tragedy was begun and over (so far as its loss of life was concerned) within ten minutes.

How death came from above and dazed those who a moment before were happy revelers was indicated by the fact that almost without exception the injured survivors are burned on the head.

Door Blocked.

In the jam that became part of the effort to escape, the one door became blocked with bodies. Here three brothers—Paul, Silas and Coil Peck—died fighting to get some of the women near them through.

By their side were found the bodies of Mary and Gladys Clements and Mrs. Stephenson, sisters. In Mrs. Stephenson's arms was found the charred body of her infant girl. The baby's mother died near by.

Claude Boulding, of Hobart, fought to save the life of Gladys Clements, for they were to have been married on Sunday, but she was knocked from his arms as they neared the door, and he fell burned and unconscious, but living, outside. Boulding's condition is serious. His father, sister and brother died near the flaming school.

SECONDARY SCHOOL TEACHERS MET SAT.

A. S. Zavitz, of This City, Elected Treasurer of the Association.

TORONTO, Dec. 29.—(Canadian Press.)—The annual meeting of Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation was held in the Central Y.M.C.A. on Saturday. This was the fifth anniversary of the formation of organization. Objects of the Federation are: To discuss and promote the cause of education in secondary schools. To raise the status of teaching profession. To secure conditions essential to best professional service. To secure for teachers a larger voice in educational affairs, both locally and throughout the province. To promote a higher standard of professional etiquette. Delegates were present from each of fourteen districts of Ontario.

A few of the matters settled were: That to give more continuity to federation, application shall be made for its incorporation under the provincial charter.

A new office was created—that of editor of the Federation Bulletin.

In view of steps recently taken to have all vocational teachers properly certificated, the Federation placed itself on record as favoring the same conditions for vocational as for academic teachers in respect to the hours of work and holidays, and it further approved the principle of definite salary schedule for vocational teachers.

E. A. Hardy, of Toronto, was elected president; A. S. Zavitz, Peterboro, treasurer, and S. H. Henry, Toronto ,secretary.

GAVE A PRESENTATION TO RETIRING TEACHER

Mr. James Mabee Honored by Members of Park Street Sunday School.

An open session was held yesterday afternoon at the Park Street Baptist Sunday School, with Mr. Mabee in the chair. A very interesting programme was given, at the close of which Mr. O. S. Matchett, secretary-treasurer, called upon Mr. and Mrs. Mabee to come forward, when the former read the following address:

Peterboro, Dec. 28, 1924.

Mr. Jas. I. Mabee.

Dear Mr. Mabee,—It was with deep regret that we were called upon to accept your resignation as our honored superintendent.

Your regularity in attendance from Sunday to Sunday has been a noble example to us all.

Your deep interest in all matters pertaining to the general welfare of our school has resulted in its upbuilding in all its departments.

While it has been your wish to step aside to make way for some one else to step up to your position, we trust and pray that you will still be with us to give us your advice and wisdom on all matters pertaining to our school.

We would ask you to accept this umbrella as a slight token of our love and esteem, and we would extend to you and Mrs. Mabee a happy and prosperous New Year, and may God's richest blessing rest upon you during the coming years.

Signed on behalf of the Park Street Baptist Sunday School,

Norman R. McLeod, Pastor.
Maurice Dunkley and Neil F. Porter, Assistant Superintendents.
O. S. Matchett, Sec.-Treas.

At the proper moment Mrs. M. Dunkley presented to Mr. Mabee a beautiful gold headed suit-case umbrella, suitably inscribed, and little Jean McLeod presented Mrs. Mabee with a beautiful basket of roses.

Mr. Mabee replied suitably on behalf of Mrs. Mabee and himself, and trusted that the school would give to the new superintendent, Mr. M. Dunkley, Sr., the same support that they had given to him.

RAISED DOLLAR BILLS.

Paris Police Arrest Pole on Serious Fraud Charge.

PARIS, Dec. 29. — (Canadian Press).—Paris police have arrested Jelka Goldman, Pole, on the charge of victimizing passengers on the liner Lutetia, with altered United States five-dollar bills, according to Le Journal.

Travelling first-class from Buenos Aires, Goldman is said to have induced a number of fellow passengers, as soon as the French coast was sighted to change "$50" United States bills into francs. The bills were found to be five-dollar notes, to which ciphers had been cunningly added.

NEED MORE SCHOOLS.

Agricultural High Schools May Be Built in Rural Ontario.

TORONTO, December 29. — Agricultural high schools for rural Ontario are contemplated in a plan which is being worked out in the Department of Education, for making a special educational provision for rural Ontario. If they come into being they will resemble the present technical high schools, as not more than 50 per cent. of the work will be academic. Half of the curriculum will be devoted to subjects either strictly agricultural or scientific, especially applicable to farm work.

FACES MURDER CHARGE.

Pointe Anne, Roumanian, Whose Skull Was Smashed With Hammer, Died Saturday.

BELLEVILLE, Dec. 29.—(Canadian Press).—Alec Chumuska, Point Anne Roumanian whose head was smashed in by a hammer in the hands of another foreigner on Monday afternoon last, died Saturday without having regained consciousness. Gergay Kotchi, Russian laborer at the Canada Cement Co. at Point Anne, now in the county jail on a charge of attempted murder is the alleged wielder of the hammer and will no doubt have to face a charge of murder.

DISCOVER NEW CURE.

One Drop of Serum Will Kill Most Highly Developed Culture of Pneumonia.

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 29.—(Canadian Press.)—Ultra microbes—organisms so small they are invisible even under the strongest microscope—which spread immunity as disease germs cause epidemics, have been discovered at the Univeristy of Minnesota.

The discovery has been made by Dr. Robert H. Green, assistant professor of bacteriology and immaniology, after experiments covering the better part of a year. Ultra microbes, which lives as parasites on disease bacteria, have been isolated and made into serum so deadly that one drop of liquid it is declared, will kill mostly highly developed culture of pneumonia, typhoid fever, diphtheria, dysentary, anthrax or chicken cholera.

NEW CANADIAN PACIFIC TORONTO TO WINNIPEG 36 1-4 HOUR FEATURE SERVICE

The new daily 36 1-4 hour Toronto to Winnipeg service just inaugurated by the Canadian Pacific Railway not only establishes a record in fast, convenient transportation but provides the traveller with a feature service to Fort William from both Toronto and Winnipeg inasmuch as the Winnipeg Special leaving Toronto at 9.45 p.m. every night and arriving in Sudbury at 5.30 a.m. arrives in Fort William at 11.00 p.m., leaving there 15 minutes later and arriving in Winnipeg at 9.00 a.m.

Returning, the "Toronto-Montreal Special" leaves Winnipeg at 7.00 p.m. ,arriving in Fort William at 6.40 a.m., leaving 15 minutes later, arriving in Sudbury at 1.05 a.m. and in Toronto at the convenient hour of 8.35 a.m.

Direct connections are made by travellers from Winnipeg for all main points in Ontario, Quebec and East, which will receive the serious consideration of those who desire efficient service. Dominion Express shipments are delivered hours earlier which is also a feature.

The most modern equipment, including standard and compartment sleepers, dining and compartment-observation cars, are carried which, with the reduction in the running time and the courteous, efficient service by all employees, makes this new service pre-eminent as the last word in transportation.

Secure further information, tickets, reservations, etc., from J. Skinner, C.P.A., 343 George street. 23d-154.

PEOPLE.

Fifty years ago France, Germany, the British Isles and the United States had a combined population of 141 million people.

Today the figure is around 247 millions.

The tendency is toward overcrowding all over the world. Any overproduction of food cannot be more than temporary. Hungary mouths are multiplying steadily.

BRITISH DEBT ISSUE.

Great Britain Prepared to Postpone Matter for the Present.

(By Lloyd Allan—United Press Staff Correspondent).

LONDON, Dec. 29. — Winston Churchill, British Chancellor of the Exchequer, will probably intimate privately to France that Great Britain is prepared to postpone consideration of inter-allied debts until the efficiency of the Dawes plan has been fully demonstrated.

Churchill is expected to convey this information to the French Government when he goes to Paris on January 5th to represent Great Britain at the conference of Finance Ministers.

The United Press understands that the British Chancellor will inform Premier Herriot and Finance Minister Clementel, however, that if France in the meantims finds her debt with any other nation, Great Britain expects similar action of the debt to this country.

The British Cabinet will meet before Churchill's departure and discuss its policy toward the inter-allied debts and the claims of the United States to share in reparations under the Dawes plan.

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

Firemen Had Run to Ward Three on Sunday Morning —Nominations To-day.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 29—On Sunday morning about nine o'clock, the fire alarm rang in from Ward Three. It was very hard for the firemen to hear the bell and it took some little time to get a full force. A few men started with the fire truck and found the fire to be at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Farrell on Canrobert street. The fire started from burning pipes and caught fire around them upstairs. A hole was burned in the floor upstairs, but it was not long before everything was out and not much damage done. The weather was very cold and a strong wind blowing.

Will Remove Eye

Mr. Henry Baker, River Road, who has been suffering severe pain with his eye for over a month, and who had just returned to his home from the Hospital in Peterboro, about two weeks ago, had to be taken back to the hospital again, last Saturday night. The doctor says the only thing is to take the eye out to save the other eye.

He has been a great sufferer for several weeks and was suffering a great deal on Friday and Saturday. Mrs. Baker took him to Peterboro on the evening train on Saturday night.

Mrs. C. W. Turner, Queen street, received word last week that her cousin, Mrs. L. A. Gould of Gananoque, late of Peterboro, has a young son, born in Kingston hospital, on Wednesday, December 17th 1924, (Charles Albert).

Mr. Harry Boyd of Toronto, who spent a few days at Christmas with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. I. Boyd, Oliver Road, returned to Toronto, on Monday. As he was an old member of the Methodist choir, they were glad to have him with them on Sunday and also his old Sunday School Class, welcomed him in the afternoon.

Mr. Chas. White, Garry street, received word that his brother, Mr. Wm. White, of Peterboro, late of Campbellford died last Thursday in Peterboro. He was buried on Saturday. Mr. and Mrs. White and family lived in Campbellford for several years and moved to Peterboro a few months ago. One daughter, Mrs. Rands lives in Campbellford.

As nomination day draws nearer things are getting more interesting in the municipal field. Several new men are coming into the field to run for Councillors and other positions in the council.

Mrs. A. I. Bonney, Hastings Road, is confined to her bed through illness. She is suffering from a severe cold.

Miss Olive Nicholas, Queen Street, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Coyle, in Toronto.

Mrs. John Harris, of Toronto, is spending a few days at Christmas time in Campbellford visiting relatives.

Miss Ona Arnold, R.N., of New York, is spending the holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Arnold, Kent Street.

Mr. and Mrs. Jackson, of Port Perry, spent a few days at Christmas with Mrs. Jackson's parents, Rev. W. and Mrs. Elliott, at the Methodist Parsonage. Mrs. Jackson is remaining over for a larger visit.

Mrs. Chas. Stephen, of Havelock, is spending the Christmas season with her daughter, Mrs. James Casement, Palliser Street.

Mrs. Michael Anderson, who has been visiting her sister in Syracuse, N.Y., for a month, and other relatives in Toronto and Belleville, returned to her home in Campbellford last Friday.

Mrs. Percy Naylor, of Madoc, is spending the Christmas holidays at the home of her father, Mr. Thos. Oulton, Grand Road.

Mrs. Foster and two children, from near Picton, are visiting at the home of her father, Mr. George Anderson, in Seymour Street.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Connor, Grand Road, spent the Christmas week with Mrs. Connor's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eleanor, of Toronto.

Mrs. Ernest Doxsee and two daughters, Grace and Ruth, spent Christmas with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Bonny, Hastings Road.

Mr. C. A. Loucks, of Seymour West, is very ill at his home.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bakes, Kent street, are in Peterborough this week, visiting Mrs. Bake's father, Mr. Greer.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Ploughman, are spending the winter months with their daughter at Timmins.

Miss Gertrude Graham of Toronto, is visiting Miss Verna Sanders, River Front, during the holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Daly are visiting Mrs. Daly's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Archer at Marmora.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Bedford, of Kingston, spent Christmas with his father and sister, Mr. Chas. Bedford, Sr., and Miss Ethel Bedford, of Seymour. They had a family gathering for dinner on Christmas night. Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Bedford, Jr., Front street, Campbellford, and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Smith, of Seymour East, on the English Line, were also present.

Miss Hazel Labrash, Inkerman Street, of the Telephone Staff, is visiting her mother, Mrs. F. Labrash in Cobourg for the Christmas week.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Greenley, are visiting relatives in Peterboro. They will also visit his brother in Oshawa, and other relatives in Toronto.

Miss Lillian Davidson, of Toronto, spent her holidays with her mother, Mrs. Jas. Davidson, Booth Street.

Miss Muriel Neale of Kingston, is spending the Christmas holidays at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Neale, Grand Road.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Gill, of Port Hope, are visiting Mrs. Gill's mother Mrs. Robt. Linton, Front Street, and other relatives.

Mrs. Howard Clarke, of Seymour West, entertained her Sunday School class of girls of the Campbellford Methodist church last week with a sleighride and chicken supper. During the evening the girls presented Mrs. Clark with a lovely fruit set.

Miss Grace Doxsee, of Peterboro, is visiting Miss Muriel Kingston, Frank street.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Maybee and daughter Lois, spent the Christmas holidays at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Atkinson, Rear Street.

The men of the Hydro Construction Works have been having a few holidays at Christmas time, but are commencing work again on Tuesday morning.

At the Regent, Campbellford.

Monthly Meeting.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church Mrs. James Johnson was presented with a life membership certificate. An address was read as follows:

"Dear Mrs. Johnson,—It is with much pleasure that we, the members of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church and our W.M.S., desire to confer on you the highest honor which our W.M.S. can confer upon its members. We would present you with a certificate of life membership in the society at large. Receive it as our Christmas gift in the spirit in which it is given.

"You have always taken a deep interest in the church and its missions, and when able, faithful in your attendance. And it is the faithful whom our Master is ever singling out for distinction, saying,

"Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter into the joy of thy Lord."

We regret very much to hear of your severe illness, but glad that God has spared you, and we pray that he may spare you for years to come.

Signed on behalf of the W.M.S. of St. Andrew's Church:

Mrs. Hill, president; Mrs. Fleming, secretary; Mrs. C. Plant, treasurer.

Mr C H Conway received the sad news of the death in Cobalt of his father who has been seriously ill for some time Mr. Conway left on Saturday afternoon for his home in Cobalt.

Mr. W. A. Spellman of Oshawa and Dr. J. A. Spellman of Kitchener were the holiday guests of their mother, Mrs. A. B. Spellman.

Miss Verna McFadden, nurse in training at St. Joheph's Hospital, Peterboro was a Christmas guest at her home on the Dutch Line.

Mr. William Armstrong of Detroit, is spending the holidays in this vicinity.

Miss B. F. Armour, B.A., of Aylmer is is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Scott Fife.

Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Germon, spent Sunday the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Beavis.

The annual school board meeting of the Hastings public school will be held at 10 o'clock on Wednesday morning for the election of School Trustees and other business.

NEW YORK GLIMPSES.

Blind Girls Who Have Made Good in the Big City.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—Blind girls have made good in a number of situations in New York. One is in a publishing house, one with the Boy Scouts organization, one a worker with a big department store and one in an insurance office. And they do not lack for entertainment. They all play bridge, dance and go to the theatre. Two are accomplished amateur actresses, one writes and reads poetry, and another is an expert horsewoman.

Margaret Foley told her life story to the Business and Professional Women's League the other night. She came to New York from Chicago alone and with only $70. She obtained a position as a dictaphone operator and has had four increases in pay in two years. She reaches her office unescorted on time every morning, despite the great subway crush. Margaret Foley is blind.

W. J. O'Mara is the only man telephone operator left in New York. He handles the switchboard for public booths in the basement of the Times Building. Twenty years ago most of the operators were men. All but O'Mara went into some other branch of the business. "The only difference between being an operator now and 20 years ago," says O'Mara, "is that people are crankier now."

Sixty girls in a sweatshop in Brooklyn were ordered to leave the building when it caught fire. They refused because they were being paid for piece-work and didn't want to lose any time. "We have faith in the fireman and we need the money for Christmas," one of them explained.

Cap Higgins, the artist who fought in the Philippines during the Spanish-American War, has purchased an old Krag-Jorgenson rifle. "I'll hang the rifle on the wall and tell visitors that I used it in Luzon," he says. "After while I'll come to believe my own story and by the time my boy inherits the rifle it will be a priceless heirloom of a very brave soldier."

Sea captains report that compasses are affected to a very marked degree by the steel in New York's buildings. The reaction of the needle varies as many new buildings go up, I am told by Joseph Prendergast, who is both architect and sea-faring man.

"The steak she ordered was so big you could have milked it if it had been any bigger." I heard Al Herman, black-face comedian, spring that line. I doubt if it is new, for so many of his gags wear whiskers.

CONCERT AT BETHANY.

Christmas Tree and Entertainment by Methodist Sunday School.

BETHANY, Dec. 29.—The annual Christmas tree and entertainment of the Methodist Sunday School was held on Friday evenng in the Town Hall. Owing to the stormy night the hall was only partly filled, but those who braved the cold and storm were treated to a very good programme. The hall was attractively decorated, and two trees containing the various gifts were erected at the front of the stage. Mr. A. H. Monk filled the chairman's chair in his usual capable manner and eliminated the usual address. He opened the entertainment with the hymn, "All hail the power of Jesus' name," which was sung by the audience, after which Rev. W. Dafoe offered up a prayer.

Solo by Miss I. Black, of Peterboro.

Christmas greetings by three little girls.

Reading—Mrs. Tucker of Lindsay.

Instrumental—Miss Helen Byers.

Solo—Mr. V. Brown, of Lindsay.

Recitation—Miss Ruth Rowland.

Motion song—"Why do Bells at Christmas Ring," by six little girls.

Solo—Miss Black.

Motion song—"Happy Christmas Eve," by five girls.

Instrumental—Miss Blanchard, of Peterboro.

Reading—"Major Jones' Courtship," Beatrice Darrow.

Drill by eight girls.

Solo—Mr. V. Brown.

Reading—Mrs. Tucker.

Duet — Miss Black and Miss Blanchard.

Dialogue—"Bo Peep's Christmas Party."

Pantomime—"Nearer My God to Thee," Miss Beryl Dafoe.

Pantomime — Angels Guarding Song, Miss Beryl Dafoe and Jean Thorndyke.

Motion song—"Happy Christmas Eve," five girls.

Santa Claus then began stripping the trees of the numerous gifts and distributed them among the small scholars who were waiting with expectant eyes and grasping hands to receive them.

The happy evening came to a close with the National Anthem.

Personals.

Dr. H. Bigelow, of Barrie, is sending a few days with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Bigelow.

Mr. Gerald McCartney, of Toronto, and Mr. Aubrey McCartney, of North Bay, spent Chrstmas under the parental roof.

J. T. C. LANG DEAD.

Had Been Ill For Several Weeks—Well Known Here.

The death took place this morning after an illness of several weeks of J. T. C. Lang, at his home, 629 Rubidge street. A wife and several children survive.

Mr. Lang was well known in the city and country, and for many years was connected with the Oak Hall Clothing Company here. At the time of his death he was assistant appraiser in the local Customs House.

FROM THE FLAPPER.

(By Cynthia Grey.)

Lord Byron wrote of young girls:
"O youth and innocence,
O, milk and water!"
What he meant was:
"O, jazz and ginger-fizz,
O, rouge and powder!"

It's hard work keeping young these days. Before you know it, you're an old hag of 18.

The young hopeful doesn't know that "Old Ironsides" was a battleship. He thinks she's a dancing partner in corsets.

The flapper has the finesse of a Mme. de Stael. She never calls a man over 30 "old thing" or "sweet papa," you can wager!

FLYING.

For $40.00 an airplane will carry you from London to urich, Switzerland, a distance of 650 miles. That is about 16 miles for $1.00, a very low rate considering the time saved.

Europe is leaving us far behind in development of commercial aviation, despite the fact that Americans invented the airplane.

HOLIDAY TO HONOR NEEDLES.

There is an annual needle festival held in Japan which is observed in all the girls' schools, the object of which is to make sewing an honored craft and the needle a worthy implement.

SHOULD BE WASHED.

Waxed or oiled cleaning cloths should be washed in soda solution occasionally and rinsed thoroughly.

LAKEFIELD CHURCH HOLIDAY CONCERTS

Parents and Children Enjoyed Entertainment—Santa Claus a Visitor.

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 29.—The annual Christmas entertainment and Christmas tree of the Lakefield Presbyterian Sunday School was held on Wednesday evening (December 24) in the School-room of the church, with Rev. P. L. Jull in the chair. There was a good attendance of parents and children and also of friends, who, though no longer children, enjoy seeing Santa Claus come on his annual trip, bringing joy to the hearts of the little folks. The entertainment was varied in character and reflected credit on all the performers and their teachers. At the close of the programme, Santa appeared and distributed the gifts from the tree.

The following is the copy of the programme:

Chorus—"Glad Bells of Christmas."

Recitation—"The Brownies' Christmas Pudding."

Recitation—"An Old Song Resung," Aubrey Blakeley.

Piano duet—Dorothy Sutton and Mary Hendren.

Recitation—"Grandfather's Spectacles," Ruth Jull.

Recitation—"When Mother Was a Little Child," Charlie Tanner.

Duet—"Santa Claus is Coming," Alice and Alma Pringle.

Recitation—Roger Davis.

Recitation—Gordon Jull.

Recitation—Madeleine Charlton.

Dialogue—'Going to the Dentist.'

Song—Lulu and Douglas Smith.

Recitation—"Ma in the Auto," Janet Charlton.

Recitation — "Bud Discusses Cleanliness," Kenneth Jull.

Instrumental—Ethel Blakeley.

Dialogue—Two boys.

Recitation—"How Did You Take It?" Helen Porter.

Chorus—"Christmas Stockings."

Recitation—Hannah Webster.

Song—"Rose in Repose," Charlie Tanner.

A motto—"Freely Give."

Recitation—Gordon Kidd.

Piano duet—Dorothy Sutton and Helen Porter.

Chorus—"Santa Claus."

Duet—Roger and Mary Davis.

Recitation—Margaret Tanner.

Piano duet—Donald and Mary Dever.

Dialogue—"Bridget's Bargain."

Recitation—Valeta Carveth.

Santa Claus.

After the gifts to the children had been distributed, Santa Claus read this letter to Mrs. (Rev.) Jull and presented her with a life membership pin and certificate in the W.M.S.:

"Dear Mrs. Jull,—We, the members of the Women's Missionary Society, and the congregation, wish to express our appreciation of the faithful efforts you have made to advance the interests of our society, sacrificing the calls of home, to serve the organization so dear to your heart.

"Language is but a poor instrument to convey our feelings of goodwill and esteem. We confer upon you the highest honor in our gift, that is, life membership in the Women's Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church.

"This pin will ever remind you of the love of your fellow-members and we hope that you may long be spared to continue to give of yourself to the W. M. S. in the days which are before you.

"Signed on behalf of the Auxiliary,

"Clarice Smith, Secty.
"Maude Sutton, Treas."

The Mission Band presented Mrs. Jull with a silver cold meat fork.

To both these presentations, Mrs. Jull replied in her accustomed graceful manner, though taken quite by surprise. She thanked the donors for their kindly remembrance which she appreciated very much.

The evening, which was very successful in every way, was brought to a close by singing the National Anthem.

At Methodist Church.

The Sunday School of the Lakefield Methodist Church held their Christmas entertainment and tree in the school-room of the church on Monday evening, December 22nd, at 8 o'clock, with the pastor, Rev. C. S. Reddick, in the chair.

The programme was good and was well rendered, reflecting credit on those who got it up, and the order was a credit to the children, who behaved admirably despite the excitement which attends the Christmas season, and who well deserved the treat brought them by Santa Claus, who appeared at the close of the programme.

The following is the order of the programme:

Opening chorus—The School.
Prayer.
Recitation—Robert Spence.
Chorus—"Clap Your Hands."
Recitation — "Her Treasures," Mildred Root.
Piano solo—Evelyn Grant.
Dialogue—"The School Mistress."
Chorus—"White Canes."
Recitation—Lizzie Johnson.
Song—Roy Dunford.
Recitation—Janet Charlton.
Song—"I Cannot Do That Sum."
Recitation—Ralph Darling.
Dialogue—"Morning Calls."
Drill by 16 girls.
Recitation — "Our Christmas," Hanna Webster.
Chinese song.
Trio by 3 girls—"A Bird in the Hand."
Piano duet—Maud and Solan Nixon.
Recitation—Olive Dunford.
Chorus—The School.
Dialogue—"Writing Poetry."
Song—"Heralds of Santa."

At Baptist Church.

The annual Christmas tree and entertainment of the Baptist Sunday School was held on Monday evening and was very successful. A number of pretty tableaux were a feature of the interesting program. The presence of the new pastor, Rev. W. H. Howard, and his wife and daughters, added to the pleasure of the people, who took the opportunity of greeting them, welcoming them to the village and assuring them of their loyal support.

SANTA VISITED VETS' CHILDREN

Lakefield G. W. V. A. and Auxiliary Made Holiday Happy for Little Folk.

HOLIDAY PARTIES

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 27.— On Christmas afternoon the local branch of the G. W. V. A. and the Ladies' Auxiliary provided a Christmas tree for the soldiers' children in the village and vicinity in the Memorial Hall. There was a good attendance and as the families gathered in, the look of eager anticipation in the children's faces was worth seeing. Mr. R. J. Webster, past president of the G.W.V.A., presided in his genial manner and kept the children entertained. Miss Margaret Lawless danced a Highland fling, dressed in full Highland regalia for which Miss Gwen Simpson played the accompaniment. Later in the afternoon little Kathleen Lawless volunteered to dance and brought down the house with her imitation of her older sisters' very clever performance. When the hour had arrived for the appearance of the most important personage, the chairman sent little Pat McFadden to bring in Santa Claus and in a few minutes the little chap returned leading the children's friend, who was indeed the Santa in the pictures and a good natured Saint with his witty sallies and kindly forbearance with the timid little ones who were a bit frightened at being so close to the wonderful Santa. One wee mite cried out in terror, "No Claus, no Claus." The gifts were numerous and suited to the ages of the children, for all soldiers children fourteen years and under were remebered from tiny babes in arms to the sturdy lads and lasses who next year will have passed the age limit, were remembered and the list was a long one. Each child, besides the gift received candy and oranges and nuts and some wee tots could hardly carry the load which Santa brought.

Among the visitors were the Reeve and Mrs. Strickland, Rev. and Mrs. C. S. Reddick, Rev. P. L. Jull and Rev. W. Cox, all of whom enjoyed themselves in sharing the children's joy.

The Veterans' committee was Comrades M. P. Kennedy, J. J. McFadden, and C. C. Stenner and the Ladies' committee, Mesdames Marling, W. Simpson and Stenner.

The children remembered were: Tommy Chappell, George Chappell, Jack Chappell, Alice Chappell, Elsie Chappell, George Stenner, Bobbie Stenner, Nellie Stenner, Constance Stuart, Harding Stuart, Lileon Stuart, Baby Graham, Claude Shewen, Marion Twist, Elizabeth Twist, Ivan Tighe, Dorothy Holmes, Douglas Holmes, Donald Holmes, Daisy Wilson Helen McFadden, Johnny McFadden, Jerome McFadden, Pat McFadden, Veronica McFadden, Billie McFadden, Willie Edwards, Francis Edwards, Thelma Edwards, Stanley Edwards, Eva Edwards, Leslie Edwards, Bernice Edwards, Alma Tighe, Elsie Tighe, Violet Hudson, Freddie Hudson, June Burrows, Bernard Burrows, Billy Adamson, Westhall Adamson, Hannah Webster, Merle Webster, Carson Websted, Nora Webster, Frieda Webster, Earl Robinson, Garnett O'Neill, Sherman Hill, Denise Hill, Gordon Hill, Baby Hill, Almo Pringle, Alice Pringle, Lilian Pringle, Jimmie Pattrick, Kenneth Pattrick, Russell Pattrick, Myrtle Pattrick, Baby Pattrick, Elwood Rowe, Roydon Ellsworth, Doris O'Neill, Leonard Wingett, Harry Wingett, Paddy Lampman, Betty Lampman, Katherine Lampman, Barbara Grier, Hugh Bromley, Laurel Bromley, Baby Bromley, Jack Elmsley, Theodora Elmsley, Constance Orr, Jean Orr, Eugene Montgomery, Baby Montgomery, Jean Clarke, Billie Clarke, Dorothy Hurl, Baby Hurl, Stanley Dunk.

Santa Claus told of the difficulty he had in arriving owing to his reindeer being overcome on the journey but thanks to Billy Mackenzie he finished the trip on time. Billy evidently returned him to the rendezvous of his patient steeds because Santa made a triumphal programme up Queen street in Billiy's sleigh, drawn by her pony.

Holiday Parties.

Dances, teas and parties, large and small, are a feature of the holiday season with its crowd of young visitors and for the young people every moment is filled with the merry-making which is dear to their hearts. The annual Chrismas dance of the Volunteer Fire Brigade will be held on Tuesday evening, December 30th and will be probably the largest and most pretentious of the holiday events.

Band at Rink.

The band has been practicing and this winter will play at the rink one or two nights a week. This will be a great attraction as it is years since there was a regular "band night" at the rink. The first will be Saturday, December 27th.

CHEAP.

Airplane lines, London to Paris, carry 30 pounds of baggage free for each passenger. For excess weights the charge is 10 to 20 cents a pound.

The airplane, at the present stage of its development, looks is if it will chiefly carry passengers, mail and urgent express. Flying freight trains are not impossible. It will be a matter of cost. Right now the big element of cost is the rapidity with which airplane engines become worn out.

TWEED NEWS

TWEED, December 29. — Miss Agnes Quinn, of Niagara Falls, Ont., and Mr. Charles Quinn, of Queen's University, Kingston are, spending their holidays with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Quinn.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Backus, of Winnipeg, are visiting the latter's mother, Mrs. John Stout.

Several inches of snow fell on Tuesday, and it made ideal Christmas weather.

On Tuesday night the Sunday School scholars of the Methodist Church gave their Christmas entertainment in the auditorium. There was a good crowd in attendance.

Those attending the funeral of the late Mrs. Grant, in Toronto, on Monday were Messrs. Robert Patterson, Dr. Bowlby, George Brown, John Houston, James McGowan, Thomas Rath, Sim. McCrea, George Stokes, and William Craig.

Boy Injured.

On Wednesday afternoon, little Donald Barnett, son of Claude Barnett, fell at their home, fracturing his skull and cutting his head.

Several stitches were required to close the wound.

GRAIN IN STORAGE

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., Dec. 28.—Stocks of grain in store at the head of the lakes increased by less than three million bushels during the week just past, receipts being almost three million bushels less than those of the previous week, while shipments were less than a million. In fact, the figures of receipts and shipments do not really indicate the new business done, as they are partly made up of interchange of cars of grain between local elevators, the figures for shipments also include 99,000 bushels loaded for winter storage on the Fitch, which grain is also included in the stocks in store here.

Compared with the stocks on hand here last year, there were at the end of December 1923, between six and seven million bushels more than in store than there are today, there being almost as much wheat held then as there is of all grains now. Total stocks stand at 34,888,463 bushels.

EXTREMES.

Suing for divorce, a Wisconsin man admits that his wife is the best housekeeper in town. But he says "this passion for cleanliness has so obsessed her that it has become paramount in her mind, causing her to forget and neglect everything else in life, even the plaintiff."

Evil very frequently is good carried to extremes. Another example is stinginess, the extreme of thrift. Happiness and good citizenship are in a happy medium.

DEBATING LEAGUES.

Up in Western Ontario the Secondary Schools Association, an organization of the Collegiate Institutes and High Schools of that part of the Province, have been conducting for some time a debating league, in which the representatives of the different schools are drawn against each other in competition according to a definite schedule, just as their football and hockey activities are organized.

The plan seems one worthy of emulation by the secondary schools in Eastern Ontario.

Little trouble has been found in lining up these schools in sports, and it should be possible to secure a similar organization to deal with public speaking.

The value of such a competition does not need to be emphasized; it is apparent.

There is a dearth in most communities of good public speakers—there are far too many talkers and far too few who can express themselves clearly and lucidly, and briefly.

A debating league, with the spirit of competition to act as a spur upon the members, would undoubtedly do much to develop latent talent along this line, and if it resulted in each school turning out three or four pupils each year capable of arising to their feet at a public function and expressing their thoughts easily and logically, the work attendant upon the organization of the league would be amply rewarded.

The plan has been made a success in Western Ontario, and could be easily transplanted here, with every prospect of worth-while results.

THE BOYS' PARLIAMENT.

The Examiner was glad to note that Peterborough elected a member to the older Boys' Parliament of Ontario which held a session in Toronto last week.

Undoubtedly any system that promises to interest young men in Provincial and national problems is worthy of a trial, and this parliament elected by the boys of the Province, while its functioning is necessarily handicapped, must accomplish a great deal in bringing to the youngsters who are its members, and to some extent to their comrades who voted for them, an idea of Provincial administration and the questions of the day.

The apathy of the average citizen to municipal politics, and often to Provincial and national matters, shows that our system of education falls down in respect to what might well be regarded as one of its fundamental objects, the impressing upon its pupils of the vital necessity of discharging their full duty as citizens.

The Boys' Parliament promises to do something to counteract the failure of the schools in this regard, and it is gratifying to note that the movement is spreading and more communities each year are becoming interested in the Parliament and in the annual election.

It is not too fanciful a prophesy to say that a Premier of this young Parliament might find himself one day guiding the destinies of the Province or of the Dominion—certainly many men who have held high positions did not have the advantage of such worthwhile training.

MR. McINTYRE'S POSITION.

New interest is thrown into the campaign for the Utilities Commission in which ex-Mayor W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P., member of commission whose term expires this year and who as a candidate for re-election is opposed by ex-Mayor A. A. McIntyre, by the announcement from the latter that if lected he will exert every effort to have a "full and impartial enquiry made into our local and undeveloped water powers," in the belief that a large saving can be made in what Peterborough has to pay for power wholesale each year.

Mr. McIntyre, pointing out that the Utilities Commission last year as a wholesale purchaser of electric energy bought 4,738 h.p., which was delivered at the local substation at $22.50 per horse power, a total wholesale cost of $112,582.25, believes that sufficient attention has not been paid to the possibilities of developing power for Peterborough use at nearby points.

In that opinion, in the advancing of which as a campaign issue Mr. McIntyre shows that he has given much thought to the duties and responsibilities of the position for which he is a candidate, he does not stand alone.

There are many citizens who fail to understand why there should be a power shortage, and much alarmist propaganda about the St. Lawrence scheme when it is asserted that undeveloped power is running to waste in our own district.

Mr. McIntyre believes that it is the duty of the Utilities Commission to have the whole situation investigated and reported upon.

If there is idle power that can be utilized in Peterborough at a cost less than the wholesale price the commission now has to pay for it, the new candidate wants to get at the facts and submit them for the consideration of the ratepayers.

It is a progressive plank in his platform and will put a new aspect upon the campaign.

WHAT DO YOU DO BEST?

A young man is undecided what trade or profession he is best fitted to train himself for. To help him make up his mind, many colleges now have "vocational guidance experts." There are similar efficiency doctors—personality engineers—in private life, charging a fee, doing a big business.

The theory of these experts is that each of us has certain natural abilities. One is "cut out to be" a lawyer, doctor, dentist, carpenter, machinist, salesman, promoter, organizer, and so on.

And, the experts reason, a man is apt to be a failure if he follows the wrong line.

Prof. Carl C. Brigham, psychologist, of Princeton University, attacks this theory that each of us has a highly developed gift for one kind of work and not for others.

He says, for instance, that a student's inability in a certain branch is in reality a matter of distaste and emotional bias rather than natural inability.

In other words, a student is a star at mathematics because he likes it, not because he has a gift for figures.

Another shows up poorly at mathematics for the reason that he dislikes it.

The simple truth is that we do best the things we want to do. Why bother debating whether the inclination is generated by talent born in us?

Many a man gravitates into the legal profession, spurred by the desire to live a lawyer's life, and only secondarily urged forward by a talent for his profession.

A trade or profession, after all, is merely a means to an end. The end or goal may be wealth, power, applause, dignified standing, short hours of toil, travel, companionship, pleasant surroundings, quest for the mysterious or unknown.

We are like the average boy who at some time or other has a burning ambition to be a railroad man. What he really wants is travel.

The thing you most want to do is apt to be the thing you would do best. The line of work that will enable you to live the kind of existence you crave, is where you probably would put forth your best efforts.

Simmered down, it all confirms the ancient saying that a man does his best when his heart is in his work.

ONE DAY IN DETROIT.

One of the Detroit papers that usually tells in detail all the incidents connected with a Police Court story carried the following news item:

"Cracksmen smashed ten safes yesterday, obtaining $35,430, according to a police checkup to-day."

Why this unusual brevity? asks the London Advertiser. Because Detroit had so many of these cases in a day that it was impossible to give them all in detail. The sensational press could not give photographs nor drawings stating that "dotted line indicates direction taken by the burglars," or that "X marks place where proprietor of the jewellery store was shot."

Twelve robberies in one day, and most of them in broad daylight, several murders in the carrying out of the plans, and $60,000 loot for the thieves.

Detroit is a big city, but not a good one. It has numbers and wealth, but it has too large a proportion of crime. It has police, many of them, but they cannot control the situation. The average Canadian city may be slower; it may lock things up tight on Sunday while Detroit blazes away as merrily as ever—but for actual, worth-while living conditions, for peace of mind and safety of property and person, our cities are head and shoulders above conditions in the nearest border city across the line.

WHERE WILL THE MEMBERS COME FROM?

The U.F.O. elected Mr. Amos as president, and his declaration was quite distinct that the U.F.O. was to remain in politics as an active form, and he gave no indication of his intention to allow it to assume any other name than that of the U.F.O.

Where does that leave the Progressive Party which Mr. Drury seeks to create? If the U.F.O. is to remain in politics as the U.F.O., where is Mr. Drury to secure the material from which to fashion his Progressive Party? Mr. Morrison sits tight in the saddle, and it is an assured fact that he will take no part in seeking to make real good Drury Progressives out of the members of the U.F.O., nor is he going to weaken his position by pointing to Mr. Drury as the man of the hour. He did not do so when Mr. Drury was Premier of the Province, when his assistance was needed, and when it would have helped materially, nor is Mr. Morrison going to take that step now.

W. R. Amos, president of the U.F.O., spoke so plainly on the matter that his meaning could not be mistaken. He referred to "embarrassing and somewhat anomalous position in which the executive have been placed by the recent action of some of the members in their attendance at the convention which launched the Progressive Party." Instead of breaking the customary bottle of wine on the prow of the new vessel called "Progressive," President Amos was really scolding the members who had been present when the craft was spreading her sails for a trial voyage on political waters in Ontario.

The situation leaves Mr. Drury in a peculiar position, one that does not even give him the strength of following he possessed when called to the Premiership of Ontario following the election of 1919. Then he had the backing of men who had already been elected under the efforts of the U.F.O., and it seemed for a time as though there were a dual leadership—Mr. Drury heading up that part of the farmer movement that sought to give political expression to its ideals, and Mr. Morrison looking after the U.F.O. as it sought to put its aims into operation for better business methods in buying things the farmers needed and in selling the produce of their farms.

But that association did not exist in actual fact, and when the time came to go to the people it was found that Mr. Morrison was the man to whom Mr. Drury had to go. There are plenty of members of the U.F.O. all over this section of the Province who believed that Mr. Drury was wrong in dipping his flag to Secretary Morrison.

To-day where does Mr. Drury stand? The officials of the U.F.O. favour staying in politics and keeping the party a strict farmer movement. Mr. Drury, with the assistance and sanction of others connected with the U.F.O., has launched his Progressive Party, on which the heads of the U.F.O. frown. It is a reversal to the old Drury-Morrison controversy, a position that does not make for progress in any particular direction. The position, previously outlined, of Mr. Drury leading the political forces and Mr. Morrison attending to farmers' business, would be a desirable solution, but it is not to be that way because Mr. Morrison will not have it.

It was expected that the Toronto convention would have cleaned this matter up and given some degree of finality to the situation, but it did not do so, nor is there anything on the surface to indicate that it will be done. If Mr. Drury cannot have the U.F.O. as the backbone of his Progressive Party, then one thing is plain—there can be no Progressive Party. —London Advertiser.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The way 1924 has been behaving lately no one will be very sorry to see him go.

Where are the campaign cigars of the old days? Their disappearance is just another of the new features of municipal electioneering.

It is just a question which lasts the longer—Christmas toys or New Year's resolutions.

There is a mistake somewhere. Instead of getting Alberta coal, Ontario is receiving more than its share of Alberta cold.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG, Dec. 27.—All previous wheat price records for the present movement were shattered on the Winnipeg Exchange today when the May future soared to $1.91 3-8. The advance was short-lived, however, as the market ran into very heavy selling on the extreme bulge, December closing at 184, representing a loss of 1-2 cents over yesterday's close. May was 3-8 down at 188 and July 5-8 cents lower at 184 1-2.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Dec. 27.—In a wave of general buying today the entire grain list went higher than at any time heretofore this year but heavy selling to realize profits led to a sudden reaction at the last. Wheat closed unsettled at 78 cent net decline to 1-4 cent advance, May 1.80 3-8 to 180 5-8 and July 153 7-8, with corn unchanged to 5-8 cent lower, oats unchanged to 1-4 a 3-8 cent up, and provisions showing 25 to 70 cents advance.

MONTREAL GRAIN

MONTREAL, Dec. 28. — There was practically, no change in the condition of the export grain trade here on Saturday, business being reported very quiet. The trade in cash grain was also of a very limited character, but the tone of the market was firm. Ontario No. 2 white oats were quoted at 65 cents, No. 3 grade at 63 cents and No. 4 grade at 61 cents per bushel, ex-store.

A strong feeling developed in winter wheat grades of flour and prices were advanced 15 to 20 cents per barrel, but the demand for supplies was very limited. Prices for spring wheat flour were unchanged and the trade was inactive.

Prices for all grades of eggs were firmly maintained under a good demand. There was no improvement in the foreign demand for butter and prices ruled steady. Little business was transacted in cheese.

Crop beans were quoted at $2.70 to $2.80 per bushel.

MARMORA PERSONALS.

MARMORA, Dec. 29.—Mr. and Mrs. Eleazar Yeomans, Miss Hildred Yeomans, Mr. Jud Yeomans, Mr. and Mrs. Dan Yeomans and family, Mrs. Thomas Henderson and family, Mrs. Aitkens and family, all of Havelock and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sopha and family of Rockdale made up a merry Christmas party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Abe Smith.

Sooner or later, all auto drivers will have to be examined for mentality, eyesight, hearing and power of decision, before giving them licenses to drive cars.

HAVELOCK LODGE ELECT OFFICERS

Grand Master Droupe, of Grimsby Gave Interesting Lecture—Personal Mention.

HAVELOCK, December 29. — At a largely attended meeting on Tuesday evening, the Havelock Lodge, A.F. and A.M., No. 435, installed their officers for the coming year. A special feature of the evening was the presence of M.W. Bro. Droupe of Grimsby, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Canada, it being his first visit to Havelock. He gave an interesting and instructive address, which was enjoyed by all present. Addresses were also given by District Deputy V. W. Bro. Keller, of Peterborough, Past District Deputy V.M. Bro. Bonnycastle, of Campbellford, and Wor. Bro. Joseph Dorricott, of Toronto, a charter member of the Lodge.

After the installation, a splendid banquet was served by the local caterer, O. Patterson, who sustained his reputation for a sumptuous menu. The rooms and tables were tastefully decorated in keeping with the Christmas season, and it was the first occasion the dining-room had been used since it was renovated.

The friends of Miss Rhoda Falkner met at the home of Mrs. Edw. Williams on Tuesday to present her with a miscellaneous shower as a token of regard and good wishes in view of her approaching marriage.

The numerous beautiful gifts were placed on a tree, which was artistically decorated, and the tree was presented to Miss Falkner by Mrs. Williams. The recipient made an appropriate reply, thanking her friends for their thoughtfulness.

Mrs. H. Bush gave an excellent reading and Miss Marjorie Post sang a beautiful solo, and an enjoyable social time was spent by all.

Miss Falkner is held in high esteem, and will be very much missed by her many friends.

ARTICLE No. 12

Why is it that some players invariably lose the big rubbers and win the little ones? How and why do the big losses occur? Generally speaking, it's impossible to suffer big losses at auction unless you are holding good cards. When you are holding worthless cards there is no temptation to overbid and hence no big penalties. It's when you are holding good cards that are not quite good enough, or are suffering from bad "breaks" that you are apt to lose heavily. The good cards, instead of winning for you, are a source of loss. Why is this? There must be some reason for it and the answer is really very simple: a player just cannot remain quiet with good cards. He must bid and keep on bidding. The good cards intoxicate one and you become blind to the many signs that the odds are against you. You fail to notice that your partner is passing and that both of your opponents are bidding. What can one good hand do against two? If players would only ask themselves that question, many a big penalty would be avoided. Moral: Don't overbid good hands. Remember, a good hand has a better defensive value against two good hands than it has for offensive purposes. It's an axiom of the game that one good hand against two has one hundred per cent better chance to save a game than to make game. In nearly half of such hands it would have been possible to have saved game, and in the other half to have defeated the opponents' bid. Recently, the writer kept a record of the overbidding of one player during one evening's play. Out of fifteen of his bids that failed to make good, twelve were doubled. On ten of the hands, the player could have defeated his opponents' bid and on the other five he could have saved game. He was one of these players who consider it a personal affront to be overbid. His opponents knew he would continue to bid. Such a player is under a great handicap and yet cannot seem to realize what is the trouble with his game. He complains of his hard luck and of the big rubbers he loses, but he hasn't the good judgment to realize that it is his temperament, rather than his bad cards, that is making him lose. Take these remarks to heart and if in the class specified, look for the result of hands in which you fail to make your bid. If you could have saved game or defeated your opponents' bid, your loss is unjustifiable.

Here is the answer to the test hand offered for your analysis in the preceding article:

	Hearts — 10, 6
: Y :	Clubs — 7, 4, 2
: A B :	Diamonds — 9, 2
: Z :	Spades — K, Q, 10, 9, 8, 7

No score; rubber game. Z dealt and bid one diamond, A one heart, Y four diamonds, B and Z passed and A bid four hearts. Y and B passed, Z doubled and A and Y passed. Should B bid four spades over the double or pass? B should bid four spades. It is a hand that is not worth a trick at hearts and yet, combined with partner's, should either make four spades or come very close to it.

Answer to Problem No. 5

	Hearts — None Clubs — A, Q, 7, 6 Diamonds — None Spades — 9, 8
Hearts — None Clubs — K, 5, 4 Diamonds — K, Q Spades — 10	: Y : : A B : : Z :	Hearts — None Clubs — J, 9 Diamonds — J, 10 Spades — K, 7
	Hearts — Q Clubs — 10, 8, 3 Diamonds — A, 4 Spades — None

Hearts are trumps and Z is in the lead. How can Y-Z win five of the six tricks against any defense? Z should lead the ten of clubs and let B win the trick with the jack. Now, no matter what B leads, Y-Z will win the rest of the tricks. If B leads a diamond, Z will win the ace and lead the eight of clubs and finesse the queen in Y's hand. On the lead of the ace of clubs, the club drop and Z will discard his losing diamond on Y's six of clubs. If B leads a spade, Z will trump, make his Ace of diamonds and then lead the clubs as before. The point of the problem is not to finesse the queen of clubs until the second round. This is something that comes up in every-day play so study it out carefully.

AMATEUR PLAY AT BRIGHTON

'Deacon Dubbs" Provided Healthy Humor and Entertainment.

GOOD RETURNS.

BRIGHTON, December 29. — One of the best amateur plays that has been presented in recent years was staged in Brighton Town Hall on Christmas night. It was a comedy drama in three acts, entitled, "Deacon Dubbs," under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Brighton Methodist Church.

A large crowd from town and the surrounding district were present, and expressed their appreciation of the efforts of those taking part by hearty applause.

Many expressed the opinion that a more delightful way of ending a Christmas Day could not have been found.

The humorous side of the drama was well managed by the following artistes: Mr. W. T. Fritz as Deuteronomy Jones; Mr. C. E. Thorne as Deacon Dubbs from Sorghum Centre, State of West Virginny; Mrs. Norman Montgomery as Yennie Yensen, a Swedish girl; and Miss Vera Greenfield at Trixie Coleman, niece of Deacon Dubbs.

The remaining characters were: Mr. C. C. Fiddick as Amos Coleman; Dr. F. H. Dunnett as Rawdon Crawley, the villain; Mr. Norman Montgomery as Major McNutt, the Auctioneer; Miss Addie Solomon as Rose Raleigh; and Mrs. A. Perry as Miss Philipena Popover.

Mr. S. C. Cheer is given a great deal of credit for directing such a high-class form of entertainment, and people are always assured of something worth while when it is known that Mr. Cheer is the director.

Musical specialties between acts were supplied by St. Andrew's Orchestra and a number of delightful solos were rendered by Mr. Egerton Boyce of Port Hope, who is a son of Rev. Mr. Boyce, a retired minister now residing in Brighton.

The ladies, under whose auspices the play was held, were fortunate in securing a large audience, and approximately $200 was realised.

Chimney Fire.

About eleven o'clock on Christmas night Mr. S. C. Cheer was startled by smoke pouring into his kitchen of his home on Prince Edward Street.

Sparks and a slight blaze were soon discovered in the chimney, but after a half-hour's work with the garden hose the fire was extinguished. It was fortunate that the blaze was noticed before the fire had made much progress, as a strong west wind was blowing, which would have undoubtedly caused more serious damage.

As it was, the damage was chiefly caused by smoke.

Personals.

Mr. "Mac" McCullough was at his home in Perth for the holiday.

Messrs. Fax and Hugh Strong, of Buffalo, are in town for a few days.

Mr. W. W. Wade and Mr. Jay Potts are home from Queen's University for the holidays.

Among those who are home from Toronto are Gladys and Dorothy Solomon, Rose Strong, Mr. and Mrs. M. Stoneburg, Alice Ross, Bertha Mowry, and Audrey Harden.

Mr. Rannie McConnell, a well-known Brighton boy, is convalescing at home after having undergone an operation in Toronto.

Messrs. Scotty Cameron, J. H. Corner, Morley Stevenson, and R. H. Pollock, local bank clerks, spent

OTONABEE YOUNG PEOPLE MET AT KEENE TUESDAY

Decided to Drop Out of the Debating League—Keene Association is Non-Political.

KEENE, December 29. — The Otonabee Young People's Association held their regular meeting on Tuesday in the Town Hall, Keene. About 40 young people were in attendance, and various items of interest were discussed.

It was definitely decided to drop out of the debating league, as was previously mentioned in these columns, the reason being that the other debating societies wanted Keene to change the name of the organisation, and bring it under the rules of the U.F.Y.P.O..

The members made it distinctly understood that the Keene organisation is absolutely non-political, and have no intention of linking up with any political party. They wish to thank the other debating teams for the privilege of joining them in debate, and hope that the debates during the winter months will be attended by great success.

Plans were also completed for the holding of a banquet in the Town Hall, Keene, on 21st January, 1925, to all those belonging to those who are interested.

The following are the plans:

The Ladies' Missionary Society of the Methodist Church are serving the banquet, the same as last year. Efforts are being made, and it is hoped that G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P., Deputy-Speaker of the House of Commons, and the Hon. John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture, will attend and deliver addresses, as well as other prominent men.

Following the supper and the addresses a dance will be held.

Preparations are being made to seat 100 persons. Members of the organisation are given to the 1st of January to reserve their tickets, and they may apply to Miss Marjorie Renwick, secretary, or the president, Mr. W. H. Fleteher.

It is estimated that there will be about thirty tickets left afer members of the organisation have secured theirs. These will be available to non-members. Tickets are $1.00 each.

Calomel To-Night

Hot Water Before Breakfast

No more headaches, indigestion, foul breath, constipation, kidney pains, if you will but follow a doctors advice by taking two Tanol Calomel Tablets tonight and a good drink of hot water in the morning to wash from the system all the previous days' poisons and wastes before more food is taken in. Tanol Calomel is harmless, acts on every organ of the body, stomach, kidneys, liver and bowels, no salt or seidlitz are necessary, does not nauseate like ordinary calomel. Get a few of these tablets from your druggist and you will be surprised how much better they will make you feel. These inexpensive tablets can be obtained at F. C. Weber, Charlotte street.

SOLDIERS

Allies claim Germany could muster 400,000 soldiers overnight from her police training schools. Along with the Rejchswehr or standing army, this would give Berlin a force of half a million. Then she has millions of war veterans, also more millions who were boys during the war but now are matured.

The French are not altogether crazy in insisting on keeping a gun handy.

WEDS DRINKWATER

Violinist Becomes Second Wife of Famous English Playwright Who Recently Divorced His First Wife.

John Drinkwater (in inset), the English playwright, who wrote the drama, "Abraham Lincoln," has a new wife. She is Daisy Kennedy (above), the violinist. It is D rinkwater's second marriage.

NO PRINCESS

Now she's "just folks." Princess Nobuko, daughter of Prince Kuni of Japan, has married a commoner—Count Sanponishi. So she no longer is considered a member of the royal family.

DIAMOND WEDDING.

Mr. and Mrs. John Edwards, of Keene, Celebrated Sixtieth Anniversary.

KEENE, December 29. — The diamond anniversary of the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. John Edwards was held at their home at Keene on the 19th of December.

They were married in Keene on 19th December, 1864, by the late Rev. W. L. Scott.

The union was blessed with six children, twenty-three grandchildren, and thirteen great-grandchildren. The children are: Mrs. Chas. Edwards, Otonabee, Mrs. A. Brown, Peterborough, Mrs. W. McNevan, Otonabee, Mrs. James Taylor, deceased, Mrs. E. Wright, Peterborough, and W. D. Edwards, Otonabee.

The day was spent in receiving the congratulations of friends, and in the evening a family re-union was held. At the conclusion of the supper Mr. and Mrs. Edwards were presented with a purse of gold.

In religion, Mr. and Mrs. Edwards are Methodists, and during the evening received congratulations from the Bay of Quinte Conference through the secretary, Rev. Andrew McLauchlin.

A bouquet of roses and an address was received from the Trustee Board of the Methodist Church, of which Mr. Edwards has been a member for thirty years, and is at present the senior steward on the Quarterly Board of the Circuit.

The following lines were dedicated to Mr. and Mrs. Edwards by the author, Rev. J. C. Speer, a friend of the family:

The Diamond Wedding Day.

Sixty years of summer and grain,
Sixty winters of snow and rain,
Sixty diamond years of joy
Since you were a girl, and I a boy.

But the three-score years, all past and gone,
Were years of happiness, every one.
Now the children are here from far away
To greet us with joy on our wedding day.

God has been good thro' all the years,
No time to-day for your falling tears;
For love is the life of the leal and true,
As the diamond gleams like the sparkling dew.

Then laugh and be merry, and pray and sing,
For happy are they with their lives linked in,
Who live for the Christ Who saves alway
Thro' the fogs of time to the eternal day.

Sweet were the years, tho' bitter at times
The toll of the bells or the merrier chimes.
But God was good thro' the gold and grey,
Thro' times of cloud and sunshine day.

Welcome to one, and welcome to all,
Welcome to great and welcome to small;
May your hearts be light in work and in play,
Who greet us this diamond wedding day.

HASTINGS HALL IS CROWDED AT ANNUAL CONCERT

Beautiful Pageant Shows the Story of Christmas.

METHODIST CHURCH.

Full Programme of Humorous and Topical Numbers Delights Audience.

HASTINGS, Dec. 27. — The annual Christmas concert of the Methodist Church was given in the Opera House on Christmas evening. The "Star Orchestra" of Hastings opened the programme, and was followed by a piano duet, "Napoleon's Last Charge," by Misses Gladys Stevenson and Jessie Wilcox.

Master Goldworth Hinton gave the opening speech, and Miss Rea Preston recited "Menagerie Diet."

"Rock-a-Bye," a sweet little lullaby, was sung by Miss Irene Sargeant.

A tableau—"A Visit from Santa," was presented by three tiny tots.

Twelve girls, all dressed in white, gave a splendid "Wand Drill."

A comedy, entitled "Wanted—A Wife," was shown by eleven characters. Mr. A. B. Smith, taking the part of the gentleman advertising for a wife, received many applications. On hearing the door bell ring, he calls for his butler, Mr. A. V. German, who shows the first applicant into his master's presence. This part was taken by Miss Lillian Montgomery, who posed as a flapper. After her rejection the second one is shown in, who is an old maid taken by Miss Joyce Richardson. Not suiting his majesty, the third applies in person, who is a widow with five children. She also is sent away. Still another comes, Miss Mable Stewart, representing a negress. On seeing her, the gentleman becomes entirely disgusted. The last appears, who is a dashing young widow with $10,000, the part taken by Miss Jessie Wilcox. The last, the advertiser decides, is the wanted wife, and rises off his chair, and in a most satisfying manner leaves the stage.

A musical farce, taken by twelve girls, called the 'Kitchen Orchestra,' was presented with all kinds of kitchen utensils as representing various instruments.

Miss Georgina Beavis, of Norwood, recited "The Chores," wearing character costume of a typical young farm hand.

The pantomime, by eleven girls, of "Abide With Me," with Mr. Wm. Atkinson of Peterboro rendering the hymns, was beautiful, to say the least.

Miss Ina Stewart recited "Santaclausin."

A duet, "In the Starlight," was rendered by Misses Winnie Eager and Mabel Stewart.

Twelve boys gave a fine exhibition of a "Patriotic Drill."

Miss Margurite Schmidt sang a sweet little lullaby.

Madame Jarley's exhibit on wax works was given by a troupe.

Madame Jarley introduced her wax works by saying that her vendour, Mr. A. V. German, and clown, Mr. J. C. Wilson, would as each name was called out, bring to the front and display how each could perform. As each was brought the vendour would wind up the wax image, which then displayed, by acting the character it represented. Each was dressed in original costume and were: Madame Jarley, Mrs. M. J. Baker; Clown, Mr. J. C. Wilson; Vendour, Mr. A. V. German; Grand mother, Miss Mable Stewart; Dairy-Miss K. Simpson; Cook, Miss B. Sharpe; Japanese Lady, Miss R. Brooks; Dude, Mr. Roland Jones; Red Cross Nurse, Miss Winnie Eager; Maggie and Jiggs, Miss Ada Bond and Mr. Clifford Baker; "French Doll," Miss Georgina Beavis; "Miss Canada," Miss J. Wilcox; Coal Black Mammy, Miss Hazel Macdonald; Rag Doll, Miss Madeline Bond; Gypsy, Miss Jean Macdonald; Fairy, Margurite Schmidt; American Jazz Girl, Miss Lillian Montgomery; Mutt and Jeff, Messrs. Ormand Cruickshank and Hayden Kelley; Santa Claus, Mr. Jas. Knight.

A comedy, "Christmas at Skieters Corners," was given by thirteen characters.

Christmas Pageant.

The most appropriate and suitable item on the programme was "The Pageant of Bethlehem," the parts being: The Virgin Mary, Miss Muriel Cruickshank; Joseph, Mr. Byrant Scriver; The Wise Men: Messrs. Roland Jones, Cecil Whitred, Allen Sherwin; Shepherds: Wilbert Simpson, Cecil Scriver, Clifford Dainard, Arthur Beamish; Angels, Hazel Waye, Alethea Brownell and Elva Kellenbeck.

The curtain opened on the first scene, when Mary and Joseph were seated by the manger and a chorus of five voices sang "Joy to the World." The second scene was the Shepherds seated watching their flocks with the singers rendering "Silent Night." The third scene was the same as the second with the shepherds coming to see the Christ Child, and the strains of the hymn were heard, "Brightest and Best are the Stars of the Morning."

In the last scene the three wise men appeared and presented their gifts, namely, Gold, Franchisence and Mythr, and the singers again sang, "It Came Upon a Midnight Clear." They were: Mrs. J. Stevenson and Miss E. Beavis, sonrano; Miss J. Wilcox, alto; Mr. J. C. Wilson, tenor, and Mr. W. Knight, bass.

The three Angels were placed high at the back of the stage, looking down on the scenes below, and the lighting up of the different scenes was in perfect harmony with the story of Bethlehem.

The Coontown Thirteen Club, a blackface comedy, taken by fourteen characters, closed the programme.

Altogether the concert was a huge success as the Opera House was crowded. Many were not able to obtain seats and were forced to stand.

CHRISTMAS PARTY AT CAMPBELLFORD

Gerald Black gave an opening recitation, and Frank O'Sullivan (December) and Helen R. Kerr (No Room) gave recitations. Two choruses, "Christmas Carols" and "Santa Claus" were rendered by the pupils of the school.

Rev. Father Phelan spoke a few words of kind appreciation, and then a large basket of candy was brought in and he presented some candy to each of the children.

Presentation.

On Friday afternoon a large number of the friends and parents of the pupils of School Section No. 1, Seymour, met at the school, where Miss Merrell Upton teaches, and presented her with a beautiful clock. Miss Upton has resigned her position as teacher of the school.

Miss Laura Watson read the following address, and Miss Jessie Wright presented the clock:

Miss Merrell Upton,
Teacher S.S. No. 1, Seymour.

Dear Miss Upton,—We, the pupils of S.S. No. 1, Seymour, wish to convey to you our sincere appreciation of your work as teacher in our school, and also our deep regret at your decision to leave us.

During the two and a half years of service as our teacher here, you have endeared yourself to us all. Your constant devotion to your duty, your patience with us in our failings, together with your high ideals of life and conduct as expressed both by example and precept, have won for you a lasting place in our memories.

We ask you to accept this gift as a token of our goodwill and the kindly remembrance of your excellent work as our teacher. Our best wishes will accompany you wherever you may go in the future.

Signed on behalf of the pupils and parents of S.S. No. 1, Seymour.
19th December, 1924.

Miss Upton made a very suitable reply, expressing her appreciation of the thoughtfulness and kindness of the pupils and of the pleasant times she has had among them.

An excellent programme was also given by the pupils during the afternoon. At the close, refreshments were served.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

To the Editor.

Sir,—As a ratepayer I think it is about time the Campbellford Council took some steps to place lights along the road to serve the employees who work in the two mills in the lower part of the town. Lights have been placed in other parts of the town and district, and I think it is time the labouring man in this particular section received some consideration. As it is now, we have to travel along a dark road at six o'clock in the morning. The mills are running day and night, and the town of Campbellford receives the benefit of the money spent by the employees.

Trusting this will have the early consideration of the new Council,—
I remain,
A Ratepayer.

WEDDING BELLS.

A TEMPORARY ENGAGEMENT

When Did You First Discover You Were in Love?

A SHORT STORY.

By D. .

"Will you," said Bobby Gray, "become engaged to me, Nan?"

"Wha-a-t!" Nan Goldie sat upright in her harden chair, and the book she was reading fell from nerveless fingers.

"What I mean is," explained Bobby patiently. "You know I've an Aunt Nessy? Well, she's made up her mind to engage me to a girl who lives next door to her. Awfully worthy, you know, with ginger hair and too many teeth. Aunt N. declares that every man over twenty-five should be married, and it's time I settled down. Now I'll have no end of a job getting her off the idea, so if you'll become engaged to me for the time being I can present you as my fiancee, and everything in the garden is lovely."

"Is it?" retorted Nan. "What about me? I don't want a broken engagement to dog my young life, and that's what it will look like if anybody gets to know."

"No one will get to know except the aunt. She's only staying for a week-end in town."

"Then you should just tell her that you don't intend to get engaged. If I were a man I wouldn't be browbeaten into a thing like this."

Bobby grimaced inelegantly. "It's well seen you don't know the aunt, my child. She's quite capable of proposing to the girl for me." He bent forward persuasively. "Be a sport, infant, and you shall have a new tennis racquet as a memento of our brief engagement."

"Bribery," murmured Nan, then smiled widely. The idea appealed to her sense of fun.

"All right," she decided, "but, mind, it's understood that this engagement doesn't lead into too many complications. If it does, I'll back out."

"Oh, no complications at all," declared Bobby airily. "But you must have a ring."

He put his hand into a pocket and brought out a small case. Nan looked on wonderingly, then as the lid sprang open she gave a gasp.

"Oh, Bobby, your mother's ring!"

The man nodded. "Yes," he said curtly. "Hold out your finger."

For an instant the girl hesitated. The atmosphere of farce seemed in a moment to have disappeared, and a little pulse throbbed in her throat as she slowly held out her left hand. Bobby slipped the ring over the third finger, and Nan looked at it in silence. Then the moment passed, and Bobby's matter-of-fact voice broke the silence.

"I'll meet Aunt N. at the station, and you'd better come to dinner with us somewhere. Say, the Milano at eight?"

Nan nodded, and Bobby turned abruptly. "All right. I'm off now. See you later."

He swung down the garden path with long strides, and the clanging of the gate left the garden again in undisturbed peace.

As Nan stood in her bedroom that evening she looked down at the diamond ring on her left hand. It was a very quiet little ring, and the setting was quaintly old-fashioned. Bobby's dead mother had chosen it because it had a history of happiness behind it, and happiness it had certainly brought to her during her brief married life. Now for an instant Nan wondered at Bobby using it for a temporary engagement band. She laid a gentle finger on the stones, then slipped it hurriedly off and started to dress.

Punctually at eight o'clock the girl entered the huge lounge of the hotel. She was feeling uncomfortably nervous, a feeling which increased when, instead of the big, bouncing figure which she expected to see with Bobby, a sweet-faced elderly woman came forward.

"I'm so glad to see you, dear." The soft contralto voice sounded very sincere. "I've just been telling Bobby how pleased I am to hear this news. You must tell me all about how it happened."

Nan's blush and discomfiture were decidedly genuine. This was not at all like what she had expected. It was one thing to deceive a masterful, interfering woman, and quite another to play a trick on a woman who looked at you with affectionate interest. She glanced hurriedly at Bobby, but he was signalling to a waiter, and the words which trembled on her lips were never uttered.

"You must call me Aunt Nessy," went on Miss Gray as Bobby gave his order. "I'm so pleased to have a niece at last. Bobby has always been so difficult to please that I despaired of ever hearing of his engagement."

She broke off to start her soup, and Nan got redder and more discomfited than ever. She shot a dagger-like look at Bobby, but that gentleman was calmly enjoying his soup, and appeared not a whit upset. Nan registered a mental vow to have it out with him later, then became aware that Miss Gray was speaking again.

"And have you known each other long?" she enquired of Bobby. His reply was perfectly composed. "Ever since Nan was in short frocks and I used to run her pick-a-back up and down the garden."

This, at least, was true, and Nan began to breathe more freely. She meditated a change of conversation, but evidently Miss Gray had an inexhaustible interest in details, and the thought that her listeners might not enjoy them as thoroughly as herself had not occurred to her. She still devoted her attention to her nephew.

"When did you first discover you were in love with each other?"

The question turned Nan cold with fright, but again Bobby seemed quite at ease.

"Oh, I've always—more or less—been in love with Nan, but I don't quite know when she first fell in love with me." He turned to the girl. "When was it, Nan?"

Nan's blue glare as she turned her eyes on her "fiance" might well have struck that luckless young man dead on the spot, but Bobby continued to regard her with a pleasantly proprietary smile

"When was it, Nan?" prompted Miss Gray. "You mustn't be shy with me, you know, dear. I'm so interested."

Nan gulped and made a desperate attempt at speech.

"I—I'm not quite sure," she stammered. "Quite—Oh, quite recently."

Bobby nodded his head in agreement. "Yes, I thought so," he said musingly, while Miss Gray beamed on them both impartially

It seemed to Nan that the dinner would never draw to an end. At each question she seemed to go deeper into the net, and the obvious pleasure in the eyes of Aunt Nessy as she regarded her new-found niece deepened the sense of meanness she felt at the trick she was now playing. Why, oh, why, had she allowed her common-sense to be overruled by a fondness for practical jokes? The whole thing looked such bad taste to her now—like stealing pennies from a blind man. She glanced furtively at Bobby. He looked the picture of contentment; obviously no doubt troubled the surface of his complacency. Nan stabbed a peach viciously. He would hear a few home truths later, she promised herself.

At the other end of the room, hidden in a bower of palms, an unseen orchestra poured a flood of melody into the air.

"Night of stars oh, night of love," hummed Bobby under his breath, and Nan caught a glimmer of tears in the older woman's eyes as she bent towards the girl.

"I'm so glad you have chosen to wear dear Anne's ring for your engagement one. I know how much Bobby values it, and I can wish no better fate for you than that you be as happy in your married life as she and Bobby's father were in theirs."

The gentle voice stopped, and for the first time Nan saw a flicker of some sort of feeling pass over Bobby's face. It struck her that perhaps he was no easier in this masquerade than herself, but if that was the case, why had he started it?

Bobby's unemotional voice broke into her musings.

"If you are ready, Nan!"

Miss Gray had already risen, and was gathering her cloak about her. She smiled down on Nan.

"I think you've been day-dreaming, dear" she teased, "and now wake up, for Bobby has got seats for my favourite play, 'Romance.' I love it. Don't you?"

Bobby's wide grin from behind his aunt's shoulder made Nan choke suddenly. She murmured something, and, perfectly satisfied with her planning, Miss Gray led the way out of the restaurant.

The curtain was already up when they slipped into their seats in the theatre, and Nan was thankful for the darkness. She made no attempt to watch the stage, but sat twisting her handkerchief into a ball in her lap. How was the situation to be explained when the inevitable reckoning came? Once or twice Miss Gray leaned forward and cast an axious look at the girl, but of this Nan was utterly unaware as she sat and pondered. She glanced up at Bobby's expressionless face as he sat between them, and as she did so an entirely unexpected thing happened. Without taking his eyes from the stage, Bobby put out his hand, removed the handkerchief from her lap, and tucked it into his pocket, then coolly covered both her hands with his own. From sheer astonishment Nan remained absolutely motionless for a moment. Only a moment, then unobtrusively as possible she made an effort to draw her hands away, without, however, the slightest success. A second effort, more violent this time, but the grasp on her hands, though gentle, was firm as a rock, and it dawned on the girl that nothing short of a violent struggle would free her. This was the last straw.

In the darkness her cheeks flushed scarlet with anger. To be treated like a child, a fidgety child, too! Miss Gray moved her position slightly and glanced down the row. Her eyes rested for a moment on the clasped hands, fthen she gave a little sigh of satisfaction, and leaned back in her seat well content. Nan flushed again, then her sense of humour struggled to the surface. After all, Miss Gray's romantic soul was evidently entirely satisfied with the situation, though the meaning she read into the scene was very remote from the actual facts!

The play drew to an end at last, and as Miss Gray stepped out of the taxi at her hotel she gave a sigh of complete satisfaction.

"One of the loveliest plays I ever saw," she pronounced, kissing Nan affectionately. "Good night, my dear. I've told Bobby that he is to ring me up in the mornino and say whether you can come and lunch with me. I want you to arrange to come and spend a few days with me at home, to meet all my friends, but we can talk that over to-morrow." She disappeared through the the portice, and Bobby re-tntered the car.

Nan sat bolt upright in hur corner and sought for adexuate words to express her feelings, but as she opened her lips, Bobby spoke.

"Don't start now to tell me what you think of me. I'll come in, and you can get it off your chest then. I've a pretty good idea of what you want to say."

"Then if you know what I'm going to say, tell me this: Why did you do it?" Nan's voice was icily clear.

"It's perfectly true so far. Aunt Nessy does want me to marry the girl who lives next door to her. That's all I'm going to say just gnw."

He gazed steadiMy out of the windo until the taxi drew up before the gate of Nan's home, then jumped out and held out his hand to the girl. Nan ignored it, and, walking swiftly, was half-way up the path before he reached her. As he drew abreast she stopped abuptly.

"Now will you tell me? You don't need to come in."

For an instant there was silence, and n the moonlight she saw Bobby's face was very grave. When he spoke he seemed to choose his words very carefully.

"It's quite true what I told Aunt Nessy. I've been in love with you all your life, but you knew me so well and were so used to me that I simply couldn't make you see. If I'd proposed you'd only have shrieked with laughter, and I think"—he hesitated and looked at her, but Nan's face was hidden—"I think that you care for me more than you know."

A gate clanged somewhere in the distance, and Nan jumped. Her voice was rather unsteady as she spoke, and she had a fancy that the beating of her heart must be audible for miles around.

"You had no right to think anything about me," she said perversely. "Please take this back."

She slipped off the ring and held it out to him, but he took both ring and hand into his grasp.

"Are you sure I must take it back, Nan? Won't you keep it, dear?"

A little wisp of cloud drifted across the face of the moon. The scent of mignonette was wafted from the flowers at their feet. All the garden was very still and hushed.

Nan glanced up at the man standing before her, very tall and straight in the moonlight.

"Oh!" she breathed. Then in the tone of one who makes a momentous discovery, "Oh, Bobby, yes!"

SERVICE INTERRUPTED.

Man Crawls Under Sanctuary Rail and Hurled Parcel at Altar.

NEW YORK, December 29th. —While the pastor was in the midst of his sermon yesterday, the high mass at St. Patrick's Cathedral was interrupted by a man who crawled under the sanctuary rail, and hurled what was at first thought to be a bomb, at the altar.

Several members of the congregation rushed for the exits, but the Rev. Bryan J. McEntegart restored order and went on with his sermon.

The "bomb" was later found to be a package containing papers on which was written "I am the Son of God."

The disturber, Hugh Robinson, 43, was arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir:—In the Saturday edition of your paper Mr. A. A. McIntyre says that if elected to the Utilities Commission, he will do his utmost to have an enquiry made into our local and undeveloped water powers to see if a saving can be made in the purchase of power.

Mr. McIntyre should know that the contract with the Ontario Hydro Electric Commission for power (under which Hundreds of thousands of dollars have been saved to the citizens) was made by the City Council. If any enquiry should be made of the nature suggested by Mr. McIntyre it is the duty of the City Council to have made, as the Utilities Commission has no jurisdiction in that matter.

Mr. McIntyre was a member of the City Council, was Chairman of the power committee of the Council and was Mayor. If he omitted then any duty that he thinks he should have performed and wishes now to have such an enquiry made, he should be a candidate for membership in the Council, instead of the Commission, because as a member of the Commission, if he were elected, he would be in the wrong place for taking up this subject.

Yours truly

W. H. BRADBURN.

The Editor of Examiner,

Referring to letter regarding public meeting of voters in G.W.V.A. Hall. It is regretable that the suggestion was not made sooner as the Hall is engaged for every night this week.

The G.W.V.A. welcomes at all times the opportunity to serve the public.

May I take this opportunity to wish each and every citizen of Peterboro also of the county, a Happy, Prosperous New Year. We appreciate the assistance we have received from all classes and ask your continued support.

CROSS EXAMINATION OF BANK DIRECTOR

R. P. Gough Followed in the Footsteps of Other Directors of Defunct Bank.

TORONTO, December 29. — R. P. Gough, the vice-president and director of the Home Bank, on trial on charges of making false statements of the bank's affairs, was asked, when under cross-examination this morning by D. L. McCarthy, K. C., crown prosecutor, why in 1918, after agreeing with a letter written by the late H. J. Daly, which stated that the liquid affairs of the bank were in a precarious condition, he agreed to the profit and loss statement submitted three weeks later showing that the bank had made a profit?

"I had faith in the men submitting the statement of profits," replied Mr. Gough.

"How could you have faith in them when you yourself a few days before had written complaining that Mr. Haney was making big loans behind the backs of the directors?"

"Well, I was working in conjunction with fellow directors, and we must all have been satisfied," was the reply.

JURY DEADLOCKED.

Kid McCoy Will Face a New Trial if Jury Disagrees.

LOS ANGELES Dec. 29.—Apparently hopplessly deadlocked, the jury in the case of Kid McCoy, ex-prize fighter, charged with the murder of Mrs. Theresa W. Mors here last August, continued through the night to deliberate the guilt or innocence of the defendant.

The last report of the jury that the vote, without stating whether it stood for conviction or acquittal, was 7 to 5, caused Superior Judge C. S. Crail to express apprehension that the trial which has cost the county approximately $25,000, would end in a jury disagreement and a retrial.

VIOLENT RIOTING.

Police Quelled Outbreaks Near the Belgian Frontier.

PARIS, Dec. 29. — (Canadian Press). — Revolutionary manifestation at Rehon in Meurths-Et-Moselle, near the Belgian frontier, today resulted in violent rioting, which was suppressed by the police only with difficulty, says a despatch to Le Matin.

Undeterred by recent expulsions of the agitators, Communists organized a meeting, which was harangued by orators in French and Italian, and trouble soon followed. Gendarmes summoned from Longwy quelled the disturbance and arrested a number of persons.

SON SHOT FATHER.

William L. Baker to Face Charge of First Degree Murder.

JOHNSTOWN, N.Y., Dec. 29.—(Canadian Press).—Daniel Baker of this city, died in Gloversville Hospital this morning of bullet wounds said to have been inflicted by his son, William L. Baker, who is being held in Fulton county jail. Police say the son has admitted he shot his father in a quarrel. He will be arraigned this morning charged with first degree murder. Police said shooting appears to be the climax of a family feud which has existed since the father married his son's divorced wife. Young Baker it was said, was married in November 1917 and later came to this city to make his home with his father. Shortly afterward Mrs. Baker brought a suit for divorce and was awarded custody of their two children. Then she married the elder Baker.

HOW PETERBORO LOST BARBECUE STEER AND ALL

Rotarian Dobbin Tells of Exciting Incident of Old Days.

DISAPPOINTED CROWD.

Well Known Characters Carried Off the Piece De Resistance.

A most amusing and entertaining recital of an incident in the early days of Peterboro that caused great excitement in the then small town was given by Rotarian F. H. Dobbin, who was the speaker at today's luncheon of the Peterboro Rotary Club.

The speaker, taking it as understood that there was a period of relaxation following Christmas, declared that he thought his subject would be appreciated as in a lighter vein from the usual diet. Then he proceeded in his own inimitable way to tell the Rotarians the story of the barbecue that was to have been the biggest feature of the laying of the corner stone of the new town hall in Peterboro in 1851, and of the thrilling theft of the ox during the night, leaving nothing for the would be feasters. Some of the characters who abounded in those days had been unable to resist the temptation of playing a joke upon the whole community, and the steer was being roasted at the market square disappeared overnight, with no clue left as to the guilty parties.

This comedy from Peterboro's early history was thoroughly appreciated by the Rotarians.

Eleven-year-old Donald Green, introduced as the "youngest member of the Symphony Orchestra," played two violin solos in a manner that indicated great promise, and his numbers were greatly enjoyed.

President J. W. McDermid was in the chair to-day, and there was a large attendance of members and visitors for the last meeting of the old year.

KNOX CHURCH TO ENTER THE UNION

Officers of Church Recommend This Step Yesterday.

Following upon the action recently taken by the session with regard to entering the United Church of Canada, the officers of the various organizations of Knox Church yesterday recommended to the membership of the church that the church go with its mother church into the United Church. The following or similar statements were read at the evening service by officers representing their organizations:

"To the Members of Knox Presbyterian Church, Peterboro, Ont.

"Inasmuch as all the higher courts of our church, including our Presbytery, Synod and General Assembly, have decided that, in the interests of the Kingdom of God, our church should enter into the United Church of Canada, and inasmuch as, in so entering the United Church, Knox Presbyterian Church can remain as it now is, with all its organizations, practices and its name unchanged, and inasmuch as our session recommends that our congregation go with the Presbyterian Church in Canada into the United Church, we, the officers of the Women's Missionary Society of Knox Church, in loyalty to our church courts, join with the session in recommending to our people that Knox Church enter the United Church of Canada."

The above or similar statements were signed by twelve managers and trustees, seventeen officers of the Ladies' Aid Society, thirteen officers of the Women's Missionary Society, and forty officers and teachers of the Church School. Several other officers, whose names are not attached, are known to be in favor of the course recommended. Quite a number of the signatories were formerly opposed to Church Union, but now that the mother church has finally decided to enter the United Church, feel it their duty, in loyalty to the courts of their church, to go with her. This augurs well for the maintenance of the excellent unity, harmony and fellowship which has always characterized the people of Knox Church from its inception.

In Time Males Will Lose All Their Teeth and Hair.

BOSTON, Dec. 29. — (Canadian Press).— A man will lose many if not all of his teeth, he will be absolutely hairless and he will undoubtedly lose some of his toes and fingers. These are predictions based on scientific study by E. E. Raymond, professor of Paleontology and Geology at Harvard University. These changes will not be until man has passed through a series of evolutionary phases which probably will consume 40,000 to 75,000 years according to Prof. Raymond. He predicted heightening and broadening of forehead and enlarging of skull for bigger brain and a longer face.

FIFTEEN PERSONS SLAIN AND EATEN

Karl Denke, Silesian Farmer, Hanged Himself in Cell Following Arrest.

BERLIN, Dec. 29.— (United Press). — Karl Denke, a Silesian farmer is believed to have killed and eaten fifteen persons at his lonely farm near Muensterberg.

The skins of the victims were used to make suspenders and twine.

The police have been making one gruesome discovery after another in Germany's new "Haarman Case", since Denke's suicide on Christmas eve. The farmer lured wandering workmen and youths to his home and killed them with cannibalistic intent, according to the State's Attorney, who has undertaken an investigation of the case. Jars containing pickled human flesh were found in Denke's barn.

On Christmas eve, he attacked a youth with a spade but the intended victim escaped following his arrest Denke hanged himself in his cell.

CANADIAN NATIONAL A SOURCE OF PROFIT

Sir Henry Thornton Broadcasts Important Speech Last Evening.

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 29. — "The results of our last two years of operation conclusively show that the Canadian railway system can furnish a first class service to the public, and, at the same time eventually become a source of profit to the people of Canada. The first of these conclusions is becoming more evident day by day. How soon we shall accomplish the second depends entirely upon the business we can secure. Consequently it becomes the duty of everyone of us to put forth every effort to attract freight, passenger, telgraph and express business to the National Railway System. I know I can rely upon the efforts of all of you in this direction."

The foregoing was one of the statements made by Sir Henry W. Thornton, chairman and president of the Canadian National Railways, during the course of the address which he delivered last night from radio station CNRM, the Canadian National radio broadcast station at Montreal.

FEELING STABILITY.

Montreal Business Men Sees Improved Conditions in Old Country.

ST. JOHN, N.B., Dec. 29.—After an enjoyable two months honeymoon trip to England and France, Mr. and Mrs. John Perodeau of Quebec, arrived here to-day on the Canadian Pacific Steamship Montclare. Mr. Perodeau is a son of Hon. N. Perodeau, Lieutenant Governor of Quebec. Speaking about their trip Mr. Perodeau said they naturally had a glorious time in Paris They were surprised to find living conditions much cheaper than in England. Food selling for approximately 100 per cent cheaper. Conditions in Paris were apparently good and the people were confident of better times in the near future.

In England they said there is a feeling of stability, which did not exist prior to the election. People in general also predicted better times in the future. Mr. and Mrs. Perodeau left on a special train for Montreal enroute to their home.

Another prominent passenger on the liner was Capt. G. Foellmer of Vancouver, who had been in London conferring with the Hudson Bay Co. with regards to building a large new ice breaker for use in the Western Arctic. His last command was the Lady Kindersley which was carried away by ice on August 4th and abandoned on August 31st. He said that next year the steamer Baychimo will be put on this route by the company as the new steamer cannot be completed before 1926. Captain Foellmer has been in the Arctic service for 15 years.

WORK PROGRESSES WELL ON RAILROAD

Tunnel Being Dug Through Rocky Mountains in Colorado.

DENVER, Dec. 29—The Moffat tunnel, piercing the continental divide of the Rocky Mountains west of here, and one of the world's greatest railroad bores, is nearly one-third completed and is ten percent ahead of the time schedule set by the builders.

To date the pioneer, or water, tunnel has been bored 6,500 feet from the east portal and 5,490 from the west portal, or more than one-third of the six-mile distance. The main heading has penetrated James Peak 6,316 feet from the east portal and 4,700 feet from the west. The cross-cut tunnels, connecting the main and water bores at intervals of from 1,300 to 1,500 feet, have reached a total of 520 feet. Each of these cross-cut tunnels is approximately 76 feet in length. The full size railway tunnel has penetrated 3,094 feet from the east and 531 feet from the western portal.

At present the work of enlarging the main heading, which is being drilled seven and one-half by nine feet, to the full size tunnel, which will be 16 by 24 feet, is proceeding twice as fast as the work at the front. At this ratio, tunnel engineers estimate, within a year this work will be abreast of the main heading.

The slowness of progress on the western end is accounted for by the fact that builders have encountered soft shale and dirt rather than solid rock. This necessitates timbering every foot of the way at a cost of more than $100 per linear foot. At the east portal solid rock was found after the first few hundred feet and enabled the contractors to speed up the work materially.

That the work through the winter months will proceed even more rapidly than during the summer is the prediction by engineers today. Absence of visitors through the months when the camps are snowbound, and the lessening likelihood of workmen drifting from their jobs, account for this prediction, it was explained.

The men are comfortably housed in camps at each end of the tunnel, where stocks of provisions sufficient for three months are at hand. Each camp has a medical dispensary and hospital with a doctor and nurse in constant attendance. Fatalities, however, have been almost nil, but one death resulting from accident during the 17 months the work has been in progress.

Terms of the contract call for the completion of the project not later than July, 1927. The opening of the tunnel to railroad traffic will start the development of a vast tract of virgin territory in northwestern Colorado, a region heretofore not reached by railroad lines. In this territory lie vast coal deposits, oil shale beds and oil fields as yet untapped except for one or two isolated wells that have come in for flows estimated at several thousand barrels a day.

VISCOUNT CECIL HONORED.

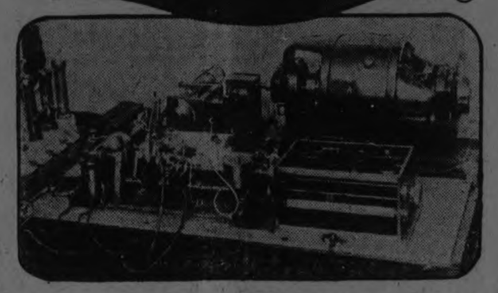
PHOTORADIOGRAM MAY BRING US LATEST PARIS MODES IN 24 HOURS



Getting pictures out of the air! Above, Captain R. H. Ranger, inventor, and Maj. Gen. James G. Harbord, president of the Radio Corporation, in New York watching the radio picture machine receive a photograph from London. Below, the motor which turns the receiving cylinder and other parts of the instrument. Left, the Prince of Wales, right, Stanley Baldwin, as transmitted. Each picture requires 15 or 20 minutes.

BY GEORGE BRITT

NEW YORK, Dec. 29—Within 24 hours after the first successful wireless transmission of pictures across the Atlantic, a Fifth avenue costumer was seeking exclusive rights to transmit photographs of the latest Parisian modes.

And there's no doubt or joke about the possibilities of the new "photo-radiogram" for sending important documents across wide spaces and obtaining important signatures quickly. It can be done with absolute safety. News pictures can be flashed around the world in time for first editions.

In fact, it is a scientific possibility to build a radio telephone which permits the parties to see one another. Young lovers, divided by the rolling ocean, may hear each other's voices and gaze into each other's eyes.

"Possibility" is the big word in this latter idyllic picture, emphasizes Maj. Gen. J. G. Harbord, president of the Radio Corporation of America in whose laboratories the "photo-radiogram" was developed. The seeing telephone hasn't been built yet, and it may never become commercially practical. But principles now known make it possible.

"The radio transmission of pictures probably is the greatest development of wireless in many years," General Harbord says.

"The transmission of pictures from Europe by wireless is an achievement which speaks for itself. But consider some of the refinements of the device.

"It is absolutely secret. Outsiders cannot tune in. The rate of sending can be regulated to an accuracy of one point in a hundred thousand. Unless the exact rate is known, anyone receiving the impulses will get only a blur. Furthermore it is possible to code it, so that translation is necessary to get a picture.

"It is subject to far less interference from static than sound transmission. It is comparatively cheap, And it still is in the infancy of its development."

The invention is the work of Captain R. H. Ranger, engineer for the Radio Corporation, assisted by Alfred Koenig, Donald G. Ward, Karl MacIlvaine and William Paley.

Nearly two years ago they started, just after Owen D. Young, chairman of the board of the General Electric Company, had said lightly at a banquet that he wished to see an operator just press a button, and zip, the first page of the London Times will be reproduced in New York."

By July, 1923, the engineers had succeeded in sending a picture of General Harbord by wireless. That picture is a treasure of the laboratory, a tangle of bluish lines, dim but recognizable, printed through the air slowly and painfully. Later they discarded the system of that transmission and developed another.

"It is an old quest, this electrical transmission of pictures," says Captain Ranger, red-headed young engineer who came up through the Massachusetts Tech and the army signal corps.

"And Englishman by the name of Bain worked on it about 1842, and his principle was absoultely correct. But he was handicapped by the lack of instruments. We started from the ground up, with only the general basis of radio sound transmission.

"The picture is sent from a revolving clyinder and printed on another which revolves at exactly the same peed. To synchronibe the sending and receiving cylinders was as hard a problem as any in the entire invention.

"In sending, light shines through the picture, one tiny point at a time. Its intensity is regulated by the lights and darks of the picture. This light strikes a tube much resembling an ordinary radio tube, lined with potassium. It is known that when such a tube is lighted, current passes through it more easily than when it is in darkness. Therefore, the varying degrees of light shining through the picture onto the tube regulate the strength of electric impulses flowing through the tube."

"THE RIVAL OF GOD"

By ALICE ROHE.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29 (United Press). —The premier of a significant play took place in New York which was overlooked by the critics of the English-speaking dailies.

It is a play which, if presented in English, is bound to arouse a lot of interest. First, its author, Arturo Giovannitti, is one of the most fearless poet-philosophers of our day. The name of Giovannitti is, of course, immediately associated with the famous Lawrence, Mass., strike of 1912. It was then that he, Ettor and Caruso were imprisoned, charged with having incited the acts which led to the death of a number of people.

It was Giovannitti's first speech in English which cleared them all. But in those nine months in prison, Giovannitti, son of cultured Italian parents, found his poetic soul in the English language. "The Cage" and "The Walker," composed at this time, are considered by many in the same class with "The Ballad of Reading Goal."

And now Giovannitti has turned playwright. His first play to be produced is "Il Rivale Di Dio"—"The Rival of God."

It is an intensely dramatic play, too, but there is so much of Giovannitti's philosophy pulsing through it that even lack of action does not mean lack of excitement.

It is the story of a young medical student who has consecrated his energies toward one purpose. He is on the way to the discovery of a means of curing blindness. But he has no money. The play opens with his beseeching a money-lender to advance funds necessary for him to be permitted to make his experiments at a university.

In the discussion the usurer draws a revolver. A scrimmage results and the usurer is killed. Then the young doctor, seeing the open safe, takes the money which will bring happiness to mankind.

But at that moment the money lender's daughter, attracted by the shot, enters. Her father lies dead. Terrified, she turns and sees what she believes is his murderer. The shock blinds her with the image forever upon her mind of the assassin's face. Twelve years later the young doctor, now an internationally famous sight specialist, is visited as a patient by this daughter. She falls in love with him. Realizing what his future will be when he removes the bandages from her eyes the doctor still operates successfully. But the woman in love, after the horror of discovery, when he demands, "Now do you recognize me?" replies "No."

There is in this play one of the strongest and most dramatic speeches in recent stage literature. It is delivered by the doctor when the great of the city come to honor him. To the president of the university who refused to permit him to experiment without $2,000, he returns the honorary degree. To the millionaire philanthropist who presents him with a million-dollar donation for his work, he returns it indignantly, stating that he does not need it now as he did the $2,000 he had once begged to continue his work.

If Giovannitti's play is ever presented on Broadway, it will open the eyes of more than the blind.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

By SISTER MARY

GAIN WEIGHT.

Six sweetened stewed prunes, 3-4 cup cooked oat cereal, 1 soft boiled egg, 2 slices broiled bacon, 1 cup cream of corn soup, 3-4 cup spinach, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 lemon, 4 tablespoons creamed potatoes, four ounces broiled calves brains, 1 cup creamed celery, 1-2 head lettuce, pear salad, 4 tablespoons cocoanut cream custard, 1 "ten cent" serving chocolate ice cream, 1 slice mock angel cake, 1 tablespoon maitre d'hotel butter, 4 tablespoons cream, 3 teaspoons sugar, 2 pieces buttered toast, 2 crackers, 2 slices nut bread, 2 dinner rolls, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 pint whole milk.

Total calories, 3335. Protein, 342; fat, 1703; carbohydrate, 1290. Iron, .0184 gram.

Pear Salad (Individual)

One whole canned pear, 1-2 Neufchatel cheese, 1 teaspoon peanut butter, 2 tablespoons mayonnaise, 1 tablespoon cream, 1-4 teaspoon salt, paprika.

Combine cheese and peanut butter and mix smooth with cream. Fill cavities of pears with mixture, sprinkle with paprika and arrange on a bed of lettuce. Mask pears with mayonnaise. Add salt to the cheese if necessary.

Total calories (exclusive of lettuce) 277. Protein, 30; fat, 144; carbohydrate, 103. Iron, .0004 gram.

LOSE WEIGHT.

Three large or four small unsweetened stewed prunes, 1 soft boiled egg, 3-4 cup spinach, 1 lemon, 4 ounces broiled calves brains, 1 cup stewed celery, 1-2 head lettuce, 1 whole canned pear, 2 tablespoons cottage cheese, 2 thin pieces crisp gluten toast, 1 gluten roll, 2 slices rye bread, 1 pint whole milk.

Total calories, 1019. Protein, 236; fat, 289; carbohydrate, 494. Iron, .0269 gram.

If the egg is not wanted for breakfast it can be "hard-boiled" and used with the spinach.

The celery is of course stewed in water to cover and seasoned with salt and pepper and a very little butter, not more than half a teaspoon, and no cream or white sauce.

Broiled Calves Brains.

One pound calves brains, 1 tablespoon vinegar, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon butter, pepper.

Let brains stand in cold water to cover for one hour. Plunge into boiling water to which the salt and vinegar have been added and parboil 20 minutes. Drain and put into cold water to blanch and harden. When cold remove membrane and cut in pieces to serve. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and broil ten minutes. Brush over with melted butter and serve at once. Maitre d'hotel butter can be served to the rest of the family.

Total calories, 652. Protein, 160; fat, 492.

FAME OF KILMARNOCK.

Established by Bobby Burns and Johnnie Walker.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—"Bobbie Burns and Johnnie Walker it was who established the fame of Kilmarnock between them," said J. Manson Ramsey at the Hotel Pennsylvania, where is is a guest, Mr. and Mrs. Ramsey, accompanied by S. H. Lambshead of Devonshire, England, a brother of Mrs. Ramsey, have been spending the last nine months in a trip around the world. During that time they have touched nearly every port of interest and are now on their way to Scotland.

"It was there that the Kilmarnock edition of Burn's poems was published more than a hundred years ago," said Mr. Ramsey. "This edition originally sold for the equivalent of 50 cents. Now a copy is worth $5,000. There is a copy in the museum at Kilmarnock. Once the copy was stolen, but it was recovered because there are so few copies in existence the thief could not safely dispose of it. The few existing copies and their owners are easily traced.

"As for Johnnie Walker," said Mr. Ramsey with a twinkle, "he was well known over here, I fancy, until you ran him from the country in 1918 and told him never to come back. For Johnnie Walker is one of the best brands of whisky that ever came out of the land of heather and oatmeal.

"They have been making Johnnie Walker whiskey in Kilmarnock since 1820. 'Born in 1820 and still going strong,' is the advertisement that runs all the time in Punch. It was named after the man who founded the firm. Johnnie Walker was the grandfather of the present owners.

"Another noteworthy feature of Kilmarnock is Dean Castle, whose present owner is Lord Howard de Walden, famous as a fencer, literary man and a man of wealth. Dean Castle is eight or nine hundred years old. It originally belonged to the Lairds of Kilmarnock. The last Laird of Kilmarnock to live in the castle was executed in the Tower of London for joining the rebellion of Bonnie Prince Charlie in 1745. If you ever go to London you will find the self-same block in the Tower upon which the Laird of Kilmarnock laid his head for them to chop it off.

"Kilmarnock is also famous for its carpet bills and also for [illegible] I might say that whiskey, ships and carpets were the chief [illegible] Kilmarnock.

"The original Gaelic is practically never spoken in Scotland. It is taught in the colleges much as Latin is taught, as a literary and classical language. It is a very poetic and musical language, but because it was the language of the ancients, passing into disuse through various causes, it is an inadequate for the expression of modern ideas.

"The people of Scotland, Ireland, the Cornish, the Welsh people and the people of Brittany all spring from the same racial root, and their original language is Gaelic, or rather, variations of Gaelic."

SILVER SHOES PASS AS CURRENCY

The Chinese use an ingot in the form of a woman's shoe as a basis of curreney, which is determined by the weight and fineness of silver. It is expressed in so many "tales of sycee." The pureness and weight of the shoes are certified by a Chinese official called "Klung Ku."

CORRIGAN

by EDMUND SNELL

VI—AT THE HOUSE OF THE SEVEN STARS.

Corrigan reined up his sturdy Borneo pony. From the shade of the giant breadfruit tree which stood—a solitary sentinel—at the summit of One Tree Hill, he could see almost the whole of his five thousand acres of waving rubber. Here and there, over that vast expanse, sweating coolies weeded out the deadly lalang; in the bed of the winding valley which ran between his hills, he counted four separate groupings of coolie lines—clusters of long narrow huts where faint wreaths of blue smoke issued from cook-house chimneys to hang listlessly in the shimmering tropic air, breathless and sweltering. To the westward lay a calm sea of deepest blue, dotted with palm girt islets and fringed with native huts on poles, and trees between which the sand showed in broken patches of yellow. To the north and south and east the virgin jungle clung with verdant fingers to the territory for which as yet the invading white man had no use, fingers between which the Dusun agriculturists urged their water buffaloes, ploughing with primitive implements.

Monarch of all he surveyed—all that mattered—his huge form clothed in a shirt of white flannel—open at the neck; riding breeches of khaki drill; canvas leggings and shoes, and immense shovel-backed sun helmet. Corrigan placidly filled a blackened briar from a weather-stained pouch and waited for a man who was coming up toward him on foot. The Bajau pony, understanding to the full the ways of its lord and master, stood motionless, save for an occasional twitching of its long tail at the ever-tormenting flies.

"Morning, Fellowes," shouted the planter presently, as the other came within earshot.

"Tabi!" returned the first assistant, breathlessly. He staggered up the remaining dozen yards, and sat down on the soft turf, mopping his brow.

Corrigan slid to the ground and joined him.

"You've got a liver, old son," he told him. "You want a tonic. Good Lord, man, look at the difference between, say, a year ago and to-day. Doesn't it strike you? We had that swine Jacobson up against us." He shifted his arm and began tabulating the items on his brown fingers. "There was that Lai-Ho affair—when young White nearly went west. Then the Singapore gang of crooks had a go at me. That was a close thing, if you like! Finally, we trod unwittingly on the toes of religious fanaticism, and I got Millett out of its clutches by the skin of his teeth! Those are only a few of the troubles we had to contend against. You must admit there's a vast improvement to-day! I believe I can look the world in the face and say truthfully that I haven't a single enemy!"

"Now, that's precisely where you're wrong," said Fellowes, looking at the hands that were clasped over his knees.

Corrigan sat bolt upright.

"What d'you know?" he asked calmly.

The assistant moved further into the shadow, and, taking off his topee, wiped the leather band with his handkerchief.

"I know a good deal," he declared, "and I hate to see you sitting there, purring like a Cheshire cat, when you're in about the greatest danger you've ever been in since I've known you."

"Oh-ho!" cried the planter. "It's like that, is it?" He tapped the ashes from his pipe. "I can't say I altogether approve of this air of funereal gloom which seems to be part of your stock-in-trade this morning; but I'm going to confess to a feeling of deepest curiosity. Let's have the yarn, Fellowes."

"The devil you know," said the assistant, enigmatically, "is a damn sight better than the devil you don't!"

"Admitted, old son! What then?"

"Well," pursued the other, brightening, "you remember Jacobson?"

"Yep! He's dead."

"You made a hell of a mess of that affair, Corrigan. It's your confounded respect for the opposite sex. You're essentially a man's man. Women get you cold, every time!"

Corrigan grinned.

"I like that!" he protested, amiably. "D'you recollect a certain Enid Paterson? If I remember rightly, I saw you sitting uncommonly close to that lady on your veranda steps at sundown one evening; the next time I caught you together—you were preventing her from burgling my safe with a pretty useful-looking automatic!"

Fellowes flushed.

"Never mind Enid Paterson!" he retorted, irritably. "I insisted on handing her over to justice; but you let the woman I'm talking about go. All the thanks you're likely to get for that—is a knife in your back when you're least expecting it!"

"What woman?" asked Corrigan, quietly.

"That Tamil witch—as black as a crow—who made drugged cigarettes for Jacobson!"

Corrigan whistled softly.

"You've seen her about again?"

Fellowes nodded.

"When I said my pony was crocked—I lied. You remember my telling you that there were places where one couldn't take a pony? Well, I've been in some pretty low sorts of haunts lately—on your account. I spent the best part of last night pretending to smoke chandu—and listening."

His eyes came slowly round to Corrigan's. The great man appeared to be chuckling inwardly. Fellowes choked down the gloom that consumed him and laughed merrily, in spite of himself.

"Man alive!" he shouted. "I'm telling you you're in mortal danger!"

"I'm not in the least bit surprised," said Corrigan. "I've been in it ever since I was born!" He rose slowly to his feet and reached out for the bridle. "Come and have lunch with me. We'll talk it over."

They moved off down a winding path, making for where Corrigan's squta bungalow showed just over the top of the opposite ridge.

* * * *

A tall Sikh watchman was waiting in the shelter of the house. Corrigan handed him the reins and relieved him of a bag of mail that had come by the morning train from Jesselton.

"Wait," he said briefly, and mounted the steps, followed by Fellowes.

"Yah, Tuan."

As Corrigan crossed to a chair he kicked against a sack deposited rather carelessly in the centre of the floor.

"Who put this here?" he shouted in Malay.

"A woman, Tuan," replied the Sikh. "It was just after you had gone out."

Corrigan grunted and unlocked the bag. His eye ran over the correspondence, tossing the rolls of newspapers on to a cane chair.

"Anything for me, by any chance?" inquired Fellowes.

"A couple." He handed them over and, leaning against the table, opened one that was addressed to him in a bold, feminine hand.

The assistant thrust his contribution into the side pocket of his jacket and leaned on the rail.

"What sort of woman left this barang for the Tuan-Besar?" he asked of the man who held the pony.

"I saw her as I came up the slope, Tuan. She came from the back of the house, carrying the sack. As I looked, trying to see who she was, I saw her go up the steps—and come down without the sack. When I reached the house—she had disappeared among the trees like a shadow. She brought something to the Tuan-Besar—so I did not trouble further. If she had taken something away, it would have been different!"

His smile revealed a row of perfect teeth, white as ivory.

"But what was she like?" insisted Fellowes. "Was she one of the gardeners' wives?"

The watchman shook his head.

"She was a stranger to me, Tuan. She appeared to be quite black, not brown like the Dusun women. She moved rapidly, and when she carried the sack, her head was turned from me; but I think she was a Tamil girl."

Corrigan looked suddenly up.

"What's that?" he demanded sharply.

"It was a Tamil woman who brought the cocoanuts," repeated the Sikh.

Fellowes raised his brows.

Corrigan fixed the watchman's eyes with his own.

"In future, Watchman No. 1," he said, "you will detain all women who are seen wandering in the Kabun. The Tuan-Besar has no truck with native women, Tahu?"

The watchman saluted.

Fellowes was stooping over the sack.

"Seems to be uncommonly well tied," he announced. He felt in his pocket and produced a pruning knife he habitually carried.

"Stop a moment," said Corrigan in a low voice. "I've seen things like this before. You see, Fellowes, a present usually signifies friendship. Now, I've no friends of that sort. If a native contractor feels inclined to bestow gifts, he comes with them himself—and there's the usual pomp and ceremony thrown in. All things considered, we'll open it outside."

He picked up the parcel by the neck and one corner and balanced it on the rail. Fellowes cut the leather thong that secured the opening, and a succession of heavy objects fell to the soft earth below.

"Just cocoanuts!" he said, a puzzled look in his eyes.

Holding the sack by both bottom corners, Corrigan shook it smartly.

Something fell, writhing, on to the heap. The watchman jumped back a couple of feet.

"Good Lord!" ejaculated Fellowes. "A cobra!"

Corrigan went to the table and pulled out a drawer. He returned to the rail, motioned the watchman aside, and blew off the reptile's head with a single round.

"Here endeth the first lesson," he said grimly, letting the automatic drop into the chair with the newspapers. He waved to the Sikh to signify that he could go, and turned to the first assistant. "If I hadn't met you this morning, I believe I should have opened that sack in here!"

"I wonder if you would!" murmured the assistant half to himself. He hooked forward a chair and sat down, resting his elbows on the table. "D'you know, Corrigan, I've been learning a deuce of a lot lately. That woman's a no-end dangerous factor in our lives. You know more about Tamils than I do, or am ever likely to. They're possessed of a deuce of a lot of cunning, amounting to something like genius. They understand the uses of drugs our people have never heard of. I have it on very good authority that Jacobson was pretty white before he started living with that girl. From the moment he let her into his house—he went wrong. It appears she doped his food so successfully that his will-power was gradually weakened. He became like putty in her hands. Then Zariman the Terrible landed. She worked that—while Jacobson looked on. Zariman—in his attempt to rouse the Mahometans against the whites—paid pretty handsomely; but Jacobson only saw a small proportion of the money. That she-devil drugged Jacobson to help Zariman, and yet, such is the way of women, the moment you had Jacobson covered with your pistol—she betrayed the false prophet into your hands. . . . . "

Corrigan pressed the bell.

"Where did you get all this?" he asked.

"In the House of the Seven Stars."

Fellowes leaned back in his chair, the tips of his fingers pressed together in front of him.

"What's that?" demanded Corrigan. "A night club?"

"As a matter of fact—that's precisely what is it. It's situated in a somewhat remose spot where two forest paths cross. It's a more or less select establishment, there being an annex for coolies. The building I want you to bear in mind caters for mandors, watchmen—and the higher paid employees. It's an inoffensive looking place. It wouldn't occur to most people that it was a den of vice.

"Every man-jack of the habitues is mortally afraid of the Black Witch. They say, in their picturesque manner, that the kiss of the Black Witch is like a snake bite; but, as far as I can see, most of 'em are prepared to risk it, if she'd let 'em. The beauty of it all is that she won't! She's got them all in the hollow of her hand. I've watched her methods, night after night. From a psychological point of view—it's been most interesting."

"Here's luck," said the proprietor, lifting his glass.

"Cheerio!"

"All this is news to me," said Corrigan, setting down his glass. "May I inquire exactly where all this affects me?"

Fellowes grinned and jerked his thumb over the rail.

MONTREAL AND CANADIENS PLAY 80 MINUTES WITHOUT DECISION

Dandurand's Squad Escaped by Tieing It Up With Two Minutes To Go.

SCORE WAS ONE ALL

Record Crowd of 11,000 Saw Thrilling Duel—Munro Was a Star.

MONTREAL, Dec. 29.—(Canadian Press).—Eighty minutes of the most exciting hockey seen here in years failed to decide the issue between Canadiens and Montreal. The two local teams in the National Hockey League battled doggedly through two over time periods here Saturday night to a 1-1 deadlock, while over 11,000 enthusiastic fans—a record hockey crowd for Eastern Canada—were in a continuous uproar as pulse-throbbing episodes followed in quick succession.

There was a thrill for the spectators in the speedy start of the game as the dominion champions rushed Montreal and hemmed them into their own half of the ice for the first four minutes. Then pandemonium broke loose when captain Dunc Munro cleared from in front of Benedict and, steadily stick-handling his way, hit the Canadien defence. Munro lost control of the puck, but as Coutu and Sprague Cleghorn separated the Montreal captain knifed between them and regained the puck. He had a clear chance at Vezina and easily slipped the puck through for the initial counter. Excitement continued at high pitch as Montreal adopted a six-man defence and held the flashy Canadien forwards at bay until the last few minutes of the strenuously fought encounter.

Munro Benched.

Four minutes to go with Montreal still holding their one-goal margin, Gerald Munro, who had been playing superb defensive hockey for Montreal, was benched for putting Joliat into the boards, it was the first penalty of the game. With the advantage of the odd man Canadiens sent all but goalie Vezina down the ice in an effort to even the game.

For two minutes they were held at bay by Reg Noble who broke up four consecutive rushes by the Canadiens at centre ice. Just before Munro returned Broadbent took the puck behind the Montreal net. Cornered by Canadiens he lifted it in an attempt to send it clear to the other end of the rink. Joliat trapped the puck at the Montreal blue line and like a flash the league's leading scorer drove straight for the corner of the Montreal net. Only two minutes were left to play.

It was a dramatic climax which ended the hopes of the fast-tiring Montreal team and the apprehensions of the Canadiens who up to this final moment had seen their every effort frustrated by a defence which was impossible to beat.

Tired In Overtime.

With overtime play scheduled, there was a chance to end the deadlock. Montreal players, who had been changed but seldom, some not at all, were unable to extend further and settled down to hold the tie. Canadiens showed a little more dash than their opponents and took more chance on scoring, but the forwards had been used up and could not beat the brilliant Clint Benedict in the Montreal goal.

Everything in the hockey line was displayed for the benefit of the spectators, as the two teams went through their grind, but outstanding attraction was the splendid team play shown by Montreal.

With one goal up, they demonstarted a methodical defence that was the bane of the Canadien forwards, as time after time their tricky, speedy dashes were frustrated or their shots were turned aside by the ever-reliable Benedict Morenz, Billy Boucher, Joliat and Sprague Cleghorn tried every trick in their bags to get to close quarters for a shot on the Montreal goal. They were held at every attempt.

Subs Failed.

Leo Dandurand, halfway through the second period sent in Odie Cleghorn in an effort to try clever stick-handling as a means of outguessing the opposition. Then Mantha was sent in to see what result would come from him with his sturdy and fast rushes. But all were unvailing.

Mainly, they hit a sound, heavy-checking, diamond-shaped protection, of which Reg Noble was the point. Noble poke-checked as he never did before and rushes did not stop he turned into safe hands. And of these Gerald Munro was among the best. This robust and previously little-heard-of player proved a revelation and gave every indication of developing into one of the smartest defence men on the circuit.

He was badly jarred in the third period when he got sandwiched by the Canadien defence but after a short rest returned to the fray, Noble dropping back to the defence during his absence, while "Chuck" Dinsmore went to centre.

The teams were as follows:

Canadiens	Position	Montreal
Vezina	goal	Benedict
S. Cleghorn	defence	D. Munro
Coutu	defence	G. Munro
Morenz	centre	Noble
Joliat	l wing	Belinquette
W. Boucher	r. wing	Broadbent
Matz	sub	Dinsmore
O. Cleghorn	sub	Parkes
Mantha	sub	Rothchild
	sub	Lowrey
	sub	Cain
	sub	Scott

MOORE WON THREE.

LAKE PLACID, N.Y., Dec. 28.—Joe Moore of New York, 1924 indoor champion, won all three senior skating events in the annual holiday meet on Mirror Lake here yesterday. The races were held under unfavorable weather conditions, there being a terrific wind and a heavy fall of snow.

SELKIRK BEAT BRANDON.

WINNIPEG, Man., Dec. 28.—In a slow and listless game, Selkirk defeated Brandon by a score of 5-2 in the Manitoba league senior hockey fixture here Saturday night. Selkirk assumed a three goal lead in the opening session and took things easy for the remainder of the game.

KRAMER VS. KAPLAN.

Featherweight Title Will be Decided Next Friday. Night.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29. — Fistic activities this week will erase the only question mark left in the list of champions when Denny Kramer of Philadelphia and Louis (Kid) Kaplan of Meriden, Conn meet for 15 rounds in Madison Square Garden for the featherweight title on Friday night.

This crown since being swept from the head of Eugene Criqui of France rested on that of Johnny Dundee, only to be set aside when the Italian admitted that he was unable to make the weight. Then it was snatched up by the New York State Athletic Commission to be awarded to the survivor of a tournament built around six contenders and two alternates. Kaplan outpointed Bobby Garcia of Camp Holebird, Md., in the preliminaries and on the same night Kramer eliminated Mike Dundee of Rock Island, Ills., and Jose Lombardo of Panama, conquered Lew Paluso of Salt Lake City, in the semi-finals. Kramer drew a bye and Kaplan met Lombardo, knocking out the Isthmian in four rounds. Kramer has had six weeks in which to prepare for the final test, Kaplin only three.

WESTERN TEAMS PLAY TIE GAME

Edmonton and Saskatoon in 20 Minutes Overtime of Excitement.

KEATS EVENED UP

EDMONTON, Dec. 29.—In the most exciting game played here so far this season, the Eskimos and the Saskatoon Sheiks played twenty minutes overtime to a 4-4 tie Saturday night. Twice during the conflict the Saskatoon team enjoyed a two-goal lead and each time they had the advantage they looked like certain winners, but the Eskimos, who were handicapped by an injury to Stanely showed great powers of recovery, and were able to pull out with one point. It was a great exhibition of grit on the part of the Edmontonians.

Duke Keats who served up his best game of the season, was largely responsible for the Eskimo's splitting the points, as he got the tally that tied the contest up. Saskatoon scored the first two goals, one in the first frame and the other a couple of minutes after the opening of the second. Later the Eskimos split the lead in two, only to see the Sheiks come back with another tally before the close of the period.

Eight minutes from the start of the third session the Eskimos made it 3-2, and went into a tie when sixteen minutes had been played. Then Saskatoon forged ahead again, and with only slightly more than a minute to play it looked to be all over. Keats, however, picked up a pass from Trapp behind the Saskatoon net, circled prettily and flipped in a backhander to tie it up again. There was no scoring in the overtime period. Saskatoon had a clean edge in the first frame, the Eskimos had a margin in the second, the third was even and Edmonton had the best of the going in the over time session although unable to score.

The draw result did neither team any injustice.

Sampson, Keats, and Briden were the pick of the Edmonton aggregation, while Lalonde, Cameron and Bill Cook were very prominent for the Sheiks.

KELLEY A WONDER.

Harris Has Big Opinion of Giants' First Baseman.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—Manager Stanley Harris of the Washington club says that, all things considered, he regards First Baseman George Kelley of the Giants as the most remarkable player in the majors.

"Being six feet six inches, it would be supposed that his unusual height would tend to make him clumsy on the ball field. Instead, He is all grace," says Harris.

"I never saw a better stop than he made on Goslin while playing second, to end one of the world series games. In centre field, he pulled a couple of circus catches, while his first-base play could not have been improved upon.

"I regard any player who can step into three difficult positions in a world series and do the fine job that Kelley did, nothing short of a wonder player."

"BABE" DYE SCORED 3 TIMES IN 4 MINUTES

St. Pats Lose to Ottawa at Arena by 4 Goals to 3.

TORONTO, Dec. 29. — (Canadian Press). — Staging a determined rally in the last four minutes in which "Babe" Dye notched three counters, Jack Adams hit goal post on an attempt for the equalizer and every member of the Irish squad took one or more pots at Connell. St. Pats almost pulled the game from the loss column on Saturday night at the arena against the Senators by means of one of the greatest finishes ever provided for the local fans, but Ottawa managed to hold their lead and won 4 to 3. While there have been better games staged in the N.H.L. in this city but the first fourteen minutes and the last four will make it one to be long remembered.

NURMI FACES STRONG RUNNERS IN JOIE RAY AND WILLIE RITOLA

Visit of Flying Finn Creating Fresh Interest in the Indoor Track Game—First Race Scheduled for January 6th.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—Increased interest in indoor track meets, occasioned somewhat by the visit of Paavo Nurmi, Finnish runner, whose capture of four titles in the Paris Olympics was one of the outstanding athletic performances of the year is reported by the Amateur Athletic Union.

Three major meets and one championship fixture have been arranged for this season, and the union expects these events to outdraw those of any previous year. It is highly probable that several records will be shattered.

On January 6 the Finnish-American games at Madison Square Garden will serve to introduce Nurmi to American competition, an January 27, and 28, will come the Millrose games, on February 7, the Wilcox A.A. games, and the national junior championships will be run off in Madison Square Garden, January 15.

Whether Nurmi will be able to run his usual race indoors is a subject for considerable speculation. In his workouts the great Finn repeatedly found difficulty in accommodating his marvelous stride to the wooden track and there are many who believe his first appearance here will see him go down to defeat.

In the mile at the Finnish-American games he will have Joie Ray, Louie Larrivee, Jimmy Connolly, Ray Baker and several others to contend with. Of this competition Ray is much the best and probably will be the only one to extend the Olympic hero.

Meets Ritola.

It is in the 5,000 meter event that the drama of Nurmi's first public appearance is expected to be staged. He will be opposed by Willie Ritola, Studenroth, the Phila star; George Wachsmuth, and possibly Verne Booth, inter-collegiate title holder. But of these only Ritola is conceded a chance and the race between the two Finns is likely to be marked by something more than rivalry.

Rumors of a "grudge" between the two distance men have become increasingly prevalent ever since the 5,000 meter race at the Colombes stadium when Nurmi gained first place by a scant yard. It was said the victor refused the congratulatory hand extended him by Ritola and that when Nurmi was given an ovation upon his return to Finland, Ritola was conspicuously absent.

Ritola may enter the race a favorite because of his knowledge of indoor racing, Nurmi having yet a great deal to learn about the intricacies of a graded track.

Times Himself.

Charlie Paddock thinks Americans must soon adopt Nurmi's unique system of self-timing. The Finn runs with a watch in the palm of his right hand. He knows exactly how fast he is going, how many seconds it takes him to do a lap, how close he is to a record, or how far away from one.

"To some this system may sound too complicated to be practical," says Paddock, "but I think it has its good points, especially in the middle distances and the long runs. There is such a thing as regulating the human body to a maximum speed for a certain length of time, and that is what Nurmi has done.

Has Unique Idea.

"Of course it takes a terrific amount of practice to do this. Nurmi got the idea himself. Day after day he would time himself over a given distance. Finally he hit upon a speed which he thought best fitted to his power, and this became his standard speed.'

"In the races that followed he would run the last lap as fast as the first lap. The pace throughout was uniform and even. That was how he ran in the Olympics. He was a marvel to us Americans.

"We were accustomed to see distance runners come staggering down the stretch, puffing and snorting their faces twisted with agony.

"Nurmi, however, finished without visible effort with an easy, steady stride and breathing as lightly as if he had been out for a stroll."

Who'll beat Nurmi in this country? Paddock thinks it will be Willie Ritola, another Finn. Not that Ritola is a greater runner, but that he is used to indoor running. Nurmi beat Ritola in Paris on an outdoor track.

SOUTHPAW MYTH.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 29.—George Sisler, famous manager of the St. Louis Browns, says he is about convinced that the power of southpaws over left-handed batters is more or less of a myth.

The case of Gene Robertson, third sacker of the Browns, has caused Sisler to have a definite opinion on the subject.

Robertson is a left-handed batter. During the early months of the season he was used only against right-handed pitching. Late in the season, being the only third baseman in shape, he was used regardless of the kind of pitching the opposition used.

Getting a chance to hit regularly against southpaw pitching, Robertson soon began to show as well against the left handers as right. He finished the season with the very fine average of .319.

His showing against southpaws has just about satisfied Sisler as to who will be his regular third sacker the coming season—Gene Robertson.

HAMILTON ASKING FOR POSTPONEMENT

Rowing Club Say They Are Not Ready—Will Play if Necessary.

HAMILTON, Dec. 27. — If the Rowing club senior O.H.A. team is compelled to meet Parkdale in the first game of the group on Tuesday, they will be forced to do so without the services of three, or possibly four of their best men.

This was the intimation given by Chairman Bob White this morning. The odds, therefore, will be against them unless they can arrange to have the game postponed until later in the season, so that they can get their men back and brush up somewhat with the practices and any exhibition games they might be able to get before the second scheduled game which is with the Peterboro S.P.A. champions.

However, there is little doubt but that the Oarsmen will put a worthy team on the ice, whether or not they are compelled to go through with the Parkdale game. The players have been getting valuable assistance from several members of the N.H.L. team, who have been offering valuable advice at the practices and many rought spots in the team's play have been ironed out as a result. Coach Jimmy Gardner, of the pros., is exceedingly interested in the Oarsmen, and his suggestions have been adopted to a great extent.

Practices will continue at every opportunity. The players are far from being in perfect shape at the present time, but they are fast approaching the form necessary. Should they succeed in having the Parkdale game laid over, it will give them ample opportunity to line up in the strongest way.

Regarding the O.H.A. and the postponement of the first game, Manager Russell Smith stated this morning that he had sent a letter to Secretary W. A. Hewitt, explaining the circumstances and asking for support. He referred to the difficulty of getting the players together during the holiday season and expressed regret that they were not in a position to start right away with a strong line-up. However, he assured Mr. Hewitt that if it was the desire of the O.H.A. to go right ahead, there would be no kicking and the Scullers would do their level best in spite of the handicaps.

CHRISTMAS CONCERTS.

Large Audience Attended Public and High School Concert.

KEENE, December 29. — The usual number of Christmas concerts were held the past week in this community, the pupils of the Lang Public and High Schools putting on a very successful one on the evening of the 17th. A large audience filled the school, and a good programme was given, Miss Mary Nelson impersonating Aunt Susan, being worthy of special mention. The pupils are to be commended upon their performance.

The teachers, Miss Bolin and Miss Barrie also deserve special mention.

The Lang S. School held a Christmas tree on Monday evening, the schoolhouse again being filled to capacity.

Rev. Andrew McLauchlin occupied the chair, a good programme being given by the S. School. The proceeds amounted to about $50.00.

The following is the programme:

Chorus, "Ring Out the Bells of Christmas."
Recitation, "Hang Up the Baby's Stocking," by Ethel Mortlock.
Dialogue, "Days of the Week."
Song, "My Kitty."
Song, "Santa Helpers."
Recitation, "The Two-year-old Apple."
Dialogue, Junior Pupils.
Address by Rev. Andrew McLauchlin.
Chorus, "Jesus Is Born."
Recitation, "Christmas," Amelia Richardson.
Song, "Dafkey Song."
Song, "Old Santa Claus."
Dialogue, Senior Pupils.
Recitation, "The Child's Face," Lilian Mortlock.
Organ solo; Rev. A. McLauchlin.
Dumbell Drill.
Song, "The Maple Leaf."
"God Save the King."

Concert and Christmas Tree.

On Friday evening, 19th December, the Presbyterian Sunday School gave a concert and Christmas tree in the Town Hall, the hall being packed to the limit, and a splendid programme was given. The chair was taken by Rev. John Archibald, and needless to say, was ably filled.

The following was the programme for the evening:

Chorus.
Chairman's address, Rev. John Archibald.
Song, by the Little Tots.
Dialogue, "Striking Santa Claus Land."
Monologue, Archie McFarlane.
Address, Rev. A. McLauchlin.
Pageant.
Quartette, Choir.
Recitation, Jean Nelson.
Selection, by The Archibalds.
Quartette, by Four Girls.
Star Drill, by Ten Girls.
Minstrels.
Dialogue, "Advertising for Husband."

Following the concert, old Santa Claus distributed numerous gifts he had brought from the Northland to the children present.

The Ladies' Aid presented Mr. Archibald with a turkey.

Hiawatha renewed their usual custom by putting on a Christmas concert and tree. Needless to say everyone enjoyed a very pleasant evening with the Hiawatha friends.

The Ladies' Missionary Society of the Methodist Church called on the Rev. Andrew McLauchlin, and presented him with a goose.

The hockey fans gathered at Fletcher's store on Saturday night, and through the kindness of Miss McFarlane, the telephone operator, secured the results of the Peterborough vs. Soo game. Needless to say everyone was pulling for the Petes.

The Keene fans join in extending their congratulations upon the splendid victory.

Monday, 29th December, will be Nomination Day in Keene at the Town Hall, for Reeve, Deputy-Reeve, and Councillors for Otonabee during 1925. It is expected that a large number of ratepayers will be on hand as usual. It looks is though there will be a good deal of discussion. The Otonabee ratepayers feel it is better to discuss the township matters at the Town Hall, rather than to do most of the talking on the street corners.

Mr. F. D. McIntyre expects to be a candidate for the Deputy-Reeveship and several are mentioned as possible candidates for Councillors.

MR. BILLHARDT'S 264 CALLERS.

Edward Billhardt, a factory worker in Grauschutz, Germany, recently stopped work to celebrate his 100th birthday and welcome 264 of his descendants.

SOLUTION OF SATURDAY'S CROSSWORD PUZZLE.

The NUT CRACKER BY JOE WILLIAMS

The oyster-shucking championship of the year was carried away by Otis P. Sapp, of Lowlands, La. Mr. Sapp cannot carry it away too far to suit us.

Congressmen Hem and Haw of the 456th district, are joint holders of the buck-passing title in the heavyweight division. (This does not mean, however, that the boys passed any silver bucks.)

The corn-growing honors of 1924 went to little Alfred Spinach, of Sorefeet County. Next year little Alfred is going in for bunions in a serious way.

Mazie Monosyllable is generally accepted as the year's pennant-winning conversationalist. The records show she never once explained: "For crying out loud!"

Peggy Joyce again successfully defended the all-age jilting championship against all comers and goers in the order named.

The statement that Fred Fulton still stands alone as the leading flopper of pugilism is hardly the truth. Mr. Fulton has never been known to stand alone.

The dramatic laurels of the year were equally divided among Benny Leonard, Jack Dempsey, and John Barrymore, the latter being somewhat handicapped by a glass jaw.

Mr. McGraw of the Giants claims the year's razzberry crown. "I gathered enough razzberries in Europe with my ball club to make me champion for life," he insists.

The plain and fancy wind-jamming medal is awarded jointly to Messrs. Landis and Johnson without dispute, if it is possible to award anything to those two babies without dispute.

The national squash championship is again in the hands of Jay Gould, Jr. "But I deserve little credit," he says modestly. He will get it.

QUINN TWIRLED FOR TEN CLUBS

Veteran Has Been With Four Major League Teams in 22 Years.

ONE WORLD'S SERIES

Jack Quinn, veteran major league pitcher, on whom the Red Sox have asked waivers, is one of the oldest players in the two major leagues in point of service. During his long career Quinn has been a member of no less than ten teams, four of them big league clubs. The major league teams in addition to the Red Sox, with which he has spent a part of his career, are the Yankees, Braves and White Sox.

Quinn has now been actively engaged in professional baseball for a total of twenty-two years. He is 39 years of age, according to the record books. He started his professional career with the Connellsville Club in 1903 and remained with that team for three full seasons. There is no record of his activities during 1906, but in the following year he joined the Macon Club of the South Atlantic League. While with that team that season he won six games and lost five. In 1908 he was a member of the Richmond Club of the Virginia League. While with Richmond during that season he made the phenomenal record of winning fourteen games and losing none. On the strength of this record he was drafted by the Yankees at the close of that season.

During the campaign of 1909, his first with the New York Club, Quinn won nine games and lost five. In the following year, while still with the Yankees, he won eighteen and lost twelve. He slipped considerably during 1911 and won only eight games while losing nine. He started the season of 1912 with the Yankees and after he had won five games and lost seven he was released to the Rochester Club of the International League. He completed that season with Rochester, winning eight games and losing four.

During most of the season of 1913, Quinn was with the Rochester Club and his record for that season consisted of nineteen victories and thirteen defeats. Later in that season, however, he was sold to the Braves.

During 1914 he won twenty-six games and lost fourteen and in the following season he was credited with nine victories and charged with twenty-two defeats. Under the peace agreement between the Federal League and organized baseball he was sent to the Vernon Club of the Pacific Coast League.

In 1916, his first year with the Vernon Club, Quinn won sixteen games and lost thirteen. In the next season he scored twenty-four victories to twenty defeats. In 1918, while still with Vernon, he won twelve games and lost six. Before that season ended, however, the Pacific Coast League suspended operations on account of the war and Quinn received permission to finish that campaign with the White Sox. While with the Chicago Club he won five games and lost only one.

After a lapse of seven years, Quinn found his way back to the Yankees in 1919. He had been claimed by both the Chicago and New York clubs, but he was awarded to the Yankees. During 1919 he won fourteen games and lost the same number. In 1920 he won eighteen games and lost ten, and in the following year, while still with the Yankees, he gained eight victories to seven defeats. After the close of the season of 1921 Quinn was traded to the Red Sox and he recently completed three full seasons with the Boston Club.

In 1922, his first year with the Red Sox, Quinn won thirteen games and lost fifteen. In 1923 he won thirteen and lost seventeen, and this year he was credited with twelve victories and charged with thirteen defeats.

During his long career Quinn has taken part in only one world's series, that between the Giants and Yankees in 1921. He pitched in only one game in that series and was charged with losing it.

HOCKEY NEWS.

HASTINGS, Dec. 29.—The first hockey game of the season will be an exhibition game this evening at the new skating arena, when the Campbellford Junior O.H.A. team will clash with a picked team from the Hastings Trent Valley League players.

To-morrow (Tuesday) evening the boys expect to journey to Campbellford for the return exhibition game.

Arrangements are under way for a game here on New Year's Day in the afternoon, to be played with the local players and a team from Frankford.

DULUTH WIN SECOND.

EVELETH, Minn., Dec. 28.— A goal by Lewis in the first period enabled Duluth to split the two game series with the Eveleth hockey team here last night. The score was 1 to 0. It was a United States amateur hockey league contest.

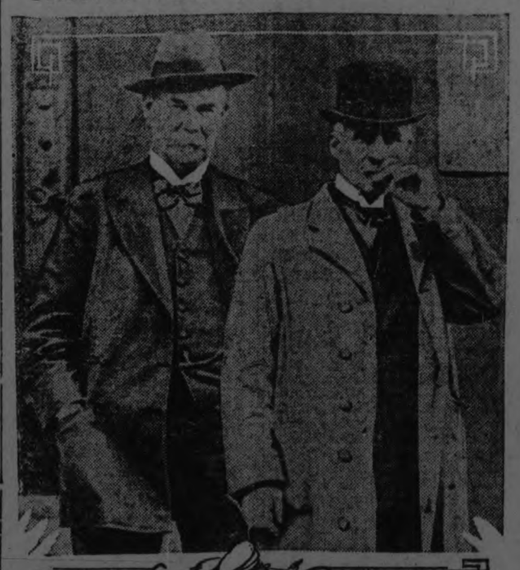
JARVIS WILL RACE FOR LIPTON



Sir Thomas Lipton (left) has selected Amelius Jarvis, Sr. (right), now serving a six months' sentence on the prison farm, to command his yacht in the 1926 races off Sandy Hook. Jarvis, an old cronie of Sir Thomas', was convicted for conspiracy to defraud the province in a bond sale. Sir Thomas, however, does not believe his friend is guilty.

THEATRES

AT THE GRAND.

If laughter is the sunshine of the soul, as an immortal poet once put it, then the next attraction at the Grand Opera House, commencing 3rd January, should be in line for complete endorsement. The offering will mark the first appearance here in the flesh of Mutt and Jeff, Bud Fisher's famous cartoon creations. The "long and short of it," as they are familiarly and popularly known, will disport themselves in a brand new musical comedy in two acts and five scenes provided by John P. Mulgrew and Leo Edwards.

The plot revolves around little Jeff's idea of what constitutes harmonious existence. Being a bachelor, he contends that matrimony is all bunk, pure and simple, and sets about to prove it.

AT THE CAPITOL.

MOVIE TESTS GIVE BIG STARS STAGE FRIGHT.

Norma Talmadge Admits Experiencing It on Recent Camera Test.

Girls who go to pieces in facing their first screen test will find consolation in knowing their nervousness is not unusual, that even the stars feel that way over and over again.

At least, Norma Talmadge admits she does. In the heat of a picture no actress has more poise or ease in forgetting herself than Norma. But in "tests" which precede the start of each new picture, the Joseph M. Schenck tragedienne says she experiences the same feeling of the girl who is facing the camera for the first time.

This condition came to light one day when Norma was taking her tests for "Secrets," her new heart drama which opens at the Capitol to-day, and will also be shown on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Although her experience enabled her to present a calm exterior while Tony Gaudio ground his camera, Norma confessed that inwardly she felt twitchings.

This, she said, was due to the newness of her role and the hoop-skirted gowns of the last century she was wearing. But most of all it was due, she said, to the consciousness of the critical gaze of the other actors who stood about watching while waiting their turn for tests.

"Secrets," starring Norma Talmadge, is her greatest picture. In this Joseph M. Schenck-First National production Norma plays four roles, that of a girl, a young mother, a middle-aged matron, and an aged woman.

The picture is cast in four periods, 1923, 1888, 1870, and 1865 and the action takes place both in the far West and in modern society settings. In all four periods Norma displays a remarkable range of characterization.

Frank Borzage, of "Humoresque" fame, directed "Secrets," with the veteran Gaetano Gaudio as his cameraman. Heading Norma's supporting cast is Eugene O'Brien, "the perfect lover," and a famous star of both stage and screen.

AT THE ROYAL.

"WHAT SHALL I DO?" IS EXCELLENT FILM

Dorothy Mackaill Does Fine Acting In Story of Great Social Problem.

"What Shall I Do?" the Frank E. Woods production now playing at the Royal Theatre is our idea of an excellent photoplay. It has that pleasant combination of pathos and humor woven about a theme that has a real message and a story replete with human interest.

It is a tale of youth—not riotous youth this time—but youth, face to face with the realities of life. Don McLean, a rich man's son, is starting from the bottom in the factory. He is so eager to go "on his own" that he has changed his name and is living among the workmen. He falls in love with Jeanie Andrews, little cashier of the cheap restaurant where he eats. Jeanie has a distrust of rich men and so even when he marries her he does not tell her of his true status. He puts off telling his parents of his marriage. His deception doesn't seem to matter much. Then one day he is knocked down by a truck. The accident makes him completely forget his life with Jeanie and he returns to his home, once more the rich man's son.

Jeanie is suddenly confronted with the problem of supporting herself and her baby. This and the fact that her husband does not recognize her when she finds him makes her desperate. It all comes right in the end, of course, but it makes you realize as it is meant to do, the seriousness of the problem that hundreds of young mothers, like Jeanie, are called upon to face.

Dorothy Mackaill is splendid as the little mother. By this picture, she firmly establishes her reputation as an emotional actress. John Harron is an effective masculine lead. Others who do good work are Louise Dresser as the mother, William V. Mong as the father, Danny Hoy as the adoring bus-boy, Tom O'Brien as Big Jim Brown, Joan Standing as Lizzie the waitress, Ann May, Betty Morrissey, and Ralph McCullough.

BENNY LEONARD AND LARRY SEMON AT THE ROYAL.

Two celebrities, the world's lightweight champion and the world's heavyweight laugh champion, are both on to-day's programme at the Royal.

STORY OF REAL "HE-MEN"

"The Beloved Brute," which will be shown at Royal theatre on Thursday is an exciting tale of a hard-fisted fighting brute and his regeneration, which is effected, not by evangelistic workers making emotional appeals, but by sheer strength of another rugged fighting man, whose fists prove even harder than "The Brute's" own. There is a girl in the story, too, and it is for love of her that the two giants match their strength.

Marguerite de la Motte, as the captivating heroine, furnishes in her personality a very logical reason why two brawny, red-blooded men should half-strangle each other. Victor McLaglen, in the title role, gives a performance, which, according to all accounts, should give him a permanent high place in the admiration of American picturegoers. And everybody knows, of course, what a real he-man, "Bill" Russell, who tames "The Brute," is.

AT THE REGENT.

DYNAMITE INVENTED AFTER GOLD RUSH.

Film Player Talks on High Explosives Between Scenes.

"What is dynamite?" inquired Charlotte Stevens, who portrays Nellie in "One Law for the Woman," which will be shown at the Regent Theatre to-day. Her question was addressed to the dynamite authority who was engaged to supervise the blowing up of a mine for a scene in the production. Several blasts were called for in the action and a large quantity of dynamite used.

"Dynamite is a mixture of nitro-glycerine and dope," said Stanton Heck, who plays villain in the picture. "Nitro-glycerine was discovered in 1847 by A. Sobrero and was at first used by itself, but the great danger of its explosion by percussion led to the introduction of the dynamite class. In an unmixed state nitro-glycerine is used for blasting under water or shooting oil-wells. Bulk for bulk it is about thirteen times greater than gunpowder. It is sometimes used in medicine to stimulate heart action and lessen arterial pressure."

"Any one would think you were an authority on explosives," exclaimed Mildred Harris, who has the leading role. "You have a line of statistics at the tip of your tongue."

"I have handled considerable dynamite in my day," replied Heck, "and according to my custom I familiarize myself with the facts about the things I use.

"Dope was invented for dynamite in 1866 by Alfred Nobel. Formerly silicious earth or similar inert dope was used. This has been largely replaced by nitrate mixtures which serve to increase explosive force. The quantity of nitro-glycerine in dynamite varies from 25 to 75 per cent., but is usually about 40 per cent.

"Experimenting with explosives has resulted in the invention of about 125 kinds of dynamite, some of which are prohibited by law as being too dangerous for ordinary use.

"A mistaken idea among many is that at thing blows up when it explodes. This is entirely erroneous. Dynamite exerts equal force in all directions when it explodes. It is apt to meet with more resistance below than above which accounts for the illusion that the force exerted upward is greater than that downward."

"Go to the head of the class," laughed Miss Harris.

O'NEILL 13 YEARS WITH CLEVELAND

Yanks' New Catcher Joined Indians in 1911—Goes to Red Sox.

Steve O'Neil, veteran catcher, who was recently obtained by the Yankees from the Red Sox on waivers, will be playing for his fourth major league team when he dons the uniform of the local American League club next season. The other clubs with which he has already played are the Athletics and the Indians. He was with the Athletics for only a part of last season, was a member of the Indians for 13 years and was with the Red Sox for only one season.

O'Neill started his professional career with the Elmira club of the New York State League in 1910. He caught in 28 games that year and had a batting average of .200. At the start of the following season he received a trial with the Athletics, but shortly afterward he was sold to the Worcester club of the New England League. He caught in 101 games for Worcester, and had a batting average of .282. Later in the same season he was sold to the Indians.

During the season of 1902, his first full campaign with the Cleveland club, O'Neill was used in 68 games, and compiled a batting average of .228. In the following season he caught in 78 contests and had an average of .295. In 1914 he had a mark of .253 for 86 games. During all of his remaining seasons with the Cleveland club O'Neill caught in more than one hundred games each season. His best batting average while with the Indians was .322 made in 1921. During 1920, the season in which the Indians won their first pennant, O'Neill caught in 149 games and had a batting average of .321. While with the Red Sox last season he took part in 106 games and had a batting average of .238.

The only world's series in which O'Neill has participated during his career was that between the Indians and Robins in 1920. In that series he caught all seven games and made seven hits in 21 times at bat for a percentage of .333.

The Red Sox obtained him about a year ago along with Wambsganss Connolly and Dan Boone, for Chick Fewster, Al Walters and George Burns.

Bobby Veach, on whom the Red Sox recently asked waivers at the same time they requested them on O'Neill, is also one of the veterans of the American league, and he too just completed one full season with the Boston club. He started his professional career with the Peoria club of the Three-Eye League as a third baseman in 1910. He also was a member of the Kankakee club during that season.

At the start of the season of 1911 Veach was back with the Peoria club but this time as an outfielder, the position that he has played ever since that time. He took part in 132 games during 1911 and compiled a batting average of .297. He also started the following season with Peoria, but later in that year he was sold to the Indianapolis club of the American Association, after he had taken part in 56 games. While with Indianapolis that year he took part in 70 contests and hit for a mark of .285. Still later in that season the Indianapolis club sold him to the Detroit Tigers for a price reported to be $3500. He played in 23 games with the Tigers that year and batted .342.

During the season of 1913 Veach performed as one of the Tigers' regular outfielders, and he held that position for ten successive years. His best batting average while with the Detroit cluub was .335, mad during the sesaon of 1919, when he participated in a total of 139 games. After the season of 1923 he was sold by the Tigers to the Red Sox. While with the Boston Club last season he took part is 142 games and had a batting average of .295.

THISTLE FOOTBALL CLUB BANQUETTED

Caledonian Club Entertained Winners of Several Football Trophies.

(Contributed.)

The Peterboro Caledonian Club entertained the Thistle Football Club at a banquet in their honor on Friday last, in Victoria Hall. A large number of Caledonians were present, and Mr. G. N. Gordon, as chairman, handled the programme in his usual efficient way. Mr. O. White, of White Bros., was also present as a guest of the club.

At 8:15, the programme commenced by the company sitting down to the banquet table, when dinner was served by the ladies of the club.

Mr. Gordon then made a few remarks, referring to the achievements of the Thistle Football Club during the past season, they having won the White Cup, the Gordon Cup, the Phelan Charity Cup, and reached the final game of the Peck Cup series, when the Canadian Woollens were the worthy champions. He also referred to the sporting spirit which caused the team to come back stronger than ever after their reverses of last year. He then called upon Miss A. Grieves to entertain the company with a song, followed by Al. Williams in his usual cheery style. Mr. R. Gilmour, in place of the Thistle president (who was unavoidably absent) then addressed the company, Mr. Gordon remarking that he, Mr. Gilmour, had discovered the secret of how to be a popular speaker, by being brief.

This was followed by addresses from several speakers, "Wag" Hotston was asked to speak on behalf of the team, but modestly declared that he could not take the captain's place while Andy Jackson was present. Andy Jackson then gave an address, speaking of the spirit which animated the team to such glorious efforts and enabled them to win the three splendid trophies which were before them. He also paid a tribute to the splendid opposition which they had to overcome, some of the cup games requiring to be played twice to reach a decision. In thanking the Caledonian Club for their entertainment, he said he was placed in a peculiar position, being President of the Club, and would have to receive the thanks himself. However, he thanked the committee in charge, and the ladies who had helped them, for the splendid arrangements made for the programme.

Mr. W. Anderson, secretary of the Thistle Football Club, gave a short resume of the season's work, and of the troubles encountered in running a team successfully. His financial statement showed the club to be entirely free of debt, with a slight balance on hand. He also referred to the work at the P. and D. F. A. meetings.

Mr. White was asked for a few words, and congratulated the team for the fine showing they had made in winning the three trophies. He remarked that their financial balance was somewhat unusual, and they ought to feel proud that they were not in debt, as was usually the case with football clubs.

In addition to those already mentioned, the following favored the company with songs:

Mr. G. Reid, Mr. W. Grieves, Mr. A. Milne, Mrs. D. Ross, Mr. R. Gilmour, Mr. W. Curtis, and a quartette composed of Messrs. Gilmour, Clark, Milne and Millar.

At the conclusion of the program Mr. Gordon and Mr. White were thanked for their services, and the company spent the remainder of an enjoyable evening in playing games.

CYNTHIA GREY SAYS

BY CYNTHIA GREY

If you still think that the pompadour is the smartest way to wear your hair—

That the hour-glass figure has never been improved upon—

That it's immoral to use lipstick—

And that Queen Mary is the best-dressed woman in the world—

You're slipping!

And it's your last call for a shingle bob,
A rubber corset,
A box of bloom of youth,
And a ringside seat at the next style show.

That is, if you want to look as if you'd been born after the Spanish War.

QUESTIONS—ANSWERS

Dear Miss Grey: The man I love doesn't care for books and plays and the things that mean everything to me. Nor do I care about the sport page and prize fights. The longer we are engaged the more I wonder if we will be happy together. Ought we not to have more tastes in common?—Uncertain.

Wise men have said that the law of opposites should govern marriage. Men and women rarely have the same tastes. The fact that you are not sure you will be happy with your man makes me rather doubt that you love him as you ought to. Love is certainty.

Miss Grey: A man who used to like me a lot has stopped calling me up. Would it be dreadful of me to ask him why?—Lottie Lee.

It would be very foolish of you. To pursue a man is to lose him.

TARGET!

You are seldom late to a good show, usually on time for the train, illustrating the thought of interest or intention.

The duties you delay, the service you put off, the things you postpone, are either from lack of "interest" or "intention." They are the disagreeable duties—the things you do not care to do or feel you cannot do.

LIFE.

Nothing in nature is more wonderful than the way life struggles to survive and adapts itself to environment.

In the Olympic mountains, scientists find worms that live only in ice. These worms cannot stand the heat of even a human hand.

It may be so on distant heavenly bodies such as the planets. Conditions out there might not support earthly life, yet would be ideal for other life forms.

EXPERT ROBBERS BLEW OPEN SAFE

Entered Home of John D. Falconbridge and Made Slick Job of Large Combination Safe.

TORONTO, December 29. Canadian Press. — Burglars gained an entrance to the home of John D. Falconbridge, K. C., in Rosedale, some time on Saturday night, and blew open a large combination safe.

Mr. Falconbridge and his family are at their winter resort in the Southern States, and the extent of the haul will not be known until he returns. If there were any valuables in the safe they were removed by the robbers.

The job is believed to have been the work of experts. Soap, oils and nitro-glycerine were used without stint. The work of blowing the safe open was complete in every detail. Beds were stripped of sheets and blankets, which were utilized for muffling purposes.

The burglars did not use a fuse. After soaping and oiling the combination, the big door of the safe was covered with blankets. The next move was to bore a hole in one of the panels of the door, through which was passed a wire, one end of which was adjusted in a socket of the chandelier suspended from the ceiling. With the wire connected up with the combination, the job was completed when an electric switch was turned on.

That the explosion must have been terrific was apparent from the condition of the furniture in the room.

The door of the safe was blown to pieces and the floor was littered with pieces of steel.

The lower panels of the special enclosure in which the safe was encased, was reduced to chips; the rugs and blankets used for muffling the safe were literally torn to shreds.

Pieces of steel were firmly embedded in the framework of a large window in the front room, some distance away.

EXEMPT.

Tax-exempt securities in our country now total more than 13,000 million dollars and are increasing at a rate of 1000 million dollars a year, according to Secretary Mellon. These are the securities that are completely tax-free.

The uncumbed increase of such bonds, so attractive to large fortunes has many evil phases. None is worse than the temptation, on the part of states and municipalities, to live beyond their income and mortgage the future by issuing tax-exempt bonds.

THE MAN WHO INVENTED BASEBALL.

Harrington Fitzgerald, a well-known journalist and art critic of Philadelphia, is authority for the statement that his father was the inventor of the game of baseball, and that his mother made the first baseball bags for bases.

His father, Thomas Fitzgerald, was the proprietor of The Item, published in Philadelphia for many years, and was one of the eminent citizens of the city, interested in all things and especially in sports.

Cricket was played a great deal in Philadelphia at that time because there were a great many Englishmen living there, and the elder Fitzgerald conceived the idea of originating a game that would be essentially Amreican. He worked out the game of baseball, and when he had it in shape he called a meeting of a number of persons, who, like him, were interested in sports, and they put their stamp of approval on it at once.

Some minor changes were made in the rules that Mr. Fitzgerald had outlined, and then a team was organized to play the game.

The necessity of having a base that the players could not injure themselves upon was recognised, and Mrs. Fitzgerald volunteered to make them, which she did. A team to play the game was organized, and its success was instantaneous.

SMITH TOWNSHIP HAD NOMINATION MEETING TO-DAY

Reeve J. A. Middleton Returned By Acclamation—Contest for Council Likely.

WELL ATTENDED.

Fred McKee Retires From the Field and Leaves George Simpson Deputy-Reeve.

Reeve J. A. Middleton was returned for his third term to-day, when his was the only name put forward by the electors of Smith township.

On the retirement of Deputy Reeve William Brown after two years service as deputy and three years as councillors, two new names were put forward for the position. They were George H. Simpson, senior Councillor, and Fred McKee, who asked to have his name withdrawn.

Four were nominated for the council and only three are to be elected. The nominations were:—

Reeve:

J. A. Middleton, nominated by J. H. Fowler and W. Steinkrauss.

Deputy Reeve

George H Simpson, nominated by G. B. Nichols and C. O. Nesbitt.

Fred McKee, nominated by Gilbert McIlmoyl and William Elliott.

Councillors

A. B. Mann, nominated by Fred McKee and William Telford.

Gordon Fitzgerald, nominated by G. B. Nichols and Herb. McConkey

Edwin Bulmer, nominated by W. A. Roseborough and A. R. Fitzgerald.

H. D. Coones, nominated by A. Young and W. Preston.

There will probably be an election for councillors, as all four intimated that they would remain in the field. They have until to-morrow night to file their qualifications.

Work of Council.

Reeve J. A. Middleton returned by acclamation for 1925 said his council had endeavored to keep expenses down as far as practicable, and had been very successful.

In 10 years the council had paid out only $106 on the average for charity and in the last year only $15. With a great deal of unemployment in the country, Smith township had got off very light.

Roads had been well attended to at an expenditure of $6,400, and in the year the township had received from the government $1,031.92.

The new system of road maintenance hits Smith township hard. There are 350 ratepayers assessed for under $900. These now pay $4 each toward road maintenance, but it put on the new system they would only pay $2 each. It is expected that about $1030 will be received from the government for roadwork done in 1924.

The township collector's roll totals $46,700 and of this there has been collected $43,500, leaving only $3,200 outstanding. The township has $2,400 in the bank, which is equal to any record in the past ten years. The township tax rate is one mill, as low as any in the county.

The township has offered to pay the full value of the wire for fencing land adjoining roads where the superintendent says the fences will prevent the accumulation of snow.

Mr. Middleton paid a glowing tribute to the secretary who has decided to retire after fifteen years' service.

Practice Economy.

A B. Mann said it is an excellent thing to preach and practice economy, and the council had endeavored to do this during the year. He referred to two items over which the council had no control, namely, M.O. H. $165.70 and Judge Huycke, $109 for he said, two evenings work.

"If we were all paid accordingly we would not mind the tax rate going up $10 or so, but unfortunately farmers are not paid that way." Mr. Mann said.

Councillors.

H. D. Coones said he did not see where the council could have saved more than it did in the past year.

Fred McKee asked to have his name withdrawn from the Deputy Reeve nomination.

Ed. M. Elliott, County Treasurer remarked on the interest shown in the coming forward of aspirants for office.

There are no growlers in Smith township, showing that the money has been well spent, and it has been the same during the last four years except when some emissary is sent from outside.

Ex-deputy Reeve W. Brown said he had endeavored to do his duty during his term of office and he was sure the incoming council would carry on the good work.

Ex Reeve G. B. Nichols congratulated Reeve Middleton on his election by acclamation and eulogized him as the finest Reeve Smith had ever had.

WEDDING BELLS

ARMSTRONG—WAY.

On Christmas Eve, Knox Manse was the scene of a pretty wedding, when Lucy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Way, of Hermitage, Newfoundland, became the bride of Thomas A. Armstrong, son of Mr. A. D. Armstrong, of Millbrook, Ont. The bride, a graduate nurse of Nicholls Hospital, Peterboro, was attired in brown kitten ear crepe trimmed with fur, with shoes and stockings to match, was attended by Miss Pearl Armstrong, R.N., sister of the groom, who wore a becoming dress of grey canton crepe. The groom was supported by Mr. Bert. Tillcock. After the ceremony a dainty lunch was served at 525 Bolivar Street, the happy couple leaving for an extended visit to Montreal and Newfoundland.

Society

Miss Margaret Graves of Picton, is spending a few days with Miss M. Grisdale Aylmer Street.

Miss Lorna Taylor, of Uxbridge is the guest of Miss Catharine Hartley 507 Stewart Street.

Mrs. W. J. Mitchell and son Austen of Hamilton, are visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. Mitchell, 519 Sherbrooke street.

Mrs. Rooksby of Grand Rapids is visiting her sister, Mrs. Frank Lawless and brother, Mr. Arnott of this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Rae and Master Gordon, and Mr. Norman Rae, of Oshawa, spent the Christmas holidays at the home of their parents, 317 Elias Ave.

A very pretty afternoon tea was held on Saturday afternoon at 572 Charlotte street, the residence of Mrs. R. M. Glover, who was at home to about seventy-five of her friends, in honor of her guest, Mrs. Margaret Cantwell, of New York City. Mrs. Glover was assisted in receiving by her sister, Mrs. M. C. Goodwin, and Mrs. Cantwell. Mrs. T. H. Glover ushered the ladies into the tea room, which was in charge of Mrs. Carleton Perry, assisted by Mrs. R. A. Carmen and Miss Laura Belleghem. The table was charming, with its d'oylies of Irish crochet and floral centrepiece of glowing red carnations. The cheerful Christmas notes of crimson and green were repeated in the red carnations on the small corner table where ices were cut and in the illuminated Christmas tree that formed a striking decoration in the tea room. Madame Masson poured tea and Mrs. F. C. LaPlante cut the ices. Nina Glover, in a blue frock, was a dainty little door attendant.

Miss Mathilde Masson is spending the holidays with friends in Detroit.

Mr. James J. Raleigh of Winnipeg, formerly of Peterboro, who spent Christmas with friends in the city, returned on Saturday morning.

Mr. Russell Brooks has returned to Montreal, after spending his Christmas holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Brooks, of South Beach.

Miss C. Kenneally is visiting in Rochester, New York.

Mrs. Dunnett of Toronto, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Scott, Maria Street.

Miss Isabelle Oke, left Saturday to visit her friend Miss Viola Smart, Montreal.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. McCarthy, 305 Reid Street, are in Guelph today attending the funeral of the formers brother, Rev. Jos. P. McCarthy, S.J., who died suddenly in Montreal on Dec. 24th.

Miss Eva Outram is spending three weeks in Europe with the League of the Empire Party. The party will visit Genoa, Rome, Florence, Venice and Milan. A day or two will be spent in in Switzerland, where the party will be able to partake in the winter sports. They will also have a day or so in Paris, which they propose revisiting again at a later date. Miss Outram, who is teaching in Northampton, England, on the teachers' exchange system, has already made several extended trips to portions of the British Isles and the continent.

Miss Nellie Doherty and Miss Mary Doherty, both of Toronto, are spending their holidays at their home in Brownton.

Mr. J. Doherty left to-day for Montreal, where he will visit his son.

Mr. Leo O'Connell returned to Detroit on Saturday, after spending the Christmas holidays with his parents at 232 Perry street.

LOCAL MASONS BANQUETTED AT EMPRESS HOTEL

Hon. John S. Martin Unable to be Present on Account of Illness.

LARGELY ATTENDED.

Rt. Wor. Bro. T. E. Kaiser, of Oshawa, Main Speaker of the Evening.

The Festival of St. John the Evangelist, Masonic Banquet of Corinthian Lodge, No. 101, Peterboro Lodge, No. 155, Royal Arthur Lodge, No. 523, A.F. and A.M., and Corinthian Chapter, No. 36, G.R.C., was held in the Empress Hotel on Saturday evening, and proved to be one of the most successful Masonic banquets ever held in this city.

The Hon. John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture for the province, who was to have replied to the toast to Canada, given by Worshipful Brother W. H. Bradburn, M. P. P., was unable to be present on account of illness.

Right Wor. Bro. H. R. H. Kenner, District Deputy Grand Master of Peterboro district, presided.

A toast to the Grand Master and the Grand lodge of Canada was proposed by Rt. Wor. Bro. John Crane, and in replying to the toast the R. Wor. Bro. T. E. Kaiser of Oshawa, said that "in speaking to Masonic Lodges, no matter where we are, we know that we are addressing the flower of our nation." From the days of Jarvis up, till the present time, the Masonic leaders have been, and are, men of distinction and high standard, and men who are a credit to any country.

Speaking on the subject of "Idealism," with reference to the province of Ontario, Mr. Kaiser said, "I want to place before you if I can a few facts on Canadianism. The pioneers of Canada left their homes and their country to come to Canada so they could live in peace and worship in the way which they believed to be the correct way. They were the most determined and fearless people the world has ever known. Under the British flag and on British soil, they knew that they would prosper, and they did, and if it had not been for their hardships and their faithfulness we would not have this wonderful country to-day. "Where did we come from, and who are we?" We have been British subjects for the past two or three hundred years. We come from Protestantism. When these people landed in this country, and wandered about New York, nobody knew who they were, so they were given the name of Pennsylvania Dutch. The movement of these faith ful settlers made the British Empire what it is. Are these people not worthy of our kindest remembrance?"

A number of years ago I came across a cemetery with about one hundred and fifty graves in it. In these graves lie our forefathers who settled this country for us and perished for us, yet there were no more than two or three of the tomb stones in the cemetery which were standing up so that a person could read the names on them. The cemetery had gone to ruin, and the occupants of the graves had been forgotten. The history of our pioneer parents should not be forgotten. I took the matter up with the Drury government and an act was passed demanding that every municipality should have a cemetery inspector, and that it was the inspector's duties to see that these forgotten cemeteries were cared for. Since the new Government has come into power this act has been dropped, and once more the cemeteries are going to ruin. I maintain that every municipality should have a cemetery inspector and I will fight until the act is again passed by the government. The speaker said that he was very sorry that Mr. Martin was not present, for he would like to get a crack at him on the above question. "The older I grow, the more I find that it is the people who live in the small houses and labor for a living that should not be forgotten by the next generation. I have spoken on this subject before but never before such an audience as this and I am sure that there is not a Mason in the audience who does not agree with me on this question," said Mr. Kaiser.

Worshipful Bro. W. H. Bradburn, M.P., in proposing the toast to Canada, read a telegram from Hon. Mr. Martin, stating that he was sorry that he was unable to attend the banquet as he was confined to the house by a severe cold. "In making this toast we are making it to a country that every man should be proud of," said Mr. Bradburn.

The toast to the 'Absent Brethren' was proposed by Bro. W. Harold Young. "When we think of the ones who have been separated from us, some by distance and some by the great river of death, our hearts are touched with past remembrances. This toast brings back many faces to us, of brethren who have passed on ahead. It is from the heroes of yesterday come the things that mean most to us. Who can think of those absent brethren without a gripping coming over one's heart? We are challenged to show the world that Masons have not yet forgotten how to live like gentlemen. The challenge of that great inspiration grips my heart more than my mind." said the speaker. A moment of silence was then observed for the absent brethren.

Presiding Officer H. R. H. Kenner then remarked that the local Masons now stand with both feet on another prosperous year full of trust, hope and love.

The Junior Warden's toast was proposed by W. Brother W. D. Campbell, of Peterboro Lodge No. 155.

The following was the program:

Glee—"Comrades in Arms," the Masonic Chorus.

Song—"The Great White Road," Bro. Frank Oldfield, of Toronto.

Glee — "Mulligan Musketeers," the Masonic Chorus.

Song — "The Adjutant," Bro. Frank Oldfield.

Glee—"Just Being Happy," the Masonic Chorus.

Song—"The Carol Singers," Bro. Frank Oldfield.

Chorus Conductor — Bro. Martin B. Chenhall.

WEST IS STRONGLY IN FAVOR OF CHURCH UNION

Eighteen Churches Have Voted by Overwhelming Majorities in Favor of United Church.

TORONTO, Dec. 29.—(Canadian Press).—As predicted by the unionists the churches of the west seem to be moving solidly into the United-Church. Official reports from Saskatchewan today state that eighteen churches have voted by overwhelming majorities for going into the union, many were unanimous. Four out of the five churches in Regina voted union by big majorities and the fifth which concludes its voting today is regarded as safe, the minister Dr. Murdock MacKinnon, being the leader of the Unionists in Saskatchewan churches. Those voting into union to date in Saskatchewan are as follows: Regina, Chalmers, Carmichael, St. Andrews, Westminster, Saskatoon, St. Thomas, also Gravelbourg, Southerland, Craik, Warcana, Forrest, Balgonie, Wolseley, Ellisboro, Moffatt, Yellow Grass, Colgate. Seven of these voted unanimously for union. Churches voting not to enter union are as follows: —St. Paul's (Moose Jaw), Assiniboia, Barons. Alberta returns to date are Robertson church, (Edmonton), and Stettler for union. Olds against union.

OBITUARY.

JAMES T. C. LANG.

The death occurred suddenly, after a short illness, at 8:45 this morning, of James T. C. Lang, at his home, 629 Rubidge street.

The deceased, who was fifty-five years of age, was a well known resident of the city. He was at one time a partner in the business of Lang and Maher, and has been for the past twelve years assistant appraiser of customs. He was a member of the Otonabee Lodge of the Oddfellows' Society and vice-president of the Belmont Club. He was a member of St. John's Anglican church.

Survivors are his sorrowing wife, three sons, Harold and Carl at home and Kenneth of Cobourg, and one daughter, Marjorie, at home.

The funeral will be held to the Little Lake cemetery on Wednesday afternoon, with services at the house at 2:30, conducted by Rev. Dr. Blagrave.

WHY GOLDFISH LEAVE HOME.

A distinguished doctor of Germantown, Pennsylvania, went to some considerable expense to build a pond on his lawn to accommodate a rare collection of goldfish, but after a time he was perplexed to note that a great many of his finest specimens had disappeared. At first he suspected cats, but the felines proved an alibi and the fish seemed to leave right under his eyes.

In the endeavour to solve the problem he had an all-day watch set upon the pond, and at daybreak the watcher was astounded to see a kingfisher dart from a neighbouring tree and plunging into the pool come up with a goldfish, which proved to be the bird's breakfast.

But the doctor has almost as much love for the birds as he has for goldfish, and rather than shoot the bird he rolled up his fish pond and took it indoors.

POLICE TO HAVE NEW AUTOMOBILE

Police Commission Authorizes Purchase — Settle Chief's Salary by Bonus.

LAST MEETING.

Clearing up the old business by voting Chief of Police Samuel Newhall a bonus in lieu of his salary outstanding from 1923, and preparing for the future by authorizing the purchase of a new motor car, the Police Commission on Saturday held its last meeting of the year. There were present His Honor Judge Huycke, chairman, Magistrate O. A. Langley, and Mayor J. J. Turner.

Following discussion at several previous meetings, it was moved by Magistrate Langley and Judge Huycke that the matter of procuring a motor car for the police department be left with the Mayor and the Chief Constable, with authority to purchase one, the cost over what may be allowed for the old one not to exceed the money available in this year's appropriation. The City Treasurer was ordered to pay the cost on order of the Mayor.

Chief's Salary.

Chief Newhall's salary, outstanding since 1923, will be settled by a bonus of $309.12 voted on motion of Mayor Turner and Magistrate Langley. Payment in 1923 was refused by the City Council when the amount alloted to the police department for the year was exceeded, and the Council has several times this year refused to consider the matter which the members said had been settled by the courts. The motion to clear this up was as follows: "That a bonus of $309.12 be granted to S. Newhall, Chief Constable, on the understanding that upon accepting this bonus the Chief Constable waives any claim he may have for unpaid salary in 1923."

WON THE STOCKING.

Bruce Johnston Carries Off the Big Prize at Porter S. White's Grocery Store.

Great interest was taken by the Christmas patrons of the Porter S. White Co. in guessing the weight of the big stocking. The box was full to capacity of the estimating slips. Guesses ranged anywhere from 7 oz. to 1,600 oz. The stocking was to be given free to the first one who estimated the correct number of ounces it weighed. No less than twenty people guessed the correct weight, but Bruce Johnston was the first to put in his guess, and wins the fine big stocking full of toys, games, etc., enough for a large family.

The following are the names of those who made correct estimates:

BURNED TO DEATH.

Six Year Old Toronto Boy Set Fire to Clothing With a Match.

TORONTO, Dec. 29.—(Canadian Press.)—Donald Wright, aged six, was fatally burned yesterday morning as a result of playing with matches while in bed. He ignited his night gown and was severely burned before his screams brought the inmates of the house to the scene, who extinguished the flames by wrapping the boy in a blanket. The doctor appealed to four young men to give a blood transfusion in the hope of saving the child's life, but all but one refused and the boy died last evening.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of Mary Ellen Mooney, dearly beloved wife of William Kempt, of Keene, who passed away on Thursday, the 27th of December, 1923.

Dear mother, rest Thy work is o'er,
Thy loving hands shall toil no more
No more thy gentle eyes shall weep,
Rest, dear mother, gently sleep.

A bitter grief, a shock severe,
To part with one we loved so dear,
Our loss is great—we'll not complain;
But hope in Heaven to meet again.

Yes, dear mother, how I miss you;
But you're gone to happy rest,
Where the angels throng around you
And they'll crown you with the rest,

You have gone to be with loved ones,
Who have gone on long before,
They are waiting, watching for you
Over on that golden shore.

And in that land of song and beauty
Parting hands are clasped no more,
When we meet again, dear mother,
'Twill be when parting all is o'er.

Inserted by loving husband and family.

FRIENDSHIP OF UNITED STATES BRITISH DESIRE

Cardinal Plank of Britain's Policy, Sir Esme Howard Says in Address.

OTHER ASPECTS

Must Chose Between League of Nations and "Balance of Power" Doctrine.

WASHINGTON, December 30th. — Twentieth century Great Britain must choose between an association of nations and "The notorious doctrine of the balance of power," with its spectre of inevitable wars, Sir Esme Howard, the british ambassador, declared last night in an address before the American Political Science Association. The United States he said, on account of its geographical position, might hold aloof from European entanglements.

Speaking on "British policy and the balance of power," the ambassador traced through the centuries the development of the European doctrine that aimed at "a just equilibrium between the nations as should prevent anyone of them from becoming sufficiently strong to enforce its will upon the rest."

The doctrine was not of British origin, he said, but inevitably it had become a cornerstone of British policy and continued so for 500 years for obvious reasons of self-preservato. Due to her geographical position he added, Great Britain to-day could no more hold aloof from a European league than she could formerly stand apart from the system of joining sides against the stronger power.

At the present time, he declared, he could see no one power threatening to dominate Europe. There is a breathing space in which to consider the whole situation, he asserted.
